PREFACE

At the time the Bill in Equity in the so-called Christian Science case was filed in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts (March 25, 1919), the Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society intended to have no reference to that controversy in the courts appear in the Christian Science periodicals. Believing, however, that the Christian Scientists should not be kept in ignorance of what was taking place among those charged with certain duties and responsibilities to the Christian Science movement, they had copies of the Bill in Equity printed and sent them to the subscribers of the Christian Science periodicals. Later the Board of Directors and Mr. Dittmore sent out printed copies of their answers.

A short time before the hearings on the Bill in Equity before the Master, the Directors of The Mother Church urged that the court proceedings be reported in The Christian Science Monitor. The practical impossibility of reporting the case in the ordinary manner without occasioning criticism from either or both parties to that action because of what might appear to be partial or biased reports, was foreseen. The Trustees of the Publishing Society, therefore, although cognizant of the Herculean task imposed by publishing each night the entire proceedings which had taken place in the court during the day, nevertheless decided, after due consideration, to publish these proceedings verbatim, without comment, in The Christian Science Monitor. Reports of the hearings were made by the official court stenographers, who translated these reports and furnished typewritten copies to the Monitor for publication. The record published in the Monitor was made directly from (was a copy of) these official reports of the hearings. Owing to the haste necessary in transcribing and composing, as well as to the unfamiliarity of terms and words common to Christian Scientists but unusual to those unacquainted with Christian Science terminology, both the typewritten reports of the stenographers and the printed reports in the Monitor contained a number of typographical errors. Upon most careful comparison, however, by all the attorneys, as well as the parties, not a single mistake was found in the entire transcript of the case as published which materially affected the meaning of any statement or sentence.

The publishing of the verbatim report in the Monitor had a salutary effect in that it tended to discourage exaggerated or prejudiced reports of the hearings in other newspapers and publications. After publishing the first day's proceedings in the Monitor, the same type was used for printing extra copies in more convenient form for the use of the court and counsel. Nearly a thousand extra copies were printed on sheets, some of which were furnished gratuitously to the individual parties, their counsel, and to the Master, and some of which were filed as part of the records of the Publishing Society itself; from day to day throughout the hearings, this printed record was the one used by all of the counsel and the court, as well as the parties.

When the case was finally submitted before the full Bench, about eight hundred of these printed sheets remained. As these could be bound into convenient book form, it was decided to do so and to offer these books to the Christian Scientists who may desire to know what questions were involved in the case and what testimony was given during the trial, so that any Christian Scientists who so desired, might be correctly informed.

The record of the trial contains much valuable history relating to the Christian Science movement, including the establishment and development of The Mother Church, the Board of Directors, The Christian Science Publishing Society and the Board of Trustees, and the relation of our Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, to these activities, and will prove of increasing value and interest to the Christian Science movement in years to come.

Dittmore vs. the Christian Science Board of Directors began before a Master in the Supreme Judicial Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Tuesday, June 3, 1919.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

Supreme Judicial Court

Suffolk, ss. No. 30654. In Equity
Herbert W. Eustace et al. v. Adam
H. Dickey et al., Defendants.

Suffolk, ss. No. 30788. In Equity
John V. Dittmore, Plaintiff, v.
Adam H. Dickey et al., Defendants.

Before Hon. Frederic Dodge, Master.

Appearances:

Hon. Charles E. Hughes (of New York); Messrs. Whipple, Sears & Ogden (Sherman L. Whipple and Lothrop Withington, Esqrs.); and Silas H. Strawn, Esq. (of Chicago), Counsel for Plaintiffs Herbert W. Eustace, David B. Ogden and Lamont Rowlands.

Messrs. Bates, Nay, Abbott & Dane (Hon. John L. Bates); Clifford P. Smith, Esq.; and Edwin A. Krauthoff, Esq. (of Washington, District of Columbia), Counsel for Defendants Adam H. Dickey, James A. Neal, Edward A. Merritt, William R. Rathvon, and Annie M. Knott.

Messrs. Streeter, Demond, Woodworth & Sulloway (Hon. Frank S. Streeter and Fred C. Demond, Esq.), William G. Thompson and Romney Spring, Esqrs., Counsel for John V. Dittmore, as he is a Defendant in No. 30654, and Plaintiff in No. 30788. Court House, Boston, June 3, 1919.

Mr. Whipple—May it please Your Honor, the cases which have been referred to Your Honor by order of the Supreme Judicial Court, under the ordinary rule to a special Master, are entitled, the first one

Herbert W. Eustace of Boston, David B. Ogden of Brookline, Lamont Rowlands of Picayune, in the State of Mississippi, in their official capacity as trustees under a deed of trust dated Jan. 25, 1898, wherein Mary Baker G. Eddy is the donor;

The defendants are Adam H. Dickey, James A. Neal, Edward A. Merritt, of said Brookline, and William R.

Rathvon, as they are trustees under a deed of trust dated Sept. 1, 1892, wherein Mary Baker G. Eddy is donor; and a declaration of trust supplementary thereto and in amendment thereof, dated March 19, 1903, and as they are also Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts; and John V. Dittmore and Annie M. Knott, both of said Boston, each claiming to hold the position and office of trustee and director in association with the other defendants.

The suit was brought in the manner described because just prior to the filing of the bill the four remaining directors attempted to oust Mr. Dittmore from his office as a director, attempted to remove him, and attempted to elect Annie M. Knott as his successor, as one of the directors.

I do not mean to suggest by that form of speech that they either failed to oust Mr. Dittmore or to elect his successor, but merely to indicate that there is a claim on the part of Mr. Dittmore that he was not properly ousted, that he is still one of the directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and that Mrs. Knott was not duly elected, of course, as his successor.

That leads me to say that a second suit has been referred to Your Honor in which that very controversy is raised as the principal and perhaps the only issue. That is a suit by Mr. Dittmore against four of the other defendants in this suit who were his associate trustees, and perhaps still are, and Mrs. Knott is also named as a defendant.

By a subsequent order of the Court that dispute or controversy was referred to Your Honor, with the direction that it be heard with this bill in equity in which Eustace and others are plaintiffs. An intimation was given by the presiding justice as to the way in which they should be heard, and I think we shall have no disagreement as to the order of procedure, although we may find it necessary to take Your Honor's direction. The suits are in no respect consolidated, but since they deal with kindred and in some respects similar matters it was thought that there would be an economy of time if, when evidence was taken that applied to both suits, it might be so applied without a repetition in an independent suit.

The Master—I suppose, as the evidence is put in under these orders of the Court, the evidence in one case would apply to the other, wouldn't it?

Mr. Whipple—It would.

The Master—The order is that the above entitled case, namely, Dittmore v. Dickey, be heard with Eustace et al. v. Dickey et al.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor, and that was for the very purpose of making it possible that there should not be a duplicate presentation of that part of the evidence which applies to the issues in both cases. I understand, although I was not present, that that was the purpose of the Judge.

The Master—Is that agreed to by counsel?

Mr. Bates—Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Whipple—We had rather assumed that, our suit having been brought first, we should be called upon to proceed in the first instance, but desire to do that with the assent of all the parties, if that is their understanding of it, unless some other procedure should seem better and should be directed by Your Honor. I think the matter of the procedure in the two cases is left entirely in the hands of Your Honor; there is no other direction to Your Honor from the Supreme Court except what is contained in the order.

I took the liberty, with the assent and knowledge of all the other counsel, of sending to Your Honor a copy of each bill and a copy of all of the answers, and also the bill and answer or answers in each case arranged in parallel pages, so that you could readily compare the bill and the answer paragraph by paragraph. I assume Your Honor may have read those papers, or some of them, so that perhaps when we get to the point it will not be necessary to re-read all of the bills and answers, but it may be sufficient to refer to the various controversies and various issues by way of opening.

Since this assignment was made, as we have already notified Your Honor, another and collateral matter has come up in the Supreme Judicial Court and is on the list for this morning; and, while it is not likely to be reached for some hours, it had been thought best and I understand agreed by all the parties, that we should merely do enough this morning so that the cases might be considered as having been begun and under way, which would protect all the counsel from other engagements; and that, having met Your Honor to receive, if you desire to give them, any directions as to procedure, we would then suspend until the proceedings in the Supreme Court have been finished.

I may say, as to the appearances, if you want me to state them I will do so.

The Master—I take it by consent this is the first hearing before the Master?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—And everybody agrees to that?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—There have been no notices of the hearing sent out by the Master, and except by consent I do not know that this is a hearing.

Mr. Whipple—We all consent to it as the first hearing, which will place us in a position where we may adjourn from time to time subject to Your Honor's direction. Shall I state to Your Honor the appearances?

The Master—I think it would be well. First, about your record. Is there an agreement with regard to that?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Have you a stenographer who is agreed on—a stenographer agreed on by all hands?

Mr. Whipple—I think so. I asked, or we asked, and I understand with the assent of all that Mr. Richard H. Jones, who is a very well known stenographer, should furnish the necessary force, and two associates of Mr. Jones are present busily engaged.

The Master—Perhaps it would be well to have that agreement become a part of the record, then.

Mr. Whipple—It might.

The Master—I mention it because I have known of cases where in the absence of an agreement there was some confusion later on.

Mr. Whipple—Well, we are agreed that Mr. Jones shall serve, with the discretion on his part to employ his assistants. As to the distribution of expense, I suppose something ought to be said. We are proposing to have sufficient stenographers so that the evidence may be transcribed hourly, and the usual way, where there are three-cornered issues, is to divide it into thirds. I do not know whether there is any other suggestion on the part of anybody here or not.

Mr. Thompson—I understand, if Your Honor please, that there is a gentleman who wants to be furnished with a copy outside of counsel, for the purpose of publishing a verbatim account of everything that goes on here. Now, if he is furnished with a copy, that would divide the expense into fourths instead of thirds and make it somewhat easier for the parties. That is a matter about which our client would be interested, because he is a lone contestant here without anybody behind him except such of his friends as may desire to assist him, and it is a matter of considerable moment to him what the expense of these mechanical appliances may be, and if he can in any way avoid paying a third and escape with a quarter, it is a material matter to him. Now, if there isn't any objection I should like to have it understood that the stenographers will furnish, not merely four copies, one for Your Honor and one for each of the parties, but five copies, and that the expense be divided into four parts and not into three, a fourth being paid by the gentleman, who I think is known to everybody here and as to whose personality I think there could be no objection. He desires to be furnished with a verbatim copy in order that he may publish it.

The Master—I take it that is a matter of agreement between counsel.

Mr. Whipple—We have no objection to that; indeed, we think it has this advantage. I understand that Mr. Swan desires the copy in order that he may use it for publication. Unquestionably the public have a right, or the newspapers have a right, to publish the testimony if it is a fair and accurate transcript; therefore this suggestion seems to make it sure that they will get the transcript absolutely accurate, and since they are entitled to have it anyway it is for the benefit and advantage of all of them that they have an accurate copy.

Mr. Bates—May it please the Court, we represent the Board of Directors de facto, five of the defendants named in these suits. We have no objection to the suggestion that has been made in regard to the stenographer, as to who shall do the work, and in regard to the division of the expense.

Mr. Whipple—We shall desire an extra copy or two, but we will pay for that as an extra expense assessed upon us. I suppose anyone can order an extra copy and pay that expense themselves. It is understood then, as I understand it, that there will be five copies furnished—one to Your Honor, one to each of the three parties, and one to Mr. Swan for the purposes that have been indicated.

Mr. Thompson—Let us get his full name. William U. Swan.

Mr. Whipple—William U. Swan—and that the expense so far shall be divided into quarter parts, to be shared by every one except Your Honor, and any one of the parties may order extra copies at their own expense. We shall want one extra copy.

Mr. Bates—May it please the Court, I assume that the extra copy which Mr. Whipple speaks of is something that he will arrange in regard to with the stenographers himself.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Bates—We shall expect to arrange for an extra copy also, but that is a matter between ourselves and the stenographers, I assume.

Mr. Whipple—Yes; I have just stated that I should want an extra copy.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Whipple has stated that Mr. Swan is to be the party who is to bear the expense of the fourth copy. I had understood that this was to be a copy for The Christian Science Monitor, and we were ready to pay for a share of that, as stated. Mr. Swan I understand represents The Boston Herald, and if he represents The Boston Herald I am not at all certain that we ought to make that arrangement. I would like to know whom Mr. Swan does represent and what authority he has to so represent them.

Mr. Thompson—Inasmuch as I first mentioned this matter I might explain as to what I know, in so far as I do know, and then let Mr. Swan explain the rest. I do not understand that Mr. Swan represents The Boston Herald in any respect or at any time. I understand he has some connection with them as a reporter, but in this particular transaction he has no connection with the Herald at all. It is not proposed that The Boston Herald shall publish these accounts that Mr. Swan is getting verbatim. It would be away beyond the resources of any newspaper and beyond the space, to do that. As I understand the matter, Mr. Swan is undertaking on his own account to furnish to persons who subscribe to him personally at so much apiece absolutely verbatim copies of everything that takes place here, and he receives his pay from the persons who desire to obtain these copies from him which he has printed. It is a considerable speculation that he has entered into, involving the expenditure of considerable sums of money. In so far as he is a reporter he might summarize, if he were working for the Herald; so far as this transaction is concerned it is supposed to be an absolutely verbatim publication, without comment, summary, change or alteration in any respect. If I have misstated it I think Mr. Swan had better explain it himself; and if he has anything to add, if he desires to, he should do so now.

The Master—Let me see if I understood Mr. Whipple. There were to be five copies in all, one to go to each of the three parties, if we may so call them, in the case, one to Mr. Swan, one to the Master, and then the expense of the five copies was to be borne one-quarter each by the three parties and by Mr. Swan. That is the way I understand it.

Mr. Whipple—That is right.

Mr. Bates—I do not think that Mr. Swan should be recognized as a party of record in this case. Let me state to Your Honor—

The Master—I did not quite gather from Mr. Whipple that he was to be recognized as a party.

Mr. Bates—Only as a party to this agreement, I will state, then.

The Master—As a party to this agreement?

Mr. Bates—It has been stated to me by the editor in chief of The Boston Herald within a comparatively few days that Mr. Swan was their Christian Science editor. The statement was made because I had complained of articles which were being published in The Boston Herald which we thought deliberately misrepresented the whole case, and it was told to us that Mr. Swan was their Christian Science editor and was responsible for those articles. Under those circumstances I certainly object to making any agreement that includes him in this matter.

Mr. Thompson — Does counsel realize the fact that he is asked, not to make an agreement with The Boston Herald or in any wise to facilitate the publication of anything injurious or beneficial in The Boston Herald, but merely to reduce the expense by a fraction of the taking down and getting out by these stenographers of a literal account of what takes place? It passes my comprehension how, if it were the foul fiend himself doing it, it could hurt or help any party in this case in his interest as a litigant. It simply reduces the expense. I must confess that it seems singular to object to something which is urged by Mr. Dittmore simply for the purpose of reducing a little the enormous expense of this litigation to him, who is least able of all the parties here to bear any expense in this case.

Mr. Bates—May I add one word more, Your Honor? It was stated to us by my brother that the purpose was to have this published in The Christian Science Monitor in full, which is the organ of the church that is interested in these cases. That we did not object to. The publishers of The Christian Science Monitor are the trustees who are parties to these suits. If they want a copy for The Christian Science Monitor, then we are willing to agree to that, but we are not willing to agree to share the expense with Mr. Swan, or any outside parties, so that they may have a copy to use for any purpose that they may please. Our agreement was limited to the idea of it being published in The Christian Science Monitor; if anybody else wants a copy they should make an arrangement entirely independently of us.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, the extra copy which we ordered is for publication in The Christian Science Monitor; that will be ordered at our own private expense as trustees; we do not wish to ask anyone to share in that expense. The Monitor, as the official organ of the Christian Science faith, has felt that these proceedings ought to be reported to the field, as it is called, very accurately. A transcript of the evidence and whatever is said, and an account of whatever is done before Your Honor, will be published in that newspaper in full, without comment. But the trustees, whom we represent, who are charged with the duties of management of the Monitor, have not felt that they rightfully might attempt to exclude or make difficult to any other journal or newspaper, or to any person desiring to publish what is said with equal accuracy, and send it out to those interested—that they should be deprived of the opportunity and that the Monitor itself should have the exclusive publication of that news, although it would be manifestly for its advantage so to do. Any newspaper would have the right to have a stenographer present and take the testimony independently, as I understand it, and bear the expense of it.

The Master—I understand that there is a rule of the Court in regard to it.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor. The Chief Justice in a comparatively recent case stated that the hearings before a master, where the master takes the place of the Court, are just as open as hearings before the Court itself, and that the testimony is to be taken publicly; and the only result, if the accurate transcript really is for the Herald, would be to make it cost that newspaper more than they otherwise would have to pay for it, and it would make the parties here pay the full expense, when Mr. Swan or the Herald, or whoever is making the request, offers to share the expense.

The Master—I take it that this is a matter for your agreement, gentlemen. It is nothing for me to rule upon; I could not rule on it against objection, I suppose.

Mr. Whipple—I think that that is a matter of private accommodation, but I see no reason why the stenographer should not take an order from Mr. Swan at such rates as he might agree upon with the stenographer. Do you see any objection to that, Governor Bates?

Mr. Bates—I assume that they are in our employ and take this case for our benefit and that they do not have the right to give out copies unless we may so direct them.

Mr. Thompson—I do not understand anything of the sort, and I assumed that that was at the bottom of the objection made by Governor Bates. Now the cat is out of the bag. He does not mind the extra expense that he is putting on Mr. Dittmore, but what he does want is to deprive Mr. Swan from getting a verbatim copy of what takes place in this room and sending it to whom he pleases. In other words, to that extent Governor Bates is unwilling to have proper publicity in this case, and that is the nature of his objection. I strongly object to any arrangement which prevents Mr. Swan from buying, paying for and getting whatever takes place here, exactly as it takes place; in other words, from letting the truth be known—which is at the bottom of my brother's objection.

Mr. Whipple—May I offer a friendly suggestion? That it is perfectly competent for General Streeter or Mr. Thompson to order an extra copy and deliver it to Mr. Swan, or to The Boston Herald, or anybody else they see fit to deliver it to, provided the purpose is a proper one, and no one would think for a moment that it were otherwise than entirely proper. Perhaps that would solve the difficulty.

Mr. Bates—We are not disposed to disclose your private transactions, Mr. Whipple. Those are not an issue in this case. If you see fit to buy a copy and present it to somebody we should have no objection; at least, if we had we should not raise it. What we do object to—

The Master—If you will pardon me for the interruption, then, there is no conflict between you as to this point. Mr. Jones, as the stenographer, is required to furnish a copy for the Master, a copy for each of the three parties in the case, and, beyond that, as many copies as he likes to anyone who orders them and is willing to pay for them.

Mr. Bates—To anyone who is counsel in the case.

The Master—To anyone who is counsel in the case?

Mr. Bates—To any who are counsel in the case.

The Master—Not to anyone except counsel?

Mr. Bates—I don't think they have that right. We employ them and pay them for their time, and the notes which they have belong to us. We pay them for writing them out. I think counsel have the right to order as many copies as they please.

The Master—If there is a difference between you I think you had better settle it.

Mr. Bates—That I am right I think is shown by the fact that they endeavored to obtain a copy by agreement in this way; if they had understood they could get it they wouldn't have done so.

The Master — The agreement that they suggested as I understood it—and I may have misunderstood it—related mainly to sharing the expense.

Mr. Bates—Well, Mr. Swan represents one city paper that has been conspicuously hostile to the Christian Science Church and the Christian Science movement, and that no longer ago than this morning published a misrepresentation of matters that occurred yesterday at their annual meeting. We object to entering into any bargain with representatives of a newspaper that is not fair or treating this matter fairly, even though he may pay for the whole of it.

Mr. Thompson—Let us have it thoroughly understood. There is no objection to my taking my copy, or buying two copies, and turning over one of them to Mr. Swan on such terms as I please, is there?

Mr. Bates—I have previously said that I think Mr. Thompson has the right to order more copies if he wishes to do so, and we are not going to concern ourselves with what he does with them.

Mr. Thompson—In other words, while you have no legal or other objection to Mr. Swan getting a copy and paying for it through me or Mr. Dittmore, you do desire to put a fraction of the extra expense on Mr. Dittmore, when you could just as well leave it off, having no more and no less happen by making the financial arrangement that I have suggested.

Mr. Bates—We do not wish to prolong this controversy, Your Honor, but the absurdity of the position is shown by the statement of it. If he is going to get two copies, and get his extra copy at reduced rates at which extra copies are obtained, he can then give it to Mr. Swan or The Boston Herald, and get the full quarter that they were going to pay on this, and instead of Mr. Dittmore being harmed in the matter he would be assisted by it, but it prevents our becoming parties with those who have shown themselves hostile.

Mr. Thompson—That is not a correct financial statement of it.

The Master—Well, this is hardly a controversy; it is a matter of discussion as to a proposed agreement. We had better get the agreement, I think, in writing, and then we will know just what it is before we go ahead.

Mr. Thompson—I understand now the agreement is that the expense is divided into thirds for four copies, and any extra copy each counsel pays for himself. That is all there is to it.

Mr. Whipple—And he may use it as he pleases.

Mr. Thompson—To use as he pleases; the stenographer is at liberty to sell as many copies as he wants to, to counsel, and counsel in turn is at liberty to turn it over to whomever he pleases.

The Master—Would it not be well to draw that up in writing?

Mr. Streeter—Your Honor, is it possible that we have got to make an agreement with Brother Bates that we can use a couple of copies of this stenographic report as we please, assuming that it is legitimately used? I cannot see the occasion for all this extended controversy about it. The Governor apparently does not want Dittmore or Swan or anybody that he does not like to be relieved in the slightest degree of expense. Well, now, we can take care of that. We get three copies, one for each party. If they object to Swan's having it we will order another copy, and, as I understand it, under the law that is our copy and we can do as we have a mind to with it provided it is legitimately used. I do not see any occasion for going on with any controversy about that with Brother Bates.

Mr. Bates—All I object to in General Streeter's statement is that I object to Mr. Swan, because I do not like his having a copy. Personally I like Mr. Swan, and have for years; but I do object to any paper having a copy or any portion at our expense when that paper cannot show itself fair in its columns in a controversy of this kind.

Mr. Thompson—I think before we go further a general denial should be inserted here. As far as I have read what has come out in the Herald it seemed to me the only objection to it was that it was too conspicuously fair to the directors.

Mr. Whipple—If this discussion is to go on I should think the Herald ought to be represented, as it seems to be at the point of attack.

Mr. Bates—I will make one suggestion, Your Honor, and that is this: If Mr. Swan will agree that The Boston Herald will publish the whole of these proceedings verbatim, without any comment, as I understand The Christian Science Monitor proposes to do, I will be glad to enter into any agreement The Boston Herald desires to that end.

Mr. Thompson—I think Mr. Swan would like to say something at this stage, if Your Honor pleases.

Mr. William U. Swan—May it please Your Honor, I occupy two positions at this hearing. I am a representative of the Court Information Bureau, which has promised the Christian Science field to publish a verbatim report of this hearing without comment. I am also a newspaper man, and representing here nearly all the papers in the country. I represent not only The Boston Herald, The New York Herald, but a large number of the other papers which have asked me to look after the story of this hearing, the newspaper story, through the boys who are here in the Court House covering these hearings. Therefore I am here in that dual capacity. I have therefore made this request for a stenographic report in order that I may furnish it to this Court Information Bureau, which I have organized for the benefit of the Christian Science field, in order that they may receive a full, unbiased and unexpurgated report of these hearings.

Mr. Bates—May it please the Court, one suggestion made by Mr. Swan simply emphasizes our position, because the only two papers that have been mentioned, The Boston Herald and The New York Herald, are the only two papers that have assumed this attitude in the whole country, so far as we know. No longer ago than last Sunday an article from Boston, whose representative we have just heard from, appeared in The New York Herald that was highly offensive and I think would have made the writer of it subject to contempt proceedings. It is not the first article. They have been publishing them for several weeks. The New York Herald and The Boston Herald are in the same boat in that respect, and they are the only two papers that have not treated this matter right.

Mr. Streeter—May I ask Your Honor what we are talking about? What is the issue here? I cannot see it.

The Master—I hardly think that is directed to any issue before the Court, General Streeter.

Mr. Streeter—Or not before the Court.

The Master—Governor Bates declines to modify his position, as I understand it; therefore it leaves the matter in this form according to the understanding of the Master: The stenographers to make four copies, one to go to the master, one to each of the three parties involved in the suits, the expense to be shared in thirds by them, either party to be at liberty to order other copies at its own expense.

Mr. Bates—Yes.

Mr. Streeter—That is exactly it.

Mr. Whipple—If there are no other matters, if Your Honor please, to be taken up, I would suggest an adjournment.

The Master—Would it be well, Mr. Whipple, to get the appearances of counsel on record, or isn't that necessary?

Mr. Whipple—I was about to state the appearances of counsel, but most of the counsel have introduced themselves somewhat vivaciously already, so there would be very little left to be done in that respect. The counsel for the plaintiffs in the first bill in equity—

The Master—I take it the appearances of counsel are on file in the case already?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor, but with regard to the plaintiffs, one other counsel is—

The Master—Before the Master it might be well to have a record of counsel who appear for the purpose of this hearing; it may be they are not all here.

Mr. Whipple—Of the counsel for the plaintiffs, Judge Hughes of New York—

The Master—Now we are on Eustace et al. v. Dickey et al.?

Mr. Whipple—Yes. Former Judge Charles E. Hughes of New York, of counsel, is not present this morning, but it is expected and hoped that he may be present during some of the hearings before the Master. Mr. Strawn of Chicago is present; Silas H. Strawn, Esq., of Chicago, is present. Lothrop Withington, Esq., will be present and participate in the trial, and Sherman L. Whipple. That covers the appearances and participants in the trial on behalf of the plaintiffs in the first suit.

The Master—Now, the defendants, Adam H. Dickey et al.?

Mr. Bates—May it please the Court, the defendants Adam H. Dickey, James A. Neal, Edward A. Merritt, William R. Rathvon and Annie M. Knott, whom we claim to be the Board of Directors of the Christian Science Church, and surely the de facto board, are represented by Clifford P. Smith of Boston, Edwin A. Krauthoff of Washington, and my firm, Bates, Nay, Abbott & Dane. We represent the same parties in each suit.

The Master—Now we come to the second case.

Mr. Streeter—In the second case, Mr. Thompson and my partner, Mr. Fred C. Demond, and myself, appear for Mr. John V. Dittmore, who is in the second case the plaintiff, and for him as a defendant in the Eustace case.

Mr. Thompson—It ought to be said that General Streeter himself is senior counsel.

Mr. Streeter—I don't think that is very material.

The Master—That gives us the counsel in the second case.

Mr. Whipple—We are not in the second case, the trustees are not in the second case, in which the appearances have been stated. That is purely between Mr. Dittmore and his former associates, the directors, and Mrs. Knott.

The Master—Is there anything else we need to arrange at this hearing?

Mr. Whipple—Nothing except the date of the next hearing, and I was about to suggest that if we should not trespass too much upon Your Honor we would like to suspend the hearing merely and notify Your Honor as soon as the engagement to which I referred earlier in what I said is finished. We might at this time, if Your Honor felt like giving it, receive Your Honor's directions in regard to the opening. Of course, the plaintiffs would make their opening in our case, I take it, in the first instance.

The Master—Now, if I understand you, the hearing is to be suspended until further notice.

Mr. Whipple—Not formal notice—

The Master—Who is going to give notice?

Mr. Whipple— —but we will notify you informally as soon as we are released from the obligation in the Supreme Court.

The Master—That is to be by consent?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—You will agree upon another time and notify the master?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor; and that other time will be just as soon as we have finished in there unless we agree on something else.

The Master—Now, as to the opening.

Mr. Whipple—I have assumed that we should proceed for the trustees with our opening in the first instance. Then whether Your Honor will ask to have the second case opened, or whether you will ask an opening on the part of the defendants, I suppose may properly be determined before the evidence is put in, or perhaps they would not care to make any.

Mr. Bates—I didn't hear.

Mr. Whipple—Do you care to make any opening before any evidence is put in?

Mr. Bates—Not if the pleadings are to be read.

Mr. Whipple—All right; we will read them.

The Master—Are you going to read the pleadings in full? I have them in print here.

Mr. Whipple—Either read them or summarize them.

The Master—What do you say about that, Governor Bates?

Mr. Bates—Why, we will proceed either way; we will make a comparatively brief opening with the understanding that we shall be permitted to make a longer one at the time when we come to the defense, or we will agree that in case the pleadings are read in full then we will waive any opening at the outset of the case.

Mr. Whipple—Well, we will either read them in full or substantially in full; I mean, we will be able to summarize a good deal of the statement of facts about which there is no dispute.

Mr. Thompson—Why wouldn't it be proper to say that anybody who wanted could read as liberally as he chose from the pleadings?

Mr. Whipple—That is right. "

Mr. Thompson—And if that is so we do not care to open our case at first or until the time comes for a more formal opening later.

The Master—These were sent to me some days ago, and I read them through, so that as the matter seems likely to take a good deal of time perhaps we can economize to some extent by summarizing the pleadings. I will leave that entirely to you. Now, Mr. Whipple raises this point. I understood you, Mr. Whipple, that your suggestion was that your case being the first one on the docket, Eustace et al. v. Dickey et al., you being the plaintiffs in that case, that you begin, according to the usual rule. Is there any objection to that?

Mr. Bates—No.

The Master—Very good. The plaintiffs will then begin in that case and put in their evidence, and then the defendants, first, those represented by Governor Bates and his associates, and then those represented by General Streeter and his associates. Is that right?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—And then after we get through with that you probably can tell better what ought to be done in the other case than you can now.

Mr. Thompson—Then after Governor Bates has put in such defense as he cares to put in, if there should seem to us to be anything left over which is material to Mr. Dittmore to put in, I suppose that would be the proper time for us to put it in.

The Master—And then rebuttal, in the usual way, of course.

Mr. Whipple—And then take up the second case.

Mr. Bates—Is it, then, Your Honor's intention to hear the entire evidence in the Eustace case before hearing any evidence in the Dittmore case?

The Master—As I understood it, we had already agreed that the evidence in one case was to be evidence in the other. I suppose, therefore, that when we have got the evidence all in in the case of Eustace v. Dickey we shall have already in a very considerable portion of the evidence that belongs to the second case.

Mr. Bates—Then from that I assume, Your Honor—

The Master—And it will not be necessary to put it in all over again.

Mr. Bates—I assume that in examining witnesses who are offered in one case that it will be proper at the time of their original examination to also examine them in regard to matters which they may know which may affect the second case.

Mr. Whipple—We make no objection to that, although we are not concerned in the question.

Mr. Thompson— I don't think it makes much difference, I should suppose all the benefits of consolidation would be secured if it were understood that in the cross-examination of witnesses in the case of Eustace v. Dickey matters could be gone into, if there are any, which are solely relevant in the case of Dittmore v. Dickey. To extend it beyond that may or may not be advisable. I should think that would serve all the purposes of convenience and promptness.

The Master—Is that agreeable to everybody?

Mr. Bates—So far as I understood what Mr. Thompson said, but he spoke a little low and I could not hear him very well.

Mr. Thompson—I said it seemed to me we should be carrying out the order of the Court in consolidating and ordering these cases tried together, both in letter and in spirit, if we should have it understood that when any witness is offered in Eustace v. Dickey he might be cross-examined, if it was desired to do so, by any party interested in Dittmore v. Dickey, and that beyond that it would be useless to try to go in the introduction of testimony while the case of Eustace v. Dickey is being tried. To introduce testimony in chief which has no bearing whatever on Eustace v. Dickey, if there is any such testimony, but only on Dittmore v. Dickey, would seem to be a futile waste of time. All the benefits of consolidation could be obtained by the other method that I have suggested, namely, that the cross-examining counsel, if he finds any witness in Eustace v. Dickey whom he desires to cross-examine in the Dittmore case, he may do so, but not introduce new witnesses in Dittmore v. Dickey while the case of Eustace v. Dickey is being tried.

Mr. Bates—My question pertained merely to the question as to whether or not it would be necessary to dispose of the witness when he first appears, and to get all the evidence out of him on both cases, or whether it would be optional to us at that time to examine him in the second case, or call him again later.

Mr. Thompson—I don't think there is the slightest difference of opinion between Governor Bates and myself. It appears to me that we mean exactly the same thing. Beyond that, if he meant that while Mr. Whipple was trying his case he might introduce some witness himself having nothing to do with Mr. Whipple's case, and examine him in the Dittmore case, that I think would be a foolish performance. As I now understand it, I think there is no difference between us whatever.

The Master—The fact that a witness has already been examined in the first case under that arrangement would not necessarily prevent his being called again.

Mr. Thompson—Not at all.

The Master—I understand here we are not governed by the rules of the Federal Court where cross-examination is necessarily limited to what is opened in direct.

Mr. Whipple—I think the principle that the State court has endeavored to apply is to elicit all the truth from a particular witness when he is on the stand, especially by way of cross-examination, and not be hampered by any rule restricting him to what he has testified to in direct.

The Master—I may find it a little difficult to get used to that, but I will try my best to do so. What else, gentlemen, is there this morning?

Mr. Whipple—Nothing, I think.

The Master—Then we now adjourn until such time as the parties hereafter agree upon and notify the master.

Mr. Whipple—Well, may I offer the suggestion that we merely suspend instead of attempting to adjourn—just suspend the hearing?

The Master—I think that will be better, Mr. Whipple, yes. We will suspend.

Mr. Whipple—Then we will notify Your Honor as soon as we are able to take up the presentation of the evidence.

June 11, 1919

SECOND DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room,
Court House, Boston, Massachusetts.

June 11, 1919.

(The hearing is resumed at 10:26 a. m.)

Opening Statement of Sherman L. Whipple, Esq., in behalf of the plaintiffs:

May it please Your Honor—The plaintiffs in the first case are gentlemen who hold the position of trustees under a Deed of Trust executed and delivered on Jan. 25, 1898. They bring this bill in their capacity as trustees under that Deed of Trust. A copy of the Deed of Trust is attached to the bill and marked Exhibit A. If Your Honor happens to have one of the smaller books or pamphlets you will find it printed in the most convenient form on page 42 of that pamphlet.

The Master—I have one.

Mr. Whipple Opens

Mr. Whipple—The defendants are the directors, so-called, but really are the trustees under another Deed of Trust executed by the same Donor, Mrs. Eddy, at an earlier date, Sept. 1, 1892. There was an amendment to that original Deed of Trust of Sept. 1, which was brought about by a conveyance of the trust property by the trustees to a third person, who in turn reconveyed it to the trustees with an amendment to the trust.

Copies of these deeds are attached to the bill, Exhibit B and Exhibit C.

I said that the suit was brought against these trustees, also known as the directors, of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. Your Honor will observe that there are six defendants, and that number is included because of the uncertainty as to whether one of the defendants, Mrs. Knott, is actually a director, or whether Mr. Dittmore is actually a director. I may say in that connection that the suit which is to be heard with this is a suit to determine whether Mr. Dittmore holds his position as a director or trustee, or whether the attempt to remove him was a valid and successful proceeding, and Mrs. Knott is the real defendant in this case. The bill avers that these plaintiffs do not know which is the real defendant, and therefore they join them both as parties.

We have therefore a controversy between two sets of trustees, both of whom hold their office under and by virtue of trust deeds from the same Donor, Mrs. Eddy. The bill sets forth in its first paragraph that prior to the date of either of the trust deeds, Mrs. Eddy had become the Leader in the organization of a church "designed to commemorate the word and works of our Master, which should reinstate primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing;" and that after the charter of the Church was obtained, in June, 1879, she became its Pastor; that in September, 1892, she was instrumental in reorganizing the Church, which was named "The First Church of Christ, Scientist," and Mrs. Eddy became the Pastor and later on was Pastor Emeritus until the date of her passing on.

The averments of the first, second, and third paragraphs of the bill are not particularly controverted in the answer. There is a differentiation in the matter of detail as to these historical facts, but I think it will not be found to be of particular importance.

Mrs. Eddy, in her plan for the development and extension throughout the world of the religion of which she was the Founder and the Leader, first made these deeds referred to, or this deed, which created the church directors. Perhaps it would be well to refer to that deed for the definition of the powers which she gave to these gentlemen.

The donees are Ira O. Knapp, William B. Johnson, Joseph S. Eastaman, and Stephen A. Chase, and she conveyed to these gentlemen and trustees a certain parcel of land situated on Falmouth Street in Boston. Then follows a description of it. The statement is then made, on page 49, that:

"This Deed of conveyance is made upon the following express trusts and conditions which the said grantees by accepting this deed agree and covenant for themselves and their successors in office to fully perform and fulfill.

"1. Said grantees shall be known as the 'Christian Science Board of Directors.'"

And that is the name by which these defendants, who are now five in number, are known. The deed ordains that the grantees "shall constitute a perpetual body or corporation under and in accordance with Section 1, Chapter 39, of the Public Statutes of Massachusetts." It then provides for the filling of a vacancy in the board by the remaining members. It then prescribes the qualifications of membership of the board. No one shall be eligible who is not in the opinion of the remaining members of the board a firm and consistent believer in the doctrines of Christian Science as taught in a book entitled "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy.

In the second paragraph there is a provision that the board shall, within five years from the date hereof, build a church. Then the third provision is that the board shall elect a pastor, reader, or speaker, to fill the pulpit, who shall be a genuine Christian Scientist. The fourth provides with regard to the character of the building. The fifth provides that the Board of Directors "shall not allow or permit in said church building any preaching or other religious services which shall not be consonant and in strict harmony with the doctrines and practice of Christian Science," as taught by Mrs. Eddy.

The sixth gives the name of the church. The seventh limits the right to sell or mortgage. The eighth deals with the question of the church building. The ninth provides for maintaining regular preaching. The tenth provides for a reversion of the whole property to Mrs. Eddy's heirs if they do not go on with the religious services. The eleventh is that, in substance.

That is the creation of the defendants, the Board of Directors, and although they have that name, which can be conveniently used to distinguish them from the plaintiffs, they are, as Your Honor will observe, trustees under a deed of trust. I do not find at the moment an expression of the purposes of the trust in the terms of extension and development of Christian Science, but it is perfectly obvious that that is the entire purpose of the trust. I do not think it is necessary to call attention to Exhibit C, for the present, at least.

Now, the bill goes on to allege that while Mrs. Eddy thus founded a church and made the defendants the trustees of the church, or directors, having the management of the church which she indicated they should have, she herself held and managed another instrumentality for developing and extending the great religion of which she was the Founder, and that was a publication society, and on the basis of these two acts there is an averment in the bill, appearing in paragraph 4, that:

"The conception and plan of Mrs. Eddy for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science, as taught by her, involved two general branches of activity. . . . The second, by increasing the circulation throughout the world of publications containing the truths of Christian Science, for the purpose thereby of more effectually promoting and extending the religion of Christian Science."

For some years she herself handled and managed the affairs of the business which was conducted under the name of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and it is averred and admitted that a great work was done in the promotion of the religion of Christian Science by the Publishing Society as managed by Mrs. Eddy herself. We call attention to the fact that she did not give the directors of The Mother Church any power or authority over the Publishing Society at all. She committed to their charge the management of The Mother Church, but withheld from them, and held herself, the management of this great activity which she had instituted and founded to extend her religion.

But later, several years later, in 1898, she decided to put the management of that Publishing Society into the hands of trustees, and the plaintiffs attach significance to the fact, in the averments of their bill, that she did not select directors or any member of that Board of Trustees which she had created six years before; she selected no one of them as an instrumentality for carrying out and carrying on this great trust, which we think it is obvious was a greater and more important trust than the management of a single church, because the intention was, by the circulation of this literature, to reach the multitude, to reach hundreds of thousands and millions, where the reader of a particular church would reach perhaps five or ten thousand people at the best. It was a somewhat novel method of promulgation of religious truths, in a sense, and its success has been a demonstration of the sagacity and business judgment, as well as religious wisdom, of Mrs. Eddy.

She selected, accordingly, three trustees to handle the affairs of the Publishing Society, and very definitely she laid out the manner in which they should handle their trust. That appears in Exhibit A, the Deed of Trust of Jan. 25, 1898. Your Honor will permit me to call attention to the provisions of that Deed of Trust, appearing on page 42.

In the first place, Mrs. Eddy made it a condition that the trustees should manage their trust as she provided in this trust instrument. The conveyance is made in consideration of one dollar and "in consideration of their agreement to faithfully observe and perform all the conditions hereinafter specified to be by them observed and performed," apparently intending that if the trustees should at any time manage their trust otherwise than in the manner defined in the trust deed itself, a condition on which the conveyance was made would not be fulfilled, and, it might be, the property revert to the Donor.

She defines the purposes of this trust after the description of the property which she conveyed, first stating that the trust was to be "upon the following perpetual and irrevocable trust and confidence." I need not point out that those particular and impressive words, in connection with this controversy, were not used in the Deed of Trust, even, to the directors; but here, although such a trust would be by law perpetual and irrevocable even if Mrs. Eddy had not stated it, her purpose and intent, with that remarkable wisdom that she always showed, were, she declared in words, that this trust should be perpetual and irrevocable.

The Master—That is, italics are indicated in the deed?

Mr. Whipple (to Mr. Withington)—Am I right in that?

The Master—I suppose they must be.

Mr. Whipple—They are typewritten and they are underscored.

The Master—Underscored?

Mr. Whipple—I shall offer the paper in a moment. But the copy, I think, is exactly accurate. Perhaps, as Your Honor has raised the question now, while it is in your mind—

The Court—I supposed it must be so.

Mr. Whipple—Well, it sometimes happens that those things are italicized because the party wants to emphasize particular attention to the fact, but in this case the italicizing is in the paper itself.

The first paragraph states as the first condition under which the trustees may hold this property and execute the trust which, in the view of Christian Scientists, is a sacred trust on the part of Mrs. Eddy:

"Said trustees shall hold and manage said property and property rights exclusively for the purpose of carrying on the business, which has been heretofore conducted by the said Christian Science Publishing Society, in promoting the interests of Christian Science."

Then No. 2 gives the name under which the business shall be conducted and carried on.

The Master—I suppose that that "Christian Science Publishing Society" referred to in Paragraph 1 is a corporation?

Mr. Whipple—No, Your Honor. As I understand the fact, Mrs. Eddy had conducted the business under that name. It was a trade name, so to speak, if we may apply that term. But at one time, I am informed, the business had been conducted by a corporation. You will notice that in what may be called the preamble.

The Master—The reference there is to The Christian Science Publishing Society, which conveyed certain goods and chattels under the bill of sale of Jan. 21. Was that a corporation?

Mr. Whipple—It was, yes, Your Honor. That is, the corporation conveyed to Mrs. Eddy, Mrs. Eddy conveyed to the Directors the property which had been conveyed to her by The Christian Science Publishing Society; and then in Paragraph 2 she ordains that the business shall be done under the unincorporated name of "The Christian Science Publishing Society." So that that name was handed over by Mrs. Eddy herself to the trustees as a name under which they should and must conduct the business, and, of course, a name of very great importance to the business. The very fact that it had the seal of Mrs. Eddy's approval gives it in Christian Science circles a value that it is impossible to estimate.

The third paragraph provides that the trustees, "shall energetically and judiciously manage the business of the Publishing Society on a strictly Christian basis, and upon their own responsibility"—We would like to accentuate Your Honor's attention to that—

"and without consulting me about details, subject only to my supervision, if I shall at any time elect to advise or direct them."

We would like to accentuate Your Honor's attention to that provision that Mrs. Eddy reserved the right herself, and to herself, and to herself alone, to advise or direct these trustees at any time she might see fit; a reservation filled with power, and a reservation which no trustee would for a moment think of disputing, a reservation which guided during Mrs. Eddy's lifetime the entire handling of the business of the Publishing Society. But Your Honor will observe that she reserved to herself alone this authority to do the very things that these defendant directors are trying to do, namely, to direct these trustees as to how they shall manage this great trust.

The fourth paragraph provides that the trustees shall keep accurate books of account and that, "all surplus funds over and above the sum necessary to defray the running expenses of the business" shall be kept "until the same shall be paid over to the Church treasurer as herein provided."

There are certain details covered in that statement,—payments and accounts every six months, a limitation of authority of the trustees to expend money of the trust for property not necessary for the immediate successful prosecution of the business, prohibition against speculation or incurring liabilities beyond their power to pay.

"Said treasurer shall hold the money so paid over to him subject to the order of 'The First Members' of said Church, who are authorized to order its disposition only in accordance with the rules and by-laws contained in the Manual of said Church."

It will be necessary, or fitting, perhaps, for me to speak a little later as to who or what "The First Members" were, and I shall refer to the Manual of the Church in that connection.

Paragraph 5 provides for a business manager and that he shall present to the trustees at the end of each month a full and correct statement of the receipts and expenditures.

Paragraph 6 is an important provision, if Your Honor please, as we think, in connection with this litigation. It provides:

"Said trustees shall employ all the help necessary to the proper conduct of said business, and shall discharge the same in their discretion or according to the needs of the business, excepting that the business manager may call in at times of necessity such temporary help as will facilitate the business."

The Master—The business manager—that is in Clause 5.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Is that the first mention of that official?

Mr. Whipple—I have not noticed an earlier mention of him. Yes, that is the first time, I am informed.

The Court—It is taken for granted that they had a business manager?

Mr. Whipple—I think so. They have always had a business manager, an occupant of the office known as such. And you see it provides that the employment of the help necessary to the proper conduct of the business—that is, the assistants necessary in conducting—is solely with the trustees, except so far as the manager is authorized to call in at times of necessity such temporary help as will facilitate the business.

The Master—Clause 3 directs the trustees to manage the business?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Yet in Clause 5 we first hear of a business manager.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor. They manage it through the business manager. I mean that is the construction. Then No. 7, while it is not perhaps particularly pertinent to the case in any specific issue, there is a statement that, "The Trustees shall employ such number of persons as they may deem necessary to prepare Bible Lessons or Lesson-Sermons to be read in the Christian Science churches, the same to be published Quarterly as has heretofore been done by and in the name of the Christian Science Quarterly"—that was one of the publications which they were to send out—"and they may, in their discretion, change the name or style of such quarterly publication as occasion may demand. They shall also fix the compensation of the persons so selected." There is a provision requiring the trustees to go to a point which might at the first blush seem beyond merely the handling of the Publication Society's affairs in dealing with these instructions, dealing with the Church itself, because they prepare Bible lessons or lesson-sermons to be read in the Christian Science churches, and I think it may not be amiss to state, as I understand the fact to be, that sermons prepared in the usual way in other churches are not delivered in the Christian Science churches, but they have a reader, a first and second reader, who read the lessons or sermons prepared for them to read with reference to the Bible and to Mrs. Eddy's Key to the Scriptures. So that a very important duty and function was given to the trustees by Exhibit C in connection with their Publication Society work. All the journals, of course, were to be devoted to the spread of Christian Science, primarily.

Paragraph 8 provides that the "trustees shall have direction and supervision of the publication of said Quarterly, and also of all pamphlets, tracts, and other literature pertaining to said business, using their best judgment as to the means of preparing and issuing the same, so as to promote the best interests of the Cause, reserving the right to make such changes as I may think important."

There was another very important duty imposed upon the trustees, in which the directors or trustees under the other trust were to take no part. I may be permitted to say that I ask special attention to that, because you will frequently through the hearing, if the precedents are of any consequence, hear claims made by these directors that the organs are "our" publications, "our" pamphlets; that they are the organs of the Church and therefore are "ours," that is, the directors'. And I desire to point out how clearly that was absent from the scheme that Mrs. Eddy laid out in one of the most important, one of the most sacred, one of the most illuminating papers that she signed, how clearly that was absent from her scheme for the advancement of the cause of Christian Science, how fully she put into the hands of the trustees the doing of these important things in connection with the publications, reserving to herself, and herself alone, and to no one else, the right to make such changes as she might think important.

Then the qualifications of the trustees are described in Paragraph 9:

"Said trustees and their successors in trust shall not be eligible to said trusteeship or to continue in the same, unless they are loyal, faithful, and consistent believers and advocates of the principles of Christian Science as taught by me in my book 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures.'"

Then there is a provision in Paragraph 10 for the filling or declaration of a vacancy.

"Whenever a vacancy shall occur in said trusteeship for any cause, I reserve the right to fill the same by appointment, if I shall so desire, so long as I may live; but if I do not elect to exercise this right, the remaining trustees shall fill said vacancy. The First Members together with the directors of said Church shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship for such reasons as to them may seem expedient."

Your Honor will note, and I may call attention to it because that becomes important later, that the First Members of the Church, whose identity will be described and whose function will be referred to, are those who can declare vacancies in the trusteeship with the cooperation of this Board of Directors, and this is the first time that the Board of Directors is mentioned. It must be a power exercised by the First Members, but with the cooperation of the directors. The directors are given no power of removal or if that is to be construed a removal. The First Members are given the power of removal with the necessity of the Board of Directors cooperating with them; that is, the directors, as we understand it, having a check upon the power of the First Members, because the First Members cannot do it without the directors. I think it will appear that the First Members' functions have been utterly changed since that time. I do not know whether it will be claimed by the defendants that they no longer exist, or the body no longer exists, or what change is made, and I do not know that it is of very much consequence, because the directors themselves as such, as First Members, have no right or authority under the trust deed.

The eleventh paragraph is a reservation of the right to withdraw from the trust the publication of The Christian Science Journal; and the twelfth paragraph a provision that upon her decease The Christian Science Journal was to go to the Publication Society as a part of the trust res, and that was never withdrawn and is a part of the trust.

The thirteenth provides the compensation of the trustees for their services.

The fourteenth is important.

"The delivery of this instrument to, and its acceptance by, said trustees shall be regarded as the full establishment of the trust and as the agreement by the trustees to honestly and faithfully do and perform all things to be done and performed by them within the terms, objects and purposes of this instrument."

Then follows a statement which is indorsed on the Deed of Trust itself of the resignation of certain trustees and the election of their successors.

In the answer of the defendants they state a little more in detail the succession of trustees—the fact of the appointment by Mrs. Eddy when she appointed, as she had a right to do. That appears in paragraph two of the answer.

Thus in 1898 Mrs. Eddy had created two independent boards of trustees, one to manage the Church which she founded, and one with an entirely different and separate scope of activities, to handle and manage that other great instrumentality by which she intended to spread the Christian Science religion, the publication society. Their respective duties are outlined and defined with precision, with care, with judgment, and with wisdom, as might be expected, considering their author.

The things which Mrs. Eddy said and the directions which she gave in her lifetime are peculiarly sacred to the believers in the religion that she established; and their search for Truth is a search in her writings and for her sayings, and when they find them they feel that they have guidance and direction as to what shall be done.

These boards having been established, during Mrs. Eddy's lifetime there was never the slightest difference as to what should be done. Her expression and judgment were accepted not only willingly but with enthusiasm.

Let me refer here to what is called the Manual. Mrs. Eddy established for the control of her Church, The Mother Church, a manual or set of by-laws. It was changed from time to time. Some radical changes were made near the end of her life. The Manual is regarded in the same way by Christian Scientists as other things which she wrote and which she did, and it is a spiritual guide of all who believe in Christian Science. I shall refer a little later to what the defendants claim with regard to the Manual, as affecting the trust deed. It is enough to say that, in the first instance, the Manual accorded in all respects with the trust deed. I shall not say more about it, because we have a serious doubt as to whether in any aspect of the case the Manual can be made admissible. But what I have said as to its general features it seems proper to state, because the fact will undoubtedly be referred to that there is a Manual, and some claims will be made with regard to it.

After Mrs. Eddy passed on, of course the things which she, and she alone, could do, could no longer be done; and there were left some uncertainties in connection with provisions, either in trust deeds or otherwise, which required some positive action on her own part. These two trusts were left, of course, without the possibility of Mrs. Eddy's personal direction or interference any further. The trustees and directors, as should have been the case, worked harmoniously to do the things which Mrs. Eddy had imposed upon both of them as a trust, namely, to do the best they could, and all within their power, within the rules that she laid down, to promote and extend Christian Science. And they worked along harmoniously until something like a year ago, perhaps a little later than that, when the directors began to intimate and to take the position that they had supreme authority with regard to the Church, practically claiming that they succeeded to all the power and authority that Mrs. Eddy herself had; and they began to arrogate to themselves the claim that these publications were theirs, and were under their control, and that the trustees were subject to their direction. It is a curious fact that never had there been a thing as to which the trustees and directors had disagreed. There was not a thing which the directors wanted done that the trustees had not arranged to do. Nothing came up which, as a practical matter, there was any disagreement about; but vaguely, in one sense, and in another sense, in a very direct way, the directors said, "We must have an admission that we are in authority. We want you to stand up and admit that we are in authority." "Well, what do you want us to do—what particular thing?" "Well, nothing in particular, but we want an admission by you that we, the directors, are the supreme authority in The Mother Church, and in the publication society, that we have a right to control the editorial policies, that the publications are ours, and that they are not yours." "But," the trustees said, "look at our Deed of Trust. The author of that was a sacred person, and her wishes are sacred to us. We admit your absolute supremacy so far as has to do with church discipline, but the publishing society is a sacred trust to us." They intimated that that was a mere legal instrument, and that Mrs. Eddy really intended that they should handle the whole thing. They pointed out some things in the Manual which they thought justified them in claiming that they were to be absolutely supreme. A good deal of correspondence passed on the subject—a purely academic subject, because there was not any agreement as to what should be done, practically. For instance, in the selection of an editor they never had had any trouble in agreeing upon the same one; they agreed upon the same business manager; and the very fact that the trustees always agreed with them as to what should be done, so that there was not any definite thing which they could bring up, made them finally come out flatly and say, "What we want, before we go any further, is to have you make a written admission that we can give such orders and directions as we please with regard to the publication society."

The trustees were unable to assent to that, and after a while consulted counsel, as appears in the bill, as to what they ought to do; and counsel gave to them an opinion, which was addressed to the counsel for the defendants, in order that their position might be made known.

While it is not material at all in the legal phase, perhaps the trustees' position may properly be stated in that respect. They say that the Deed of Trust made by Mrs. Eddy is just as sacred a trust, just as inspired a paper or instrument, just as important a direction, as any that she gave in the Manual, which is for church discipline merely, or in any other utterance which she ever made, either orally or in writing. They say, beyond that, that the very fact that she stated it to be irrevocable, and that in her wisdom she knew that under the law it was irrevocable and unamendable, was a thing which is of the greatest importance in determining the trustees as to what they should do. They say that they are not in disobedience to any wish or suggestion that Mrs. Eddy ever made; but that, being confronted on the one hand with a solemn statement in a solemn and irrevocable instrument as to what they should do, they are obliged to accept it rather than to take the ephemeral expression of Mrs. Eddy in another part of her writings or sayings—an expression which was made to meet the exigencies of church discipline of a particular moment or a particular period, and which might be changed upon her wish at any moment—that, as between those conflicting, or apparently conflicting, directions of Mrs. Eddy, the one which was solemnly made, and made irrevocable by her, was the one which they must obey. I am speaking of that merely in the aspect of the case as to the performance of their duty as Christian Scientists. I doubt if it has any legal bearing or significance whatever, because of the familiar rule, which must have been known to Mrs. Eddy, that any subsequent declarations on her part could not in the slightest degree affect or change this instrument, and which is the rule that must be applied.

After counsel had consulted together, earnestly and unanimously desiring to spare the great Christian Science Church the embarrassment and scandal of a schism between those in authority, a modus vivendi was reached. It was understood as between the parties that each one, without yielding his contentions, and each body without yielding its contentions, should go forward in an attempt to cooperate together to do the commands which had been laid upon them both by Mrs. Eddy within the scope of the activities as she defined their respective activities. But, unfortunately, within 48 hours of the time that this agreement had solemnly been made, an agreement which had been ratified by the shaking of hands and the mutual statements on the part of the parties that in good faith they would attempt to carry out what had been agreed upon—I say, within 48 hours these directors repudiated that undertaking, and insisted, as is stated in the bill, that unless these plaintiffs would do what they had been insisting that they do for all these months before the counsel had reached this agreement—unless they would repudiate their counsel's advice, there could be no peace; and they intimated and threatened that they would take action to make the position of these trustees so untenable and embarrassing, by the exercise of their great power as directors, that they would have to abandon the trust which they had accepted from Mrs. Eddy, and give up the efforts which they had solemnly promised her by accepting the trust that they would attempt to carry out. That is stated in the bill on page 23.

Mr. Streeter—Are the pages the same in this copy, brother Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—I think not. In the small copy it is Paragraph 12.

“As a result of conferences between counsel of the trustees and directors, it was agreed that the respective boards would make a sincere attempt to harmonize their different views as to the authority of the Board of Trustees in respect to the manner in which the trustees should perform their duties as such. The plaintiffs endeavored in good faith to carry out such agreement, but the directors personally and through counsel, both in interviews and by correspondence, demanded of the trustees and insisted as a condition of their continuing to hold their offices, that the plaintiffs should explicitly and in writing repudiate the advice and opinion of their counsel as hereinabove set forth, and agree that their actions should not be governed thereby.

“Said directors requested the trustees particularly to repudiate that part of the opinion of counsel stated in the following terms:

“If there be any conflict between the terms of the deed (the Deed of Trust dated January 25, 1898) and the language of the Church Manual, the legal and moral obligation of the Trustees compels them to respond to and obey the mandates of the Deed.”

“The directors insisted as a further condition of the trustees retaining their offices as such, that the trustees acknowledge in writing that the Board of Directors have final authority in regard to the editorial policy of the publications of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and general supervision of the general affairs of The Christian Science Publishing Society.”

As I have told Your Honor, not one editorial had ever criticized, not one publication had ever come under the ban of the directors, so far as the trustees knew. There was no ground for any real criticism, so far as we know. Any suggestion that they made we were willing to abide by. But it was a pure attempt on the part of these gentlemen to have an authority recognized which they claimed existed, not because there was any particular reason for using it, because apparently the only reason was that they should have a comfortable sense of being more autocratic, more powerful, more absolute as a religious oligarchy than the Pope of Rome ever thought of being in the Roman Catholic religion; and the reason, among others, as the trustees expressed it, why they could not assent to it, was that the plan and scheme of Mrs. Eddy for religious development, and for the creation of the Church, was to have a great democracy, that an oligarchy, a religious hierarchy or oligarchy should not exist; that the Church should be a democratic Church, ruled by democracy, ruled by its members, and not ruled by any pope or set of popes. So that they were constrained not only by the terms of their deed, but by their belief in the methods of church policy and church polity, what they believed to be Mrs. Eddy's wishes, to resist this demand upon them—perfectly groundless, as they themselves believed and were advised by their counsel.

The plaintiffs refused “to repudiate the advice of their counsel and stated that, in the administration of their trust they would be guided by the terms of the trust instrument, with a due regard for the By-Laws of the Church and the provisions of the Church Manual, interpreted in relation to the expression of Mrs. Eddy's desires and purposes in the provisions of the Trust Deed.”

Then these trustees sent a notice of dismissal to Mr. Rowlands. Of course they had some theory or scheme as to why they selected one man for ejecting him from the position, or on whom to try out their attempt. They selected Mr. Rowlands, a gentleman who had made an enormous financial sacrifice to accept this position of trust with Mrs. Eddy, and who desired to maintain the position only to perform his duty as a Christian Science believer and as a man having once undertaken it. The notice of dismissal appears on pages 26 and 27. Notice was given to Mr. Rowlands' associates of this action, with a statement that they required the remaining trustees to fill the vacancy, or suggesting that it was their duty to fill the vacancy. They stated that, “it is the Board's desire that you immediately appoint some one to fill the position made vacant by their action of yesterday, and in the appointment of Mr. Rowlands' successor they expressly request that you name a person who shall be suitable and satisfactory to the Board of Directors.”

The plaintiffs state that there was no proper ground for the removal of Mr. Rowlands. They do not state any, except that Mr. Rowlands, with the other trustees, would not sign a written paper which would be a betrayal of their trust that they had received from Mrs. Eddy herself.

Then there is an averment which has more particularly to do with the request for a temporary injunction, which appears in Paragraph 17, that these defendants did not intend at all to apply to the courts to have an orderly decision of the Court as to what their rights were under the Trust Deed, but they proposed to coerce these defendants by the use of the tremendous power that they had as a result of their quasi-dictatorial attitude toward the affairs of The Mother Church—their right to distribute patronage, so to speak, their right to make appointments and grant licenses; and there was danger that they would carry out the threats which they had made, that they were going to make of this publication society an empty shell if they could not have their way with regard to controlling it or running it. And, as appears, an injunction was granted for the purpose of preventing them from carrying out such threats as that.

Mr. Whipple—What are you objecting to? There is no question.

Mr. Krauthoff—As to the manner in which these trustees were elected.

Mr. Whipple—I have passed that, I am not going any further.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to any further testimony of that because the record is the best evidence of what was done as to the trust.

Mr. Whipple—I think the evidence has all gone in as far as I desire to do it, but I do not want to take any advantage of that except that I do not want to be delayed and impeded by objections as to purely formal matters. We have the records here, such as they are, and they can be called for in the cross-examination. I will take Your Honor's direction.

The Master—The objection of counsel for the defendants is on the record.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—And you may pass it, I think, and they can insist upon it later if they find it desirable.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Q. Now, have Mr. Ogden and Mr. Rowlands continued to discharge the duties of trustees ever since they were appointed? A. They have.

Q. With you, up to the present time. Mr. Rowlands, if not a real trustee, has been a de facto trustee? A. He has—a very effective one.

Q. In the handling or management of the affairs of the trust since the appointment of your associates have there been any disagreements between your associates and yourself? A. None whatever.

Q. You have always acted unanimately? A. Unanimously in everything.

Q. Is this paper the Trust Deed under which you have been acting? (Handing paper to witness.)

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to the question, "under which he has been acting," as calling for a conclusion, as to the manner in which—

Mr. Whipple—I will waive that.

Q. Is this the Trust Deed under which you understand you were appointed as trustees?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that question, too, if Your Honor please, because the question of whether this witness has been appointed under this Trust Deed is a subject of controversy. I am willing to admit that this instrument was executed by Mary Baker G. Eddy on Jan. 25, 1898, purporting to be what it is.

Mr. Whipple—I do not care for your admission, sir.

Mr. Krauthoff—I object to the question.

The Master (to the stenographer)—Read me the question as it now stands.

(The question is read by the stenographer.)

The Master—You insist upon it, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—I see no reason for excluding it. I will take it subject to the objection of counsel for the defendants.

A. It is.

Q. Is that the original signature of Mary Baker G. Eddy?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to it.

A. As far as I know.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that. There is no evidence that this witness is qualified to speak as to the signature of Mary Baker G. Eddy.

Q. Have you seen Mrs. Eddy's signature? A. I have seen it on letters.

Q. You haven't seen her write it, but you have seen it on a great many letters? A. I have seen it on letters, yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that unless it is shown that these were letters which he received from Mrs. Eddy in the usual and ordinary course of business. We admit that it is the signature, but you cannot prove it that way.

Mr. Whipple—I beg pardon?

Mr. Krauthoff—I say, we are perfectly willing to admit that it is her signature, but it cannot be proved in that way.

The Master—If it is admitted that that is her signature—

Mr. Krauthoff—We admit it is the signature.

The Master—Why, then, take up time?

Mr. Krauthoff—Our desire is, if Your Honor please, that the witness shall proceed accurately, and the counsel shall do the same.

Mr. Whipple—In other words, if Your Honor please, the objection seems to be very much like the attitude of the gentlemen who employ him. It is disciplinary merely, and not for the purpose of really accomplishing anything except to show power. I offer the paper, if Your Honor please, and will ask to have it marked Exhibit 1.

Mr. Bates—Let me see it just a moment, please. (The paper is handed to counsel.)

Mr. Whipple—We will have this marked as an exhibit.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, one moment. May I inquire of counsel? The instrument has a number of indorsements upon it that were placed subsequently to Jan. 25, 1898, after the execution of it by Mrs. Eddy. Does the offer embrace all the subsequent indorsements or merely to and including the signature of Mrs. Eddy?

Mr. Whipple—I think the indorsements go with it.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to the indorsements as not a part of the instrument and as things which do not prove themselves. The indorsements relate to the subsequent trustees, the validity of whose election and appointment may become a subject of controversy in one phase of this case.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, it cannot be, because they are practically all admitted in the answer. I have not yet been able to make out from that curious part of the answer just what they mean; but, as I construe it, it is an absolute admission of the proper election of the Board of Trustees; but I view it as a technicality that may impede us for the moment in going on with the hearing, and it is scarcely a meritorious one.

The Master—One moment, Mr. Whipple. (To Mr. Krauthoff.) I think that your rights will be preserved if I allow the document to go in subject to your objection.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well, so long as our position is clear as we proceed.

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, I would like to have this marked as Exhibit 1, and then, as it is an important document, we crave the authority to keep it ourselves and substitute for use in the trial a copy of it, and we will have one of these printed copies marked.

Mr. Krauthoff—There is no objection.

The Master—There is no objection. That course may be followed.

Mr. Bates—We think the original should be kept in court where we could refer to it in case we need to.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I should doubt if we had it in court all the time, because it is a very choice instrument, and unless you request it we shall take it and put it in the repository where it has been kept. If at any time you desire to use it we will send for it.

Mr. Bates—That will be sufficient.

Mr. Whipple—We have here a printed copy of the Deed of Trust, by itself. I think Your Honor has the Bill in Equity, but we will hand you a copy of the Deed of Trust separate and apart from the original.

[Original Deed of Trust, executed by Mary Baker G. Eddy on January 25, 1898, is marked Exhibit 1.]

A copy of the same is also marked Exhibit 11.

Mr. Krauthoff—May we have the original document for a moment, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, certainly.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, with respect to this printed copy of this Trust Deed which has been handed to Your Honor, I want to point out that the heading is not a part of the instrument itself; that is, the words, "Deed of Trust, The following is a copy of the Deed of Trust constituting the Board of Trustees—organizing The Christian Science Publishing Society"—that is not in the original document.

The Master—It does not purport to be, does it? "The following is a copy."

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes. I wanted to point out that the instrument begins with the words, "Be it known." And then we shall desire to call attention to the fact that some of these are interlined, at the proper time.

Mr. Whipple—I did not catch your last remark.

Mr. Krauthoff—That some of the language of the Deed of Trust is interlined.

Mr. Whipple—Well, let us call attention to it now.

Mr. Krauthoff—We do not mean to intimate that it is not properly interlined. As bearing upon the purpose of Mrs. Eddy I want—

Mr. Whipple—Your observation must have some pertinence or else not, and if it has any pertinence whatever let us bring it out now.

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Whipple, be good enough to permit me to finish what I was about to say.

Mr. Whipple—Yes; I would be very glad to have you.

Mr. Krauthoff—The point we wanted to make, if Your Honor please, was that, at the end of Paragraph 8, the words "reserving the right to make such changes as I may think important," are interlined in pen and ink.

Mr. Whipple—Are they in Mrs. Eddy's handwriting?

Mr. Krauthoff—I do not think so. I am not an expert on her handwriting. We are not objecting to that as affecting the validity of the interlineations, but simply as bearing upon the importance of that clause.

The Master—In order to make that fully intelligible, of course, it should appear that we know that the rest of the instrument is in typewriting.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, in typewriting.

Mr. Streeter—Will you let me look at that again?

Mr. Whipple—You say you think that bears on the importance of what is inserted. Which way? Do you think it makes it more important or less?

Mr. Krauthoff—I think it makes it more important.

Mr. Streeter—Let me look at it.

Mr. Whipple—More important; that is, that it was interlined?

Mr. Krauthoff—Just one moment.

The Master—Suppose you have counsel tell us all the things that he says are interlined first.

Mr. Krauthoff—Paragraph 10: "Whenever a vacancy shall occur in said trusteeship for any cause, I reserve the right to fill the same by appointment; if I shall so desire, so long as I may live." Then the words, "but if I do not elect to exercise this right"—those are written in pen and ink.

The Master—The words, "but if I do not elect to exercise this right"?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes; that is written in pen and ink.

The Master—Very well. What about the following words, "the remaining trustees"?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is all in typewriting.

The Master—That is in typewriting.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, there are some words eliminated that were in typewriting. "On and after my decease," it says; those are stricken out, those are not in the printed copy, they are stricken out of the paper.

The Master—Where is that, what paragraph?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is in place of those words that I have just read, "but if I do not elect to exercise this right, the remaining trustees." The original is—what was written in—"on and after my decease."

The Master—Oh, yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—Then at the end of Paragraph 13 the words, "or such salary as the said Church may determine from time to time" are interlined in pen and ink.

The Master—What paragraph?

Mr. Krauthoff—At the end of paragraph 13, the words, "or such salary as the said Church may determine from time to time."

Then in paragraph 4 the word "reasonably" appears twice in typewriting and is stricken out in pen and ink. I was going to suggest, if Your Honor please, that the trustees have a photograph made of this instrument; all of these things would then clearly appear without any question.

Mr. Whipple—Why not? I think that is a very good suggestion. We will have one prepared.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, thank you. General Streeter wanted to see the document.

Mr. Streeter—I just wanted to look at it for a moment. (The document is examined by counsel.)

Mr. Whipple—We find, and perhaps it might be stated—not as affecting the signature—that these interlineations are some of them in General Streeter's handwriting.

Mr. Streeter—Well, that is all I wanted to see of it now.

Mr. Whipple—May it be stated, as a matter at least of historical interest, that the interlineations in handwriting are in General Streeter's handwriting?

Mr. Streeter—Let me look at that again; I want to be sure whether that is so.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg pardon? Did you ask me for an admission as to that? We desire to object to the statement of counsel as to whose handwriting those interlineations are in. The Master—I think Mr. Whipple inquired whether it might be admitted that they were.

Mr. Krauthoff—We have no knowledge on that subject.

Mr. Whipple—Well, General Streeter says that they are. Will you take his statement?

Mr. Krauthoff—If General Streeter says that those are his interlineations, why, certainly.

Mr. Streeter—Those three interlineations are in my handwriting. The striking out or drawing the pen through the word "reasonably" in the fourth paragraph, why, of course, I do not know that I drew the pen through that.

Q. Are you familiar with Mr. McKenzie's signature? A. I think I am.

Q. Is that his signature under the words, "We accept the foregoing trust"? A. I would say it certainly was.

Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Neal's signature, James A. Neal? A. I am.

Q. He is one of the defendants, isn't he? A. He is.

Q. Is that his signature? A. I should say it was.

Q. Are you familiar with the signature of Edward P. Bates? A. No, I am not.

Mr. Whipple—Two of the signatures under the heading, "We accept the foregoing trust," are James A. Neal and William P. McKenzie.

Mr. Krauthoff—It may be admitted that that is the signature of Edward P. Bates, appearing on that instrument.

Mr. Whipple—All right.

Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Hatten's signature? A. I am.

Q. Is that the signature of Thomas W. Hatten? A. It is.

Q. That is the name set between the typewritten dates, Sept. 8, 1898, "Thomas W. Hatten, succeeding Edward P. Bates, resigned." That is Thomas W. Hatten's own signature? A. It is.

Q. The next is Oct. 21, 1898. "Joseph B. Clark, succeeding"—in typewriting—"James A. Neal"; and over-written, "James A. Neal."

Q. Is that Mr. Neal's signature? A. I should say it was.

Q. "Sept. 25, 1906, Allison V. Stewart, succeeding Joseph B. Clark, deceased." Is that Allison V. Stewart's signature? A. I should say it was.

Mr. Krauthoff—Excuse me one moment, Mr. Whipple. We want to object to the use of the word "succeeding" there as having any probative force or effect. Whether they actually succeeded or not would be a question of law to be determined upon the facts. Those are mere indorsements that were made at the time the trustees accepted and signed their names.

Q. "Jan. 6, 1908, William D. McCrackan succeeding Allison V. Stewart, resigned." Is that William D. McCrackan's own signature? A. I should say it was.

Q. And that of Allison V. Stewart? A. I should say so.

Q. "June 19, 1908, Clifford P. Smith, succeeding William D. McCrackan, resigned." Is that Mr. Smith's signature? A. I think it is.

Q. Then "Sept. 12, 1911, James A. Neal, succeeding Clifford P. Smith." Are those signatures those of Mr. Neal and Mr. Smith? A. I think so.

Q. "Dec. 2, 1912, Herbert W. Eustace, succeeding James A. Neal." Is that your signature? A. It is.

Q. And James A. Neal—his signature? A. I think so.

Q. "Feb. 1, 1917, Edward A. Merritt, succeeding Thomas W. Hatten." Are those the signatures respectively of Mr. Merritt and Mr. Hatten?

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Whipple, excuse me; I suppose it is an oversight. You omit to show that the word "resigned" is shown after all those names.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, it is—resigned. "Succeeding Thomas W. Hatten, resigned." It is—rather to be particularly nice about it, and get it exactly accurate—it is the mark indicating "ditto," ditto marks.

Mr. Krauthoff—Just so we understand each other.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, I think we shall probably be able to agree what it means if we confer on it; perhaps we may do it privately so as not to take too much time.

Q. "Aug. 1, 1917, David B. Ogden, succeeding William P. McKenzie," ditto, or resigned. Are those the signatures of Mr. Ogden and Mr. McKenzie respectively? A. They are.

Q. "Aug. 1, 1917, Lamont Rowlands, succeeding," or ditto, "Edward A. Merritt, resigned." Are those the signatures of Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Merritt respectively? A. They are.

Mr. Whipple—"City of Boston, Oct. 7, 1918, 3:28 p. m., Received and entered in the Records of Mortgages, Book 1313, page 221. James Donovan, City Clerk." And then there is a stamp as to when it was received.

Q. You had this recorded? A. Then we had it recorded.

Q. At City Hall? A. Yes.

Q. I take it that the record of mortgages was the only place you could find to record it down there, I mean, there was not anything else? A. It is recorded in the Secretary of State's office.

Q. Oh, in the Secretary of State's office? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—I do not find the incorporation here.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Whipple, I did not understand the date of that being recorded in City Hall.

Mr. Whipple—October, 1918. The Master—What year?

Mr. Whipple—1918, Oct. 7, 3:28 p. m., 1918. The answer admits the deeds of trust creating the Christian Science Board of Directors. I think perhaps we had better have them put in. Have you them here?

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, we admit the execution of instruments bearing a certain date, but we do not admit that those instruments create the Christian Science Board of Directors.

Mr. Whipple—Well, never mind the admission. Have you the papers here? Mr. Krauthoff—They are printed in the back of the bill.

Mr. Whipple—Well, let us have your originals. Will you produce them?

Mr. Krauthoff—We will do that.

Mr. Whipple—You haven't them here?

Mr. Krauthoff—No.

Mr. Whipple—But you will produce them?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Very well. We will reserve the numbers 2 and 3 for those exhibits.

Mr. Krauthoff—You mean, the two instruments which are printed in the Church Manual from pages 128 to 138, both inclusive?

Mr. Whipple—I do not know what is printed there, but what I do refer to is the paper printed, Exhibit B, attached to the Bill in Equity, and Exhibit C, attached to the Bill in Equity. It is the originals of those that I would like to have produced.

Mr. Krauthoff—We shall be very glad to do that.

Mr. Whipple—Thank you. If you will have them here. They will be, with Your Honor's approval, Exhibits 2 and 3 respectively.

The Master—You have the admission, haven't you, in the—

Mr. Krauthoff—We admit now that they were executed and are correctly set forth.

The Master—The answer is that those were true copies and that they were duly executed.

Mr. Whipple—Quite right, Your Honor, but we should like to have the originals presented. Then they may be withdrawn and copies marked in their place.

[Deed of Trust, dated Sept. 1, 1892, signed by Mrs. Eddy, is designated Exhibit 2;

Deed conveying land for church purposes, Metcalf to Knapp et als., dated March 19, 1903, is designated Exhibit 3.]

Q. Are you a member of The Mother Church, so-called—The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston? A. I am.

Q. How long have you been? A. Since December, 1894.

Q. Before you became one of the trustees of the Publishing Society, what offices, if any, had you held in connection with the Church itself? A. None whatever.

Q. Had you been a practitioner or a lecturer? A. I had been a practitioner.

Q. A practitioner of Christian Science? A. Yes.

Q. In accordance with the book of Mrs. Eddy on "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures"? A. In accordance with that book.

Q. Where had you been a practitioner? A. San José, California.

Q. From what time to what time? A. I think from about 1897.

Q. Up to the time you became a trustee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are your associates on the board, Mr. Ogden and Mr. Rowlands, both members of The Mother Church? A. They are both members of The Mother Church.

Q. When were they—

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to this witness testifying as to facts of which he has no knowledge. He does not know when they became members of The Mother Church of his own knowledge.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, I think he does.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I examine him?

Mr. Whipple—You must not be too technical, brother Krauthoff. We will be here all summer if you keep up that sort of thing. There are some things that we had better use our common sense about; don't you think so?

Mr. Krauthoff—I desire to examine as to this witness' knowledge as to when his associates became members of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Do you want to do it now? You seem in a great hurry to get to the cross-examination.

Mr. Krauthoff—I object to his testimony by this witness of his associates becoming members of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—All right. I will waive it. All he has said is that they are members of the Christian Science Church, and that is The Mother Church, and that is enough for the present; and if I want to offer more I will give you notice so that you can make your objection seasonably.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I am entitled to decent treatment at the hands of Mr. Whipple. I will make my legal objections, and I will ask the Court for decent treatment at the hands of Mr. Whipple.

The Master—I am unable to see so far that you have anything to complain of. He has offered you an opportunity to raise your objection seasonably to any further questions of his.

Q. Now, referring to the Deed of Trust. I want to ask the general question whether in what you have done since you have been on the board, and especially since you have been associated with your present associates, you have observed and understood and followed the terms of the Deed of Trust executed by Mrs. Eddy?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that as calling for the conclusion of the witness. The meaning of this Deed of Trust is in controversy at the outset, and what this witness did is determined by the facts and not by his conclusions.

Q. I will revise the question and put it: So far as you are aware, have you observed in the discharge of your duties the terms of the Deed of Trust?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that. A. Absolutely.

The Master—Pause a moment.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that question because it calls for the conclusion of the witness.

The Master—I think I shall have to take the answer to the question subject to your objection. I think your rights will be all saved if that is done. You would hardly expect me, I suppose, to peremptorily exclude it in view of the objection.

Q. Are you aware of anything that has been done, either by your associates or yourself, in violation of the terms of that trust deed?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that as calling for the conclusion of the witness.

The Master—The witness may answer subject to the objection.

The Witness—May I have the question again?

(Question read by stenographer.)

A. I know of nothing.

Q. After you became a trustee, will you state when, if at all, any differences arose between the Board of Directors and the trustees—when first, as you remember it? A. I think the only thing that could be called a difference was in the early part of 1916, when a memorandum, so-called, was presented by the Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees.

Q. Have you that memorandum? Either the original or a copy? A. It is in Mr. Dittmore's answer, I think.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to the statement of witness that memorandum is in Mr. Dittmore's answer. The memorandum is the best proof of its contents.

The Master—Will you read me the whole answer?

(Answer read by stenographer.)

Q. You mean, a copy of it is? A. A copy of it is.

The Master—What statement do you object to?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to his statement that the memorandum is copied in Mr. Dittmore's answer. The memorandum is the best proof of its contents.

Mr. Whipple—We are not proving the contents of the memorandum; we are identifying the paper.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well, then. I assumed that the answer was for proving its contents.

Mr. Whipple—Well, we can agree with you—

The Master—Is it worth while, gentlemen, to spend time about this? He says there is a copy attached to Mr. Dittmore's answer. That is as far as he has gone. Why not let that stand just as it is?

Q. Afterward was there correspondence on the same subject? A. There were conferences.

Q. That is, while Mr. Merritt and

Mr. McKenzie were on the board? A. While Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Hatten were on the board.

Q. Then was there any other communication on the subject? When next? A. I think the next time it was brought up was sometime in June or July. In June, I think. I think in June of 1918.

Q. Now, let me ask whether there was any written reply to this memorandum that you refer to? A. Any written reply by the trustees?

Q. Yes. A. At any time, you mean?

Q. Well, was there at any time while Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Merritt were on the board? A. There was a letter prepared, but whether it was ever signed and delivered I do not know.

Q. Was there a disagreement between the directors and the trustees as to the memorandum? A. An absolute disagreement.

Q. Was it in any way settled or adjusted? A. It was—as I understood, the adjustment was that it was to be absolutely forgotten.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I move to strike out the testimony of the witness as to what he understood.

The Master—Should it not be stated first what was done?

Mr. Whipple—Yes. I won't go through all the conversations, unless Your Honor should direct me to.

Q. What was the resulting and final conversation? A. The agreement was—

Mr. Krauthoff—We object—

Q. They will object if you call it an agreement. If you state a conversation you escape at least one of those technicalities that might otherwise obstruct your testifying.

A. The conversation—

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, we make the distinct objection that the witness must state the conversation.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no. You state the conversation. If you can't remember it in detail, state the substance of it.

The Witness—I can only state the substance of it.

Q. That is all right. You may do that. A. The substance of the conversation was that the memorandum should be laid aside and forgotten, and that we would work on in the spirit of true Christian Science.

Q. Now, next, as I understand it, there was a communication some time in June of last year? A. June—it was not a communication; it was a conference. A conference between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees.

Q. On that same subject matter or a kindred matter? A. The subject was brought up.

Q. The subject was brought up? When was there any written communication with regard to it? Do you remember the first one? Was the first one on Sept. 30? The first communication on the subject? A. After the June—yes, I think Sept. 30 was the only time it was referred to in a communication.

Q. But there had been conversations before that? A. There had been this conversation in June, and I think it was referred to in a conference on Sept. 11.

Mr. Streeter—What was that last?

The Witness—I think it was referred to in a conference between the two boards on Sept. 11.

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, while we do not think that this preliminary correspondence is of any material value, I think, perhaps, as a part of the history leading up to the point at issue, it may be offered as a matter of inducement. Therefore I will ask you to produce the letter of Sept. 30, 1918, if you have it. (Papers handed to Mr. Whipple by Mr. Krauthoff.)

Mr. Whipple—There are two letters, two communications, one dated Oct. 1, 1918, and one dated Sept. 30, 1918. The letter bears the stamp—

The Master—Are these in the pleadings anywhere?

Mr. Whipple—No, Your Honor. They are merely preliminary to the real issue. I will have them marked respectively Exhibit 4 and Exhibit 4a.

The Master—Those, if I understand it, are communications from the Board of Directors?

Mr. Whipple—No, Your Honor. These are communications from the trustees to the directors, in which—

The Master—Communications from the trustees to the directors?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Both of them?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I inquire if this is considered a formal offer of the letters in evidence by having them identified?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, I am not having them identified; I am offering them as exhibits.

Mr. Krauthoff—You are offering them in evidence as exhibits?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, that is right.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, we object to the statement of the trustees in their own favor except as statements of claims made by them.

The Master—Mr. Whipple, as I understand it, offers these communications between the two contending parties, as a part of the history of what went on.

Mr. Whipple—Purely a part of the history as to what went on.

The Master—That is enough to make them admissible, is it not?

Mr. Krauthoff—For that purpose, yes.

The Master—Well, what conclusions can be drawn from them, for what purposes they can be used, is a matter to be considered hereafter.

Mr. Krauthoff—Certainly; but we desire at this time to point out that they are no proof of the statements that the trustees made in their own favor.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, but we think they are.

Mr. Krauthoff—They are not proof of the facts that are claimed.

The Master—Your objection being on record, that is all you want for the present?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—I think we better go on.

Mr. Whipple—They are some proof of it; they are not conclusive. The first letter is—

Mr. Streeter—What are they? Exhibits 4 and 5?

Mr. Whipple—Exhibits 4 and 4a, General. The first letter is dated Oct. 1, on the heading of The Christian Science Publishing Society, Boston, U. S. A., cable address "Monitor, Boston," Office of Business Manager, Oct. 1, 1918. There is a stamp on it which you will notice on these communications, as follows: "Read, Oct. 1, 1918, The C. S. Board of Directors." That is, the directors had a habit of causing these communications to be stamped when they were read:

"Dear Friends:

"Under separate cover we are sending to the Board of Directors a letter bearing upon the subject that we were to discuss with you today. A copy of the letter is being sent for each member of your board, and also a copy of the Deed of Trust. If, after reading this letter, the Board of Directors still wishes to see the trustees, we shall be in session at the Publishing House and shall be glad to have you telephone us. With best wishes,

"Yours sincerely,

"BOARD OF TRUSTEES,

"Herbert W. Eustace,

"Secretary."

[The above letter, dated Oct. 1, 1918, is marked Exhibit 4.]

Mr. Whipple—The second letter, which appears to be one of the copies, is dated Sept. 30, 1918. It is stamped, "Read, Oct. 1, 1918, The C. S. Board of Directors"; and also, "Read, Dec. 19, 1918, The C. S. Board of Directors."

[Letter, dated Sept. 30, 1918, is marked Exhibit 4a, and reads as follows:]

"Sept. 30, 1918.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"Referring to our meeting with you on Wednesday, Sept. 11, and your request later that the Board of Trustees listen to the reading of the minutes of the Board of Directors recording their interpretation of that meeting, after most careful and earnest consideration, the Board of Trustees has decided that this would not be a wise course of action for the trustees to take.

"In view of this request of the directors and of the meeting of Sept. 11, and more especially in view of the reference to a certain 'memorandum' prepared by the Board of Directors and presented to the Board of Trustees for their acceptance at certain joint conferences held by the two boards in the month of February, 1916, and again brought up by the Board of Directors for discussion with the Board of Trustees in recent conferences, which, though having been rejected by the trustees as a contravention of the Deed of Trust and the Church Manual, may still be in the directors' file, it is our desire to set forth clearly in writing the position of the Board of Trustees as stated at the meeting of Sept. 11.

"At that meeting the trustees stated to the Board of Directors exactly how they viewed the Deed of Trust and the Manual in their relation to the trustees and their work. The trustees affirmed definitely that to them, as loyal Christian Scientists, their trust was not only a most sacred and honored trust given to them by our Leader as a 'perpetual and irrevocable trust and confidence' (Deed of Trust), but that it was an absolutely legal trust governed and perpetuated by the laws of Massachusetts and the United States, and that in order to be true to this trust there was no other course possible to them than to abide absolutely by the Deed of Trust and the Manual, both in the letter and the spirit, and that from that day they proposed to do so; that the trustees felt that it was incumbent upon them to interpret the Deed of Trust through their own metaphysical understanding of what our Leader has written, since they were the ones called upon to fulfill the trust, and that that interpretation could not be done by somebody else for them.

"The directors stated at the close of the meeting that the trustees had made their position quite clear, and in view of that statement, this letter might seem superfluous, but as we have already stated, it seems just to state our position in writing, and provide a copy of this letter for each member of your board so that every statement therein may be verified with the Manual and the Deed of Trust.

"At the meeting on Sept. 11 some members of your board indicated that the statement of the trustees was an entirely new position for the trustees to take, and that it was a complete surprise to the directors. Since that meeting the trustees have gone back over old correspondence with the directors, and they find that their position in substance is in exact accord with the record of the trustees for a number of years, and so far as they can learn, it is the position that the Board of Trustees has felt was the only correct position from the beginning of the trusteeship. Therefore the surprise could only have been occasioned by the directors' never having grasped the viewpoint of the trustees as to the purport of the Deed of Trust and the Manual in their relation to the Board of Trustees.

"In order to make the question perfectly clear, we wish to state, in our Leader's words, that the Deed of Trust, under which the trustees legally operate, was prepared by our Leader and given as 'A Gift to The Mother Church,' and a Grant of Trusteeship' (letter conveying the Deed of Trust), and it was to be a 'perpetual and irrevocable trust and confidence' (Deed of Trust), and that 'The delivery of this instrument to, and its acceptance by said trustees shall be regarded as the full establishment of the trust and as the agreement by the trustees to honestly and faithfully do and perform all things to be done and performed by them within the terms, objects and purposes of this instrument' (Sec. 14). This Deed of Trust, according to Sec. 1 of Art. XXV of the Church Manual, is inferentially incorporated as part and parcel of the Church Manual. Therefore its conditions are obligatory upon the trustees, not only as an integral part of the Church By-Laws, but also according to the laws of the land.

"Simply stated, the trustees consider their trust is for the one purpose, as stated in the Deed of Trust, 'of more effectually promoting and extending the religion of Christian Science as taught by' Mrs. Eddy, and not for the purpose of making money, although all 'net profits'—and the Deed of Trust defines what is meant by the term 'net profits'—are to be paid over each six months to the treasurer of The Mother Church.

"The trustees understand that they are absolutely responsible for the entire business of The Christian Science Publishing Society, being the owner and manager in trust of said business and constituting in their trusteeship. The Christian Science Publishing Society, under which name they are required to do business. The Deed of Trust demands that the 'trustees shall energetically and judiciously manage the business of the Publishing Society on a strictly Christian basis, and upon their own responsibility' (Sec. 3), and shall further 'employ all the help necessary to the proper conduct of said business, and shall discharge the same in their discretion or according to the needs of the business' (Sec. 6). This requirement, relating to employing and discharging, the trustees hold to include every man, woman, and child working for the Publishing Society, in whatever capacity. The Board of Directors elect the editor and associate editors of our monthly and weekly periodicals, the editor of our daily newspaper, and the business manager, but the trustees employ these officers, and determine their salary; hence they are employees of The Christian Science Publishing Society,—in other words, of the Board of Trustees and not of the Board of Directors. This is clearly pointed out by our Leader in the letter conveying the Deed of Trust, wherein she says, 'I now recommend that these Trustees continue at present the efficient service of Mr. Joseph Armstrong as the business manager of the publishing house.' Mr. Armstrong was at the time of this recommendation not only the business manager of the publishing house, but was also publisher of our Leader's works and a member of the Board of Directors of The Mother Church. Said term of office, according to the Manual, is 'one year each, dating from the time of election' (Art. XXV, Sec. 4), and is not subject to termination before the expiration of one year except in the event of discharge by the trustees for cause. The trustees hold that the directors have no direct control over the editors or the business manager, and can therefore make no business arrangements with them which in any way concern the Publishing Society.

"The Manual, in Sec. 14 of Art. VIII, under the chapter 'Discipline,' declares, 'It shall be the privilege and duty of every member, who can afford it, to subscribe for the periodicals which are the organs of this Church,' and at the close of the paragraph it is stated, 'and it shall be the duty of the Directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times.' This is clearly a disciplinary function and not an executive function; therefore, the trustees hold that as discipline it is the duty of the Board of Directors to call attention at once to any failure on the part of the trustees to have the periodicals well edited and kept abreast of the times. But the trustees hold it is not the province of the directors to edit the periodicals, any more than it is the province of the directors to conduct the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society. The directors elect the editors and the business manager, but their employment and adjustment to office is the responsibility of the trustees, and if these officers do not do their work rightly, then the trustees are to blame, for they have the authority, as already quoted from the Deed of Trust, to discharge any employee for non-fulfillment of duty. The trustees feel, however, that the editors have a natural right to talk over with the Board of Directors any matter concerning the editorial work at any time they desire to do so, and request the benefit of their experience and enlightenment.

"Mrs. Eddy, in establishing the Deed of Trust, evidently took pains to define the character of thought that should constitute the Board of Trustees—business, metaphysics (a doctor), and scholarship—and, furthermore, she stated, 'I have asked for a small Board of Trustees, and as I believe a strong board' (letter conveying the Deed of Trust). Following this, she defined clearly and unmistakably what the duties of the Board of Trustees should be, stating specifically, and thus showing why she had defined the mental qualities constituting the Board of Trustees (Sec. 2), 'Said trustees shall have direction and supervision of the publication of said Quarterly, and also of all pamphlets, tracts, and other literature pertaining to said business, using their best judgment as to the means of preparing and issuing the same, so as to promote the best interests of the Cause.'

"Mrs. Eddy also covered, in Sec. 6 of Art. XXV of the Church Manual, the rules and orders that should govern any further publications issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society. In Sec. 8 of Art. XXV she declares, 'Only the Publishing Society of The Mother Church selects, approves, and publishes the books and literature it sends forth,' and concludes the section with the statement, 'A book or an article of which Mrs. Eddy is the author shall not be published nor republished by this Society without her knowledge or written consent.' In connection with this last sentence in Sec. 8, the trustees wish here to state positively their interpretation of this By-Law, and it is that this society can issue no book or article of which our Leader is the author that is not already in her published works, unless the provisions of this By-Law can be established.

"We should like at this point to bear record, with a great deal of appreciation, that at the time of the publication of the article entitled 'Life,' by our Leader, which appeared in the Sentinel of Feb. 2, and in the April Journal, which at that time we heartily approved, that when the trustees desired to republish this article in pamphlet form, the directors advised otherwise, and very wisely, for now we see clearly that this By-Law prohibits the publishing or republishing of any such articles. Inasmuch as the article originally was not referred to the trustees by the directors, as we now hold it should have been before being presented to the editors for their consideration for publication, the directors were primarily responsible for its first publication, but the field has a right to hold the Publishing Society, under the Church Manual, responsible for not upholding this By-Law. This mistake shows the great necessity of working in exact accord with the Deed of Trust and the Manual. We accept our full responsibility for this departure in regard to publishing the article 'Life,' as we should have been fully alive to our trusteeship.

"We have notified the editor of the Journal and Sentinel and the editor of the Monitor, that we hold them responsible for everything that is published in the periodicals, and that we look to them to be true to their responsibility, just as we hold the business manager responsible for the business. The trustees are fully aware that there is only one way in which to govern the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society, 'on a strictly Christian basis' (Sec. 3 of the Deed of Trust)—by holding every man and woman in the Publishing House responsible for his own individual work, for we can conceive of no government by Principle except by trusting each employee to his own individual demonstration of Principle, and then, if the demonstration is not satisfactory, to point out the mistake. The future vastness of the Publishing Society's business is so great that to contemplate any other way of conducting the business is impossible. Therefore, each individual must be held responsible for his own demonstration, for this inevitably brings out the very best that is in the individual, and makes him responsible to God for his office and for his continuance in that office, instead of looking to person or persons, and this applies to all employees, from those who seem to have unimportant work to those who fill the most important offices.

"The members of the Board of Trustees naturally feel a deep sense of responsibility in the handling of this sacred and tremendous trust committed to their care, and they are resolved to faithfully live up to the Deed of Trust and the Manual both in the letter and in the spirit. They wish neither to shirk any responsibility nor to assume any responsibility that is not properly theirs, but God will not allow them to avoid in the slightest degree fulfilling the full requirements of the Deed of Trust and the Manual, and the trustees hold that this responsibility includes the complete and entire management of The Christian Science Publishing Society in every detail, 'upon their own responsibility' and 'energetically and judiciously.'

"In defining our position we have spoken frankly and directly, and our one desire has been to do God's will and to be obedient to the teachings of Mrs. Eddy, as embodied by her in the Deed of Trust and the Manual. The trustees wish to reiterate the high personal regard they entertain for the individual members of the Board of Directors and, above all, they want to declare the love and honor they have for the office of the Christian Science Board of Directors, and in turn rightly expect the same love and honor on the part of the directors for the office of the Board of Trustees. These two boards, designated and constituted by our Leader, each having its own well defined work, one being the governing board of the Church and its activity and the other the governing board of the Publishing Society and all its publications, must inevitably cooperate at every point. This cooperation, however, can only be accomplished by a right mutual respect for each other's boards and their respective work. Yet when all is said and done, in spite of the tremendous importance of the letter, still how small is the letter compared to that Spirit that must inspire everything bequeathed to us by our Leader in the service of God. It is in the unity of this Spirit that this letter is written, signed, and sent.

"Very sincerely yours;

"Board of Trustees."

Q. Now, up to that time had you consulted any counsel with reference to the matter of the discharge of your duties as trustees?

The Master—"That time" is what?

Mr. Whipple—September of last year.

The Master—September when?

Mr. Whipple—Sept. 30 of last year.

A. We had not.

Q. Up to that time had any difference in opinion arisen between you and the directors as to any specific thing which should be done, or that either should refrain from doing? A. Yes, there had.

Q. What? A. In the publication of a pamphlet called "Purification."

Q. Well, that is referred to here? No, that is not referred to here. A. No.

Q. Any other than that one? A. I think not.

Q. Tell us about that. You were to publish a pamphlet, or did publish one? A. It is the duty of the Publishing Society to issue pamphlets. It has been the—

Mr. Krauthoff—Excuse me, if Your Honor please. I object to that statement, of course, that it is the duty of the Publishing Society to issue pamphlets, as calling for a conclusion of the witness. The duties of the Publishing Society depend upon certain facts.

The Master—There may be some question about it, but I think that we had better take it subject to objection.

Q. You mean the duty as defined in the trust deed? A. In the trust deed, yes.

Q. And you refer to a particular clause in the trust deed, whatever it is? A. It says that they shall have authority to issue pamphlets, etc., and all other literature.

Q. Yes. Now, proceed from the point at which you were interrupted. A. It being the duty of the Publishing Society to issue pamphlets, it has been the custom of the trustees to select articles appearing in the periodicals from time to time for issuance in pamphlet form. There were certain articles issued in the meantime over a series of several weeks, and to the trustees these articles were of very vital significance at the time, and at all times, and it was decided to issue these articles in pamphlet form, and call the pamphlet "Purification." This was done in the usual way, and I think the first objection to it came in a— I will have to tell this just as I remember it—

Q. Yes. A. The first objection came, as I remember it, from the Board of Directors. They had heard that we were issuing—

Q. In a written communication, or orally? A. No, not at that time.

Q. Yes. All right. State what was said about it. A. They said that they would like to talk with the trustees about the pamphlet "Purification" before it went out. There may have been little intervening things, but I don't remember exactly. And the trustees had a conference with the Board of Directors on this subject.

Q. About when? Which year? A. It was early in September of 1918.

Q. Yes. Before this letter was written? A. Oh, yes, yes.

Q. All right. A. It was early in that same month.

Q. Now, will you state the substance of the conference? A. Several objections were made to specific things in the pamphlet, but nothing very important, and the trustees said that they would take them under consideration. One was a typographical error which self-evidently needed changing; the others were points of making the statements in the pamphlet perhaps a little clearer; and also the directors desired to have the name of the author of the writings on the pamphlet. After returning to our board room it was decided to issue the pamphlet and make the change with regard to the name, placing the name on the pamphlet, and the pamphlets had then nearly all been printed; and, as I remember it, the word was sent to the directors that we would make the changes in the next edition; and the pamphlet was ordered sent out. I think the next thing that we knew of was that the business manager reported to us—

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to what the business manager reported.

Mr. Whipple—You may pass that.

The Master—We are now getting a connected history of the whole thing. I think that it may go in, reserving your objection.

The Witness—The next thing was that the business manager reported to us that he had received a communication from the directors, ordering that this pamphlet be not sent out without further instructions from them. That is in substance as I remember it. He reported this to the trustees, and the trustees in substance told him that he had the direction of the order—

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to what the trustees told the business manager.

The Master—Do you want that, Mr. Whipple?

Q. Well, did you send it out just the same? A. The business manager sent it out.

Q. By your direction? A. By our direction.

Q. Yes; that is right. Now, were there any other disagreements or controversies than that? Had there been on any specific thing up to that time? A. I would say no.

Q. I think perhaps it will help if you will state what publications the publication society does issue. A. The Christian Science Journal—

Q. Describe that. How often is it published? A. It is a monthly publication.

Q. I beg pardon? A. Published monthly. It is the original publication, founded in 1883 by Mrs. Eddy.

Q. What does it contain? A. Articles written by Christian Scientists throughout the field, editorials, and testimonies of healing, and also a list of practitioners and churches and societies.

Q. How about the rest of them? A. The Christian Science Sentinel, which is a weekly publication, established in 1898 by Mrs. Eddy; Der Herold der Christian Science—

Q. What is its character? A. It has, also, shorter articles, perhaps, written by Christian Scientists, and testimonies of healing, and editorials, and some other items of interest from religious exchanges and such things.

Q. Very well. A. Der Herold der Christian Science, a periodical, a monthly periodical, printed in the German language, with the English on opposite pages. This was established or authorized by Mrs. Eddy, I think, in 1890.

Q. Where does that circulate? A. Throughout the world.

Mr. Bates—I did not understand the date.

The Witness—I think it was in 1890.

Mr. Bates—Do you mean that?

The Witness—No, of course I don't mean 1890. Let me see.

Is there a Sentinel here?

Mr. Whipple—We will fix that.

The Witness—Wait a minute—1893 and 1898—well, it is of minor importance, is it not, the date?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, we will fix the date later.

Q.—What is the character of that publication? A. Of the Herold, the German Herold?

Q. Yes. A. It now consists of articles and testimonies and editorials translated into the German language that have appeared in our other periodicals.

Q. And the others? A. Then there is the Christian Science Quarterly, which appears quarterly, containing what are called the Bible lessons. They are the lesson sermons read each Sunday in all Christian Science churches, and are issued each quarter.

Q. By whom are they prepared? A. They are prepared by a committee appointed by the Board of Trustees.

Q. And are those the things which are read throughout the world in Christian Science churches on Sunday? A. Those are the lessons studied by Christian Scientists and read on Sunday at the Sunday services.

Q. Does the reading of those lessons or sermons constitute the entire exercise on Sunday? A. No.

Q. What else is there? A. That is the sermon part of the exercise. It consists of the singing of hymns, reading from the Scriptures, and the Lord's Prayer, and the interpretation, the spiritual interpretation, of the Lord's Prayer, as given in the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health.

Q. So that they take the place of what are called sermons in the other churches? A. That is their purpose, I believe.

Q. And those are prepared by a committee appointed by the Board of Trustees? A. A committee of six.

Q. And have been ever since you have had anything to do with it? A. They have.

Q. Have the directors ever had anything to do with that? A. Not that I know of.

Q. And the other periodical or paper? A. A French paper that we issue, called Le Héraut de Christian Science. That is like the German periodical—it consists of translations from articles and editorials and testimonies that have previously appeared in our other periodicals. And then there is The Christian Science Monitor, established in 1898. That is our daily newspaper.

Q. And where does that circulate? A. That circulates throughout the entire world.

Q. And deals with news throughout the world? A. Yes; containing also one Christian Science article each day.

Q. One Christian Science article? A. Yes.

Q. Now, pamphlets have been spoken of. A. Yes. That is incidental to our business.

Q. It is said that the Monitor was established in 1908 instead of 1898. A. Yes, 1908, that is right.

Q. Then, from time to time, you issue pamphlets which are a part of the Christian Science literature? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Now I will offer the reply to the letter of Sept. 30th, and that will be marked Exhibit 5.

Mr. Strawn—You have a copy of this letter, have you, bearing date Oct. 8, 1918, written by the Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees?

Mr. Krauthoff—We haven't it with us.

The Master—Show it to the other counsel, then, if they have not seen it.

Mr. Whipple—This is the original letter. I think that they all have copies of it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I do not think that we have any objection to an original document from our clients. (After examining the letter referred to) No, we have no objection to it.

The Master—Then you may read it. Mr. Strawn. [Reading]:

"Board of Trustees,

"The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"Your letter of Sept. 30 has been carefully considered. Looking first for points of agreement, the Christian Science Board of Directors proposes, as a general rule, to exercise its supervision of the publishing department of The Mother Church with and through the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society. Nevertheless, this board reserves the right to adopt any mode of action that may be appropriate or necessary, in any particular situation, to fulfill its legal, moral, and spiritual responsibilities.

"Mrs. Eddy's gift of the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society was in purpose and effect a gift to The Mother Church. This fact is proved by her disposition of its profits. It is also proved by her contemporaneous letter to the original trustees, in which she summed it up as, 'A gift to The Mother Church, and a grant of trusteeship.' Before that she had made the Christian Science Board of Directors the 'body corporate for the purpose of taking and holding' all gifts to her Church (Church Manual, p. 130). Again on page 13 of her 'Message for 1902,' Mrs. Eddy spoke of the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society as a transfer to The Mother Church. Since her 'gift' and 'transfer' was 'to The Mother Church' her 'grant of trusteeship' was evidently and necessarily consistent with and subordinate to her plan for a church; hence the trusteeship which she granted at that time was a secondary and subordinate grant. It cannot be regarded as independent; it must be construed in relation to the Massachusetts statute and the Deed of Trust copied on pp. 128-135 of the Manual, and in relation to all other steps taken by Mrs. Eddy as the Founder of Christian Science. Prominent in this connection is the provision by which, 'The business of The Mother Church shall be transacted by its Christian Science Board of Directors.' (Manual, Article I, Sec. 6.) By this and other provisions of our Church By-Laws the Christian Science Board of Directors became more than the body corporate described in the statute and trust deed quoted on pp. 128-135 of the Manual; it became the superior directing body in Christian Science affairs. The power of this board to declare vacancies in the trusteeship of The Christian Science Publishing Society (Manual, Art. XXV, Sec. 3), was doubtless intended to establish the superior relation of this board to that trusteeship beyond question.

"The plan proposed in this letter—that the directors will, as a general rule, exercise their supervision of the Publishing Society with and through the trustees—will need for its success a mutual conception of the relations between the two boards and a consistent intention to cooperate accordingly. The plan now proposed will succeed only when each board acts in full accordance with its respective functions.

"It does not seem necessary now for the directors to take up every point in the trustees' letter. The directors must, however, expressly disallow the claim of the trustees that their recent interpretation of the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898, is conclusive. Such a claim, if conceded, might destroy the unity of the Christian Science movement for the same reason that a similar claim made by certain states in 1861 in regard to the American Constitution, threatened to break up and destroy the American Union.

"With reference to the question whether the claims now advanced by the trustees are new and surprising, it is to be remembered that some of the directors have been on one or the other of the two boards for a longer time than any of the trustees have served as such. The directors, therefore, may be better informed on this subject than the trustees. Specific evidence that the claims now advanced by the trustees are of recent origin is furnished by a letter from the trustees to the directors dated Feb. 15, 1916.

"The directors must also disallow the claim of the trustees that 'the duty of the directors to see that these (the Christian Science) periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times' (Manual, Art. VIII, Sec. 14) is merely a disciplinary function. The word 'discipline,' on which the trustees base this claim, is the general heading of Articles VIII to XII of the Manual; which five articles include forty-nine sections pertaining to about as many subjects, the same being variously near to or remote from what is commonly called discipline. The heading of Art. VIII is 'Guidance of Members.' Moreover, the immediate context of the provision in question is a declaration of the privilege and duty of members to subscribe for the periodicals. The two declarations of duty in the same by-law, with only a semicolon between them, are evidently related closely by contents as well as position. They are much closer to each other, both in position and significance, than either of them is to the heading 'Discipline.' The privilege and duty of members is to subscribe for the periodicals; the related or corresponding duty of the directors is 'to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times.' Now the verb 'see,' as defined in the Century Dictionary, means 'to bring about as a result; superintend the execution or the performance of a thing so as to effect (a specified result); make sure; with an object-clause with that specifying the result.' Hence the provision in question, instead of being limited to what is commonly called 'discipline,' clearly supports and confirms the directors' entire view of their relation to the Publishing Society.

"The directors infer that the trustees have read their Deed of Trust by itself, or without enough regard for the other instruments to which it is essentially related. Our Leader founded one Church or institution; hence, no part thereof can be understood by itself. It would seem from the trustees' letter that they have failed to get a complete view of the entire situation. In particular, it would seem that the trustees have failed to give due effect to the statute quoted on page 130 of the Manual, to the Deed of Trust based on that statute, and to the Church By-Laws, which clearly confer superior authority on the Christian Science Board of Directors. Two of these By-Laws are already quoted in this letter; others are Secs. 2, 3, 4, 5 and 9, of Art. XXV.

"The By-Laws just cited apply explicitly to the relations between the Christian Science Board of Directors and the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society. Even without them, there would be sufficient evidence for the conclusions that the jurisdiction of this board extends to every matter affecting the cause of Christian Science as a whole, and that it includes such supervision over all departments and branches of The Mother Church as may be necessary to preserve the purity and integrity of the religion which it represents. This conclusion from the contents of our Church Manual was stated by this board, when only one of its present members were on it, in a letter published on Nov. 3, 1909, in the Christian Science Sentinel; that statement had the express advance approval of Mrs. Eddy as well as the general approval of loyal Christian Scientists. The fact that the net profits of the business go to The Mother Church carries with it a legal right of oversight to guard against mismanagement and loss. Yet this fact is only one of many considerations which unitedly support and confirm the directors' conclusions.

"Of necessity there must be a board or body having superior authority in such an institution as that which represents Christian Science. If the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society were not subordinate to the Christian Science Board of Directors, there would be two boards having equal authority in regard to the same affairs; a situation which would at once defy metaphysics and invite failure in business. On the other hand, the relation between the two boards stated in this letter not only results from and is consistent with all of Mrs. Eddy's acts as the Founder of Christian Science; it is also the only feasible or workable arrangement. Heartily carried on, the authority which it concedes to the trustees will give them one of the most important responsibilities in the world.

"The expressions of personal regard in the trustees' letter are cordially reciprocated. The present directors hope that the present trustees will proceed in accordance with the conclusions stated in this letter. An assurance on this point is desired, and is needed for the general welfare. Our Leader has said, 'Unity is the essential nature of Christian Science. Its Principle is One, and to demonstrate the divine One, demands oneness of thought and action.' (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 264.)

"Sincerely yours,
"THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

"EDWARD A. MERRITT,
"Secretary."

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 5. R. H. J.]

Mr. Whipple—May we suspend, Your Honor, until, say, five minutes past two?

Mr. Bates—I would suggest quarter past two, merely because the elevators are apt to be so crowded at two o'clock.

Mr. Whipple—They will get over the crowd by five minutes past two.

Mr. Bates—I know it, but, in order to get here by five minutes past two we shall have to come up in the midst of the crowd. It is only a suggestion. Make it 10 minutes past, if you prefer it.

Mr. Whipple—All right. We do not want to lose any time if we can help it, because with such an array of distinguished counsel as we have here every five minutes counts.

[Recess until 2:10 o'clock p. m.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

Mr. Whipple—We were merely reading letters; I do not believe Mr. Thompson or Mr. Streeter would care if we proceed.

The Master—At what hour this afternoon do counsel think we had better adjourn?

Mr. Bates—Whatever is agreeable to Your Honor.

Mr. Whipple—The regular hours in the state court are from two to four in the afternoon; that is agreeable to us.

Mr. Bates—Your Honor, that is agreeable to us—anything that is agreeable to the master. I would suggest that as we did not begin until 2:15 perhaps we better go over until 4:15.

The Master—It doesn't make any difference to me, anything that is agreeable to counsel.

Mr. Bates—A two-hour session in the afternoon.

Mr. Whipple—The next letter is one dated Oct. 11, 1918, the original of which you have. Shall we use a copy?

Mr. Krauthoff—A letter from the trustees?

Mr. Whipple—Yes

Mr. Krauthoff—I do not know that we have.

Mr. Strawn—It is a very short letter.

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"Oct. 11, 1918.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"We wish to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of Oct. 8 and to say that we will defer our reply until we have our full board present.

"Very sincerely yours,
"BOARD OF TRUSTEES,
(Signed) "HERBERT W. EUSTACE,
"Secretary."

Mr. Krauthoff—May I ask that the letter of Oct. 8 be offered in connection with it?

Mr. Strawn—I think it has been offered.

Mr. Whipple—That has been offered and has been marked.

Mr. Strawn—That is the one I read just before adjournment.

[The above letter, Board of Trustees to the Board of Directors, Oct. 11, 1918, is marked Exhibit 6.]

Mr. Strawn—The next letter is also from the trustees to the directors, the original of which I dare say you have, dated Nov. 11, 1918.

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

[Exhibit 7.]

"Nov. 11, 1918.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"The Board of Trustees again acknowledges receipt of your courteous favor of Oct. 8. This board sincerely regrets it cannot adopt the definition of its powers and duties set forth in your letter, but after having given further careful consideration to the subject refers to the conclusions expressed in its letter to your board under date of Sept. 30, 1918.

"This board is in accord with your suggestion that the action of the two boards should be entirely harmonious, and that both should be impelled by no other motive than the best interests of the cause which each is trying to serve. If you desire to discuss the subject further, the members of this board will be pleased to meet with you at any time you may appoint.

"With renewed assurance of our esteem and sincere regard, we are,

"Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) "HERBERT W. EUSTACE,
"DAVID B. OGDEN,
"LAMONT ROWLANDS,

[The above letter, Board of Trustees to Board of Directors, Nov. 11, 1918, is marked Exhibit 7.]

Q. Mr. Eustace, we do not find in the files any reply to the last letter, Exhibit 7. Do you remember whether there was a reply? A. I think not.

Q. No written reply? A. No written reply.

Q. Were the trustees at this time in communication with the directors orally? Were you having meetings together or not? A. No, I think we were not having meetings at that time.

Q. Then the communications between you were entirely in writing?

A. They were.

Q. And we may assume that unless we find a letter that there was no communication? A. No.

Mr. Whipple—May I ask, Mr. Krauthoff, whether you have any letter between the date of the last one, Nov. 11, and Dec. 13, 1918, or a copy of a letter that passed between the boards?

Mr. Krauthoff—We have one of Nov. 23, from the business manager to the board, about the financial statement.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I am asking more particularly for the letters which passed with regard to the controversy which had arisen, and not those in the ordinary routine.

Mr. Krauthoff—You want everything after Nov. 11, 1918?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, up to Dec. 13. That is the next one we have.

Mr. Krauthoff—We have nothing between Nov. 11 and Dec. 13, except a letter from the business manager about the funds.

Mr. Whipple—We now offer a copy of a letter from Mr. Jarvis, corresponding secretary, to the Board of Trustees, dated Dec. 13, 1918; or, rather, we offer the original, but it should have attached to it that inclosure.

Mr. Strawn—This letter is on the letterhead of the Christian Science Board of Directors, dated Dec. 13, 1918, addressed to the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

[Exhibit 8.]

"The Christian Science Board of Directors, Boston, Massachusetts.

"Board of Trustees,
"The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,

"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to inclose herewith circular letter which has this day been sent to all teachers of Christian Science, advising them that the directors have voted to change the teaching year to conform to the calendar year, commencing Jan. 1, 1919.

"Will you kindly change the notice at the head of the list of Christian Science practitioners in the Christian Science Journal accordingly, and oblige,

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,
"Corresponding Secretary for the Christian Science Board of Directors." CEJ—L

Mr. Strawn—The inclosure reads as follows, the same date:

Mr. Strawn reads the following:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors, Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dec. 13, 1918.

"To all Teachers of Christian Science,
"Dear Friends:

"The General Association of Teachers, which was dissolved in 1908 by the repeal of the By-Laws of The Mother Church providing for the association, adopted the rule that the teaching year should extend from Aug. 1 of the calendar year, and this rule, which was fixed by mutual consent rather than by executive authority, has been adhered to since that time.

"Frequently during the intervening years the question of changing the date has arisen, and I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to state that they have given careful consideration to the subject. Since the By-Laws of The Mother Church do not designate the specific time of the teaching year referred to in Art. XXVI, Sec. 6, of the Church Manual, and since there seems to be no reason why a change should not be made, it has been voted by the Christian Science Board of Directors that, commencing Jan. 1, 1919, and thereafter, the teaching year shall conform to the calendar year. The board feels that this change has many advantages and that it will not work a hardship in any way.

"Trusting that this plan is agreeable to you,

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,
"Corresponding Secretary for the Christian Science Board of Directors."

The inclosure, from Charles E. Jarvis, corresponding secretary, to teachers of Christian Science, dated Dec. 13, 1918, is marked Exhibit 8-A.]

Mr. Krauthoff—Have you the answer to that?

Mr. Strawn—Yes, I have. This is a carbon of the answer, I dare say you have the original, dated Dec. 18, addressed to the Christian Science Board of Directors by the trustees, reading as follows:

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"Dec. 18, 1918.

"Dear Friends:

"Your letter of Dec. 13, inclosing copy of your letter of even date 'To all teachers of Christian Science,' is received.

"In order that we may consider the recommendation you make with regard to changing the notice at the head of the Journal cards, will you please furnish us in writing the data and your reasons for making this recommendation.

"You will appreciate that a change in a printed notice of this important character, which has been published by the authority of The Christian Science Publishing Society for almost six years, can be justified only for good and sufficient cause.

[The above letter, Board of Trustees to Board of Directors, Dec. 18, 1918, is marked Exhibit 9.]

Mr. Strawn—Next is a letter of Dec. 18, 1918, addressed by the corresponding secretary of the Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees, which reads as follows:

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"Board of Trustees,
"Dec. 18, 1918.
"The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to say that the Board of Directors have some important business matters they would like to discuss with the trustees of the Publishing Society, and would like to have an interview with you tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the board room of The Mother Church.

Mr. Strawn—The next is under date of Dec. 18, 1918, and reads as follows: addressed to the Christian Science Board of Directors.

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"December 18, 1918.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
"The First Church of Christ, Scientist,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"Your letter of this date is received.

"At the present time Mr. Rowlands is absent, and we are not advised of the immediate date of his return; however, at one of our regular board meetings it was unanimously decided that in future conferences between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees, if the directors desired to ask the trustees something concerning the Publishing Society, the trustees would be very glad to set a time for the conference in the board room of the trustees, and that, if, on the other hand, the trustees desired to ask the directors some question, they would ask for an appointment to meet with the directors in their board room.

"It was also unanimously decided that all points to be talked over should be included in the letter asking for the conference, and that no conference should be held between the two boards in relation to our letter to you of Sept. 30 until all the members of both boards were present.

"We would therefore ask you to please let us know the points that you desire to bring up at the conference you request, whereupon the meeting can be readily arranged.

"Very sincerely yours,
"BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

"HERBERT W. EUSTACE,
"Secretary."

[The above letter, Board of Trustees to Board of Directors, Dec. 18, 1918, is marked Exhibit 11.]

Mr. Strawn—The answer to that letter is as follows, on the letterhead of the Christian Science Board of Directors, dated Dec. 20, 1918, addressed to the trustees.

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
"Boston, Massachusetts,
"Dec. 20, 1918.

"Board of Trustees,
"The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to acknowledge receipt of your two letters dated Dec. 18, 1918, and to send you this answer to one of them.

"As the directors understand the trustees' letter, it practically asserts an equality with the Christian Science Board of Directors, even a superiority over this board. In particular the trustees' letter virtually informs the directors that the trustees have attempted to adopt rules or regulations to be observed by the directors.

"The directors intend to exercise their supervision of The Christian Science Publishing Society in the most considerate manner and with all due regard for the trustees thereof, but the directors cannot for one moment concede that their supervision can be regulated or limited as asserted by the trustees' letter.

"The directors hold that The Christian Science Publishing Society is, to quote from the Manual, 'the Publishing Society of The Mother Church' (Article XXV, Section 8), that its business is the business of The Mother Church, and that said business is under the supervision of the Christian Science Board of Directors. It may be that the directors can usually give such directions as may be needed to or through the trustees as proposed in the directors' letter of Oct. 8, 1918. However this may work out in practice, this board is resolved to fulfill its duties and responsibilities under our Church by-laws and the other instruments which express our Leader's intention. This the directors expect to do as they have been and will be able to manifest divine guidance. Nothing less than this will maintain the unity and integrity of the Christian Science movement.

"An immediate assurance from the trustees is desired.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,
"Corresponding Secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors."

[The above letter, Board of Directors to Board of Trustees, Dec. 20, 1918, is marked Exhibit 12.]

Mr. Strawn—That was followed by another letter to the trustees under date of Dec. 20, 1918, on the letterhead of the directors, reading as follows:

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
"Boston, Massachusetts,
"Dec. 20, 1918.

"Board of Trustees,
"The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"Boston, Massachusetts.
"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to send you this letter.

"In view of the by-law, 'The business of The Mother Church shall be transacted by its Christian Science Board of Directors' (Church Manual, Article I, Section 6), this board understands that the business of The Mother Church includes the recognition of branch churches and of determining the eligibility of members of The Mother Church for recognition as practitioners and nurses, and that the duty of this board includes the final decision upon such recognitions. Accordingly, the following is transmitted for your guidance and direction:

"1. The responsibility for all final decisions in regard to recognizing new branches of The Mother Church including societies rests with the Christian Science Board of Directors. To this end, the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society shall submit the names and addresses of organizations whose applications the trustees have voted to recommend be accepted or declined, to the directors, for their final decision, together with any necessary explanation.

"2. The directors will make all final decisions in regard to the eligibility of persons who may apply for recognition as practitioners or nurses. This shall be done in the manner provided in the preceding paragraph.

"3. Nothing shall be done by the trustees, directly or indirectly, to regulate the practice of Christian Science, by rules, questions, or other means, without first securing the consent or approval of the directors. In particular the trustees shall give full effect to the rule, 'Choice of patients is left to the wisdom of the practitioner' (Manual, Art. XXVII, Sec. 4).

"4. All questions pertaining to the general welfare of the Christian Science movement, not particularly connected with the business of the Publishing Society, shall be determined by the Christian Science Board of Directors. All important questions pertaining to the general welfare of the Christian Science movement and connected with the business of the Publishing Society shall be determined by the trustees upon consultation with the directors.

"5. The directors will determine the editorial policy of the Christian Science publications. If advertisements are used for editorial purposes, this rule shall apply to them.

"6. The salaries of the editors and of the business manager elected by the directors shall be subject to approval by the directors.

"7. In view of Art. XXV, Sec. 5, of the Manual and the nature of the work done by the Committee on Bible Lessons, the trustees shall not fill a vacancy on that committee without a prior acceptance by the directors of the person to be appointed.

"Kindly let the board have a prompt acknowledgment of this letter.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,
"Corresponding Secretary for the Christian Science Board of Directors."

[The above letter, Board of Directors to Board of Trustees, Dec. 20, 1918, is marked Exhibit 13.]

Mr. Strawn—The answer to that was under date of Dec. 24, addressed to the Christian Science Board of Directors by the trustees.

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"December 24, 1918.
"The Christian Science Board of Directors, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:
"After careful consideration of your two letters dated Dec. 20, this board can only reiterate and reaffirm its position as stated in its previous letters to your board of Sept. 30 and subsequent dates.

"With our united kindest regards, and wishing you all the greetings of the season,

"Very sincerely yours,

"DAVID B. OGDEN

[The above letter, Board of Trustees to Board of Directors, Dec. 24, 1918, is marked Exhibit 14.]

Mr. Strawn—The next was under date of Dec. 26, 1918, addressed by the Secretary of the Board of Directors to John R. Watts, Business Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
"Boston, Massachusetts.
Dec. 26, 1918.

"Mr. John R. Watts, Business Manager,
"The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Mr. Watts:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to transmit to you the following request with regard to the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society, which is under your management.

"To enable the Board of Directors to fulfill its duties and responsibilities under the By-Laws of The Mother Church the board desires that you take any important and unusual action in the course of your official work only after you have made sure that it has the approval of the Board of Directors of The Mother Church.

"The directors will appreciate your assurance of cooperation in this respect, and desire me to extend to you their kind personal regards.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,
"Corresponding Secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors."

[The above letter, Board of Directors to John R. Watts, Business Manager, Dec. 26, 1918, is marked Exhibit 15.]

Mr. Strawn—Another letter, under date of Dec. 28, 1918, on the letter-head of the directors, to the trustees, reading as follows:

Mr. Strawn reads the following letter:

"Dec. 28, 1918.

"Board of Trustees,
"The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to acknowledge receipt of your favor of Dec. 23 and to say in reply thereto and in further reply to recent communications from you, that in the trustees' letter of Sept. 30, 1918, they spoke of the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898, as 'an absolutely legal trust governed and perpetuated by the laws of Massachusetts and the United States.' In the same letter, the trustees also spoke of the same deed as 'inferentially incorporated as part and parcel of the Church Manual,' and spoke of its conditions as 'obligatory upon the trustees, not only as part of the Church by-laws, but also according to the laws of the land.' These quoted words, to which the directors have no objection, indicated that the trustees had sought the advice of counsel as to their rights, duties, and liabilities under the Trust Deed. With this indication before them, it seemed wise that the directors should also consult counsel about the 'laws of the land.' They now have three opinions which were written by different counsel without consulting each other. Three of these counsel are members of The Mother Church. To the end that nothing be left undone which may lead to the establishment of the right concept of the relationship of the Publishing Society to The Mother Church, the directors now offer to furnish copies of these opinions to the trustees and in turn offer to consider any opinions of counsel which the trustees have received.

"The directors earnestly recommend that the trustees consider and reconsider whether they are not making an attack on the by-laws and government of The Mother Church. The recent conduct of the trustees is not to be distinguished from such an attack by their avowed adherence to the Manual. That factor has been present in certain other cases, which, if they had been successful, would likewise have repudiated certain important provisions which our Leader has given us for unswerving obedience. For the trustees to set up the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898, as creating a trust not subject to the Church by-laws adopted since that date, or as creating a trust not subject to the present government of The Mother Church, would be in effect an attack on the by-laws and government of The Mother Church. If the trustees continue to insist on any such contention, it will constitute a most threatening menace to the welfare of the Christian Science movement. In such an exigency the advice and warning given by Mrs. Eddy in the letter to the Board of Directors published in the Sentinel of Aug. 22, 1914, is pertinent for all persons concerned. The directors refer especially to the following sentences:

"The present and future prosperity of the cause of Christian Science is largely due to the by-laws and government of 'The First Church of Christ, Scientist,' in Boston. None but myself can know, as I know, the importance of the combined sentiment of this church remaining steadfast in supporting its present by-laws.'

"With the sincere hope that Principle may be demonstrated in this vital matter,

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "CHARLES E. JARVIS,
"Corresponding Secretary for the Christian Science Board of Directors."

[The above letter, Board of Directors to Board of Trustees, Dec. 28, 1918, is marked Exhibit 16.]

Mr. Strawn—That was answered under date of Dec. 31 by the trustees to the directors.

[The letter dated Dec. 31, 1918, is marked Exhibit 17, WHM, and is read by Mr. Strawn as follows:

"Dec. 31, 1918.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
"The First Church of Christ, Scientist,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"Your letter of Dec. 28 has been given very careful consideration, and surely the proverbial Philadelphia lawyer must have composed it, for it is truly an enigma to us.

"As the trustees read your letter, they feel that the second paragraph nullifies the statements made in the first paragraph, and it goes without saying that the trustees absolutely repudiate the charges the Board of Directors have apparently preferred against the Board of Trustees in this second paragraph, and further wish to state that they feel that the directors do not fully realize the seriousness of the statements they have made.

"With cordial good wishes,

"Yours sincerely,

(Signed)

"HERBERT W. EUSTACE,

"DAVID B. OGDEN,

"LAMONT ROWLANDS.

"Board of Trustees."]

Mr. Strawn—The next letter is under date of Jan. 3, 1919, from the directors to the trustees, and reads as follows:

[The letter, dated Jan. 3, 1919, is marked Exhibit 18, WHM, and is read by Mr. Strawn as follows:

[Exhibit 18.]

"The Christian Science Board of Directors, Boston, Massachusetts.
"Jan. 3, 1919.

"Board of Trustees,

"The Christian Science Publishing Society, Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends: I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to acknowledge receipt of your letter of Dec. 31 and to send you this letter.

"The directors' letter of Dec. 28 included a simple offer and a plain recommendation, stated in two consistent paragraphs. The fact that the trustees have replied without making any response to an offer and a recommendation of that nature and importance is another item of proof that they are not at present qualified for their work and trust.

"For a long time the Christian Science Board of Directors has been obliged to witness an accumulation of signs that one or more changes must be made in the personnel of the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society. At all times this conclusion has been unwelcome. It has been put off more than once when the evidence furnished by the trustees themselves seemed imperative. Now it has become clear beyond question that one or more changes must be made, to preserve the business of the Publishing Society, to keep the unity of the Christian Science movement, and to guard the By-Laws and government of The Mother Church.

"In this situation the directors have one more proposal to make. It is that the present members of the Board of Trustees submit their resignations to the Christian Science Board of Directors to take effect when their resignations are accepted by the Board of Directors, and that they help to install one at a time as many new trustees as the directors may declare are needed. The directors assume that the trustees will desire to be, not obstructive, but helpful.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS.

"Corresponding Secretary for the Christian Science Board of Directors."]

Mr. Strawn—Under date of Jan. 17 another letter came from the directors to the trustees, reading as follows:

[The letter dated Jan. 17, 1919, above referred to is marked Exhibit 19, WHM, and is read by Mr. Strawn as follows:

Exhibit 19.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Jan. 17, 1919.

"Board of Trustees,

"The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to advise you that at a meeting of the board held this day, on motion and by unanimous vote of the members present, the Christian Science Board of Directors instructed the corresponding secretary for this board to request the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society to collect and furnish to this Board of Directors as soon as possible, the papers and information described as follows:

"1. Copies of all blanks and forms used by The Christian Science Publishing Society at any time since the 1st of January, 1918, in its correspondence with persons or organizations applying, or signifying an intention or desire to apply, for cards or advertisements in The Christian Science Journal, the official organ of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. This request covers blanks and forms, including forms used for composing letters, pertaining to correspondence with persons or organizations applying, or signifying an intention or desire to apply, for any kind of a card or advertisement in said periodical.

"2. A complete list of the persons who applied in the year 1918 to The Christian Science Publishing Society for practitioners' cards in The Christian Science Journal, or signified in said year their intention or desire to make such an application, and whose applications The Christian Science Publishing Society did not accept, together with the reasons in each instance for not accepting the same.

"3. A complete list of the organizations or groups of Christian Scientists which applied to The Christian Science Publishing Society in the year 1918 for advertisements in The Christian Science Journal as branch churches or societies, or signified in that year their intention or desire to make such an application, and whose applications The Christian Science Publishing Society did not accept, together with the reasons in each instance for not accepting the same.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,

"Corresponding Secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors.

"CEJ-L"]

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Now, at some time before the date of the last letter, the Board of Trustees had consulted counsel, had they not? A. Yes.

Q. Can you remember the date when you first consulted counsel? A. When we first consulted Justice Hughes? No, I could not remember the date. I can—

Q. Was he the first counsel that you consulted? A. We had an informal talk with Mr. Strawn.

Q. Mr. Strawn of counsel? A. Yes.

Mr. Streeter—Will you speak a little louder, Mr. Eustace?

The Witness—We had an informal talk with Mr. Strawn, but we had not engaged counsel at all.

Q. How early had you informally conferred with Mr. Strawn? A. It must have been some time, I think, at the end of October.

Q. Mr. Strawn was and had been counsel for one of your members? A. Yes.

Q. In his personal matters for a long time before his becoming one of the trustees? A. Yes.

Q. And he gained the confidence of the other trustees through Mr. Rowlands, and the advice that he gave you? A. Yes.

Q. On matters affecting the board? That, you say, was in the last of October? A. I think that was the last of October. Some time there.

Mr. Krauthoff—What was the year? He spoke of the last of October.

Mr. Whipple—Last year.

The Witness—1918.

Q. Then your board consulted Mr. Justice Hughes, or former Justice Hughes of the Supreme Court of the United States? A. We did.

Q. In New York? A. In New York.

Q. And went there for the purpose? A. And went there to consult him.

Q. Then after this letter in which the directors threatened to attempt, at least, to exercise a power of removal, did you confer with Mr. Justice Hughes again? A. We did. We went down to talk the whole matter over again.

Q. It appears that Mr. Justice Hughes was consulted first in November—Nov. 13. Would that accord with your memory? A. Yes, I think that is probably it.

Q. Then you saw him again in January? A. Yes.

Q. In the meantime had he examined the facts which were put before you and given you an opinion? A. He had—on our presentation of the matter he questioned us as to the letters that had passed between the two boards and the Deed of Trust, asking for a copy of it, and other questions, and asked us—he said—we requested him for a written opinion as to the rights and duties of the trustees.

Q. Yes. A. And he took the matter under advisement. Do you wish me to—

Q. No, that is enough. Then later, after the threat to remove you, you conferred with him again? A. We conferred with him again.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to the threat to remove. It was a request for resignation.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I will accept any terminology which meets your approval. I think we want to put the same question, but I am a little inept in meeting your criticisms. You may frame it if you would like to.

Mr. Krauthoff—I would be very glad to help you, Mr. Whipple, by any means within my power.

Mr. Whipple—I like to have your help; it is sometimes refreshing and sometimes thrilling.

Q. Then you saw him again in— A. Yes.

Q. After the communication which suggested the resignations, or whatever that may be? A. Yes.

Q. Then after a season, is it a fact that a meeting was arranged between counsel who had been retained by the trustees and counsel who were acting for the directors? A. It is.

Q. Let me ask you this: How long, as you remember it, has it been that Judge Smith, as he has been called, was acting for the directors in advising them? Has he been connected with them for some time? A. I suppose so. I do not really know anything about that, Mr. Whipple.

Q. Well, did you meet him at directors' meetings when you met with them? A. Never except once.

Q. When did you first hear of Mr. Krauthoff? A. I first heard that Mr. Krauthoff was in the case just prior to the letter received from the Board of Directors saying that they had engaged counsel.

Q. Saying that they had engaged counsel? A. Yes.

Q. But you had known of Judge Smith's being connected with the Board of Directors, or with the board, as a Committee on Publication, or something of that sort, for quite a while? A. We did. And we supposed he was counsel.

Q. And for quite a while? A. Yes.

Q. What I want to get at, he has heard with the— A. Oh, for a number of years.

Q. —with the Board of Directors for a number of years? A. A number of years.

Q. And has an office with them?

A. In the same building.

Q. And then Mr. Krauthoff you heard of as their counsel when it is said that they— A. Just prior to that, I think three days before, we received that or heard of it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, have you your directors' records here, Mr. Krauthoff, which will show the date?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, we didn't bring them today.

Mr. Whipple—Would you mind doing it tomorrow?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—If you will bring all the directors' records. We do not want to read them all, but it will be of advantage to have them here, so that we can put in such parts as we want to.

Mr. Krauthoff—On what subject, Mr. Whipple, did you want the—

Mr. Whipple—Well, I guess I would bring them all, because you see I can't tell you just the subjects now. If you have them all here—I take it they are not very bulky—then as they come up we shall not have to send for them; and I take it that we may depend on that being done, rather than to issue a duces tecum to your secretary.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, your oral request, Mr. Whipple, is the most potent thing I know of.

Mr. Whipple—Thank you. It has never before been compared with a subpoena duces tecum, but if it will go, it will save the expense of employing a constable.

Mr. Streeter—Do I understand the records are to be brought here?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, I understand. I understand that is the result of this colloquy that has just taken place.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, there are certain matters, certain parts of the record that we desire to examine for Mr. Dittmore, and we join with Mr. Whipple, at least to that extent, in desiring the records here.

Mr. Whipple—We would like the records.

The Master—I understand the defendants' counsel is perfectly willing to bring them.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—And will bring them.

Mr. Whipple—And I will suggest that you need not bring them back of 1916; from 1916 up to date. Is that agreeable?

Mr. Streeter—No. I would like to have you bring them from January, 1916, if you please.

Mr. Krauthoff—All right; and we need them from Sept. 23, 1912.

Mr. Streeter—Well, you can have them.

Mr. Krauthoff—Or 1892, rather.

Mr. Whipple—In Mr. Dittmore's bill, which we have not come to, he intimates strongly that these records of the directors are not altogether reliable, and that he has something that is, and I therefore will respectfully request of distinguished counsel for Mr. Dittmore that they will bring theirs in at that time so that we may have the real thing.

Mr. Streeter—Well, we note what you say, brother Whipple.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I ask that Mr. Whipple's characterization of Mr. Dittmore's bill be stricken from the record. Whatever intimation is in it, the bill speaks for itself.

Mr. Whipple—I didn't characterize the bill. I said that in the pleadings, which are before Your Honor, there is a statement as to the unreliability of all the records of the directors.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that statement. We have not discovered it in the bill.

Mr. Whipple—Well, all right. If the bill does not justify it—

The Master—That perhaps is hardly characterizing the bill. The bill is before us. Perhaps Mr. Whipple can some time or other refer us to the particular passage that he has in mind.

Mr. Whipple—We have copies and the originals of two letters under date of Jan. 22 of the present year which the Board of Directors, through their corresponding secretary, caused to be sent to the Board of Trustees. I was about to say that it did not seem worth while to read them, but I guess we would better, and we will offer them. The shorter one we will have marked first. That would be Exhibit 20.

[The letter dated Jan. 22, 1919, above referred to, is marked Exhibit 20, W.H.M.]

Mr. Whipple—And the longer one will be Exhibit 21.

[The letter above referred to dated Jan. 22, 1919, is marked Exhibit 21, W. H. M.]

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Strawn, are you willing kindly to help me out still?

Mr. Strawn—I will do the best I can. The one which has been identified as Exhibit No. 20 reads as follows:

"Exhibit 20.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Jan. 22, 1919.

"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to advise you that at a meeting of the board held this day, the following motion being offered was unanimously adopted by the Christian Science Board of Directors:

"Whereas, on the 20th day of December, 1918, the Christian Science Board of Directors sent a letter to the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society containing the following paragraph:

"(4) All questions pertaining to the general welfare of the Christian Science movement, not particularly connected with the business of the Publishing Society, shall be determined by the Christian Science Board of Directors. All important questions pertaining to the general welfare of the Christian Science movement and connected with the business of the Publishing Society, shall be determined by the trustees upon consultation with the directors."

"And whereas, The Christian Science Board of Directors has found that the above quoted paragraph is liable to be misunderstood, and that it does not clearly or fully express the board's thought and intention:

"Therefore, it is hereby ordered:

"That the following paragraph be and is adopted instead of the above quoted paragraph, in and for said letter:

"(4) Upon every matter affecting the cause of Christian Science connected with the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the Board of Trustees thereof shall be governed by the decisions and orders made by the Christian Science Board of Directors in accordance with the By-Laws of The Mother Church."

"That a copy of the record of this proceeding be sent to the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and that reference to this proceeding be made in the margin of the record of the former proceeding of this board in regard to said letter.

Mr. Strawn—The next is Exhibit 21, under date of Jan. 22, 1919; addressed to the trustees, and reads as follows:

"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to advise you that at a meeting of the board held this day, the following motion being offered, was unanimously adopted by the Christian Science Board of Directors:

"Resolved: That the following orders be and are hereby adopted and made for the direction of the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society:

"(1) That the following words on page xiii of the January, 1919,

Issue of The Christian Science Journal, the official organ of this Church. The teaching year begins Aug. 1, shall be changed in the April, 1919, and subsequent issues of said periodical, so as to read as follows: "The teaching year, which formerly began Aug. 1, now begins Jan. 1, and these latter words shall be printed in the April, 1919, and subsequent issues of said periodical instead of the former words."

"(2) The following paragraph on page v of the January, 1919, issue of The Christian Science Journal, the official organ of this Church, shall be omitted from all issues of said periodical hereafter printed: "When members of The Mother Church in a community believe that the time has come for the holding of regular services, and for the formation of a Christian Science Society, or the formation of a branch Church of Christ, Scientist, if they will write to The Christian Science Publishing Society, a letter will be sent regarding the steps to be taken in organizing their work, and the rules to be observed in order to have an advertisement in the Journal."

"(3) The following paragraph, together with its heading and signature, shall be printed in all issues of The Christian Science Journal hereafter printed, and shall be placed therein immediately before the matter headed 'Instructions Regarding Cards':

"Organization and Recognition of Branch Churches and Societies of The Mother Church.

"When members of The Mother Church in a community believe that the time has come for the holding of regular services, and for the formation of a Christian Science Society, or the formation of a branch Church of Christ, Scientist, in accordance with Art. XXIII, Secs. 6 and 7, of the Church Manual, they should write to The Christian Science Board of Directors for information concerning organization and recognition as a branch of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors."

"Resolved Further: That the following requests be and are hereby made of the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society:

"(1) The Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society is hereby requested to transmit to The Christian Science Board of Directors all pending correspondence, and all correspondence hereafter received by the Publishing Society, from Christian Scientists seeking recognition or advertisement as branch churches or societies of The Mother Church who have not been recognized as such by The Mother Church through its Christian Science Board of Directors.

"(2) The Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society is hereby requested to confer with The Christian Science Board of Directors in the directors' room in The Mother Church next Monday morning at 10 o'clock on a method of handling correspondence, with Christian Scientists applying for recognition and advertisement as branch churches or societies of The Mother Church, designed to avoid duplication of correspondence on those subjects.

"Resolved Further That by the adoption of this resolution, the second sentence of the first numbered paragraph of the letter dated Dec. 20, 1918, from the directors to the trustees is superseded:

"Resolved Further: That a copy of these orders and requests shall be sent to the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society; and that the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society be requested to return an early assurance that said board will comply with the foregoing orders and requests.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS.

"Corresponding Secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors. "CEJ-I."

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Now, Mr. Eustace, referring to those two letters: I call your attention to this statement in the first one, Exhibit 20, that a new paragraph had been substituted in their resolution which made it read:

"Upon every matter affecting the cause of Christian Science connected with the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the Board of Trustees thereof shall be governed by the decisions and orders made by The Christian Science Board of Directors in accordance with the By-Laws of The Mother Church."

Had ever any such demand or suggestion as that been voiced before? A. In the famous memorandum, it had.

Q. But that you had not conceded? A. We had absolutely repudiated and rejected it.

Q. And here again it appeared that in every matter affecting the cause of Christian Science connected with your business you should accept the decision of the Board of Directors. Did you assent to that? A. We certainly did not.

Q. Now, take it Jan. 22. They issued to you some orders on various matters, first about the change in the teaching year: That had been a matter which had been regulated by whom? How had the teaching year been fixed? A. The only knowledge, absolute knowledge that I have of it was that it was stated when I went through the college in 1902, the teaching year—no, it was in the association, I think, following that, that the teaching year was stated as commencing Aug. 1. May I explain in connection with that?

Q. Let me ask: Was that in Mrs. Eddy's lifetime? A. Yes.

Q. And had it been during all the years that you knew, the teaching year Aug. 1? A. No. Previous to the August period it was March.

Q. And the change had been made?

A. And there were two classes then held during the year. And when it came to changing it to one class, the teaching year was then stated, as I understood it, and as all teachers accepted, I believe—Aug. 1 was the teaching year—from Aug. 1.

Q. And that was in Mrs. Eddy's lifetime? A. That was in Mrs. Eddy's lifetime.

Q. And from that time, which was what date, about what time? A. I should think that was Aug. 1, 1903, or 1904—somewhere around there.

Q. And from that time until the date of this letter, or letters, on this subject it had always been— A. From Aug. 1 to July 31.

Q. And was so published in the Journals? A. For six years it had been published so in the Journal.

Q. Then there is a resolution which they wanted omitted from all issues of The Christian Science Journal:

"When members of The Mother Church in a community believe that the time has come for the holding of regular services, and for the formation of a Christian Science Society, or the formation of a branch Church of Christ, Scientist, if they will write to The Christian Science Publishing Society, a letter will be sent regarding the steps to be taken in organizing their work."

How long had that been done? A. I can't say, but several years.

Q. Before the time you came there? A. No; I think that was reworded some years—it had probably been running a number of years. I would have to look back in the record.

Q. And The Christian Science Publishing Society had performed these functions in regard to the organization of new churches? A. Always, as far as I understand, since the Deed of Trust.

Q. Certainly ever since you have been there? A. Yes.

Q. And this proposal in this letter of Jan. 22 was that that should be changed so that the organization and recognition of branch churches and societies of The Mother Church should be entirely in the hands of the directors—that was the proposal—and taken from the hands of the trustees? A. Yes.

Q. When had that first been suggested? A. I think that letter was the first notification we had had.

Q. Then there was a resolve that the trustees should transmit to the directors all pending correspondence with regard to the Christian Science Church seeking recognition or advertisement as branch churches, and you were asked to devise a method of handling correspondence with Christian Scientists applying for recognition and advertisement as branch churches. That matter had all been in your hands, as I understand it, theretofore? A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you if it is a fact that between these dates—the 22d of January and the 27th of January—a meeting between your counsel and counsel for the directors was arranged in Boston? A. It was.

Q. And held here at some date between the 22d and the 27th of January? A. It was.

Q. And there were present former Justice Hughes—

Mr. Krauthoff—May I inquire if he was present—if Mr. Eustace was present at this conference?

The Witness—I was not.

Mr. Krauthoff—I object to any testimony about the conference at which he was not present.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Hughes and Mr. Strawn and myself were all in town and at my office? A. Not prior to the 27th. There was a meeting held first. There were two conferences of counsel, were there not?

Q. Yes, A. And the first one Justice Hughes was not present at.

Mr. Strawn—That is right.

The Master—I understand the defendants object to his stating who was present at a meeting where he was not present.

Mr. Whipple—I am not asking him to do that.

Q. Do you know that Mr. Justice Hughes was not in town, but Mr. Strawn was? A. I do.

Q. And that Mr. Whipple was in town? A. I do.

Q. And you knew of a meeting being arranged with counsel? A. I did.

Mr. Whipple—Will you produce a letter from counsel for the trustees, dated Jan. 27, 1919, if you please?

Mr. Krauthoff—Letter to us, you mean?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—We have not our copy convenient.

Mr. Whipple—All right; we will offer our copy, if you do not mind.

Mr. Krauthoff—Are you offering that part pleaded in the bill, or are you offering the letter in full?

Mr. Whipple—We are putting in the whole of it.

The Master—This is the letter of which a certain part is in the bill?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Strawn—This will be offered as Exhibit No. 22.

Mr. Krauthoff—Our position in regard to that letter, Your Honor, is this: It is immaterial as evidence, but counsel no doubt will repeat the same legal argument in a brief, so that the Court may take it for what it is—that is, the legal argument on the—

The Master—I supposed that we were now getting at all the correspondence between the two boards.

Mr. Strawn—That is right.

The Master—Doesn't this letter from the trustees come under that head?

Mr. Krauthoff—It is a letter from the trustees' counsel to the directors' counsel advising the directors' counsel as to what the trustees' counsel conceived the law of the case to be.

The Master—But I suppose it would hardly be a part of the correspondence.

Mr. Strawn—It is an answer, if Your Honor please, to some of the claims that are made by the counsel and by the trustees—I mean, by the directors—in letters to the trustees which had not theretofore been answered by the trustees. The letter bears date Jan. 27, 1919, and is on the letterhead of Judge Hughes.

“Messrs. JOHN L. BATES,

“CLIFFORD P. SMITH,

“LEON M. ABBOTT,

“EDWIN A. KRAUTHOFF,

“Counsel for the Board of Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

“Dear Sirs:

“In view of the courtesy extended to us by you on the 25th instant, in the interview in which you stated the views of your clients respecting the position of the Board of Trustees—known as The Christian Science Publishing Society—represented by us, and the conduct of the present members of the Board of Trustees, we believe that we owe you the courtesy of stating the facts as our clients understand them.

“The trustees have sought our advice respecting their rights and duties as trustees under the Deed of Trust executed by Mary Baker G. Eddy, under date of Jan. 25, 1898. Among the ‘perpetual’ and ‘irrevocable’ trusts and confidences reposed in the trustees by that deed were the following:

“(a) To hold and manage the property and property rights exclusively for the purpose of carrying on the business theretofore conducted by The Christian Science Publishing Society in promoting the interests of Christian Science:

“(b) Energetically and judiciously to manage the business of the Publishing Society on a strictly Christian basis and upon their own responsibility:

“(c) To keep accurate accounts of the business and deposit in a responsible and reliable bank or trust company all bonds, mortgages, deeds or other documents or writings obligatory, for safe keeping, also all surplus funds over and above the sum necessary to defray the running expenses of the business, until the same is paid over to the treasurer of The First Church of Christ, Scientist.

“Once in every six months to account for and pay over to said treasurer the net profits of said business, ‘net profits’ being understood to mean the balance remaining at the end of each six months, after paying the usual and legitimate expenses incurred in conducting the business;

“(d) To employ all the help necessary to the proper conduct of the business, and to discharge the same in their discretion or according to the needs of the business; and to employ such number of persons as they deem necessary to prepare Bible Lessons or Lesson Sermons to be read in The Christian Science Church, the same to be published quarterly and in the name of the Christian Science Quarterly; and they may, in their discretion, change the name or style of such Quarterly publication as occasion may demand. They shall also fix the compensation of the persons so selected.”

“(f) To have direction and supervision of the publication of said Quarterly and also of all pamphlets, tracts, and other literature pertaining to said business; using their best judgment as to the means of preparing and issuing the same so as to promote the best interests of the cause.”

“The deed further provides:

“Whenever a vacancy shall occur in said trusteeship for any cause, I reserve the right to fill the same by appointment, if I shall so desire, so long as I may live; but if I do not elect to exercise this right, the remaining trustees shall fill said vacancy. The First Members, together with the directors of said Church, shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship for such reasons as to them may seem expedient.”

“The concluding paragraph of the deed provides:

“The delivery of this instrument to, and its acceptance by, said trustees shall be regarded as the full establishment of the trust and as the agreement by the trustees to honestly and faithfully do and perform all things to be done and performed by them within the terms, objects and purposes of this instrument.”

“After having carefully considered the deed, we have advised our clients that,

“(1) The deed created a valid, express trust. The activities, powers and duties of the trustees are therein stated in clear and decisive terms:

“(2) The Deed of Trust is complete in itself and irrevocable. By it the title to the property therein described was transferred and the relation of the trustees and cestui que trustent was definitely fixed. It was beyond the power of Mrs. Eddy, the creator of the trust, thereafter to change, alter or modify the rights and interests established by the deed;

“(3) The power under the Deed of Trust to declare vacancies having been vested jointly in the Board of Directors and the First Members, the Board of Directors alone cannot exercise the power;

“(4) The source of the powers and duties of the trustees is the Deed of Trust. To it they must look for the extent and limit of their authority. The language of the Deed of Trust being definite and controlling, neither subsequent provisions of the Church Manual nor, as heretofore stated, any subsequent declarations of Mrs. Eddy, can have the effect of modifying the Deed of Trust or the estates and equitable interests thereby created. Nor can such provisions or declarations add to, or detract from, the particular responsibilities, duties, and functions imposed upon the trustees by the deed.

"(5) If there be any conflict between the terms of the deed and the language of the Church Manual, the legal and moral obligation of the trustees compels them to respond to and obey the mandates of the deed. Should they do otherwise, they would violate the compact which they made by their acceptance of the trust to honestly and faithfully do and perform all things to be done and performed by them within the terms, objects and purposes of this instrument."

"Although the Deed of Trust provides that the balance remaining after paying the usual and legitimate expenses incurred in conducting the business shall be paid over to the treasurer of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, the avowed and reiterated purpose of Mrs. Eddy in creating the trust was more effectually to promote and extend the religion of Christian Science. As said by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in Chase v. Dickey (212 Mass. pp. 555, 561, 562): 'This latter purpose in substance is not a gift to the particular ecclesiastical organization for its special needs. It manifests a broader design, and authorizes the use of the gift for spreading the tenets of faith taught by the testatrix over an area more extensive than could possibly be gathered in one congregation. It includes the most catholic missionary effort both as to territory, peoples and times. It is the founding of a trust of comprehensive scope for the upbuilding of the sect which the testatrix made the object of her bounty.' Obviously it was not Mrs. Eddy's intention to establish a mere money-making enterprise for the benefit of The First Church in Boston.

"Having been thus advised as to their powers and duties and the objects of the trust, the trustees assert it always has been and is now their purpose, as trustees and as 'loyal, faithful, and consistent believers and advocates of the principles of Christian Science as taught by me (Mrs. Eddy) in my book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," as required by the Deed, strictly to carry out and faithfully to discharge the duties and responsibilities which the Deed imposes.'

"It must be assumed that in creating the Publishing Society and in designating trustees to hold and manage the property and property rights involved, and in imposing upon them the duty of energetically and judiciously managing the business of the Publishing Society on a Christian basis and 'upon their own responsibility,' Mrs. Eddy intended to commit this important work of 'effectually promoting and extending the religion of Christian Science' to men of character, discretion, and courage, and that by the controlling terms of the deed she did not intend that the trustees should yield their responsibility to some other body or individuals; or to permit the judgment of others to be substituted for that of the trustees.

"Minds may differ as to the manner in which the trustees have performed and are performing their duty, but there can be no serious dispute as to the meaning of the language of the deed. The trustees welcome kindly and just criticism of anything which they may do or fail to do in the discharge of their duty. In the same spirit, they feel they must refuse to accept peremptory orders concerning subjects which rest wholly within the discretion of the trustees.

"The letters of the directors to the trustees of date, Jan. 3, Jan. 17, and Jan. 22, 1919, have remained unanswered because the trustees, before answering those communications, desired to be fully advised of their rights in the premises. We will now attempt to answer the letters referred to.

"With the greatest respect for the judgment of the directors, the trustees deny that they or any of them have done or omitted to do anything which would justify or warrant their resignation as trustees, and they expressly deny any right or authority in the directors to demand or request such resignation.

"Reserving all the discretion and powers committed to them by the Deed of Trust, and denying the right of the directors to make the demand, the trustees nevertheless cheerfully will comply with a request of the directors that they (the directors) be furnished with copies of all blanks and forms used by the Publishing Society at any time since Jan. 1, 1918, in its correspondence with persons or organizations applying, or signifying an intention or desire to apply for cards or advertisements in The Christian Science Journal, including forms used for composing letters pertaining to correspondence with persons or organizations applying or signifying an intention or desire to apply for any kind of an advertisement in said periodical. Also to furnish a complete list of the persons who applied in the year 1918 to the society for practitioners' cards in the Journal, or who signified in said year their intention or desire to make such application and whose applications the society did not accept, together with the reasons in each instance for not accepting the same; also a complete list of the organizations or groups of Christian Scientists who applied to the society in the year 1918 for advertisement in the Journal as branch churches or societies, or who signified, in that year, their intention or desire to make such an application, and whose application the society did not accept, together with the reasons in each instance for not accepting the same.

"The trustees express an entire willingness to receive, and pledge themselves carefully to consider, any suggestion or criticism which the Board of Directors may have to offer in respect of such matters.

"Referring to the letter to the trustees of date Jan. 22, 1919, requesting the change in the April issue, 1919, of the Journal, of the date of the beginning of the teaching year from Aug. 1 to Jan. 1, the trustees respectively beg leave to suggest that they are ignorant of any such provision of the Manual or of any direction of Mrs. Eddy vesting in the Board of Directors the power or right to dictate the teaching year.

"It is the belief of the trustees that the change in the teaching year should be made by the teachers and not by the directors. Being responsible for the contents of all publications published by them under authority of the deed, they hesitate to assume any part of the responsibility of making such announcement. Notwithstanding these considerations, the trustees will comply with the request of the directors, and cause to be published in the April number of the Journal the following statement: 'Pursuant to resolution of the Board of Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., the teaching year, which formerly began Aug. 1, now begins Jan. 1.'

"The trustees also will cause to be published, commencing with the April issue of the Journal, and in all subsequent issues, under the heading, 'Instructions Regarding Cards':

"'Organization and Recognition of Branch Churches and Societies of The Mother Church:'

"'When members of The Mother Church in a community believe that the time has come for the holding of regular services, and the formation of a Christian Science Society, or the formation of a branch Church of Christ, Scientist, in accordance with Article XXIII, Sections 6 and 7, of the Church Manual, they should write to The Christian Science Board of Directors for information concerning organization and recognition as to a branch of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

"'The Christian Science Board of Directors.'

"The trustees desire it to be expressly understood that compliance with the requests of the directors aforesaid in no way shall destroy or interfere with the authority vested in the trustees by the Trust Deed respecting the affairs of the Publishing Society.

"The Board of Trustees will also comply with the request of the directors to transmit to the directors all pending correspondence, and all correspondence heretofore received by the Publishing Society from Christian Scientists seeking recognition or advertisement as branch churches or societies of The Mother Church, who have not been recognized as such by The Mother Church through its Christian Science Board of Directors.

Referring to the second letter of the directors under date of Jan. 22, 1919, which quotes the following from a letter of the directors to the trustees under date of Dec. 20, 1918:

"(4) All questions pertaining to the general welfare of the Christian Science movement, not particularly connected with the business of the Publishing Society, shall be determined by The Christian Science Board of Directors. All important questions pertaining to the general welfare of the Christian Science movement and connected with the business of the Publishing Society, shall be determined by the trustees upon consultation with the directors;" and which in the letter of January 22, the directors changed to read as follows:

"(4) Upon every matter affecting the cause of Christian Science connected with the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society the Board of Trustees thereof shall be governed by the decisions and orders made by The Christian Science Board of Directors in accordance with the By-Laws of The Mother Church."

The trustees cannot recognize the order of the directors, above set forth, because they are advised that they must look to the Deed of Trust as their chart in the discharge of the duties and responsibilities thereby imposed.

Mr. Krauthoff—One moment, Mr. Strawn. If your Honor please, the rest of that letter, in our judgment, relates entirely to matters that were discussed confidentially between counsel, and I will ask the counsel for the trustees to further consider whether it is to the interest of the trust that they are administering to offer the letter in evidence as to those items. They relate to subjects which, as I understand, are not now in controversy.

Mr. Whipple—Well, we think, if Your Honor please, that it is important that the whole thing should be read, because the attitude which the trustees took in an endeavor to prevent this schism which was being forced upon them by what we claim was the intolerable and headstrong and unjustifiable conduct of these directors ought to appear. It is of importance in this case that the limits to which we went in order to reconcile our performance of our duty short of abandonment of our trust, at their request, should be known; and I do not believe that there is any part of the letter that ought to be exempt.

Mr. Krauthoff—I think, Mr. Whipple, that if you will read the second and third paragraphs of what you are now approaching you will agree with me that it is not to the interest of the trust that you are administering to make that discussion a matter of public notoriety. I would like to have you look at that again before you read it.

Mr. Whipple—I will look at it, but there is too much secrecy with regard to the affairs of this Church. Mrs. Eddy intended that it should be a church of democracy in its principles, governed and managed by the people who are interested in the Church, and not by a hierarchy or theocracy; and the complaints are justified that there is too much of secrecy, and I do not believe that there is anything that—

The Master—Why could you not pass that for the present and consider further whether you would not both prefer to avoid having it become public?

Mr. Thompson—If any evidence is not going to be produced, Sir, we should like to have an opportunity of knowing what it is before it is suppressed. We are parties to this proceeding.

Mr. Whipple—The only possible—

The Master—If I understand you, that is what my suggestion tended to your doing—that you should both look it over and see whether you can agree.

Mr. Thompson—I understood Your Honor to refer only to Mr. Whipple and Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Krauthoff—Of course Mr. Thompson is entitled to see what it is, and there is no thought of suppressing anything, and there is no thought of secrecy about it.

The Master—I supposed that all of the counsel would prefer to read that over.

Mr. Krauthoff—The purposes of Mrs. Eddy as to her Church are set forth in the Church Manual, which, among other things, forbids a director to state what happened before the board.

Mr. Thompson—But it must be perfectly apparent to counsel that such injunctions as that can have no significance in a court of justice. I do not know whether this particular matter ought to be read or not.

The Master—You have not read that yourself?

Mr. Thompson—No. I would like to have a chance to read it myself. The general suggestion that there is too much secrecy in this Board of Directors I am heartily in sympathy with.

The Master—That is hardly the question before us at the present time.

Mr. Whipple—We do not care to press it at the moment, but I do not think that we should change our view that this ought to be read.

Mr. Streeter—Well, let us see it.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, here it is, beginning,

"At the interview on the 25th, Judge Smith stated," etc.

The Master—I by no means undertake to suggest whether it should be read or whether it should not be read.

I am only suggesting that, inasmuch as you not all had an opportunity to examine and consider it, perhaps it would be better to wait until you have all had an opportunity to examine it.

Mr. Whipple—I quite appreciated Your Honor's suggestion, which is, as I understand, to this effect, that if all the parties thought that it ought not to be read and become a public matter, in that case we might agree, but otherwise that it is a part of the evidence.

The Master—Quite so.

Mr. Krauthoff—I do not make it as a legal objection. I am making it only in the interests of the trust, in which we are all interested, after all.

The Master—I so understood you.

Mr. Streeter—What is the trouble with this, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—I cannot see the slightest trouble. My only difficulty in dealing with the matter is that I do not really quite understand why Mr. Krauthoff thinks that it is objectionable.

Mr. Thompson—Why, it has a bearing in a certain way upon another suit pending in court.

Mr. Streeter—I cannot see anything there, Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, if Your Honor please, our position about the matter is this: It is our desire to live in peace and harmony with all the religious denominations upon the face of the earth. We have no desire to engage in controversy with any of them.

Mr. Streeter—Do you refer to what is said there about the Roman Catholic Church?

Mr. Krauthoff—Of course, since Mr. Streeter has seen fit to make mention of the other religious denomination, I withdraw any objection I made to it.

Mr. Streeter—There is no use having any secrecy about this thing.

Mr. Krauthoff—The virtue of what I was trying to do has been destroyed over my objection, but I cannot help it.

The Master—I suppose you may continue.

Mr. Strawn—(Resuming the reading.)

"At the interview on the 25th, Judge Smith stated the criticism by the directors of the trustees in four particulars:

(1) That the directors claim the sole right to determine the acceptance of branch churches, and that the trustees should not assume that responsibility, citing as examples Nashville and the Seventh Church of New York.

So far as the trustees are advised, they have never claimed the right or authority to pass upon the acceptance of a church as a branch of the Mother Church, and have never attempted to assume the authority for so doing. The sole duty of the trustees in that behalf is to determine, as a condition precedent to the insertion of an advertisement of such branch church in the publications, the fact that such branch church has been properly organized and really exists as a branch church.

Referring to the Nashville incident, the facts as known to the trustees are as follows:

For some years it has been a matter of common knowledge among the directors and trustees that there were disturbing elements in First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Nashville, the claim being that there was a domination by certain of the members and that in order to become a member of the church it was necessary to be persona grata to those dominant members. In the course of events, other Christian Scientists in Nashville proceeded to form a society, and applied in the usual way for an advertisement in the Journal and they were accepted. The trustees have heard no criticism from the directors, or from anyone else, other than from First Church of Nashville, and from two members of that church whose names recently have been dropped from the Journal pursuant to a vote of the Board of Directors of The Mother Church.

As to the New York advertisement, we assume that Judge Smith intended to refer to the society advertised in New York, rather than to Seventh Church. The facts in this case are as follows:

On Aug. 31, 1915, an application for an advertisement in the Journal was received from a body of Christian Scientists calling themselves Christian Science Society of Bedford Park, New York City. Great care was exercised in inquiring into the situation causing this new society to be formed, the reason for such careful inquiry being that objection was made by several of the New York churches to a new society being formed. Finally, however, on May 23, 1916, after the society had proved that it could grow and be of use in New York City, the advertisement was accepted. The file in the possession of the trustees contains protests which warrant the care exercised before accepting the advertisement.

As in the case of the Nashville incident, the statement by Judge Smith at the meeting on the 25th was the first information the trustees have had of any criticism by the directors of the action of the trustees in the premises.

The second point of criticism stated by Judge Smith was that the questionnaire sent out by the trustees to practitioners, as a step precedent to the insertion of the cards of such practitioners in the Journal, is too inquisitive, and that the general attitude of the trustees is hostile to any practitioner who has been a Roman Catholic or who receives patients who have been Roman Catholics.

As to the questionnaire, the trustees have never been informed by the directors that they had any criticism to offer. Indeed, they have assumed the directors to be in entire accord with the purpose of the trustees to obtain all the information possible. The questionnaire, now in use, together with the preliminary letter to practitioners, the trustees have always understood the same, having been the subject of discussion in conference to be acceptable to the directors.

As to the attitude of the trustees respecting Roman Catholicism, they desire to record themselves as having no quarrel with the Roman Catholic Church or with its communicants. The experience of the trustees as well as that of the directors over a period of years has demonstrated the vigilance with which the Roman Catholic Church watches its members, irrespective of the question whether those members are active or indifferent. Therefore it is the policy of the trustees to be very careful not to precipitate upon one who was once a Roman Catholic, and who now desires to become a Christian Scientist, the antagonism and criticism of his church unless and until, by the most exhaustive inquiry, it appears that the applicant for Christian Science help is firm in his belief and is entirely willing to meet this criticism.

Thus it has been the policy of the trustees to be cautious in the insertion of advertisements of practitioners who have been Roman Catholics, or of those whose avowed intent and purpose is to take Roman Catholics as patients.

Referring to the two instances cited by Judge Smith, the trustees will be very glad to submit to the directors their files on the subject, and to receive and carefully consider any suggestions which the directors have to offer.

The third criticism mentioned was the anti-Roman Catholic editorial policy of the Monitor. Believing, as they do, in the very unusual ability and vision of the editor, Mr. Dixon, the trustees have not interfered with his editorial policy. Until the statement by Judge Smith, the trustees assumed that the directors were in entire sympathy with this policy.

The trustees will very much appreciate and gladly welcome helpful criticism of any editorials which may appear, and invite suggestions as to the general editorial policy, reserving to themselves, as they must in the performance of the duties imposed upon them, the right to determine whether the editorials published are consistent with the purposes of the Deed of Trust.

The fourth criticism was in regard to the publication of an editorial entitled "A Mad World," the point of this criticism being that the editorial was republished as an advertisement by churches throughout the country, and that this was very prejudicial to the Christian Science movement in that it created a feeling that Scientists defied the law.

The trustees have received a large number of letters commending them for the publication of this editorial. They have answered requests for republication of it by churches, giving their consent. We are advised that the trustees are unable to share the view of the directors that the editorial inspired lawlessness, or was in defiance of the laws of the land. Certainly, such was not the intent.

It has been the understanding of the trustees that one of the avowed purposes of Christian Science and of Christian Scientists is to bring to the minds of the people the baneful influences of fear, and they have never heard any criticism from the Board of Directors of the furtherance of this purpose.

"It has come to the knowledge of the trustees, from sources which they are disposed to recognize as reliable, that one of the directors recently visited New York City, and while there depreciated the work of the trustees, questioned their veracity as to the circulation of the Monitor, and suggested that the Board of Trustees was about to be removed. A copy of the letter detailing this episode has been delivered to the directors.

"The trustees sincerely hope that the report of the conduct of this director is not true: if it be true they regard it as very much to be deplored. Instead of disparaging the efforts of the trustees, we submit that it should be the desire of your clients and ours to exhaust all reasonable effort amicably to remove the differences existing between them.

"We reiterate what was stated to you at the interview—our earnest wish to cooperate with you to the end that our respective clients may work harmoniously and effectively in the discharge of the duties which they have severally assumed, and we welcome your suggestions.

"Very sincerely yours,

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 22, R.H.J.]

I should like to read the answer to that letter, under date of Feb. 6, 1919, and ask to have it marked Exhibit 23. This is a letter which was addressed to each of the three men who signed the letter to the counsel for the directors and it reads as follows:

"Boston, Mass.,
"Feb. 6, 1919."

Mr. Streeter—You did not tell us who wrote this letter.

Mr. Strawn—This letter is written by Messrs. Bates, Abbott, Smith, and Krauthoff, to Messrs. Hughes, Strawn, and Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—And perhaps it might be stated, although it bears internal evidence of the fact, that it was after an arrangement and accommodation had been reached, which is expressed in the letter. It had been reached as a result of interviews at which I think the trustees themselves were present.

Mr. Strawn—The conference was had in Boston on the first of February.

Mr. Bates—That is not correct.

Mr. Strawn—Neither the trustees nor directors were present, but the counsel for either side consulted their respective clients during the conference, and they returned to the conference and agreed upon the modus vivendi, as the result of conferences with their clients.

Mr. Whipple—And this expresses what was then reduced to writing as an agreement.

Mr. Bates—The paper speaks for itself.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Strawn (reading)—

"Chicago, Illinois.

"Dear Sir:

"Our conference of Feb. 1, 1919, rendered an answer in writing to your courteous communication of Jan. 27 unnecessary. For record we quote as follows the two memoranda then exchanged:

"It is understood by The Christian Science Board of Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, and the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, as follows:

"(1) The responsibility for all decisions in regard to recognizing branches and societies of The Mother Church rests with The Christian Science Board of Directors. To this end, all preliminary correspondence on the subject named shall be conducted by the directors and not by the trustees. When a branch church or society of The Mother Church has been recognized as such by the directors, upon proper application made in accordance with the rules of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the services of such a church or society may be advertised in The Christian Science Journal. The recognition by the directors of the church or society as a branch of The Mother Church shall be accepted by the trustees for the purposes of publication as conclusive evidence of the fact that such branch church or society has been properly organized as a branch church or society. The card of a church or society not so recognized by the directors shall not be inserted in the Journal. As a condition precedent to recognition or its continuance, churches or societies shall be required to insert and have continued a card in the Journal. (This work has heretofore been done by the trustees at the request of the Board of Directors and by their authority and not by the trustees under the Deed of Trust.)

"(2) The responsibility for the determination of the eligibility of practitioners and nurses who are members of The Mother Church, to be recognized as such rests with The Christian Science Board of Directors. To this end, all preliminary correspondence on the subject named shall be conducted by the directors and not by the trustees. When the directors have determined that a practitioner or nurse be recognized as such, upon proper application made in accordance with the rules of The Christian Science Publishing Society, such a practitioner or nurse may have a card inserted in the Journal. The determination by the directors of such recognition shall be accepted by the trustees as conclusive evidence of the eligibility of such practitioner or nurse to be advertised as such. The card of a practitioner or nurse not so recognized by the directors shall not be inserted in the Journal. (This work has heretofore been done by the trustees at the request of the Board of Directors and by their authority and not by the trustees under the Deed of Trust.)

"As to matters under discussion not covered by the memoranda, neither side waived its contentions, but it was understood that the two boards would resume their meetings with the hope that agreement regarding all points of difference might soon become possible.

"We are sending this same communication to Hon. Charles E. Hughes and Hon. Sherman L. Whipple.

"With cordial regards,

"Sincerely yours,

"JOHN L. BATES,

"LEON M. ABBOTT,

"CLIFFORD P. SMITH,

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 23, R.H.J.]

The next letter, if the master please, is under date of Feb. 3, 1919, and is a communication addressed by the corresponding secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees. I will ask to have it marked Exhibit 24.

Mr. Whipple—And the paper attached to it may be marked Exhibit 24a.

Mr. Strawn—And the inclosure thereto attached will be Exhibit 24a.

Mr. Thompson—The date of the other one was Feb. 6, was it not?

Mr. Strawn—Yes. I got them a little chronologically out of sequence on account of its being in answer to the letter of Jan. 27.

Mr. Whipple—This is a letter written after the accommodation had been reached, but before the terms of it had found expression in the letter. The memorandum of it had been drawn up. That is a correct statement, I think.

Mr. Strawn—This letter reads as follows:

"I am instructed by The Christian Science Board of Directors"—

Mr. Streeter—Who wrote it?

Mr. Whipple—It is from the Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Strawn (reading)—

"Fellow Scientists:

"As the only member of either board who has not previously attended a joint meeting such as this, I beg to register my often expressed approval of regular and frequent conferences between bodies having important interests in common. I hope I am voicing the desire of every one here that this meeting may be the first of a series whose good results will justify their permanent continuance.

"However widely men may differ in belief there is always hope of composing their differences amicably so long as they regularly come together 'of one accord in one place.' (Acts 2:1.) Family differences lead to family divisions only when the brethren refuse to heed the scriptural injunction 'come now, and let us reason together.' (Isa. 1:18.)

"Without reciting the events which led up to our gathering here today, I wish to say to the trustees, what of late I have frequently had occasion to say about them, namely, that I have at no time doubted their sincerity or honesty of purpose. Moreover, I am confidently expecting that before so very long there will be given out such evidences of undivided loyalty to the Manual and The Mother Church, that even the most incredulous will be convinced that certain disloyal declarations attributed to the trustees were unauthorized and will be specifically repudiated.

"This is not the hour for standing aloof and looking backward, but for joining hands and pushing forward. It matters not so much what was our position yesterday as what it is today.

It is not a time to discuss what we have done but to decide what we shall do. It is not the time for recrimination or suspicion, but for confidence and cooperation. It is a time to give and take lovingly as children of one Father and joint heirs of one estate.

"Fraternally yours,

(Signed) "WM. R. RATHVON."

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 24a. R. H. J.]

Q. Do you remember the occasion of that meeting? A. I do.

Q. It was a cordial and friendly meeting? A. Very.

Q. Have you the records here, the memoranda that were made in connection with that meeting of February 3d? Do you happen to have yours here, or a copy, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—The meeting of Feb. 3, 1919?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—No, the record is not here.

Mr. Whipple—Perhaps it would be as convenient a way as any for me to read it. Of course it is not an official record, and, in a technical sense, it could only be used to refresh a witness' recollection as to what happened.

Mr. Streeter—Does it purport to be a copy?

Mr. Whipple—It purports to be a record of the meeting.

Mr. Krauthoff—Trustees' records, do you mean?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—Is it an official record?

Mr. Whipple—So far as trustees under a deed can have an official record. I never understood the trustees had any record which was official in the sense that the records of public body are official; in point of fact, they did appoint a secretary, who transcribed as nearly as he could—and Mr. Eustace was the secretary—an accurate account of what happened. That is all that it is.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, why don't you—

Mr. Whipple—Boards of aldermen and public officials like that have a record which can be put in under the seal of the clerk, or something, but I do not understand that common, ordinary trustees under a trust deed can.

Mr. Krauthoff—May we see the document that you are about to offer?

Mr. Whipple—Well, I am not going to offer it. I was going to read it as a substitute for the testimony.

Mr. Krauthoff—Suppose you read it, and then we will make our remarks on it.

Mr. Whipple—Supposing you pass it along (passing a volume of records to Mr. Streeter). I like to keep you active!

Mr. Streeter—Yes, I would like to do something! (Passing to Mr. Krauthoff the volume referred to.)

Mr. Krauthoff—This is a record,

Mr. Whipple, as I understand it, made by the trustees at the time of the meeting?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, I so understand it—by the gentleman who was appointed to act as secretary.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is all right.

Mr. Whipple—It is a contemporaneous record of this meeting of harmony and love.

Mr. Bates—Not exactly contemporaneous, was it?

Mr. Krauthoff—It was written out, as I understand it, during the day, after the meeting.

Mr. Whipple—When was it written out, Mr. Ogden?

Mr. Ogden—Written up on the same day.

Mr. Whipple—Written up on the same day.

"Feb. 3, 1919.

"The meeting convened, at 9:45, with Messrs. Eustace, Rowlands, and Ogden present.

"The chairman telephoned to the chairman of the Board of Directors to ascertain if they would be ready to see the trustees at 10 o'clock, and learned that they had understood the hour was 11 o'clock.

"The business manager came to the meeting, and the hour was spent in reading articles from the Bible and from our Leader's writings, and in talking about God."

If I may interrupt myself, Mr. Watts is the business manager?

The Witness—Mr. Watts is the business manager.

Q. And Mr. Watts is also a lawyer and a member of the Suffolk bar? A. He is.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Whipple, will you be good enough to tell us who the gentleman was who wrote this record?

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Ogden. His name is signed to it. He was at that time secretary.

"Promptly at 11 o'clock Mr. Dickey telephoned that the directors would be glad to see the trustees, and the three trustees immediately went to the board room of The Mother Church.

"Meeting with Directors—Mr. Dickey, Mr. Merritt, and Mr. Rathvon were present, and Mr. Dickey explained that Mr. Neal had left on his vacation, but that he was heartily in accord with the meeting and with the views entertained by the three members present.

"Regarding Mr. Dittmore, he simply said that he was not present.

"Gratification—Mr. Dickey, as chairman of the meeting, expressed his gratification at the coming together of the two boards, which was seconded by Mr. Merritt. Mr. Rathvon, explaining that he was the newest member of the Board of Directors and had not hitherto met with the trustees, said he had prepared a brief letter last evening which he would like to read, which also expressed his gratification at the coming together of the boards.

"Pledge to Come Together—Each one of the trustees reciprocated in the harmony and cooperation expressed by the directors, and the six Christian Scientists present pledged themselves to come together and talk out between themselves any point of difference should this arise at any time in future.

"Statements of Difference Refuted—It was also agreed that should it come to any member of the Board of Directors or the Board of Trustees that there is or has been a difference existing between the boards, it should be affirmed that this was now absolutely a thing of the past, and that the boards are in full harmony and cooperation, and that this can be verified by addressing an inquiry to either board.

"Transfer of JI. Cards—The general question as to the turning over and handling of the applications for cards in the Journal was discussed, and the trustees volunteered to give all of the assistance possible in making this transfer.

"After a conference of an hour and a quarter the trustees returned to the Publishing House and continued their own meeting.

"The only thing that needs to be added as to the meeting which they held afterwards is:

"Telegrams were sent to Justice Hughes, Mr. Whipple and Mr. Strawn, telling them of the harmonious meeting this morning."

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Whipple, will you be good enough to let us see the balance of the record?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, certainly.

Mr. Streeter—Do you think that that is the only thing that ought to be read?

Mr. Whipple—I am perfectly willing that the rest of it should be read, but that was a meeting of the trustees alone, and not of the directors.

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Whipple consents, if Your Honor please, to our putting in at this stage of the proceedings a part of the record that may become in its entirety admissible later, namely, the account given by Mr. Dittmore in his diary, which he kept daily, of the condition in which he found some or all of these parties when he returned to the meeting. He described it as a condition of "mesmeric ecstasy."

Mr. Krauthoff—What is it that is being offered?

Mr. Thompson—I thought that it was rather plain when I read it.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to Mr. Dittmore's diary, and ask that it be stricken out. Counsel read it without submitting the document to us, and he gave us no opportunity to object to it.

Mr. Thompson—It may go out as to Mr. Krauthoff if he likes, but it is in for other purposes.

Mr. Krauthoff—It goes out as to the directors.

The Master—I do not quite understand how it is in.

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Whipple consents that it may go in, so far as his clients are concerned, sir; and if Mr. Krauthoff's clients object to it, so far as they are concerned, we will not press it at this stage of the proceeding.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to its being in the record at all.

Mr. Thompson—I do not see how you can keep it out if Mr. Whipple agrees.

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Whipple was examining a witness directly, and Mr. Thompson, without being in charge of the witness, and without making any offer of anything, injects a statement made by Mr. Dittemore in his diary. It has no place in this record whatever, and it should be entirely stricken out. I move that that whole incident be stricken out of the record.

Mr. Thompson—I see no occasion for doing it, so long as—

The Master—I do not hear you, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—I do not see any occasion for further controversy about the matter. It appears to be entirely agreeable to Mr. Whipple that this very beautiful description of the condition of his clients should remain in the record.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, we object very strenuously to that method—

The Master—We are trying here two cases together. Opposing counsel in one case agree that this may go in as a part of the record for the purposes of that case. If they agree, I do not see why I should strike it out of the record. You object, and say that it should not be in the record for the purposes of your case.

Mr. Krauthoff—My point is that that is not the way to try a lawsuit, and that it is unfair to us,—while a witness is being examined by Mr. Whipple, for other counsel to pick up a document that the witness was not testifying about, and simply read it into the record, without giving anybody a chance to see it or to make any objection. It was put in solely for the purpose of giving it the publicity which attends the reporting of these proceedings, and we think that it ought to go out of the record entirely.

Mr. Bates—Let me just direct Your Honor's attention to the fact that we are defendants in both suits. We have a right to raise an objection, and if the objection is sustained it goes out, and I understand that it goes out in both suits. If we were parties to one suit alone, it could not be stricken out, perhaps, but we are parties to both suits.

Mr. Thompson—There seems to be a certain solemnity about the remarks of counsel on the other side, particularly the counsel who first spoke. I have already said that if Mr. Krauthoff objects to this language, either in form or substance, it may be regarded as not applying to his clients; but inasmuch as Mr. Whipple consents that it may remain in, in the serious controversy that we have with his clients,

I see no reason for striking it from the record.

The Master—Let me see if I am wrong about the counsel. You are in both suits, you say?

Mr. Bates—We are counsel for defendants in both suits. Mr. Dittemore happens to be plaintiff in one suit, and he is represented by Mr. Thompson—

Mr. Thompson—And he is a defendant in another.

The Master—Are you not mistaken about that? Is he plaintiff in one?

Mr. Bates—Mr. Dittemore?

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Bates—He certainly is plaintiff in one.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Dittemore is one of the defendants in the suit which is now being tried before Your Honor, and Mr. Thompson and General Streeter represent him. The other five defendants are represented by Governor Bates and his associates.

The Master—In both suits?

Mr. Whipple—Well, I am not speaking of our suit, that is now being tried. The other suit is between Mr. Dittemore on the one hand and Governor Bates's clients on the other, and we are not in it; and this is being offered in the first suit.

I have offered a record of what transpired as between the trustees and those of the directors who were present; and then Mr. Thompson suggested to me that Mr. Dittemore, who was regarded as not present, came back a little later and made a memorandum of the condition in which the directors were found, which seemed to me to be pertinent upon the question of the great satisfaction and the clear agreement that the parties were in at that time; and therefore I assented, as affecting these plaintiffs in their controversy with Mr. Dittemore, that it should go in. I thought that it really helped our plaintiffs more than it did Mr. Dittemore. That is why I assented, and I do not see why it should not stand. It does not affect Governor Bates or his clients, unless they assent to it, because I am in accord with them that it was put in out of order, as far as proof was concerned as affecting their defendants.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, it may be a trifling incident to speak of at this time—

The Master—Now, Mr. Krauthoff, this is the action that I think that I will take about this piece of evidence, if we may call it such. It is, in any case, out of order. I think that I shall strike it out for the present, without prejudice to the right of anybody interested to offer it again.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Thompson—That is entirely satisfactory to me, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Streeter—Nobody objects to Your Honor's ruling.

Q. Let me hand you this paper, stamped "Mr. Adam H. Dickey," and purporting to be a copy of a letter from Judge Smith to The Christian Science Board of Directors under date of Feb. 5, 1919 (passing a document to the witness). How did that come into your possession? A. I think this was handed to me to read.

Q. By whom? A. By Mr. Dickey, I think.

Q. Well, what I desire to ask now is whether it was handed to you under any seal of confidence, or anything of that sort, which makes it improper for me to offer it in evidence? A. I prefer to ask Mr. Dickey if it may be given.

Q. Well, was there at the time anything suggested indicating that it was in confidence, or that the paper was to be returned, or anything of that sort, or that you were not to use it? A. I don't remember anything of that kind.

Q. Well, will you let me take it a moment? I would like to hand it to the counsel, and I will ask you to ask Mr. Dickey about it—there seems to be some sort of a suggestion that that was a confidential communication, and I do not want to use it in any way that does not accord with the pledge or understanding with which it was handed over.

[The document referred to is passed to Mr. Bates.]

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, we are so near adjournment that I will ask if we may not wait until the morning as to this letter?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, I am entirely willing, but I want to ask Mr. Eustace a question.

Q. Were you asked, after this harmonious meeting which has been referred to, in February—were you at any time asked to repudiate the advice which your counsel had given you, as contained in the letter which has been read, and to take action contrary to it? A. Frequently.

Q. Well, how soon after that harmonious meeting? A. The following meeting that we had, whenever that was.

Q. Well, were you, by the 5th of February? A. The proposal, I think, was tentatively submitted—

Q. On the 5th of February? A. That would be the—

Q. That would be within 48 hours of the time your meeting had— A. Either that or the next day, I think.

Q. Yes; that is, the suggestion that you should not— A. That we should do something to repudiate it.

Q. To repudiate the advice of counsel. Was this letter from Judge Smith which has been referred to shown to you in that connection? A. I think it was.

Mr. Streeter—Well, if Your Honor please, with reference to this letter, if we grasp what it is, it seems to be a draft of an official letter which was made by the board to be sent to the trustees, and then was given by Dickey to Eustace—

Mr. Whipple—No. Let me explain what it was.

Mr. Streeter—Is that right?

Mr. Whipple—No.

Mr. Streeter—Well, at any rate, being a letter of the board, we want to see it.

Mr. Whipple—It is not a letter of the board. Let me explain what it is. I thought I did. It is a letter from Judge Smith, the counsel of the board, to the Board of Directors, and he took a copy of it, and had a conversation with Mr. Eustace, in which the suggestion was made that Mr. Eustace, of the Board of Trustees, should repudiate their counsel's advice which they had received, and take action contrary to it; and in that connection he showed him Mr. Smith's letter, which had been sent to the board, which dealt with that subject. Now I do not care anything about the particular terms of the letter. The only thing that we desire to establish, and that we do establish by this testimony, is how promptly the trustees, after this agreement had been made, were invited to repudiate their position, and how quickly the old demands of the directors were again presented. Having done that, I think that probably there is no object in putting in the letter itself, but we will suspend on that until tomorrow morning.

Q. Now, I will direct attention to the record of a meeting of the Board of Trustees, dated Feb. 10, 1919, and I will ask you whether at that time you had a joint meeting with the Board of Directors? A. We did.

Mr. Whipple—I should like to read that record of the joint meeting as I did the other.

Q. You would testify that the thing occurred which is recorded here, would you not? A. I will.

Mr. Whipple—Well, now, as a short way of putting it in, I would like to read this.

Mr. Krauthoff—You may read it.

Mr. Whipple (reading)—

"February 10, 1919. The trustees met at 11:30 a. m. on Monday, February 10, with all members present, and opened the meeting with the usual prayer.

"Meeting with directors. At noon the trustees went over for their regular Monday conference with the directors. All members of the Board of Directors were present except Mr. Neal, who is still away on his vacation.

"Mr. Rathvon read a letter which he had prepared, which set forth the advisability of having a definite signed agreement as to what the directors felt to be the present adjustment between the boards, and then submitted to the trustees the following agreement, which it was proposed be signed by the members of the boards of directors and trustees:

"It is mutually understood by The Christian Science Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society that the former board, as in relation to the latter board, has final authority in regard to the editorial policy of the official organs of The Mother Church, and final authority in regard to all matters affecting the policy of The Mother Church or the cause of Christian Science."

Was that substantially different from what they had been claiming for several months?

The Witness—It was the same.

Q. The same thing? A. The same thing.

Q. And the thing that you had settled? A. The thing that we had supposed we had settled, so that we could work it out.

Q. And in respect of which you had made several concessions and given up many duties that you had performed before, or some duties? A. Yes, a number of them.

Mr. Whipple (resuming the reading)—

Proposed Agreement—"Mr. Rowlands, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said that, while he spoke as an individual, he felt it expressed the unanimous attitude of the Board of Trustees that it would not be our sense of demonstration to sign any such agreement, inasmuch as it would not leave the question of editorial policy open for demonstration on the part of the editors, and that this, and the other question in the proposed agreement, were those which it had been agreed to leave open for demonstration on the part of the two boards. Then followed a general discussion of this subject for an hour or more, the directors maintaining that this agreement was essential before any further steps could be taken in our joint work, and the trustees maintaining that, to them, such a course would not be in accord with scientific demonstration. It was finally agreed to leave the question open for further demonstration and to meet again on Wednesday noon of this week."

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Whipple, have you the letter of Mr. Rathvon that was read at that meeting of Feb. 10?

Mr. Whipple—No, I haven't.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have a copy, if you wish to use it.

Mr. Whipple—I hardly think that is pertinent to anything that I have in mind. What I want to show is that the same old demand was made. You haven't read through this copy of Mr. Smith's letter so you want to deal with it tonight, have you?

Mr. Krauthoff—You may read it in evidence, Mr. Whipple.

Q. Mr. Smith was present as one of the counsel in the conference of counsel for the purpose of settling? A. I understood so.

Mr. Whipple—I think that has all appeared so far. We will now put in this letter of Feb. 5, which is a copy of a letter from Judge Smith to The Christian Science Board of Directors. [To Mr. Krauthoff.] Will you let me take the one I handed over to you? I would like to put that in, because that shows its source. I will have this marked as soon as I have finished reading. It has a stamp on the top showing it was Mr. Dickey, I take it. "Copy of a letter from Judge Clifford P. Smith."

[The letter is read by Mr. Whipple.]

Q. Was Mr. Smith present at this meeting of reconciliation and attempt to get on together? A. He was not.

Q. Did Mr. Dickey, in talking with you about this proposition to start this controversy all over again, refer to anyone else except Mr. Smith as the man starting it?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that question, if Your Honor please, because there is no evidence that anything of the kind happened.

Mr. Whipple—What kind happened? Mr. Krauthoff—What you have assumed in your question.

Mr. Whipple—That letter shows it. Mr. Krauthoff—We object to the question.

Mr. Whipple—Opening the whole controversy.

Q. Did he refer to anyone else as having been dissatisfied with the settling, and reopening the controversy? A. Mr. Dickey talked to me—

Q. Well, if I may trouble you to answer that. Did he refer to anyone else as desiring to reopen the controversy? A. I think not.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that question. There is no intimation here of reopening the controversy.

Mr. Whipple—Well, except so far as this letter shows it. I think that is as plain as the nose on a man's face, even if it wasn't a very big one.

Mr. Krauthoff—The controversy was in process of adjustment. It had not been closed at all.

Mr. Whipple—Then you agree with Judge Smith that their ratification meeting or jollification meeting was premature?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, it wasn't.

Mr. Whipple—And that his condition of mental ecstasy—

Mr. Krauthoff—It was a step in the direction of an ultimate adjustment which will some day be reached.

Mr. Whipple—Well, this was a trig in the ultimate adjustment, if that step had been made. I understood the question was answered and it was before Your Honor whether the answer should be struck out.

Mr. Krauthoff—I didn't hear the answer.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, yes, it was answered. [To the stenographer.] Will you read the answer?

[The answer is read: "I think not."]

Mr. Whipple—Read the question and the answer.

[The last question and answer are read.]

Mr. Whipple—I said I would hand that to you to be marked.

The Court—You don't ask me to strike that out, do you, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—I make no point about it.

[The letter dated Feb. 5, 1919, from Judge Clifford P. Smith to the Christian Science Board of Directors is marked Exhibit 25, W. H. M., and is copied into the record as follows:

[Exhibit 25.]

COPY

of a letter from Judge Clifford P. Smith.

Feb. 5, 1919.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
105 Falmouth Street,
Boston, Mass.

"Dear Friends:

"This letter collects certain facts which should be brought together in one statement, for record and for any use that may need to be made of them. Sending a copy of this letter to Messrs. Eustace, Ogden and Rowlands, would make sure that they are aware of all of the facts it contains.

"In a letter from The Christian Science Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society dated Dec. 28, 1918, the directors said, 'For the trustees to set up the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898, as creating a trust not subject to the Church by-laws adopted since that date, or as creating a trust not subject to the present government of The Mother Church, would be in effect an attack on the by-laws and government of The Mother Church. If the trustees continue to insist on any such contention, it will constitute a most threatening menace to the welfare of the Christian Science movement. In such an exigency the advice and warning given by Mrs. Eddy in the letter to the Board of Directors published in the Sentinel of Aug. 22, 1914, is pertinent for all persons concerned.' The directors refer especially to the following sentences: 'The present and future prosperity of the cause of Christian Science is largely due to the by-laws and government of "The First Church of Christ, Scientist," in Boston. None but myself can know, as I know, the importance of the combined sentiment of this Church remaining steadfast in supporting its present by-laws.'

"In reply to this part of the directors' letter, the trustees in their letter of Dec. 31, 1918, said, 'It goes without saying that the trustees absolutely repudiate the charges the Board of Directors have apparently preferred against the Board of Trustees in this second paragraph, and further wish to state that they feel that the directors do not fully realize the seriousness of the statements they have made.'

"In a letter dated Jan. 27, 1919, from Messrs. Hughes, Strawn, and Whipple as counsel for the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, to Messrs. Bates, Smith, Abbott, and Krauthoff as counsel for The Christian Science Board of Directors, the former counsel said, 'If there be any conflict between the terms of the deed (the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898) and the language of the Church Manual, the legal and moral obligation of the trustees compels them to respond to and obey the mandates of the deed.' Again in the same letter the same counsel said, 'They (the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society) expressly deny any right or authority in the directors to demand or request such resignation (the resignation of said trustees).'

"In the conference between Messrs. Hughes, Strawn, and Whipple, as counsel for the trustees, and Messrs. Bates, Smith, Abbott, and Krauthoff, as counsel for the directors, held on Feb. 1, 1919, the counsel for the trustees said that the by-laws of The Mother Church are not obligatory on the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society in their capacity as trustees. This statement was made and repeated by Judge Hughes in his summing up of the trustees' position, and it was made without dissent from the other counsel for the trustees.

"By these written and oral statements the counsel for the trustees plainly did all that, and even more than, the directors warned against in their letter of Dec. 28, 1918, as quoted above.

"It is barely possible that the foregoing written and oral statements were made by their counsel without the knowledge or approval of Messrs. Eustace, Ogden, and Rowlands, but any question on this point can be removed by sending them a copy of this letter. If they, with such knowledge or notice, do not disavow the written and oral statements made for them by their counsel, as stated in this letter, and declare their absolute and unqualified acceptance of the present by-laws of The Mother Church, then their repudiation thereof will be clear beyond question. Of course, they cannot accept as Christian Scientists and repudiate as trustees. The Deed of Trust plainly provides that the trustees must be loyal, faithful, and consistent Christian Scientists in order to become or continue as trustees.

"Certain additional facts will make entirely clear the full meaning and effect of the denial quoted above from the letter written by Messrs. Hughes, Strawn, and Whipple; that is, 'They (Messrs. Eustace, Ogden, and Rowlands) expressly deny any right or authority in the directors to demand or request such resignation (the resignation of said trustees).' In the first place, that denial repudiates Article XXV, Sec. 3, of our Church Manual; which provides that 'The Christian Science Board of Directors shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship, for such reasons as to the Board may seem expedient.' In the second place, that denial repudiates Art. XXV, Sec. 5, of our Church Manual; which provides that 'A person who is not accepted by the Pastor Emeritus and the Christian Science Board of Directors as suitable, shall in no manner be connected with . . . The Christian Science Publishing Society.'

"It is to be observed, also, that the denial in question applies not only to the by-laws of The Mother Church but to the following provision in the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898: 'The First Members together with the directors of said Church shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship, for such reasons as to them may seem expedient.' It is true that the by-laws of The Mother Church providing for First Members or Executive Members have been repealed. Nevertheless it is also true that the by-laws of The Mother Church, proposed and approved by our Leader, have fully covered this point. On the 10th of January, 1901, as proposed by her, the First Members of The Mother Church adopted the following by-law: 'The business of The Mother Church hitherto transacted by the First Members shall be done by its Christian Science Board of Directors.' This provision was continued as a by-law of The Mother Church until the adoption, as proposed by Mrs. Eddy, of the following provision which is now a part of Art. I, Sec. 6: 'The business of The Mother Church shall be transacted by its Christian Science Board of Directors.' For these reasons, the denial made by Messrs. Hughes, Strawn, and Whipple for Messrs. Eustace, Ogden, and Rowlands as quoted above, not only repudiates Art. XXV, Secs. 3 and 5, of our Church by-laws, but also repudiates a clause of the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898, and the two by-laws of The Mother Church which transferred the authority of its First Members to its directors.

"Moreover, the denial in question virtually defies the law of Massachusetts. It is possible that Messrs. Hughes, Strawn, and Whipple were not fully informed on this point, and therefore did not fully advise their clients. The following citations, however, should make the law of Massachusetts clear to the trustees, either with or without the aid of counsel.

"In the case of Gould v. Mather, decided in 1870, and reported 104 Massachusetts Reports 283, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts decided a case which was thus stated in the official syllabus: 'A testator, in his will, named an executrix and an executor, and gave them all his estate in trust to accumulate for his children for 10 years, paying meanwhile the expenses of their support out of the income and investing the balance thereof. In a separate clause he provided that "if it shall be found necessary or expedient to dispose of any of my real property for the benefit of the estate, in the judgment of my executrix and executor, I hereby give them full power to do so and invest the sums so received for the benefit of my children." Held, that this power was given to the executrix and executor as an incident of their office, and upon the resignation of one of them the other might exercise it singly.'

"In the case of Coffin v. Atty. Gen. decided Jan. 2, 1919, and not yet officially reported, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts held that where a power coupled with an interest was given to two persons jointly, it could be exercised by one of them after the other's death. In that case, a husband and father had made a will by which he gave his wife and daughter a certain interest in his estate and gave them power to designate the charities which should receive the residue of his estate. His words were: 'Shall be devoted to missions and like good objects as they may think best, and the principal shall go finally to the same or similar objects as my wife and daughter shall decide, knowing as they do my purpose.' The daughter having died, it was contended that this power had failed, but the Court said, 'The power conferred on his wife and daughter as trustees to designate charities, having been coupled with an interest, could be rightfully exercised by the widow after her daughter's death.'

"These two decisions, and others like them which can be cited, are conclusive that the power of removal given by Mrs. Eddy to the First Members and the directors of The Mother Church, being given to them as officers thereof and being coupled with the interest of The Mother Church in the net profits of The Christian Science Publishing Society and in the purpose of its business, has not failed, but can be exercised by The Christian Science Board of Directors, even as a power conferred through the Trust Deed considered by itself.

"Messrs. Hughes, Strawn, and Whipple are undoubtedly lawyers of great ability. Yet it is within the common knowledge of judges and lawyers that the most eminent counsel may not be so well prepared in a particular case as other counsel who have a more intimate or appreciative knowledge of the salient facts and have made a more careful or extended search for precedents. Moreover, as Mrs. Eddy has said on page 149 of Miscellany, 'Lawyers may know too much of human law to have a clear perception of divine justice.'

"It can be safely said, I confidently assert, that Mrs. Eddy's plan for an institution representing Christian Science, shown by our Church Manual, can be carried out consistently with the law of Massachusetts. If the present trustees of our Publishing Society do not now see how this can be done, it is, I submit, their duty and privilege as Christian Scientists to peaceably resign; and allow the appointment of other trustees who are willing and feel able to obey our Church By-Laws.

"If there should be a meeting between the directors and the trustees for the consideration of this subject, I would recommend the following words by Mrs. Eddy as applicable to that occasion: 'You have convened only to convince yourselves of this grand verity: namely, the unity in Christian Science. Cherish steadfastly this fact.

Adhere to the teachings of the Bible, Science and Health, and our Manual, and you will obey the law and gospel.' (Miscellany, page 251.)

"Cordially and sincerely yours, (Signed) "CLIFFORD P. SMITH.
"CPS—HM."

Mr. Whipple—We have already read the meeting of the 10th, the record of the meeting, and Your Honor will bear in mind what Mr. Rathvon wanted the trustees to agree to at that meeting. I am referring to it because this letter I didn't put in in order, but I now put it in, and I refer to the meeting of the trustees, or a joint meeting, on the 10th. Your Honor remembers that which I read a moment ago, the request that they agree as to the supreme authority of the directors.

Mr. Krauthoff—Are you offering the letter of Mr. Rathvon of Feb. 10, 1919, to the two boards?

Mr. Whipple—No, I have not yet, Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, I thought you were.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no. I offered the memorandum. I have offered and read some time ago the record of the meeting between the trustees and the directors, in which Mr. Rathvon made his request that the trustees do what their counsel advised them, they were not under obligation—

Mr. Krauthoff—My information was the request was in writing and you had a copy of it. I am interested in knowing whether you are offering the writing.

Mr. Whipple—Now, had we better suspend? Shall we suspend at this point and come in tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock?

The Master—Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, then.

[At 4:30 p. m. the hearing is adjourned to 10 o'clock a. m., Thursday, June 11, 1919.]

June 12, 1919

THIRD DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room,
Boston, Massachusetts,

June 12, 1919, 10 a. m.

Mr. Whipple—We are ready to proceed, if we have Your Honor's permission.

The Master—You may proceed.

Mr. Whipple—We will offer next in chronological order of the correspondence which declares the basis and reason for the attempted removal of Mr. Rowlands a letter of Feb. 24, 1919, from the directors to the trustees.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Feb. 24, 1919.

"Board of Trustees of

"The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by The Christian Science Board of Directors to send you the following letter and to request your earnest consideration thereof:

"From time to time since the meeting between the trustees and the directors on Sept. 11, 1918, the directors have considered and reconsidered every aspect of their relations with the trustees, and have done this for the purpose of understanding and maintaining the relations shown by the final expressions of our Leader's intention. At all times, the directors have held the conviction that her final intention regarding the relations between these two boards could be carried out consistently with every moral, legal, or spiritual obligation. It was to be expected that the trustees would have the same conviction, and that concurrence on this point would furnish a basis on which full accord would become possible. Instead of concurring on this basis, the trustees have employed counsel to act for them, who have set up the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898, as superior to the subsequent expressions of our Leader's intention in our Church Manual, and as establishing a trust existing by itself apart from The Mother Church. Manifestly, such contentions, not yet disavowed by the trustees, constitute a repudiation of our Church Manual and a grave danger to The Mother Church.

"It seems to the directors that another grave danger is presented by the trustees themselves in what they have referred to as their 'metaphysical interpretation' of our Church By-Laws. For instance, in their letter of Sept. 30, 1918, the trustees construed Mrs. Eddy's words, 'and it shall be the duty of the Directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times' (Art. VIII, Sec. 14) to mean that 'it is the duty of the Board of Directors to call attention at once to any failure on the part of the trustees to have the periodicals well edited and kept abreast of the times.' Such an interpretation would practically wipe out Mrs. Eddy's words and allow to The Christian Science Board of Directors only such a duty as is conferred on 'any member of this Church' in a sentence which extends from the bottom of page 28 to the top of page 29 of the Manual. According to the dictionaries, the words 'see that' as used in the by-law just quoted call for supervision and denote superior authority.

"It is to be observed, also, that the trustees' interpretation would take what Mrs. Eddy has described as 'the periodicals which are organs of this Church' away from The Mother Church and make them only organs of The Christian Science Publishing Society. It would virtually compel The Mother Church to have no periodicals as its organs, or compel it to start other periodicals for that purpose. The word 'organ' as used in this by-law means 'a medium of communication between one person or body and another; as . . . a newspaper is the organ of its editor, or of a party, sect, etc.' (Webster's New International Dictionary.) Therefore it must be Mrs. Eddy's intention that the periodicals issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society shall be, not merely mediums of communication between publisher and readers, but mediums of communication between The Mother Church and its members and other readers.

"The directors are obliged to remember, also, that Art. VIII, Sec. 14, puts them under a special and direct obligation to the members of The Mother Church. In this by-law 'the privilege and duty of every member, who can afford it, to subscribe for the periodicals which are the organs of this Church' is coupled with 'the duty of the Directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times.' In effect the privilege and duty thus conferred upon the members is accompanied by the condition and assurance that the directors have and will perform the duty thus conferred upon them. The duty thus conferred upon the directors would not be worth mentioning if it amounted to nothing more than the privilege of submitting criticisms to the trustees. This could be done by any member, by any subscriber, or even by any reader. The duty stated in the by-law must mean that the organs of The Mother Church for which the members should subscribe are under the jurisdiction of its directors, who can and will give all necessary directions regarding their contents.

"Again, in the letter from counsel for the trustees to counsel for the directors dated Jan. 27, 1919, the second part of Art. VIII, Sec. 14, was construed or rejected as follows: 'The trustees will very much appreciate and gladly welcome helpful criticism of any editorials which may appear, and invite suggestions as to the general editorial policy, reserving to themselves, as they must in the performance of the duties imposed upon them, the right to determine whether the editorials published are consistent with the purposes of the Deed of Trust.' This statement by counsel for the trustees plainly disregards our Church Manual; nevertheless the directors feel that the foregoing quotation from the trustees' letter of Sept. 30, 1918, is no less contrary to the Manual, and that the trustees' letter is more dangerous because it purports to be an interpretation, not a simple rejection.

"Again, several persons, including counsel for the trustees, have stated that the trustees have construed Mrs. Eddy's words, 'The Christian Science Board of Directors shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship, for such reasons as to the Board may seem expedient' (Art. XXV, Sec. 3), to mean that if a vacancy occurs without action by the directors, then the directors can say it has occurred. Such an interpretation would not only ignore the clause,

'for such reasons as to the Board may seem expedient,' but, it would accuse Mrs. Eddy of neglecting a necessary safeguard while providing for a solemn and useless farce.

"Counsel for the directors have mentioned the following decision by the United States Supreme Court. A will authorized two trustees to remove the third one 'for good and sufficient cause.' The Court held that this provision conferred on the two trustees, not only the power of removal, but the power to determine when there was good and sufficient cause for removal. This case is May v. May, 167 U. S. 310.

"For these reasons the directors again invite the trustees to sign the paper which was proposed for signature on the 10th of this month, and of which another copy will be attached to this letter. Additional reasons are furnished by the following quotations from the letter written on Feb. 15, 1916, by the then trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society to The Christian Science Board of Directors.

"It is our duty to hold and manage the business which Mrs. Eddy made a gift to her Church, and The Christian Science Board of Directors is the responsible authority of this Church.'

"In defining the financial situation in regard to the church edifice the Manual says: 'The Christian Science Board of Directors owns the church edifices, with the land whereon they stand, legally, and the church members own the aforesaid premises and buildings, beneficially.' We believe the situation to be similar in regard to the business, in that, according to the Deed of Trust, the Board of Trustees holds the property 'legally' and The Mother Church owns the business 'beneficially.'

"The directors have, by the rules, now given in the Manual, taken the place of the First Members (or Executive Members) and exercise the rights which they formerly had. The Christian Science Board of Directors is therefore the responsible authority in direction of the affairs of The Mother Church, and the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society being a gift to the Church, the Board of Trustees in carrying out their well-defined duties according to the Deed of Trust and the Manual, are working under the authority of The Mother Church.'

"Finally, the directors invite the trustees to consider whether it is right for them to accept election to an office which for 20 years had a well-defined character, and then hold it in spite of a request to resign, after having tried to convert it into an office of a different character. Would not most honorable men, if they formed the opinion that an office to which they had been elected should be enlarged and given a different character, resign rather than insist on taking greater and different authority? The directors feel that this would be the course pursued by most Christian Scientists if they unexpectedly found themselves in such a situation. What the directors, especially desire, however, is some clear and conclusive evidence that the trustees do not intend to separate The Christian Science Publishing Society from The Mother Church but intend to fully maintain the unity shown by our Church Manual. The paper attached to this letter is submitted for signature as a suitable expression of that institution. Possibly some other paper could be prepared that would be equally suitable; but the directors feel that it should be an adequate assurance regarding the dangers which have been presented by the trustees and their counsel.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) CHAS. E. JARVIS,

"Corresponding Secretary to The Christian Science Board of Directors.

"CEJ—C

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 26. R. H. J.]

Q. Before reading the paper attached, I will ask you, Mr. Eustace, if you had ever in any form of words, directly or indirectly, expressed an intention, or to your knowledge had any of the trustees expressed any intention of separating The Christian Science Publishing Society from The Mother Church? A. Absolutely never.

Q. Or to do anything else except to work under the Deed of Trust in unity with the Board of Directors? A. That is all.

Q. And have you ever, at any time, either directly or indirectly, or has either of the other trustees, to your knowledge, expressed an intention not to follow Mrs. Eddy's wishes as expressed in an authoritative form? A. Never.

Q. Or to disregard—

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, we object to the question which says "in an authoritative form" as calling for a conclusion. That is the question in this case, what the authoritative form is—the Deed of Trust on the one hand, or the Deed of Trust and the Manual on the other hand?

The Master—I suppose that we all understand that, and his answer will be given subject to that understanding.

Mr. Krauthoff—I do not understand it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that is unfortunate, but I think that every one else does, Mr. Krauthoff. That is the way I understand it.

Mr. Krauthoff—We will inquire more fully.

Mr. Whipple—I take it that the answer may stand. I will now read, if Your Honor please, the paper which is attached, to which, again, the directors requested the trustees' signatures.

Mr. Streeter—Is this under date of Feb. 24, 1919?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, one of the last communications prior to the notice of dismissal, so-called.

Boston, Feb. [blank], 1919.
"It is mutually understood by The Christian Science Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society that the former board, as in relation to the latter board, has final authority in regard to the editorial policy of the official organs of The Mother Church, and final authority in regard to all matters affecting the policy of The Mother Church or the cause of Christian Science.

"In witness whereof this memorandum is signed by the respective members of said boards as follows:"

[The paper of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 26a. R. H. J.]

Q. Did you understand that to be in substantially the same form that they had requested your submission to their authority from the very beginning? A. Substantially so, yes.

Q. And raising again the question which had been settled by the agreement? A. Raising the entire question.

Mr. Whipple—I did not hand Your Honor a copy. I will hand you the original if you would like it.

The Master—I think I have it, haven't I, in the printed record?

Mr. Whipple—I think not.

The Master—There is a letter of Feb. 24, 1919.

Mr. Whipple—Then I am wrong about it. No, this letter is not in, this letter is not set forth in the bill.

The Master—Oh, no; but I have the Bill in Equity and the answer in each case.

Mr. Whipple—I see. It is set up in the answer.

The Master—On page 38 of the record in Eustace v. Dickey appears to be printed the letter you have just read of Feb. 24, 1919.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor, I had overlooked that.

Mr. Streeter—What page was that on?

The Master—Page 38.

Q. I take it, Mr. Eustace, that the Board of Trustees did not assent to or sign that paper? A. They did not.

Q. They refused, as they had always refused? A. Always.

Mr. Whipple—There is, if Your Honor please, a letter which was sent to the trustees on Feb. 26, wherein the directors tried out an experiment; that is, they gave certain directions which they said they wanted carried out, which the trustees refused to carry out. I do not know whether it is necessary to put the letter itself in. (To Mr. Krauthoff) Do you want it in?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to the statement that the directors tried out an experiment.

The Master—It is not evidence.

Mr. Krauthoff—No; it is Mr. Whipple's statement.

Mr. Whipple—That is right.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is not evidence.

Mr. Whipple—Do you want the letter put in?

Mr. Krauthoff—If you care to offer it you may.

Mr. Whipple—I do not care to offer it, although I have offered to do it as what I supposed is a part of your case. I see no reason for offering it.

Q. I will ask you whether in point of fact the directors did thereafter attempt to give certain directions as to how your periodicals should be published or dealt with, which you declined to carry out? A. They did.

Mr. Whipple (to Mr. Rowlands)—Where is the so-called notice of dismissal? Have you the so-called notice of dismissal? It is along about March 17. (Paper produced.) I will offer now the so-called notice of dismissal.

Q. I will ask you to look at it and see if you remember it. (Handing paper to witness.) A. I do.

Q. Was that paper read at a joint meeting of the directors and trustees?

The Master—You might give us the date.

Mr. Whipple—It is not dated, but there is a memorandum on it saying it was adopted by the directors March 17 and read to the trustees at a conference at noon on the same day.

Q. Does that accord with your memory? A. That is a fact; it does.

Mr. Whipple—I will read this.

[The "Notice of Dismissal" of Mr. Rowlands is marked Exhibit 27.]

Mr. Whipple reads the following (Exhibit 27):

"The following resolution is offered for adoption by The Christian Science Board of Directors, the Board of Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and the governing board of the Christian Science denomination. It is offered for adoption in the exercise of the rights and powers vested in this Church and in this board by the law of Massachusetts, by the Deed of Trust dated Jan. 25, 1898, through which Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, and the Leader of the Christian Science movement, constituted the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, by the By-Laws of this Church, and by the usage of the Christian Science denomination."

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, that appears in our Bill in Equity, pages 26, 27, 28, and part of 29.

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Whipple continues reading, as follows:

"Whereas, Mr. Lamont Rowlands, who has been acting as a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society under said Deed of Trust and under Article XXV of the By-Laws of this Church, was put into said position for the reason, among other reasons, that he was a member of this Church who had subscribed to its By-Laws and was regarded as obedient to its By-Laws and government; and

"Whereas, Mrs. Eddy has declared that "The present and future prosperity of the cause of Christian Science is largely due to the By-Laws and government of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston (Christian Science Sentinel, Vol. XVI, page 1010); and

"Whereas, Mrs. Eddy has declared that Law constitutes government, and disobedience to the laws of The Mother Church must ultimate in annulling its Tenets and By-Laws. Without a proper system of government and form of action, nations, individuals, and religion are unprotected; hence the necessity of this By-Law and the warning of Holy Writ: "That servant, which knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes" (Church Manual, page 28); and

"Whereas, the tenets referred to in the foregoing quotation are the important points, or religious tenets, of Christian Science (Science and Health, page 497), and the system of government and form of action referred to in the foregoing quotation is that which is shown by the By-Laws of this Church; and

"Whereas, it has become evident that Mr. Rowlands does not understand or recognize the importance and necessity of promoting the interests of Christian Science by following the directions given by Mrs. Eddy in our Church By-Laws; and

"Whereas, Mr. Rowlands has shown a disposition to invent or adopt interpretations of our Church By-Laws that pervert their meaning and annul their effect; and

"Whereas, since Mr. Rowlands began to act as a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society, he and the other trustees thereof have tried to change the relation which had always theretofore existed between The Christian Science Publishing Society and its Board of Trustees on the one hand and The Mother Church and its proper officers on the other hand, and he in particular has tried to convert and enlarge said trusteeship into an office or function of a new and different character; and

"Whereas, Mr. Rowlands and other persons acting with him, including several eminent lawyers wastefully employed, have set up said Deed of Trust against the By-Laws and government of The Mother Church, and have threatened this board with litigation if this board exercise its right and power to remove any of said trustees; and

"Whereas, it has become evident that Mr. Rowlands has allowed a sense of self-interest to interfere with the interests of Christian Science; that he has become self-assertive, contentious, and disposed to make trouble without regard to consequences; and that he is, for these reasons and the foregoing reasons and other reasons, not suitable for connection with The Christian Science Publishing Society as a trustee thereof; and

"Whereas, Mr. Rowlands evidently has other interests which prevent him from giving sufficient time and attention to the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society;

"Now, therefore, it is resolved by The Christian Science Board of Directors, the Board of Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and the governing board of the Christian Science denomination, in the exercise of the rights and powers above mentioned, that Mr. Rowlands is no longer accepted by this board as suitable for connection with The Christian Science Publishing Society as a trustee thereof; that he be and hereby is removed from the Board of Trustees of said society; and that the trusteeship in connection with said society heretofore held or claimed by him be and hereby is declared vacant."

Q. Now, you had been associated with Mr. Rowlands as a trustee for several years, had you? A. I have.

Q. First let me ask you, do you know of any paper wherein these defendant gentlemen are termed the governing board of the Christian Science denomination? A. I do not.

Q. It appears by a Deed of Trust that is put in that they are named The Christian Science Board of Directors. Do you know of any paper creating any other title for them than that? A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether there is a paper, either in the Manual or otherwise, in which they are called the Board of Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston? A. No, I do not remember any.

Q. But they are termed in the Deed of Trust under which they hold the property, a Deed of Trust signed by Mrs. Eddy herself, The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. They are termed The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Q. Yes; I mean in the paper which Mrs. Eddy drafted creating them. Now, then, referring to these various "whereases," it recites that Mr. Rowlands was a member of The Mother Church. You have already testified that he was. A. Yes.

Q. Now, I will ask you to note this recitation: "Whereas it has become evident that Mr. Rowlands does not understand or recognize the importance and necessity of promoting the interests of Christian Science by following the directions given by Mrs. Eddy in our Church By-Laws." You say that you have made a study of Christian Science for many years? A. I have.

Q. Now, did you notice in any respect whatever anything that Mr. Rowlands said or did in connection with the discharge of his duties as trustee, which indicated that he did not understand or recognize the importance and necessity of promoting the interests of Christian Science, or indicating that he was not following the directions given by Mrs. Eddy in the Church By-Laws?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that as calling for a conclusion, and as leading in form. Then it is a question as to whether Mr. Eustace understands what Mr. Rowlands understood and recognized.

The Master—I don't hardly think, do you, that I ought to exclude it entirely out of the record for no reason?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, we make the objection, first, to the form of the question; second, that it is the conclusion of the witness; and, third, he is asked to testify as to the mental operation of another person; and, fourth, for the reason that the Bill in Equity in this case is a direct repudiation of the Church Manual.

The Master—That will be a matter for argument later, I suppose.

Mr. Krauthoff—On its face it is. The Bill in Equity is a repudiation of the Church Manual in toto.

The Master—I can hardly decide that at present, I think. I think the answer may be taken subject to the objection raised.

A. Not in one single instance, sir.

Q. Then I will call your attention to the next "Whereas"; that "Mr. Rowlands has shown a disposition to invent or adopt interpretations of our Church By-Laws that pervert their meaning and annul their effect." I will ask whether you noticed anything in what he said or what he did, or in any action on his part indicating such a disposition?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that question as leading in form.

The Master—In a hearing of this kind is that a necessary reason for exclusion?

Mr. Krauthoff—It would seem to me that a hearing of this kind—

The Master—We have no jury here.

Mr. Krauthoff—No, but the form of the question is a matter for objection.

Mr. Whipple—May I suggest, if Your Honor please, on the record that the question is not leading. It is a direct question. The only way to negative a proposition, as I understand it, is by putting a direct question, and the ancient custom of a circumlocutory or circumambulatory question that hides from everybody the thought that you have in putting the question has entirely disappeared, I had supposed, and that direct questions which were reasonable and to the point were always permitted.

The Master—I hardly think I ought to forbid the question to be put or answered.

A. In no way.

Q. Let me call your attention to another "Whereas," the next one: "Whereas since Mr. Rowlands began to act as a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society, he and the other trustees thereof have tried to change the relation which had always theretofore existed between The Christian Science Publishing Society and its Board of Trustees on the one hand and The Mother Church and its proper officers on the other hand, and he in particular has tried to convert and enlarge said trusteeship into an office or function of a new and different character." I will ask, first, if you noticed anything in Mr. Rowlands' conduct or behavior, in what he said or in what he did, indicating that he was in any way attempting to convert and enlarge the trusteeship into an office or function of a new and different character? A. Never in the slightest.

The Master—I suppose all this is subject to the defendant's objection.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Q. Did you notice from the time when he began to act, or at any time during his action as trustee, he had tried to change the relation of the Board of Trustees to the Board of Directors? A. I never did.

Q. Now, we have gone over the matter of the change with regard to the handling of applications to practice, that is, cards for practice and other things. A. Yes.

Q. I think you have already stated that those had been handled by the Board of Trustees for years? A. They had.

Q. And at the request of the directors it was changed? A. It was.

Q. What do you say as to whether you as a trustee endeavored in any way to change the relation which had existed while you had been trustee, or to enlarge the scope of your duties or activities or powers as a trustee? A. Not in the slightest, as I understood them.

Q. This application whereby the board should sign a paper acknowledging some authority on the part of the Board of Directors, did you regard that as a change from the order which had been established and followed before that?

Mr. Krauthoff—Excuse me one moment, Mr. Whipple. In your question you said, "board." You meant the Board of Directors, didn't you?

Mr. Whipple—Put it "Board of Trustees was requested to sign a paper."

The Witness—Is that the question?

Mr. Whipple—It will be as soon as I get it amended so as to meet my own views of what I said and those of Mr. Krauthoff also.

(The question is read as follows:

"Q. This application whereby the Board of Trustees should sign a paper acknowledging some authority on the part of the Board of Directors, did you regard that as a change from the order which had been established and followed before that?")

A. I considered it an absolutely unwarranted assumption of an authority that they had never had.

Q. And what did you believe or understand, and what were you advised as to whether that was a proper action on your part, in view of the terms of the Deed of Trust signed by Mrs. Eddy herself? A. I considered they had no right to any such authority or power.

Q. Now, the next "Whereas": "Whereas Mr. Rowlands and other persons acting with him, including several eminent lawyers wastefully employed, have set up said Deed of Trust against the By-Laws and government of The Mother Church, and have threatened this board with litigation if this board exercise its right and power to remove any of said trustees"; I will ask you, first, whether you regarded the board as having the right and power, or whether you were advised that the board did have the right and power to remove any one of the trustees merely because they would not sign this paper? A. I don't quite catch the question.

Q. Did you understand, or were you advised, that the Board of Directors had a right to remove a trustee or the Board of Trustees, merely because they would not sign this paper? A. Certainly not.

Mr. Krauthoff—Excuse me. I didn't quite understand the answer. You mean you were not advised, or that the board did not have a right?

The Witness—The board did not have a right.

Mr. Whipple—That makes it clear.

Q. Did you understand at all that you or the trustees set up the Deed of Trust against the By-Laws and government of The Mother Church? A. We never did any such thing, and never contemplated such a thing.

Q. Or had you threatened the Board of Directors with litigation in case the Board of Directors exercised any right or power that they had, of any sort or description? A. We never made a threat of any kind.

Q. The next "Whereas." "Whereas it has become evident that Mr. Rowlands has allowed a sense of self-interest to interfere with the interests of Christian Science; that he has become self-assertive, contentious, and disposed to make trouble without regard to consequences;" Had you noticed anything in Mr. Rowlands' behavior or attitude, in anything that he said or did, indicating that he had become self-assertive or contentious or disposed to make trouble? A. I had not.

Q. What was his attitude and demeanor, as you observed it, in the discharge of his duties as trustee? A. One of the greatest friendliness to all concerned in everything.

Q. Was his manner gentle and kindly, or was he ugly and disputive? A. Always kindly.

Q. Did you ever hear him in any of the discussions speak in a way that could possibly be regarded as contentious or self-assertive? A. Not at all.

Q. I mean in any of the board meetings. A. He expressed himself strongly, as we all did.

Q. But not contentiously? A. Not at all.

Q. Any more strongly than the directors did? A. No. I think it was a mutual contest.

Q. Did you notice anything in what he did or said indicating a gratification of any self-interest? A. The very reverse of that.

Q. The suggestion is offered that Mr. Rowlands had other interests which prevented him from giving sufficient time and attention to the business of the Publishing Society. Were you in a position to observe how he discharged his duties as trustee? A. I certainly was.

Q. Did you notice any lack of attention or any failure to give the time necessary to the proper discharge of his duties? A. He gave all the time that was necessary.

Q. In point of fact, when he was invited on to the board did you know that he was a business man of large responsibilities? A. I did.

Q. And those that he gave up—you knew something of what the sacrifice was to take this position? A. I did, yes.

Mr. Whipple—Now, the next letter is dated March 18, 1919, and is a letter from Mr. Jarvis, secretary, to Mr. Eustace and Mr. Ogden as trustees, and the letter appears on page 29 of the Bill in Equity in the smaller copy.

Mr. Bates—Page 61 of the large.
Mr. Whipple—Page 61 of the large. It is the last of paragraph 13.

(Letter dated March 18, 1919, above referred to, is marked Exhibit 23. R. H. J., and is read by Mr. Whipple as follows:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"March 18, 1919.
"Mr. Herbert W. Eustace,
"Mr. David B. Ogden, Trustees,
"The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"Boston, Mass.
"Dear Friends:

"I am instructed by The Christian Science Board of Directors to say in furtherance of the board's interview with you on the 17th inst., at which time you were served with a notice of the dismissal of Mr. Lamont Rowlands as a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society, which action was taken by The Christian Science Board of Directors under Art. XXV, Sections 3 and 5, of The Mother Church Manual, the board calls attention to your duty under Art. XXV, Sec. 3, of the Manual, requiring the remaining trustees to fill the vacancy. It is the board's desire that you immediately appoint some one to fill the position made vacant by their action of yesterday, and in the appointment of Mr. Rowlands' successor they expressly request that you name a person who shall be suitable and satisfactory to the Board of Directors.

"Kindly acknowledge receipt of this letter, and advise the Board of Directors when you will be able to comply with the above request.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,"
"Corresponding Secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors.
"CEJ—L"

May I, in connection with the offer of that letter, call Your Honor's attention to the fact that the directors do not refer in any way to the Deed of Trust, or the exercise of any power under the Deed of Trust? They put it solely upon a provision of the Church Manual, without any reference to the Deed of Trust.

Q. Now, in any conversation or communication up to the date of the notice of dismissal, had there been any complaint on the part of the Board of Directors with reference to the action of the trustees, or any one of them, or any criticism of acts made to you, except that they would not sign this paper acknowledging the supreme authority, or acknowledging the authority of the Board of Directors over the publication society—had there been any specific things except what would fall under that head?

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, the paper did not say supreme authority over the publication society.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I changed that. I said, or authority over the publication society affairs.

Mr. Krauthoff—Over the periodicals of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—What is that?

Mr. Krauthoff—It was the periodicals of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Did Mrs. Eddy convey to the directors as trustees the periodicals?

Mr. Krauthoff—Of The Mother Church?

Mr. Whipple—Did she?

Mr. Krauthoff—She did not convey them to the directors as trustees.

Mr. Whipple—She conveyed them to the trustees; that is right.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that statement, because that statement is not borne out by the evidence.

Mr. Whipple—May I put the question, if Your Honor please?

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Will you read the question?

(The question is read as follows: "Now, in any conversation or communication up to the date of the notice of dismissal, had there been any complaint on the part of the Board of Directors with reference to the action of the trustees, or any one of them, or any criticism of acts made to you, except that they would not sign this paper acknowledging the supreme authority, or acknowledging the authority of the Board of Directors over the publication society—had there been any specific things except what would fall under that head?"

A. Nothing of any moment.

Mr. Whipple—The next is a letter from Mr. Eustace, of the Board of Trustees (the secretary), dated March 21, 1919, addressed to the Board of Directors.

March 21, 1919.
"The Christian Science Board of Directors,"
"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,"
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:
"We acknowledge receipt of your communication of March 18, in which you express the desire that we immediately fill the position alleged by you to have been made vacant by your action of the previous day.

"We are giving to this request that careful attention and thought which its importance demands, and we will shortly send you our reply.

"Yours sincerely,
"BOARD OF TRUSTEES,
"Secretary."

[The letter, of which the foregoing is a copy, is marked Exhibit 29. R. H. J.]

The next is a communication from Mr. Eustace, as secretary, to the Board of Directors.

March 25, 1919.
"The Christian Science Board of Directors,"
"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,"
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:
"After careful reflection we have been constrained to feel that the course in which the directors persist, if not checked will result in the destruction of a sacred trust created by our great Leader, defeat her purposes as therein declared, injure irrevocably the Christian Science movement, and deprive The Mother Church and Mrs. Eddy's trustees of a great benevolence with which she endowed the movement.

"We feel it our duty to take measures to prevent this appalling result and to defend our trust.

"Accordingly, we have filed in the Supreme Judicial Court a bill in equity, for that purpose. We have a copy available if you desire it. Mr. Whipple is sending one to Governor Bates.

"Yours sincerely,
"BOARD OF TRUSTEES,
(Signed) "HERBERT W. EUSTACE,
"Secretary."

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 30. R. H. J.]

The Master—What is the date of the filing of the bill? I do not think that I have it on anything that I have. Is it the same date as the date of the letter, March 25?

Mr. Whipple—When was it filed?
Mr. Ogden—The bill was filed on March 25.

Mr. Whipple—It was filed on this day, if Your Honor please, on March 25. A subpoena was issued on that day, and an ex parte ad interim injunction was issued. I will offer a letter which the directors caused to be sent to Mr. Watts, the business manager, although it is not exactly in the line of the correspondence which I have been offering, which was for the purpose of showing what the sole reason for removal was.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,"
"Boston, Massachusetts."
March 18, 1919.

"Mr. John R. Watts, Business Manager,
"The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Boston, Mass."

"Dear Mr. Watts:
"I am instructed by the Christian Science Board of Directors to notify you that on Monday, March 17, The Christian Science Board of Directors, acting under the authority of Art. XXV, Secs. 3 and 5, of The Mother Church Manual; declared a vacancy on the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and notified Mr. Herbert W. Eustace and Mr. David B. Ogden of the dismissal of Mr. Lamont Rowlands from membership in said Board of Trustees.

"The board now desires to call your attention to the fact that there is a vacancy on the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society; which the directors have requested the remaining trustees to fill with a person suitable to the Board of Directors of The Mother Church. We feel that as an appointee of this board you should have this information.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,
"Corresponding Secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors."

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 31. R. H. J.]

The reply is as follows:
March 19, 1919.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,"
"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,"
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:
"Your letter of March 18, notifying me of your action in declaring a vacancy on the Board of Trustees of Mr. Lamont Rowlands, has been received and carefully noted.

"With best wishes,
"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "JOHN R. WATTS,
"Business Manager."

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 32. R. H. J.]

Q. Mr. Eustace, did you know, or was there called to your attention any valid or sound reason why Mr. Rowlands should not continue in his office as trustee under the Deed of Trust of Jan. 25, 1898? A. None at all.

Q. And you refused to elect any successor? A. We absolutely refused.

Q. The bill states that you believed, and therefore asserted, that the action was undertaken as an arbitrary and capricious attempt to exercise offensive power which did not exist. Did you actually believe that? A. I felt that it was for no other purpose than that.

Q. And that the action was undertaken for the purpose of extending the power of the directors individually or collectively into a domain purposely excluded from their jurisdiction by the specific provisions which the Donor caused to be inserted in said trust instrument—

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that question.

Q. And thus—let us finish the question—and thus create an absolute oligarchy in control of the great Christian Science movement which its Founder and Leader never intended, and against which she specifically provided in creating the trust under which the plaintiffs are acting—

Mr. Krauthoff—Just a moment. We object.

Mr. Whipple—I have not finished the question.

Mr. Krauthoff—I understand, but the witness always answers before the objection is made.

Mr. Whipple—Just wait for Mr. Krauthoff to object.

The Master—Do not answer until I tell you to, please.

Q. I ask you whether you did believe the facts stated in your bill that you verified by your oath, those facts which I have just recited.

Mr. Krauthoff—I object to the question as leading in form, and for the further reason that the belief of the witness is immaterial.

The Master—I suppose that it will go no further than to show that what he did was done in good faith.

Mr. Krauthoff—He has not the power to refuse obedience to the Manual in good faith. The Manual made it his duty to elect another trustee. Now, that Manual either bound him or did not bind him, and his good faith in refusing to follow the Manual of The Mother Church is not a defense against the violation of it.

The Master—I think that we will take his answer subject to objection.

Mr. Whipple—Let me suggest that the case that is being tried is not a violation of the Manual; that would be a side issue. The Court has no jurisdiction over that.

The Master—We cannot settle that now.

Mr. Krauthoff—No.

Mr. Whipple—I quite agree, Your Honor.

The Master—I would not open up that discussion now, I think. I will allow the witness to answer for the purpose that I have indicated, subject to your objection.

Mr. Krauthoff—Of course we do not accept the statement of Mr. Whipple that the Court has no jurisdiction over the Manual. A. I did.

Q. Now, did you before filing the bill receive information as to what the directors proposed to do by way of carrying into effect their declared purpose to supervise and to control the affairs of the publication society?

The Witness—May I hear that question in full again? (The question is read.)

A. Yes.

Q. From whom? A. From various sources.

Q. Did you learn of any statement they made as to what they would do to the publication society in case—

Mr. Krauthoff—We—excuse me—
The Master—Just a minute. Wait before you answer.

The Witness—I will.

Q.—in case you did not comply with their wishes in respect of either resigning or acknowledging the authority of the directors?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that unless it came directly from one of the directors to the plaintiff testifying.

Mr. Whipple—We are offering this merely on the matter of good faith, in respect of these allegations.

The Master—Yes, but that might bring out the statement of some third person.

Mr. Whipple—We should not claim that any statement by a third person had any probative effect as to the fact that was stated. We are offering this for this purpose—for instance, the knowledge of the threat which is alleged in the bill, that they would make the publication society an empty shell, came to us directly from a person to whom they had made the threat.

The Master—Can you not call him?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor; I am proposing to do that, but I did not want to have to recall Mr. Eustace later to say that they heard it; but I am perfectly willing to take that course if it will save objection.

The Master—That, perhaps, makes it a mere question of the order of proof, and, upon your statement that you propose to prove statements by the directors to a person not yet named, the witness may answer the question now put.

A. I did.

Q. From whom? A. I learned of it from two sources.

Q. What were they? A. One through the business statement made to our business manager; and the other directly from the directors themselves, but not in the same way; it was inferred from what they said.

Q. Do you remember what they said from which you inferred it? A. Well, the substance—I can give you the substance of it—

Q. Yes, that is right. A. The substance of what they said was to the effect that the publishing buildings belonged to them, and that if it became necessary they would publish periodicals of their own, and that to me inferred that it would make The Christian Science Publishing Society as formed by Mrs. Eddy an empty shell.

Q. Then what did the business manager state had been said to him by the directors? A. In substance, that they had said that they would make it an empty shell.

Q. That is, would make the Publishing Society an empty shell? A.

The Publishing Society an empty shell.

Q. There are certain figures of income set out in the Bill in Equity as having been paid over, on pages 10 and 11. Do you know from your personal examination of the accounts or in the ordinary course of business that for the six months ending Oct. 1, 1918, a sum in excess of $450,000 was paid over by the trustees to the directors, in two different capacities, as earnings and profits from the conduct of the trust? A. I do.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that question, if Your Honor please, because the directors were not acting in two different capacities. The bill in that respect is in error. A part of the directors are part of the trustees under Mrs. Eddy's will.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I meant to the defendants in the two capacities.

The Witness—I do.

Mr. Whipple—That may be corrected, and make it defendants instead of directors. I am glad that we have an accurate and prompt censorship on these things; then we shall get our statements very correct.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to the question, because the payment to the trustees under Mrs. Eddy's will included Mr. Fernald as a trustee, who is not a defendant in this case.

Mr. Whipple—Don't you think really that is pretty technical, in view of the fact that it all went for the extension and the development of the Christian Science movement?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, I do not.

Mr. Whipple—Or, at least, we assume it did. We haven't looked over your accounts; we assume and certainly hope it did—what did not go for incidental expenses of another sort.

Mr. Krauthoff—Such as you are indulging in now.

Mr. Whipple—I beg pardon?

Mr. Krauthoff—Such as the trustees also are indulging in now.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no; I am not referring to that.

The Master—I would not let this discussion go too far at the present stage.

Mr. Krauthoff—The point we wanted to make about it is this, if Your Honor please. The plaintiffs in this case have two relationships, one to the Board of Directors of The Mother Church, to whom they pay the net profits of the business; one to the trustees under the will of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, to whom they pay a part of the expense of conducting their own business. Now, they have mingled those two things into one lump sum, and we point it out in our answer, and they still adhere to the claim that they produced all this as profits.

The Master—You will have an opportunity to show that.

Mr. Whipple—What Mr. Krauthoff has said is, I think, substantially correct. There are two different capacities in which that money has been received, but the essential fact that the trustees have collected it as profits and turned it over to promote this great movement is the only thing that we regard as very material; and the answer I find on looking at it practically admits that. Whether it is paid over in two capacities or how it goes to carry out this great purpose, is of very little consequence to us. If anyone can find any comfort in the fact that it goes in two different ways, I will be very glad to have them. There are no further questions of Mr. Eustace.

Cross-Examination

Q. (By Mr. Krauthoff) Mr. Eustace, have you the records of the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society with you? A. We have.

Q. How far back do they go? A. I think you asked for 1898, and we brought them all.

Q. Now, will you be good enough to turn to the proceedings of The Christian Science Publishing Society which relate to the manner in which Edward P. Bates was, on or about Sept. 8, 1898, succeeded as a trustee under the instrument by Thomas W. Hatten.

Mr. Whipple—While that is being looked up, may I ask what the pertinency of that is?

Mr. Krauthoff—The pertinency of it is in support of the first paragraph of the defendants' answer.

Mr. Whipple—What part of it? Mr. Krauthoff—Why, the first paragraph of the defendants' answer, in the second sentence.

Mr. Whipple—What does it say? Mr. Krauthoff—"And said defendants aver that the said Edward P. Bates was, on or about Sept. 8, 1898, duly succeeded as trustee under the said instrument by Thomas W. Hatten."

Mr. Whipple—That has all gone in.

Mr. Krauthoff—I haven't seen it.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, on the contrary, we put it in one of the very first things. You were objecting to it, then, you know, but it was ruled in. It all appears on the back of the Trust Deed.

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, that is not what I am asking about; the Trust Deed is not the record of it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that makes no difference; it has been so testified.

Mr. Krauthoff—We made the objection to the Trust Deed, if Your Honor please, because that was not the proper record of it, and at the time it was said that we would have an opportunity to go into that.

Mr. Whipple—Isn't your question really what you indicated, that you wanted to show how he was elected? Well, now, how is that material?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, it is material in this case for this reason, if Your Honor please. If the plaintiffs' contention with respect to the interpretation of this Deed of Trust be true the plaintiffs are not the trustees under the instrument.

Mr. Whipple—Who are?

Mr. Krauthoff—And they have stated themselves out of court.

Mr. Whipple—Who are the trustees in that case?

Mr. Krauthoff—My judgment is that Mr. Neal and Mr. Hatten and Mr. McKenzie would be.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I could not see how.

The Master—I think that the defendants have the right to put in the record under the pleadings here if they insist upon it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have no hesitancy in stating the legal theory now.

The Master—I would not do it now. Put in the evidence and then we will hear about the effect of it later.

Q. What have you, Mr. Eustace? A. The first minute is the record of the Deed of Trust: "I hereby create a Board of Trustees, namely, Edward P. Bates, James A. Neal, and William P. McKenzie." It starts with the gift to The Mother Church and then goes on with the Deed of Trust.

Q. May I see that? I don't want to see anything that I am not entitled to see. A. You can see anything, so far as I know.

Mr. Krauthoff—We offer the first document in this record: "A gift to The Mother Church and a grant of trusteeship."

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. This, if Your Honor please, is not covered by what was stated before. He now asks for the record as to how the trustees were elected. Now this is something entirely different; I do not know what it is; but it is for our interest that we should not have a lot of things that are not material. I would be entirely glad if Your Honor would cast your eye over it and if you think it is admissible we will accept your decision without objection.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is, if Your Honor please, a variation from the question that I asked.

The Master—Why not follow out the question you asked first?

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

Q. Can you find the record of Mr. Bates' succession by Mr. Hatten on or about Sept. 8, 1898—I am advised. A. At Sept. 8. Shall I read this?

Q. If you will be good enough. A. "Sept. 9, 1898. Regular meeting of the Board of Trustees convened at 10 a. m. The first order of business was the reception of the following communication dated Sept. 8, 1898:

"Rev. William P. McKenzie and James A. Neal, My Dear Board of Trustees: I hereby appoint Thomas W. Hatten to fill the vacancy on your board. With love, Mary Baker Eddy."

"In accordance with the above appointment, Mr. Hatten was called upon to take his place on the Board of Trustees and instructions were given to the business manager to have the new name placed on the pay roll at this date."

Q. Now, can you turn to the record of Oct. 22, 1898, with respect to Mr. Neal being succeeded by some one, according to the record? A. You only want what is germane to that subject?

Q. Certainly, yes. A. "Oct. 22, 1898. Special meeting convened at 10 a. m. Present, Messrs. Hatten, Neal, and McKenzie. The following letter from our Leader is put on record:

"Pleasant View, Concord, New Hampshire, Oct. 13, 1898. Beloved C. S. Trustees: In accordance with Mr. James Neal's willingness and my own desire that he devote his entire time to the great work of Christian Science healing, in which he has been very successful, and which is one of the great needs of the period, I hereby request that this board give him an honorable discharge, with my thanks for his faithful discharge of his obligations as a member of this board, and that you elect Mr. Joseph Clark to fill the vacancy. With love, Mother, Mary Baker Eddy."

Q. And does the record show any appointment of Mr. Clark, or was that letter treated as the appointment? A. It says here: "This appointment having been thus made in accord with Sec. 10 of the Deed of Trust, it only remained to notify Mr. Clark and invite him to take his place as a member of the board, which was done."

Q. That is, Sec. 10 of the Deed of Trust reads: "Whenever a vacancy shall occur in said trusteeship for any cause, I reserve the right to fill the same by appointment, if I shall so desire, so long as I may live; but if I do not elect to exercise this right, the trustees shall fill said vacancy."

Q. Accordingly, that was done? A. Evidently.

Q. I find it here that on or about Sept. 25, 1906, Joseph B. Clark departed this life. See what you can find with respect to the succession of Mr. Clark, Sept. 25, 1906? A. "Sept. 18, 1906. Regular meeting of the Board of Trustees convened at 9:30 a. m. Members present, Messrs. Hatten and McKenzie. Minutes of previous meeting read and approved. Applications for cards and church notices received and passed upon for publication." You don't want all that?

Q. No, just what relates to Mr. Clark. A. "A communication dated Sept. 14 was received from our Leader in which she declined to make the selection of some one to fill the vacancy on the Board of Trustees and requested the remaining trustees to do so. After careful consideration of the matter Mr. A. V. Stewart of Chicago was thought of as a suitable man to fill the vacancy, and a letter was written and sent to our Leader to that effect for her approval."

Q. Did that letter come back—was there an approval of it? A. It will be in another meeting.

Q. Before we pass that, does the record show that Mr. Clark died? A.

Yes; there is a notice, I think. Yes. Do you want that?

Q. If you will, please. A. "Sept. 10, 1906. Special meeting of the Board of Trustees convened at 10 a. m. Members present, Messrs. McKenzie and Hatten. The following minute was adopted: 'Our brother Joseph B. Clark having passed away'—Do you want that?"

Q. No, I do not care for it in full, just the fact that he had passed away. A. Had passed away.

Q. The date? A. Sept. 10, 1906.

Q. Now then, turn to the—

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me; you are asked to give the full statement.

Mr. Krauthoff—I would be very glad to have him read it through.

Mr. Whipple—With regard to the election or selection of a successor.

The Witness—Yes. I have got that further on here.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I understand that is what you are asked for.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, certainly. Now—

The Witness—Well, just a minute.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg pardon.

A. "Sept. 20, 1906. Special meeting of the Board of Trustees convened at 9:30 a. m. Members present, Messrs. McKenzie and Hatten. A communication was received from our Leader indorsing the nomination of Mr. A. V. Stewart of Chicago as a member of the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the passing away of our good brother and faithful worker, Mr. Joseph B. Clark. A letter was written and sent Mr. Stewart, advising him of his nomination."

Q. You knew Mr. Stewart? A. I did.

Q. And you knew of his passing away in March, 1919? A. I did; I heard of it.

Q. It was so stated in your periodicals? A. Yes.

Q. Now, turn to Jan. 6, 1908, with respect to the resignation of Mr. Stewart. A. Do you want the whole of this?

Q. Yes. A. (Reading)—"Jan. 4, 1908. Special meeting of the Board of Trustees convened at 11:45 a. m., all members present. Mr. Stewart announced that he received appointment as a director on condition of resigning from the Board of Trustees, and after discussion of the situation presented his resignation, which was accepted with regret for the loss of his brotherly fellowship in work, and with congratulations because of the new appointment for service. The remaining trustees conferred and presented the case to the Leader, according to the Manual, asking her if she wished to exercise her reserved right to fill the vacancy by appointment, indicating that in case she did not exercise this right they would ask her approval of their election of Mr. W. D. McCrackan, at present a Reader of The Mother Church, but with only five months to serve, expecting from him good assistance in connection with the increasing scope of our periodicals and general literature, and especially in connection with German and foreign work."

Mr. Whipple—May I ask the date of that?

The Witness—Jan. 4, 1908.

Mr. Whipple—May I ask, does the record show who made it a condition of his being appointed director that he should not also be trustee?

The Witness—No, it does not show.

Q. Now, is there a record there of the appointment of Mr. McCrackan?

A. (Reading):

"Jan. 6, 1908.

"Special meeting of the trustees convened at 10.20 a.m., and the following letter was received from our Leader:

"Pleasant View, Jan. 5, 1908.

"Messrs. William P. McKenzie and Thomas W. Hatten,

"Beloved Students:

"I highly approve of Mr. W. D. McCrackan to fill the vacancy as trustee of the Publishing Society.

"Lovingly yours,

"MARY B. EDDY."

"The trustees then formally elected Mr. W. D. McCrackan and invited him to be present at their meeting."

Q. Turn to June 19, 1908, with respect to Mr. McCrackan and Judge Smith.

Mr. Whipple—May I suggest that I am informed that you look back in April to find the inception of that change, April 17.

The Witness—April 17?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, that is right.

A. (Reading):

"April 16, 1908.

"Regular meeting convened and opened in the regular way. Present: Messrs. McKenzie and Hatten. The resignation of Mr. McCrackan presented to the chairman under date of April 9, and held one week for consideration, was accepted with regret."

Q. Then what does the record next show? It was June, I believe, that Judge Smith's appointment was accepted, was it? His signature is on the date of June 19, 1908? A. June 18, 1908.

Q. What does the record show?

A. (Reading): "Special meeting convened at 10 a. m. Present, Messrs. McKenzie and Hatten. The question of filling the vacancy on the board was considered, and it was agreed to nominate Judge Clifford P. Smith and submit his name to our Leader for approval. A letter to this effect was drafted and typewritten, to be delivered today. It was agreed to"—that is another matter.

Q. Now, find the answer. A. (Reading): "Meeting adjourned at noon, and at 3:45 p. m. again convened to receive report of our Leader's action brought by Mr. McKenzie. Of the nomination she said 'I approve.' Consequently the trustees found the way clear to elect Judge Smith a trustee to fill the vacancy on the board. A letter was prepared and sent to the new incumbent, inviting him to enter upon his new duties."

Q. The next record we seem to have is Sept. 12, 1911.

Mr. Whipple—Wouldn't it be proper to have the letter which Mr. McKenzie wrote on that subject to Mrs. Eddy?

Mr. Krauthoff—I would be very glad to.

Mr. Whipple—Have you it there?

The Witness—No.

Mr. Whipple—Is it in the record?

The Witness—I don't think it is. I don't see it here.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will be glad to have you read it in connection with the record.

Mr. Whipple—(Reading):

"Rev. Mary Baker Eddy,

"Chestnut Hill,

"Massachusetts.

"Beloved Teacher: In regard to the vacancy on the Board of Trustees, you were pleased to say to the remaining trustees, 'Please make your own choice.' We now desire to nominate Judge Clifford Smith, and if this choice is approved by you we shall proceed to election. Judge Smith mainly prepared the pamphlet, Christian Science and Legislation, and in that association with our work revealed his ability to help the cause. He has had experience in business as well as in legal matters, and has consecrated his life to service in Christian Science.

"With constant affection,

"Yours lovingly,

(Signed)

"WILLIAM P. MCKENZIE,

"Chairman,

"THOMAS W. HATTEN,

"Treasurer,

"Of the Board of Trustees, Christian Science Publishing Society."

On the back of the page in handwriting is: "I approve. (Signed) M. B. G. Eddy, June 18, 1908."

Q. Now, then, Sept. 12, 1911, about that time, with respect to the resignation of Judge Smith. A. (Reading):

"Sept. 12, 1911.

"Regular meeting of the Board of Trustees convened at 2 p. m. All members present. Under the by-law directing that when a new trustee is required the remaining trustees shall fill the vacancy, James A. Neal was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Clifford P. Smith."

Q. What does that refer to, "by-law"? A. I don't know.

Q. Then the next, Mr. Neal succeeded Judge Smith, as I understand it? A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, on Dec. 2, 1912, or before that time Mr. Eustace was elected, I believe—you? A. Yes. It was to take office then.

Q. Will you show the record of your own election in full? A. (Reading):

"Sept. 23, 1912.

"Regular meeting of the Board of Trustees convened at 2 p. m. All members present. Minutes of last meeting read and approved. Mr. Herbert W. Eustace was elected a member of the Board of Trustees to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. James A. Neal. Mr. Eustace to begin work Dec. 2, 1912.

Q. Does that record of the trustees show the correspondence between the trustees and yourself at that time?

A. I don't know. I don't think it does.

Q. Have you that correspondence here? A. What correspondence did I have?

Q. The correspondence from the trustees advising you of your election, and your answer to the trustees with respect to a certain action to be taken by the Board of Directors? A. No. I think I would have to look that up, if I have it at all.

Q. Now, turn to Mr. Merritt's election on Feb. 1, 1917.

Mr. Whipple—Feb. 1, 1917?

Mr. Krauthoff—Feb. 1, 1917. It seems Mr. Merritt signed on the 1st of February, 1917, and I assume that his election was before that time.

Mr. Whipple—I thought it was August, 1917.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is when he became a director. A. There is a statement here saying he took his seat.

Mr. Whipple—Where is your Deed of Trust? That gives the date on that.

Mr. Krauthoff—Feb. 1, 1917, is when he signed. A. (Reading):

"At 4 o'clock Mr. Merritt arrived from Florida and took his seat on the board."

That was Thursday, February the 8th.

Q. Will you look at something in January and see what you can find? He signed the statement apparently on the 1st of February. A. I don't see anything on that.

Mr. Bates—Pardon me, Your Honor. I want to suggest that both the witness and brother Krauthoff speak a little louder. I notice the reporters are making notes of remarks which we are unable to hear at all.

Mr. Krauthoff—All right. We shall bear that in mind. Thank you, Governor.

A. (Reading):

"On Jan. 6, 1917, moved, that in consideration of the resignation of Mr. Hatten, which will take effect Feb. 1, 1917, the remaining trustees do hereby elect Edward Alfred Merritt, C. S. B., of Cleveland, to fill the vacancy on that date, and that Mr. Merritt be notified at once. Carried."

Q. Aug. 1, 1917, what is your record? A. Do you want this, what is said?

Q. You may read further. A. (Reading):

"And that Mr. Merritt be notified at once. Letter to Mr. Merritt read, approved and sent. Mr. Merritt met with the board at noon, and signified his acceptance of his election as a member of the Board of Trustees, to begin the duties thereof Feb. 1, 1917.

Q. Now, coming down to July of 1917, will you read the record disclosing the succession of Mr. McKenzie by Mr. Ogden, for whichever succeeded first. A. July 24, 1917. First of all comes the resignation of Mr. McKenzie.

Q. Will you read that, please? A. (Reading): "The following letter was received and read:

"To the Board of Trustees,
"Dear Friends: Because of new duties due to election to office of editor, I am constrained to offer my resignation from this board on which I have been a worker since February, 1898, and leave my association with the board with regret and love. This resignation to take effect Aug. 1, 1917.

"Yours,

(Signed)

"WILLIAM P. MCKENZIE"

"On motion of Mr. Eustace, duly seconded by Mr. Merritt, Mr. McKenzie's resignation is hereby accepted, to take effect Aug. 1."

Then there is a statement of appreciation of Mr. McKenzie's work.

"On motion of Mr. Merritt, seconded by Mr. Eustace, Mr. David B. Ogden was unanimously elected a member of the Board of Trustees to take office Aug. 1, 1917."

Q. What does the record next show after Mr. Merritt's resignation?

Mr. Whipple—I happen to have laid before me his letter of July 26, if you want to put it into the record.

Mr. Krauthoff—All right. I will be very glad to.

Mr. Whipple—Mark it as an exhibit, or read it in, whichever you want to.

Mr. Krauthoff—Edward A. Merritt—it should be identified first.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no. Read it and then have it marked.

[Letter dated July 26, 1917, is marked Exhibit 33, WHM, and is read by Mr. Krauthoff as follows:]

[Exhibit 33.]

"Edward A. Merritt,

"1101 Beacon Street,

"Brookline, Massachusetts.

"July 26, 1917.

"Board of Trustees,

"The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,

"Boston, Massachusetts."

"Dear Fellow Workers: I hereby tender my resignation as trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society to take effect the first day of August, 1917. Notwithstanding my brief incumbency to that office I wish to reiterate what you already know, that it has been a great joy to me to have been of any slight service in this work. I have come to appreciate that the Publishing Society under the government of divine Love is the largest and best equipped institution in the world for giving to mankind daily and periodically that food and drink which is spiritual, and which accords with the Master's saying, 'Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst.' (John 4: 14.) With loving regard to the Board of Trustees, I am,

"Cordially and sincerely,

"EDWARD A. MERRITT."

Q. The gentleman who wrote that letter is now a member of The Christian Science Board of Directors; is that true, Mr. Eustace? A. It is.

Q. Now, will you read the succession of Mr. Merritt by Mr. Rowlands?

A. (Reading):

"July 26, 1917."

"Resolved, That Mr. Lamont Rowlands be and is hereby appointed a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society to succeed Edward A. Merritt, to take effect as of Aug. 1, 1917."

Mr. Whipple—What was the date of Mr. Rowlands' election? What was the date of the meeting you just read?

The Witness—July 26, 1917.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, I have asked about some record details, and I am reminded that our counsel, that is, counsel for the directors agreed that Mr. Thompson should be shown the courtesy or given the opportunity of cross-examining Mr. Eustace ahead of us, and if Mr. Thompson desires to avail himself of that I shall be glad now to yield to Mr. Thompson, with the understanding that I will continue when Mr. Thompson is finished.

Mr. Thompson—It is not customary, if Your Honor please, in the courts of this Commonwealth, either to make or to accept such a proposition. It was perfectly clearly understood that Mr. Bates should go forward and we follow, and we cross-examine on the issues in both cases as far as we saw fit. When this gentleman is through I will take my turn, not before.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I am sorry, if Your Honor please, to be reminded that I did anything that was not customary in Massachusetts. I did it upon the advice of Massachusetts counsel.

Mr. Bates—May I ask if it is the expectation of the Court to take a little recess?

The Master—Certainly. How long do you wish?

Mr. Bates—I should think five minutes will be all right.

The Master—We will suspend for five minutes, or until 10 minutes to 12.

[Short recess.]

Mr. Bates—Will you let me examine the trustees' records?

Mr. Whipple—If you will let me have the directors' records I will exchange with you.

Mr. Bates—I didn't ask to exchange.

Mr. Whipple—If I can be assured of the opportunity to look over the directors' records when I come to examine them, or before, I shall do it.

Mr. Bates—Certainly. We do not ask for any privilege—

Mr. Whipple—Well, if you will tell me that you will give me full opportunity to look them over later, I will entertain that suggestion.

Mr. Bates—What is that?

Mr. Whipple—If you will give me full opportunity to look over the records later.

Mr. Bates—We will give you full opportunity to look over any records that bear on this case.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that isn't quite it. You are asking now to take the trustees' records and look them all through. That is exactly what I want with regard to the—

Mr. Bates—I haven't asked to take them out of your possession. I simply ask for an opportunity to examine them with you.

Mr. Whipple—Now, will you give me the same opportunity to examine the directors' records?

Mr. Bates—So far as they are pertinent to this case.

Mr. Whipple—Then I will say so far as these records are pertinent to the case you may look them over.

Mr. Bates—That is all we ask for.

Mr. Whipple—Now, I think you have got everything in that is pertinent to the case.

Mr. Bates—Well, we haven't yet.

Mr. Whipple—How are you to determine that? You want to take them and look them over, and you decline—

Mr. Bates—I was merely making the suggestion to save the time of the Court. If my brother doesn't wish to accede to it we will have to take the time of the Court to get at it.

Mr. Whipple—All right. I have offered, if I have the same privilege with regard to the directors' records, that you may take these and go over these just to the full extent you please, but I want to have the same privilege with the directors' records that you have with the trustees'.

Q. Mr. Eustace, will you go back to your record of January, 1898, and read in the record the document that is recorded on the first page of the record?

Mr. Whipple—We do not think, if Your Honor please, that the document is material, but if Your Honor would inspect it and then pass upon it, we accept Your Honor's decision with regard to it. If you will kindly hand it to His Honor.

The Master (to Mr. Krauthoff)—Do you object?

Mr. Krauthoff—Certainly Your Honor may inspect it. If there is any doubt as to its materiality, we desire to be heard upon it.

The Master—How much of this is now offered, down to there, or how far?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, including the whole record of the document. I don't know how far it covers, because I haven't examined the record.

The Master—I should hardly be prepared to rule that that could not be material for any purpose in the case. Why not let it go in for what it is worth?

Mr. Whipple—May I offer the suggestion that is in my mind? We are not informed as to the ground on which it is claimed to be material; but I understand the fact to be that prior to the Deed of Trust under which these trustees are appointed and are acting Mrs. Eddy had prepared a paper, which perhaps was intended as a Deed of Trust to The Christian Science Publishing Society, but which was not effective for the purpose. I think if Your Honor will read it, you will see that there is no real conveyance of anything.

The Master—It is prior in date to the trust deed of June 25th.

Mr. Whipple—Yes; that thereafter she apparently, under advice, prepared the Deed of Trust which became effective. Well, now as I understand it, this earlier paper, which was not really a Deed of Trust and not effective, is put in with some vague notion that it can alter or modify or in some way affect the terms of the Deed of Trust which actually did become effective. I think perhaps we all agree that for that purpose it cannot be admitted. Outside of that no ground occurs to me on which it could be admitted, but Your Honor's intimation was distinct, that perhaps there was some other ground, and if so, I have overlooked it. I merely want to make this statement, that we could not—

The Master—No, I didn't mean—

Mr. Whipple—and that Your Honor would not rule that it could be admitted for the purpose of modifying or in any way affecting the terms of the trust deed which went into effect. Outside of that, why, if it has any significance, of course it ought to be admitted.

The Master—My only statement was that I should hardly be prepared to rule that nothing in the document could possibly be material for any purpose of the case.

Mr. Whipple—I understood that statement, Your Honor.

The Master—That is as far as I go. If I exclude it, I suppose it would have to go into the record to show what was excluded. Therefore I think you had better put it in for what it is worth, subject to all objections.

Mr. Krauthoff—I would like to have the record show in that connection, if Your Honor please, that this instrument is not offered with any vague notion in mind on the part of anybody. It is a substantive document under the signature of Mary Baker Eddy, executed at or about the time of the transaction in question. We are not agreed that it is not admissible. We claim it is not only admissible, but it is conclusive evidence that this is a gift to The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Well, now, then, I don't understand that it is so admitted. I understand that the purpose is to show by this collateral instrument that the deed to the trustees of the property therein conveyed is really not a deed to the trustees, but a gift of the property therein described to The Mother Church. Is that it?

Mr. Krauthoff—We do not admit that this is a collateral instrument. This is an instrument executed by Mary Baker Eddy, the grantor, on the 15th day of January, 1898. It is direct and controlling.

The Master—If the defendants offer it, I think it had better go in, subject to the objection and on the terms which I have stated, and we had better discuss other matters relating to it further on.

Mr. Whipple—Then we don't need to take any formal exception, because, as I understand it, Your Honor will very likely deal with it later.

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Or perhaps it would be sufficient merely to reserve our rights with regard to its ultimate admissibility, in case it should be later considered.

The Master—Quite so.

Mr. Bates—Let me make this one suggestion, to make sure that Your Honor has the date right: I understood Your Honor to say the date of the other deed was June 25.

The Master—Jan. 25.

Mr. Bates—It is Jan. 25. This was 10 days before that.

The Master—All right. Go on.

A. (Reading):

"A Gift to The Mother Church, and A Grant of Trusteeship.

"My Beloved Students:—

"I appreciate your uniform loyalty and courtesy to me, who desire to know no partiality for one more than another of Christian Scientists, but to earnestly consider the welfare of all. I have asked for a small Board of Trustees, and as I believe a strong board; one is a business man, another a doctor, and still another a scholar. I now recommend that these trustees continue at present the efficient service of Mr. Joseph Armstrong as the business manager of the publishing house, for the benefit of The Mother Church in Boston, Mass. Please to hand an attested copy of this letter and document to the editors of The Christian Science Journal for publication in the February number of The Christian Science Journal.

"With love,

"MARY BAKER G. EDDY."

Mr. Streeter—What is the date of that? I didn't hear it.

Mr. Whipple—It isn't dated.

The Witness—There is no date to it.

Q. This letter you have read. Now, will you read the document that follows the letter?

Mr. Whipple—Now, just pause a moment. Where is the original of this letter? A copy cannot be admitted until the original is accounted for. Do you know, sir?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, the original of the letter is in the possession of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Then I think you had better produce it.

Mr. Krauthoff—No. It is admissible as against these plaintiffs, because they have written it on their own records.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment as to that. These are no records, these are not official records in any way. Anything that any one of these gentlemen write would be admissible against them, but this is written by somebody else.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is written in the records of the trustees at the time, Jan. 15, 1898, the predecessors in title of the plaintiffs, and we offer that record from their own records.

Mr. Whipple—We do not understand that these are official records.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is not a question of their being official records.

The Master—We have gone into their records for some purposes, I think, and it appears that this is a part of them.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—I think we had better go on and complete the reading of what is now offered.

Mr. Whipple—Very well.

The Witness—(Reading): "The following is the document above referred to, as prepared by its author for intended publication in the February number of The Christian Science Journal.

"Deed of Trust of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

"I hereby create a Board of Trustees, namely Edward P. Bates, James A. Neal, and William P. McKenzie, all of them being residents of Boston, Massachusetts, for the purpose of intrusting to the aforesaid persons The Christian Science Journal, and all moneys, subscription list, real estate, or whatever other property is connected therewith at this date. This property is only to be held in trust by the above-named persons for the purpose of carrying on the business which has been conducted by The Christian Science Publishing Society at Boston, Massachusetts. The net proceeds accruing from sales of The Christian Science Journal, and the literature connected therewith, after deducting therefrom semi-annually the salary for each of these trustees—shall, by the treasurer of the trustees for the publishing house of The Mother Church, be immediately handed over to the treasurer of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, to be applied to the use and for the benefit of this Church. I retain my ownership of The Christian Science Journal. It shall be copyrighted in my name during my so-called natural life, and the above-named Church shall receive the benefits derived therefrom; but thereafter the copyright, and the aforesaid Christian Science Journal shall become the property of this Church. No member of this Board of Trustees shall be empowered to conduct the business that pertains to the board without the knowledge and consent of the majority of its members. For the faithful performance of this trust each of the above-named trustees or their successors shall, from the date hereof, receive a salary of $1000, payable semi-annually, beginning at the date of this trusteeship. The Christian Science Journal shall not descend to my heirs or assigns; but it shall continue a benefit until it becomes a gift to The Mother Church—unless, for some reason, I shall, over my own signature and handwriting, withdraw it. If, for any reason, a member of this board becomes incapacitated to transact the duties of his office, his place shall by a majority vote of the board, subject to my approval (or by myself if I see fit so to decide), be declared vacant, and the remaining members shall at once proceed to elect a new member to fill the vacancy. No candidate shall be eligible to this position unless it can be shown that he or she is at the time of election a true and loyal Christian Scientist.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this fifteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord 1898.

"Witness, FRED N. LADD,

"HENRY W. STEVENS)

[Seal]

(Signed) "MARY BAKER G. EDDY,"

Q. When did you first know of that document, Mr. Eustace? A. I never have known of this document.

Q. Known of that record. A. Sometime after I came here.

Q. In 1913? A. I don't know whether it was in 1913, but sometime then I learned of it.

Q. Was the copy of that document included in the documents that you submitted to your counsel for an opinion of counsel as to the rights of trustees? A. Why, I don't think so; I don't think it was.

Q. Coming back to your own election or appointment as trustee in 1912, have you any knowledge of any proceedings in any court of record in Massachusetts appointing you as trustee under the instrument of Jan. 25, 1898? A. Have I any knowledge? I didn't get that, Mr. Krauthoff. (The question last put is read to the witness.) No.

Q. And do you have any knowledge of any with respect to the appointment of Mr. Ogden or Mr. Rowlands, in 1917? A. No.

Q. Or do you know of any proceeding in any court, accepting the resignation of Mr. McKenzie or Mr. Merritt or Mr. Neal? A. No.

Q. Or any of the trustees, so far as you know? A. No.

Q. Before you came to Boston to be a trustee in The Christian Science Publishing Society, you had become a member of The Mother Church? A. I had.

Q. And you were familiar with the provisions of its Manual? A. I was.

Q. Of its Church Manual. I believe you have heretofore testified that that was the spiritual direction to the members of The Mother Church? A. I have.

Q. You were familiar with the provisions contained in Sec. 5 of Art. XXV, on page 81? It is not in that, Your Honor. It is in the Church Manual—

The Master—It is quoted in the pleadings here somewhere, is it not?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, but I thought that it would be easier for you to find it in the Manual.

The Master—Go on.

Q. "Sec. 5. A person who is not accepted by the Pastor Emeritus and the Christian Science Board of Directors as suitable, shall in no manner be connected with publishing her books, nor with editing or publishing The Christian Science Journal, Christian Science Sentinel, Der Herold der Christian Science, nor with The Christian Science Publishing Society."

You knew of that provision in the Manual at the time that you were advised of your selection as a member of the Board of Trustees?

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. May we have Your Honor's direction or ruling with reference to the use of the Manual? The claim is broadly made that the terms of the Manual control the trustees with reference to their duties. The claim, as Your Honor has observed, is that the duties of the trustees in their legal aspects are entirely controlled by the instrument itself. The defendants claim that the deed itself may be modified, and was modified, by the subsequent statement in the Manual. We claim that such a legal proposition cannot be; that it is not sound. Now, the question thus being defined, at some time a ruling is necessary, and if Your Honor will give us your direction as to how that question may be raised, and when it will be dealt with, and the manner in which it will be dealt with, it will be very helpful at this stage of the proceedings. Of course our contention is that the trustees have acted strictly in accordance with the Manual, because of the reference to or incorporation of the trust deed in the Manual; but we say that that is not a matter with which the Court is concerned, or which it can take into consideration; that we cannot go into it in Court on account of the rule of law, which we may assume that the donor in this grant well knew, that an irrevocable instrument of this sort cannot be revoked or modified by any subsequent declarations. I invite or ask for Your Honor's direction, which will control the whole hearing and make it unnecessary to interrupt further by discussions.

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Whipple at this time, if Your Honor please—

The Master—I would like to know just what you ask me to do now, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Well, what we desire is to have at some time a ruling made in accordance with what we understand to be the law that, for the purposes of this proceeding, any statements in the Manual which attempt to qualify the deed are not admissible; and that is what they are trying to put in now; and therefore that the evidence would be excluded.

The Master—Have I everything before me at this stage that is necessary for the purposes of a final ruling on that question?

Mr. Krauthoff—Your Honor has just touched the surface of it. That is what this lawsuit is about, whether this Manual is in this court room or whether it is not. Mr. Whipple is saying that this Manual is not in this court room. I understand that that is—

The Master—No, no. He does not quite say that.

Mr. Krauthoff—I understood him this morning to say that this Court has no jurisdiction of the Manual; and to create here a legal aspect to this situation—

The Master—I am dealing now with the Manual as a matter of evidence, and I want to find out whether I have everything before me that is necessary for the purposes of making a ruling.

Mr. Whipple—What I say is, and I will repeat it merely because you (Mr. Krauthoff) do not seem to understand it, although I have stated it as clearly as I know how to state it: These trustees have conformed to the Manual as Christian Scientists, absolutely—

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—but that is of no consequence in the construction of this deed one way or the other. That is important in their relations with the Christian Science movement, and that alone. The question here is not that, and the Court cannot determine it, because it is not in the pleadings. The Court will determine here as to whether they have conformed with the Deed of Trust, which has not been and cannot be, as a legal proposition, affected or modified in any way by any subsequent declarations of the donor; and those subsequent declarations, if any, must have been made with a knowledge on the part of the donor that the deed Mrs. Eddy had made was irrevocable. That is our position with regard to it. And you, by saying that by subsequent words, Mrs. Eddy, with all her wisdom, did not understand that what she had done was irrevocable, impeach her wisdom and judgment, and you ought not to do it!

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, Mr. Whipple has stated very clearly the fundamental error which animates the bringing of this lawsuit, and that is that when the trustees bring a lawsuit they cease to be Christian Scientists, and cease to be bound by the Manual of the Founder of the religion of Christian Science. Now, our contention, if Your Honor please, about that is this, that upon the whole evidence that will be introduced in this case this Manual will be in this court room, as it is everywhere else on earth, the controlling authority with respect to Christian Scientists; and these plaintiffs claim to be such. It cannot be disposed of at this time without the presentation of evidence and argument that would practically suspend the hearing on this case. The Manual is here, and it is to be enforced against these plaintiffs as long as they claim to be Christian Scientists; and when they cease to be Christian Scientists they cease to be trustees.

The Master—I hardly feel prepared to make any final ruling at this stage on that question that you suggest. I think that we shall have to get all the evidence in before we can satisfactorily deal with that question. This is the Manual. Nobody disputes that it is the Manual; nobody disputes what the contents are; and the witness testifies that they are all known to him. Now, it does not seem necessary to call his attention to paragraphs in the Manual at any great length. I do not see why time should be taken up with that. You can refer later, for the purposes of argument, to anything that there is in the Manual that you desire.

Mr. Krauthoff—I had assumed, if Your Honor please, that if I read the provision in the Manual to which I was referring, it would enable Your Honor to understand more clearly the nature of the answer that I was seeking to elicit from the witness; and it is also—

The Master—Ask him if he is familiar with it. Can we not take it for granted that he is, if he says that he knows all that there is in the Manual.

Mr. Krauthoff—There is one other question, if Your Honor please, or one other statement that I would like to make. Those who follow this Manual lay it down as a precept that they must quote it, and not undertake to state it. That is another reason why I wished to read it, to try to be accurate.

Q. Are you familiar with Sec. 5 of Art. XXV of the Manual, which relates to the suitability of the persons connected with The Christian Science Publishing Society?

The Master—My question was whether there was any necessity of asking him that, if he says that he is familiar with the whole Manual?

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, very well. I was trying to make a point that I was going to follow up with a letter from Mr. Eustace. The letter is meaningless unless I point out in the Manual the provision under which it comes.

The Master—There is no objection to your pointing it out, but why read it in full?

Mr. Krauthoff—I will have that letter marked.

Mr. Whipple—What is this? Let me look at it.

[The paper referred to is passed to Mr. Whipple for inspection.]

Mr. Krauthoff—It is on page 81, Sec. 5.

The Master—You offer that in connection with a letter.

Mr. Krauthoff—I offer that as the basis of a question upon which I hope to offer a letter written by Mr. Eustace.

The Master—Well, now, why not proceed to put your question?

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Whipple is examining the letter.

The Master—Oh, yes. All right.

Mr. Whipple—It does not seem to me that the letter is admissible for any proper purpose, but I accept Your Honor's suggestion that you can deal better with the matters when they are more fully before you. Therefore let it be taken with the reservation of our rights that I have heretofore suggested.

Q. You saw that letter? Mr. Eustace? A. No, I did not, but then I—

Q. It is over your signature? A. (After examining the letter.) Yes; I wrote that letter.

Mr. Krauthoff. (Reading):

“Sept. 30, 1912.—
The Christian Science Board of Directors,

“The First Church of Christ, Scientist,
Boston, Massachusetts.

“Dear Friends:

“I want to express my sincere appreciation of your unanimous and cordial acceptance of my appointment by the Board of Trustees to fill the vacancy on that board caused by Mr. James A. Neal's resignation on assuming his larger duties as a member of The Christian Science Board of Directors.

“I feel deeply the honor and privilege of this appointment, for I know that it means increased opportunities for working for our cause in a broader and more far-reaching way, and I thank you for making my acceptance of this appointment possible by your approval thereof.

“It will be my earnest purpose to act in all matters as a genuine Christian and Christian Scientist should, and I know, because God alone is Mind, I shall not falter or fail in any work He may give me to do.

“I expect to take my place on the board Dec. 2.

“With kindest remembrances. Believe me,

“Very sincerely yours,
“HERBERT W. EUSTACE.”

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 34, R. H. J.]

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, in this letter you refer to the expression “our cause.” What do you understand to be “our cause” as used in this letter? A. The Christian Science movement as a whole.

Q. The Christian Science movement as a whole. And you were writing to The Christian Science Board of Directors about becoming a trustee in the Publishing Society as a part of the Christian Science movement as a whole? A. Yes.

Q. You say here, “I thank you for making my acceptance of this appointment possible by your approval.” What did the approval of the Board of Directors have to do with your becoming a trustee under this instrument of Jan. 25, 1898? A. When I was on here in September, I came on to see whether I was acceptable to the trustees, and whether I wanted to accept the trusteeship. After I had arrived here I discovered certain conditions present that I had no idea of. There were certain conditions on the Board of Directors that I found that I was wholly ignorant of; and I saw very clearly that in order to be any use here at all I was not going to be ground between the millstones. In other words, I found two conditions on the Board of Directors, two opposing factions, and I was not going to come here without a clear understanding that none of those men were objecting to my coming; and I said to Mr. Neal that I would not accept the trusteeship unless I was assured that there was no opposition from any member of the Board of Directors; and I asked him to bring that matter up, and to wire me; and he did; and I put into that letter the statement that you have read there, that I would not falter or fail in any work that I felt God had given me to do, because I foresaw apparently that some conditions might arise in these things that I had known nothing about before, that would cause me to have to take a very strong stand for Principle; and I said there that I would not fail if that came up.

Q. What did the approval of the Board of Directors have to do with your becoming a trustee? A. Not one solitary thing!

Q. Not one solitary thing? A. Not one solitary thing.

Q. Despite the provision in the Manual, to which your attention was called, that no person not deemed suitable by the Board of Directors shall be connected with The Christian Science Publishing Society?

Mr. Whipple—It does not say that in the Manual. You had better read it rather than attempt to quote it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I shall be very glad to read it.

“A person who is not accepted by the Pastor Emeritus and the Christian Science Board of Directors as suitable—”

Mr. Whipple—“and the Christian Science Board of Directors—”

Mr. Bates—You asked him to read it, did you not?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, but he was slurring over the important word in it, the word “and.”

Mr. Bates—Let us have your interpolations in italics.

Mr. Krauthoff—“A person who is not accepted by the Pastor Emeritus and the Christian Science Board of Directors as suitable, shall in no manner be connected with publishing her books, nor with editing or publishing The Christian Science Journal, Christian Science Sentinel, Der Herold der Christian Science, nor with The Christian Science Publishing Society.”

Q. Notwithstanding that provision in the Manual, you say that the ap-approval of the Board of Directors of your election as trustee was of no force or effect whatever? A. I should have paid no attention to that as applying to the trustees, anyway.

Q. Why not? A. Because the Board of Trustees is The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. Yes; but the Board of Directors;—I asked about the approval by The Christian Science Board of Directors of your election as trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society. A. I would say that it had nothing whatever to do with it.

Q. Nothing to do with it? A. Nothing whatever.

Q. That was what you thought when you came here in 1912? A. Absolutely, except in so far as I have said.

Q. When you came to elect the successor of Mr. Hatten did you write to the directors about Mr. Merritt? A. I did not.

Q. Did the trustees write? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did Mr. McKenzie write to your knowledge? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Who first introduced Mr. Merritt to you? How did you come to select him? A. Oh, I had met Mr. Merritt years before.

Q. Did the directors participate in any way in the selection of Mr. Merritt as a trustee? A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Not any member of the board? A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Coming down to the selection of Mr. Ogden and Mr. Rowlands, in July, 1917, the board consisted of Mr. McKenzie, yourself (Mr. Eustace), and Mr. Merritt? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. McLellan was a member of The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. He was.

Q. He passed away on the 17th of July, 1917? A. I don't know the date, but I believe that that is it.

Q. Did you have a conference with the Board of Directors then in respect to the situation caused by the passing of Mr. McLellan? A. I expect we did.

Q. You expect you did, do you? A. A conference about what?

Q. Well, the board elected Mr. McKenzie, the Board of Directors elected Mr. McKenzie, to be an editor to succeed Mr. McLellan, did it not? A. I suppose he was notified of that if they did. He is the editor—

Q. Do you say that you were not notified of it? A. I really don't know now whether we were or not.

Q. Do you mean now to say that you did not know in July, 1917, that the Board of Directors elected William P. McKenzie editor of the Christian Science periodicals? A. I say that I believe that they did, and that he was notified.

Q. You say that you believe that they did? A. I can't say. I was not present at their meeting, and therefore I can't say whether they elected him or not.

Q. And you never received any letter telling you that they had? A. If I did, it is in the records. I don't know.

Q. At any rate, Mr. McKenzie became the editor? A. He did.

Q. And he resigned as a trustee? A. He did.

Q. Did you have any conference with the Board of Directors of The Mother Church with respect to the selection of Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Ogden? A. Not in respect to Mr. Rowlands, but in respect to Mr. Ogden's being business manager. We talked the matter over.

Q. How did his being business manager make any difference? A. Simply the fact that he was business manager, and they had, as you have stated with regard to electing Mr. McKenzie—I suppose that they had elected Mr. Ogden at their various meetings; I don't know about that, except as I was informed.

Q. Mr. Ogden was the business manager when you came to be a trustee? A. He was.

Q. And you think he was elected by The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. I don't know anything about that, Mr. Krauthoff.

Q. Now, coming down to the election of Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Ogden, what conferences, if any, did you have with The Christian Science Board of Directors in July, 1917, on that subject? A. I do not remember any conference about Mr. Rowlands.

Q. What conference did you have about Mr. Ogden? A. Just simply as I have stated, that we had proposed to elect—Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Merritt and myself intended to elect Mr. Ogden, and we were talking the thing over in conference.

Q. Now, don't you remember, Mr. Eustace, since your attention is called to it, that the Board of Directors of The Mother Church and the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society got together in July, 1917, and discussed the whole subject about Mr. McKenzie becoming editor, and Mr. Watts becoming business manager, and Mr. Ogden becoming a trustee, and Mr. Rowlands becoming a trustee, and that you took that up with the Board of Directors and worked it up together? A. No, I do not. Mr. Rowlands I do not remember being discussed at all. Mr. McKenzie, Mr. Merritt, and I talked it over together. He was on both boards. And I felt, as I expressed to Mr. Merritt, that Mr. McKenzie was one of the best scholars in our movement and would make an admirable editor.

Q. When did you first hear that Mr. McKenzie was to become the editor? A. I cannot tell you; I do not know.

Q. When did you employ him? A. I think about the 27th of July, or something like that.

Q. After he had been elected by the Christian Science Board of Directors? A. I suppose that they had done so. As I have said, I don't know whether they went through the form of election or not, or what took place. I was not present.

Q. You now call the provision of the Manual about electing editors a form of election? A. I what?

Q. You now call the provision in the Manual relating to the election of the editors the form of an election? A. All right.

Q. Is that your statement? A. I suppose if I said it it was.

Q. Well, I just wanted to understand your statement. A. I can't state something that I was not present at, and therefore I don't know what took place or how it was done.

Q. I was calling your attention to the use of the word "form." In your direct examination, Mr. Eustace, Mr. Whipple asked you if you at all times were obedient to the directions of Mrs. Eddy that came to you in an authoritative form. Please state what you consider the authoritative form of Mrs. Eddy's directions to you as a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society and as a plaintiff in this lawsuit? A. The most authoritative form that I can conceive of as coming to me as a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society is the Deed of Trust which I accepted and signed.

Q. That is, you speak of the most authoritative form? A. That is to me the most authoritative thing that I have had.

Q. What is the next? A. The whole of Mrs. Eddy's writings.

Q. Where do you include the Manual? A. In those writings.

Q. In those writings? A. Yes.

Q. So that the Manual is an authoritative direction to you? A. Certainly it is.

Q. Oh, certainly. Now we are getting along. To what extent is it? A. As I have said, it is the spiritual guide.

Q. Yes; but to what extent is it? A. To the extent that I can spiritually understand and demonstrate it.

Q. And apply it? A. And apply it spiritually.

Q. To the conduct of your affairs as a trustee of the Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Spiritually.

Q. Yes, spiritually? A. Yes.

Q. Just tell us what you mean by that, Mr. Eustace. A. Well, I mean that the spirit of it must animate my thought in what I am doing.

Q. And in the conduct of your human affairs you are animated by the spirit of the Manual? A. I must be animated not only by the spirit of the Manual but the spirit of everything that Mrs. Eddy has written.

Q. Well, we will agree on that. Now, you spoke of the Deed of Trust being the most authoritative form. What is the distinction now between the two, the Deed of Trust and the Manual, with respect to one being the most authoritative form? A. Because the Deed of Trust to me is a legal, irrevocable instrument, that Mrs. Eddy signed, specifically stating exactly what my duties as a trustee must be.

Q. It being a legal instrument, you think it is greater than the Manual? A. To that extent, that she did it deliberately and purposefully.

Q. Didn't she write the Manual deliberately and purposefully? A. Just as she wrote her other books. Those books were given to us spiritually understand and unfold. The Deed of Trust to me is not in that same category.

Q. Isn't that a spiritual direction? A. It is in the sense that it is spiritual direction, but it is legally couched, and she has made it irrevocable.

Q. I understand. But in your bulletin that you sent out to such of the field as wrote to you about the bringing of this lawsuit you spoke of the inspired instrument? A. Yes.

Q. So the Deed of Trust is the inspired act of Mrs. Eddy? A. Absolutely.

Q. That is, as loyal Christian Scientists we all believe that everything that Mrs. Eddy did for the direction and guidance of the Christian Science movement is inspired? A. We do.

Q. Inspired; a revelation of God direct to Mary Baker Eddy? A. We do.

Q. What is the teaching of Christian Science as to spiritual ideas being at war with each other? A. No, thank you. Your Honor, I can't go into an explanation of Christian Science in court.

Q. I see no reason why you should not. A. That would require a long explanation.

Q. Well, I am ready to listen to it. A. Well, I am not—

Q. Do you contend as a Christian Scientist that two spiritual ideas can be in conflict or at war with each other?

Mr. Whipple—I would request Your Honor's ruling with regard to it; it seems to me we are getting far afield.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please—

Mr. Whipple—I am very much interested in Mr. Krauthoff's rather remarkable cross-examination. I do not want to have it interrupted unless Your Honor thinks it is too far afield.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, that is the basis of this lawsuit. The plaintiff is a trustee under an instrument which directs him to promote and extend the religion of Christian Science, an instrument which requires him to be an ardent and consistent advocate of and believer in the principles of the religion of Christian Science as taught by Mary Baker Eddy. His statement that the Deed of Trust is superior to, or most authoritative, or different from the Manual, is a denial of the Principle of Christian Science.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no. See here—

The Master—That is what you are going to claim and argue, as I understand?

Mr. Whipple—What is that? There is no real basis for that, of course. The question is now whether we shall go into a scientific disquisition as to the—what is it—the opposition of spiritual ideas?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—It seems to me you are a little far afield, a little metaphysical; but I am really very much interested in the development of your thought, I do not want to interrupt it.

Mr. Krauthoff—When Mr. Whipple knows more about Christian Science than he does now he will realize that that is the answer to his lawsuit.

Mr. Whipple—Well, it will have to take a lot of learning to find that a lawsuit is answered by going into vagaries of that sort.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, we object to counsel of The Christian Science Publishing Society referring to a statement of Christian Science as being a vagary.

The Master—Let us get back to your question.

Mr. Whipple—I am not referring to any principles as vagaries; the vagarious character of it is in the utterance.

Mr. Krauthoff—I object to that statement.

The Master—I do not see any good purpose to be gained by continuing this discussion at this stage. I wish you would read to me this question again to which objection has been made.

[The question is read by the stenographer: "Do you contend as a Christian Scientist that two spiritual ideas can be in conflict or at war with each other?"]

The Master—That is your question, is it?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—I think he may answer that. A. The question itself is an absurdity from the Christian Science standpoint, because we do not contend that there are two spiritual ideas. We maintain as Christian Scientists that God and his infinite manifestation is all in all.

The Master—Well, the question as I understood it, Mr. Eustace, was merely, "Do you contend so and so?"

The Witness—I answer, then, no, Your Honor.

Q. You say "No." You do that, as I understand, upon the statement that there are not two spiritual ideas. Are there two spiritual ideas?

Mr. Whipple—Where? What do you mean—are there two spiritual ideas? Where?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, in infinite consciousness.

Mr. Whipple—That is right. Finish it up.

The Master—I think this is going too far away from the issues we are trying. I will exclude that. He does not contend as you stated.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, I will ask this question, then. Counsel may ridicule what I am saying—

The Master—Never mind about that. Put your next question.

Q. What is the teaching of Christian Science as to two spiritual ideas? A. That there is no—

The Master—Two spiritual ideas in general?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, if Your Honor please, not in general.

The Master—That does not come down near enough to his testimony.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes. Very well.

The Master—To make it proper in cross-examination, so far as I am now able to see.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, we can only do this, Your Honor, by taking the human footsteps.

Mr. Streeter—Your Honor, we are not operating under the United States Court rule and the cross-examination is not confined.

The Master—Strictly limited. That is quite true, Mr. Streeter, I fully understand that.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, do you state that the instrument of Jan. 25, 1898, under which you are acting as a trustee, is the inspired word of God revealed unto Mary Baker Eddy? That is your statement? A. I consider that everything that Mrs. Eddy gave to the Christian Science movement was done from her understanding of divine Principle and the right direction of this movement.

Q. That includes the Deed of Trust? The Master—Pardon me one moment. I shall have to hear his question again.

[The question is read by the stenographer.]

The Master—Has he answered that directly, either that he does or does not?

Mr. Krauthoff—He answered it generally by saying that everything was—

The Master—Please give us a direct answer to the question. A. I say I do.

Q. And that is also true with respect to the Church Manual? A. It is true in respect to her published writings entirely.

Q. Now, in your direct examination, Mr. Eustace, you were asked the question whether you had ever endeavored to separate The Christian Science Publishing Society from The Mother Church. I gathered from your answer that you had not; that such a separation would be very injurious to the Publishing Society. A. Are you asking me a question?

Q. Yes. A. It certainly would be injurious to our movement as a whole.

Q. It would be injurious to the Publishing Society and to the Church and to the cause of Christian Science? A. As a whole.

Q. It would not result in the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science? A. No.

Q. That is the object of your trust? A. That is the purpose of our trust.

Q. In your bill you make this statement, in paragraph 4 of the bill: "The conception and plan of Mrs. Eddy for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science, as taught by her, involved two general branches of activity." Where did you get the authority for that statement? A. By the two trust instruments.

Q. The two trust instruments? A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean the instrument of Jan. 25, 1898, under which the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society were named? A. Yes.

Q. And then the two instruments printed in the back of the Manual relating to the ground on which the original Mother Church is erected? A. And the church, yes.

Q. Well, it is your understanding that the power of The Mother Church is limited to those two instruments?

A. The power of The Mother Church?

Q. Yes. A. To me The Mother Church is vastly more than this that is in Boston.

Q. Certainly, we agree with that. We will call your attention to that directly. The Manual is a part of The Mother Church?

The Master—Suppose you repeat the question. I think the witness is in danger of getting a little away from it. (The question is read by the stenographer.)

The Master—Will you answer that directly, Mr. Eustace?

The Witness—Let me hear that again.

(The question is again read.)

A. Yes.

Q. What becomes of the Manual of The Mother Church? A. It is the spiritual direction of its members.

Q. Yes; and the power of The Mother Church is not limited in any way, is it? A. As a spiritual idea.

Q. In other words, coming down to ordinary— A. As a human concept of course it is limited.

Q. It is limited? A. Yes.

Q. And you think that The Christian Science Board of Directors cannot do anything unless it is provided in those two instruments conveying pieces of real estate? A. I don't believe it is for me to say what they can do except in so far as it affects me, in my trust.

Q. Do you understand that under the Church Manual The Christian Science Board of Directors does have certain powers with respect to the Church itself? A. It has certain functions to perform.

Q. With respect to The Mother Church? A. With respect to its duties.

Q. So that the powers of The Christian Science Board of Directors are not limited to those two instruments conveying real estate? A. I cannot answer that question because it is not my business to do it.

Q. You are asked on direct examination if you knew of any document that made The Christian Science Board of Directors the governing board of the Christian Science denomination. You said you knew of none? A. I do not.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, if you will pardon me, I asked any instrument in which they were nominated as that, and called that. I merely wanted to bring out that they were arrogating to themselves new names that Mrs. Eddy had never authorized.

Mr. Krauthoff—You do not mean to say that they were not in truth and in fact the governing board of the Christian Science Church?

Mr. Whipple—I have said what I have said and you ought to be able to understand it. You misquoted my question and I was correcting you.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am glad to be corrected.

Mr. Whipple—That is right.

Q. What you mean is that you do not know of any instrument in which those precise words are used? A. I do not.

Q. The governing board of the Christian Science denomination? A. I do not.

Q. Who is the governing board of this Christian Science denomination? A. Divine Principle.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg pardon?

The Master—I think he may answer; he seems ready to do so. A. Divine Principle.

Q. Divine Principle; and the Church Manual provides that the business—I am talking now about the Christian Science denomination—the business of The Mother Church shall be transacted by a Christian Science Board of Directors. In your statement about separating these two you further continue, paragraph 4:

"The conception and plan of Mrs. Eddy for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science, as taught by her, involves two general branches of activity. The first, the organization of churches for a study of the Bible and doctrinal truths of Christian Science as contained in Mrs. Eddy's textbook of Christian Science, 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures.' The second, by increasing the circulation throughout the world of publications containing the truths of Christian Science, for the purpose thereby of more effectually promoting and extending Christian Science."

Now, I understood your direct examination was that you had not intended to separate those two general branches of activity? A. Certainly not.

Q. Is it not a fact that they are so essentially intermingled that they are incapable of separation? A. For the welfare of the cause they must work cooperatively together.

Q. Have they not at all times since Jan. 25, 1898, been administered as one and the same thing? A. I do not know what you mean by administered.

Q. Well, you were a trustee, and you were administering the trust as a trustee? A. Well, I was administering the trust of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. And you have at all times treated it as a part of The Mother Church, prior to the advice by counsel? A. Working in cooperation with the Board of Directors.

Q. But, however it was done, it was all done as one and the same thing? A. The whole movement is one; we recognize it, as one.

Q. The whole movement is one?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, we have agreed on that; the whole movement is one.

A. Yes, absolutely.

Q. And of course, being a movement, it has to have a leader? A. Divine Principle.

Q. Divine Principle manifested to human consciousness in some form that is tangible? A. Through our Leader's writings.

Q. Certainly. Now, then, we have one Christian Science movement, so that the second verse of "Onward, Christian Soldiers" was all right, wasn't it? A. It was the inference in that verse that we were divided.

The Master—We have not yet heard anything about "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Mr. Whipple—I take it Your Honor is expected to take judicial notice of that stanza; there has nothing been said about it.

Q. Why did you say you took that out of the article—because of the inference that we were divided? A. The inference that we were divided, and not one.

Q. Then we are not to be divided? A. Certainly not.

Q. And we are one? A. We are one, absolutely.

Q. Well, that is fortunate. Now, in your bill you speak of putting the affairs of the Publishing Society separate and distinct, page 75 of the bill. You speak of Mrs. Eddy's purpose "to provide a management and control of the Publishing Society, separate and distinct from the management and control of The Mother Church." Now, that is your understanding of Mrs. Eddy's purpose? A. Absolutely.

Q. And you say that you have no thought of separating the management and control of the Publishing Society from the management and control of The Mother Church?

Mr. Whipple—That he has never said at all. He has said the management is distinct, but the movement was one.

Mr. Krauthoff—Your Honor will recall that in direct examination Mr. Eustace stated, in response to Mr. Whipple's question, that he had never in any way attempted to separate The Christian Science Publishing Society from The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Now you are using the word "management."

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—After having stated it correctly, then you inadvertently—I won't suggest you did it otherwise—put in the separation of a different sort of thing.

Q. Now, this is what the bill alleges; you did allege it in the bill?

The Master—Wait a minute. You are now reading from the bill?

Mr. Krauthoff—Page 75; in which the purpose of Mrs. Eddy is stated by this witness under oath to be "to provide a management and control of the Publishing Society, separate and distinct from the management and control of The Mother Church."

The Witness—Yes.

Q. Now, have you at any time endeavored to separate the management and control of the Publishing Society from the management and control of The Mother Church? A. You will have to define first for me what management and control of The Mother Church means.

Q. I am taking your language, Mr. Eustace, over the signature of your counsel, and over your oath. A. That the Trust Deed of the Publishing Society is a distinct and well-defined instrument controlling the Publishing Society, and is separate and distinct from the Trust Deed controlling The Mother Church, the Board of Directors, goes without saying, I think.

Mr. Whipple—But the question is, if Your Honor please, as I understand, whether Mr. Eustace has done anything toward separating, and he has answered that he has not, Mrs. Eddy did it. Mrs. Eddy did it, and he has done nothing except what Mrs. Eddy did by the creation of the two different boards of management.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I prefer to cross-examine Mr. Eustace, and if Mr. Whipple wants to be a witness, why, I will be glad to cross-examine him.

The Master—What is your question now?

Mr. Krauthoff—I am calling Mr. Eustace's attention to his language in his bill of equity.

The Master—Now, what do you ask him about it?

Mr. Krauthoff—I ask him what steps he has taken to make the management and control of the Publishing Society separate and distinct from the management and control of The Mother Church.

The Witness—Why, I have taken no steps at all in any sense of separating it.

Q. Well, is the management and control of one separate and distinct from the management and control of the other? A. They are both under the direction of Mrs. Eddy's instruments.

Q. I asked you if they were separated? A. The instruments themselves separate them in that sense.

Q. I am talking now about whether you say they are separated? A. I say that the instruments themselves do all the separation that there is to be done.

Q. I am asking you what you say. A. I say that.

Q. You say they are separated? A. I say that the instruments themselves—

Q. I didn't ask you what the instruments said, I asked you what you say.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. Isn't the only thing that he can say what the instruments say?

Mr. Krauthoff—No; that is not all that he can say, if Your Honor please.

The Master—If he thinks he can say anything else let us see what it is.

The Witness—Why, there is nothing else I can say.

The Master—Very well; then I think that is the end of that line of inquiry.

Q. You mean all you can say is that the instruments so provide? A. The instruments do all that is done.

Q. And then you have done nothing? A. I have done nothing.

Q. Very well. Now, in your direct examination Mr. Whipple placed great stress upon the meeting of the trustees and the directors on Feb. 3, 1919, and, as I understand it, pointed out to you that you had agreed on Feb. 3, 1919, to do something, and that in some way or other somebody had reopened a controversy. You had not agreed on Feb. 3, 1919, each with the other, that the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society would in all respects obey the Church Manual? A. We never allowed for one moment that we were not obeying the Church Manual.

Q. You did not agree that you would? A. Why, we absolutely affirmed and reaffirmed, always, that we had never gone counter to our understanding of the spiritual intent of the Church Manual.

Q. And that is true today? A. That is absolutely true today.

Q. Who elects the editors of the Christian Science periodicals today? A. The Christian Science Publishing Society employ all the help necessary.

Q. I asked you who elected the editors of the Christian Science periodicals. A. I have never been present—

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me a moment, if Your Honor please. There is no election of those people. They are not properly candidates, there is no provision for an election. The Deed of Trust shows how they shall be selected or employed.

The Master—The question was, as I got it, Who elects the editors? Is that right?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—Of the Christian Science—what?

Mr. Krauthoff—Periodicals.

Mr. Whipple—The further suggestion is—

The Master—Wait a moment, I want to get the question.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, that is the question.

The Master—Who elects—

Mr. Krauthoff—Who elects the editors of the Christian Science periodicals?

The Master—Now I think you better let him answer that, if he can.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I want him to realize, and counsel also, that the directors are under injunction of this court that they shall not do it or attempt in any way to interfere. He is asked who today elects them.

Mr. Krauthoff—That injunction is procured by the plaintiffs in this case.

Mr. Whipple—Why, of course.

The Master—Let us see if he can answer the question; if he cannot answer it he can say so.

Mr. Krauthoff—The question can be stated in another form.

The Master—Do you withdraw the question?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, I do.

The Master—Very good. Now, start again.

Q. At this time in which body, The Christian Science Board of Directors or the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, is the power vested to elect the editors of the Christian Science periodicals? A. I cannot answer.

Q. What do you claim about it?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

The Master—What was your answer?

The Witness—I cannot answer.

Mr. Krauthoff—We have the right to know what he claims, if Your Honor please, because he says that he is obedient to the Church Manual, and the Church Manual contains a provision in that respect, which he has denied.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me; that assertion is groundless.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, let him answer the question, then.

Mr. Whipple—The Church Manual provides with regard to an election with Mrs. Eddy's approval; it gives no power whatever to these directors to act without it, and when she passed on the authority that she had ceased, the authority that the directors had ceased, under the Manual itself. Now, why not be fair with the witness?

Q. Mr. Eustace, you just heard the statement of Mr. Whipple as your counsel as to the power of the Board of Directors to elect an editor having ceased with the passing of Mrs. Eddy? You heard that statement. A. I heard it.

Q. Do you testify to that as a witness?

Mr. Whipple—Now, I pray Your Honor's judgment.

Mr. Krauthoff—We have the right, if Your Honor please, to test this man's loyalty to the Christian Science Church.

The Master—I think he may answer, whether he agrees to it or whether he does not.

A. I accept it absolutely, as the legal advice of our counsel.

Q. I am asking you now as a Christian Scientist. A. I cannot answer.

Q. As a Christian Scientist, now, do you say—

The Master—He says he cannot answer.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

Q. As a Christian Scientist and as a member of The Mother Church, do you now testify that the power of the Board of Directors to elect the editor has ceased because Mrs. Eddy has passed away? A. I cannot answer.

Q. I will ask you, as a Christian Scientist, if that is not an argument in favor of death? A. If that is not what?

Q. If that is not an argument of death?

The Master—I think we shall have to stop with his statement that he cannot answer; he says he cannot answer.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is now 1 o'clock.

Mr. Streeter—May I make a suggestion, Your Honor, before we adjourn? I suggest this to my Brother Whipple. This record book that has been produced here is described as the "Minute book of the Board of Trustees appointed by Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, for her trust in behalf of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts." Then follows, at the first meeting, an election of Mr. McKenzie as secretary. Then follow meetings in regular course. Now, there may be some things in this book, in this record, that, representing Mr. Dittmore, we shall want to use. Will it be agreeable to have it understood that the book is in the case with the master, but before anyone makes use of anything in it that attention shall be called to it? Is there any objection to that, Brother Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Well, if an arrangement can be made similar to that with regard to the records that are kept of the directors' actions, I am perfectly willing, adding to it a stipulation that the records kept by Mr. Dittmore of the directors' actions shall also be deposited and accessible to us in the same way. I am not asking you to make a trade, but I think it important that all these records of the activities of the different heads of the Church, or those employed in the major activities, should be made accessible all around. Do you agree that Mr. Dittmore's notes shall be thus made accessible?

Mr. Streeter—Do you agree, Brother Bates, to Squire Whipple's suggestion?

Mr. Bates—Not at this time.

Mr. Streeter—Well, as representing Mr. Dittmore, and not as representing the directors whom Mr. Bates represents, we desire so far as we are concerned to use, or may desire to use, some of the things in here.

Mr. Whipple—They will be made accessible to you, but I crave of you the same courtesy with regard to Mr. Dittmore's records.

Mr. Streeter—I don't think we shall have any difficulty about that.

Mr. Whipple—All right.

Mr. Streeter—The understanding is that these records of the trustees will be here, and accessible.

Mr. Whipple—They will be accessible to you, and on the condition that I suggested, that when Mr. Dittmore testifies I shall want his records accessible to me in the same way. I made that same offer to Mr. Krauthoff's clients, but that has not yet been accepted. There seems to be some reluctance about those directors' records being made accessible. I want to do what I can to get access to those records, but these will be accessible to you to put in such parts as you desire. Otherwise than that they are under the direction of the Master.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, I want to say that while in many respects we are at odds with my Brother Whipple, and in some serious respects, we are at odds with the clients of my Brother Bates; yet on this matter we join Brother Whipple in asking that the directors' records be made accessible, be brought here and be made accessible to us all. And I will say to Squire Whipple that, so far as Mr. Dittmore's records are concerned, official and unofficial, that they will be at the service of the Court and counsel.

Mr. Whipple—Thank you. We accept the offer.

Mr. Streeter—Only one thing more, and that is, that this book, Mr. Whipple, only comes down to 1906.

Mr. Whipple—We have the other one here. That will be accessible and under the direction of His Honor in the same way.

(Recess to 2 p. m.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

Q. (By Mr. Krauthoff.) Mr. Eustace, prior to adjournment I used a phrase that perhaps I did not make myself entirely clear in my use of. I used the phrase, "an argument of death." Now, I want to ask you this question: The Church Manual provides for electors or editors of The Christian Science Publishing Society in Sec. 3 at the bottom of page 25:

"The term of office for the Clerk and the Treasurer of this Church (also for the editors and the manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and the manager of the general Committee on Publication in Boston) is one year each, dating from the time of election to office. Incumbents who have served one year or more, may be re-elected, or new officers elected, at the annual meeting held for this purpose, by a unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting."

Now, as I understand, you have been advised by counsel that Mrs. Eddy, having passed away, and it being humanly impossible to get the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting, that whatever power The Christian Science Board of Directors ever had under this Manual to elect editors has ceased. A. Are you asking me if that is so?

Q. If that is so. A. I should say that legally, yes.

Q. Legally, yes. Are there other provisions in the Church Manual which also require the consent of the Pastor Emeritus? A. There are.

Q. For their exercise. Now, pursuing that statement to its logical conclusion, what does that do to The Mother Church? A. I cannot answer.

Q. Does it not argue for an extinction of The Mother Church? A. Not at all. It argues for demonstration, according to my understanding of Christian Science.

Q. For demonstration? I see. And of course you are helping to make that demonstration? A. I certainly am.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, when did you first become interested in Christian Science? A. I think in 1892.

Q. And where? A. In San Jose, California.

Q. You were interested in the church at San Jose? A. I was.

Q. Are you familiar with the incident of the church at San Jose contributing money to the publishing house fund of The Mother Church in 1909? A. I am.

Q. Will you be good enough to look at this letter and see if you are the author of it? A. I can tell you right now I am not the author of it.

Q. You are not the author of it? A. I may have had part in it. (Inspecting the letter) I evidently did not have part in it, except to vote for it.

The Master—I didn't get that.

The Witness—I evidently did not—oh, this is from the Sunday School. No, I did not have any part in that at all.

Q. It isn't a letter from the Sunday School. It says, "The members and the Sunday School of this church." A. The members of the Sunday School, isn't it?

Q. No. It says, "Members and the Sunday School of this church," and it is signed by the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of San Jose. A. By a committee, yes. Two thousand—yes, that is the amount; that is right.

The Master—I don't get your answer.

The Witness—I did not write that letter, but I was heartily in accord with that letter and voted for it.

The Master—I think the question was whether you wrote it, wasn't it?

The Witness—No, I didn't.

Q. Did the Church vote on the text of the letter itself, or merely on the donation? A. Well, I can't tell you that. I don't know.

Q. You don't know about that? A. No; at least I don't remember, Mr. Krauthoff, about it.

Mr. Krauthoff—In view of that fact I will not press my offer of it.

Q. Well, you were a member of this Church at San Jose, California, you became a member of The Mother Church? A. I did.

Q. And that, I believe, is The Mother Church, the Church of which you became a member? A. It is The Mother Church, yes.

Q. Mr. Whipple spoke of it as a so-called Mother Church. A. Well, that was in the sense of a term for it, wasn't it? The Mother Church is not an official term. That is The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

Q. Well, it is The Mother Church of Christian Science? A. That is the designation of it.

Q. And that is the fact? A. Certainly it is the fact.

Q. In the sixth paragraph of the bill of complaint, I find this allegation, page 37, on the left-hand side:

"In the growth and extension of the Christian Science movement, more than 1800 Christian Science churches and societies have been created and are now in existence. The 'Christian Science Board of Directors,' herein-after referred to as directors, or directors of The Mother Church, are directors of only one of these Christian Science churches: to wit, The Mother Church situated in Boston." Is that your understanding of the relationship of The Mother Church to its branches, that it is only one of the 1800 churches? A. That the directors are the directors of The Mother Church, and that they are not the directors of any of the branch churches.

Q. I appreciate that, but is The Mother Church only one of 1800 churches? A. The Mother Church is The Mother Church.

Q. I ask you the question, is The Mother Church only one of 1800 churches? A. Why, certainly it is only one.

Q. Only one? A. How many would it be? Yes.

Q. Isn't it the one? A. Are you referring to The Mother Church or The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts? The Mother Church is an expression.

Q. I am referring to one and the same thing, The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. A. Are you referring to it as a building?

Q. I am referring to it as it is, The Mother Church. A. Well, I will have to ask you to explain what it means, then I can answer.

Q. I am asking you now whether the organization, the church organization, of which you are a member— A. Yes.

Q. — the organization that you joined, is that only one of 1800 churches? A. Well, it certainly isn't two, so it must be one.

Q. Is it only one? A. That is all that it is.

Q. It isn't The Mother Church of all of them? A. There is no other Mother Church, therefore it is The Mother Church.

Q. Of all of them? A. Why, if you are going to say of all of them, yes.

Q. Very well. Why do the churches and societies which are not The Mother Church, why are they called branch churches and societies? A. Because I suppose that was Mrs. Eddy's form of government.

Q. Do you know where she got the word "branch"? A. I do not.

Q. Have you ever read the statement in the Bible, "I am the true vine and ye are the branches"? A. I have.

Q. Did it ever occur to you that is where it came from? A. It is certainly symbolic of that, doubtless.

Q. And the branch abides in the vine and the vine in the branch? A. That is right.

Q. So that each of these branch churches is a branch of The Mother Church? A. It couldn't be anything else.

Q. And they are called authorized branches of The Mother Church? A. I never heard that expression—that is, I may have heard it. I have never seen it as anything—

Q. You never attended a Christian Science service and heard them state that, "This is an authorized branch church of The Mother Church"? A. I perhaps have. I have attended a good many services.

Q. In any event they are branches of The Mother Church? A. Certainly they are.

Q. And when you were a member of this branch church in San Jose, California, you joined The Mother Church in Boston? A. I did.

Q. Did you do it because they were exactly alike? A. I did it because it was a privilege to belong to The Mother Church in Boston.

Q. What is the difference between The Mother Church in Boston and the branch church in San Jose? A. In spirit there should be no difference at all.

Q. Oh, certainly. In spirit there is no difference about anything. A. Yes; that is right.

Q. The spirit is one? A. That is right.

Q. But, now, as applied to the apprehension of the spirit in human consciousness, and as applied to church organization, what is the difference? A. Perhaps you have stated it yourself, if I accept that simile of the branch and the vine.

Q. Very good. Now, referring to the relation of The Mother Church to the branch churches, may I call your attention to Sec. 1 of Art. III of the Manual, page 31: "The Readers of The Mother Church and of all its branch churches must devote a suitable portion of their time to preparation for the reading of the Sunday lesson,—a lesson on which the prosperity of Christian Science largely depends. They must keep themselves unspotted from the world,—uncontaminated with evil,—that the mental atmosphere they exhale shall promote health and holiness, even that spiritual animus so universally needed." So that, Mr. Eustace, we do find in the Manual of The Mother Church provisions that regulate branch churches? A. We certainly do.

Q. You quoted a part of this in your bill, didn't you? A. Part of what?

Q. Part of these provisions about branch churches? A. Yes; we referred to it.

Q. You didn't quote them all? A. We didn't publish the Manual, no.

Q. No, and you didn't quote everything that applied to branch churches.

The Master—I don't find a quotation from the Manual. I find a quotation from a by-law. Perhaps that is the Manual.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is the same thing.

Q. You stated in your bill: "The church By-Laws created by Mrs. Eddy provide for local self-government of churches." Now, then, this Art. III of the Manual on page 31 is headed, "Duties of Readers of The Mother Church and of Its Branch Churches." What is your understanding of the relation of The Mother Church to a branch, in the event that the readers of the branch churches do not obey this part of the Manual? A. I can't answer that question, Mr. Krauthoff.

Q. Oh, but, Mr. Eustace, you stated under oath that these By-Laws provided for a local self-government? A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean by that a local branch church is free to select readers who are not members of The Mother Church? A. You didn't ask me that question.

Q. Well, I ask you that question. A. They are not free to elect any except members of The Mother Church.

Q. Suppose a branch church elected a person to be a reader who was not a member of The Mother Church?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. Does that seem to be profitable, as to what would happen?

The Master—It does not seem to me so.

Mr. Krauthoff—The point, if Your Honor please, is this: One of the important questions in this case is the relationship of The Mother Church to its branches. We are now offering to prove that it is an essential part of this Church Manual that a reader of a branch church is required to be a member of The Mother Church, and that if a branch church had a reader who was not a member of The Mother Church: then The Mother Church would be justified, and required, indeed, to exercise some jurisdiction over that branch church in the premises.

The Master—If there is anything in the Manual to show that, why, you have got it in the Manual. I hardly see what you gain by asking this witness his opinion about it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am dealing with this witness' allegation in his bill in equity that the Manual provides for local self-government. I am trying to demonstrate that that statement is not true.

Mr. Whipple—Well, if it isn't true, as Your Honor has stated, the Manual will show it.

The Master — The Manual will show it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am trying to prove he knew it when he signed the bill in equity.

Mr. Whipple—That is a task that you can't accomplish.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I have the right to attempt it; that he knew when he signed this bill in equity this Manual does not provide for local self-government by branch churches.

The Witness—May I answer that question?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

A. On page 70 of the Church Manual you will find the statement, "Local Self-government."

Q. Yes. A. (Reading):

"The Mother Church of Christ, Scientist, shall assume no general official control of other churches, and it shall be controlled by none other."

Q. That is, no official control of other churches. I am now asking you this question—

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. He hasn't finished. It goes right on.

The Master—Now, is it desirable to read this into the record? It is in the bill now.

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Certainly, but I understand we are undergoing a demonstration, and Mr. Krauthoff is trying to demonstrate that that is not so, although it is in the Manual.

The Master—It would seem to me to be best to avoid a duplication as much as possible, as the record is likely to be very bulky in any event.

Mr. Whipple—We agree to that entirely.

Mr. Krauthoff—And so do we. The provision to which I called Mr. Eustace's attention about the reader was not in the bill.

Mr. Whipple—We do allege in the bill that the directors by appointing those readers and by appointing officers of the branch churches wield a great power and influence, and that they threatened to wield it against these gentlemen. So by implication we stated it, but that is not inconsistent with that local self-government which Mrs. Eddy herself declared.

Q. May I ask, Mr. Eustace, what power The Christian Science Board of Directors of The Mother Church had to appoint readers in branch churches? A. They have no power whatever.

Q. To appoint any? A. Only inferentially.

Q. To appoint anybody in branch churches? A. No.

Q. Well, now, you said "inferentially." Please state it inferentially. A. Inferentially they could by removing a member of The Mother Church. They could inferentially remove him, or, rather, automatically remove him from membership in The Mother Church, as a reader in the branch church.

Q. That is, a reader in a branch church is required to be a member of The Mother Church? A. Yes.

Q. And The Mother Church, acting through this Board of Directors, could expel a man from membership in The Mother Church? A. For cause.

Q. For cause, and if he was so expelled he would not be eligible to be a reader in a branch church? A. That is correct.

Q. And your idea is that the Board of Directors will do that in order to make you cease being a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Well, I wouldn't like to accuse the Board of Directors of doing that.

Q. Well, you have done so in your bill in equity? A. I was going to finish.

Q. Oh, I beg your pardon. A. I would prefer to think of the Board of Directors as I have always endeavored to think of them, as the activity of Principle.

Q. But you have so alleged in your bill? A. I have been compelled to so allege in my bill.

Q. Do you know of any reader in a branch church who has been expelled from membership in The Mother Church because of his support of the trustees? A. No, I do not.

Q. You are a member of The Mother Church today, aren't you? A. I am.

Q. Coming back again to this relationship of The Mother Church to its branches, you are familiar with the rules for motives and acts? A. I am.

Q. Which, under the Church Manual of The Mother Church, is read in branch churches on the first Sunday of each month? A. It is.

Q. You are familiar with Sec. V of Art. VIII of the Manual which relates to the prayers in Christian Science churches? A. I am.

Q. And that applies to branch churches? A. It does. It applies, rather, to everybody, to all Christian Scientists.

Q. That is, the prayers in Christian Science churches shall be offered for the congregations collectively and exclusively? A. Oh, yes, that one; that is right.

Q. You are also familiar with the provision of Sec. XVI of Art. VIII of the Manual, which provides that it shall be the duty of the members of The Mother Church and of its branches to promote peace on earth and good will toward men, and so on to the end of that section? A. I am.

Q. And that applies to branch churches? A. To all.

Q. To The Mother Church and its branches. You are familiar with the provision in the Manual which provides that Christian Scientists shall not report for publication the number of the members of The Mother Church nor that of the branch churches.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. It seems to me in view of what Your Honor has said that it is enough that once for all Mr. Eustace has said he is familiar with the Manual, that we gain nothing except a waste of time by this repetition.

The Master—That is my view of the matter as I have already stated, Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, if Your Honor please, I am sorry I didn't make myself entirely clear.

The Master—However, having asked him if he is familiar with these different things, do you stop, or do you want to ask him some question?

Mr. Krauthoff—The point I desire to bring out, if Your Honor please, is that Mr. Eustace knows of all these provisions in the Manual showing the relation of The Mother Church to its branches and the relation of The Mother Church to its members.

The Master—Well, we should have assumed that from what he testified to some time ago. Now, do you ask him any—

Mr. Krauthoff—That these provisions of the Manual prove that his statement in the bill over the signature of his counsel and his own oath, that these branch churches have local self-government is not accurate.

The Master—Well, that is a matter for argument.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

The Master—But not for argument between you and the witness.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well. Then I shall proceed further.

Q. Referring, then, to the constitution of this branch church in San Jose, California, I mean its structure, will you please explain how services in Christian Science churches are conducted. A. They are conducted exactly in accordance with the rules given in the Manual, or, rather, the order of service, not the rules.

Q. And that is found on page — A. At least I suppose they are, Mr. Krauthoff. I haven't been there for some time.

Q. Well, all the branch churches you ever attended followed that, did they not? A. I think they all intended to, at least.

Q. Pages 120 and 121 of the Manual. A. 120.

Q. Now, what is the most striking feature of this service to one who has never attended one before? A. I think you will have to ask some one. I can't tell you.

Q. Well, I mean, take the question of the pastor, who is the Christian Science pastor? A. Science and Health with the Bible, and "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

Q. So constituted by the Manual of The Mother Church? A. So constituted by Mrs. Eddy.

Q. So provided in the Manual of The Mother Church? A. And so provided in the Manual.

Q. Now, may I show you a Christian Science Quarterly (passing a publication to the witness)? A. Yes.

Q. That is the current Christian Science Quarterly? A. That is the one in operation now.

Mr. Krauthoff—I offer that.

Mr. Whipple—Why is this offered? I see no reason for introducing it.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, it is offered to show the absurdity of the claim that The Christian Science Publishing Society, under a management separate and distinct from that of The Mother Church, can continue to publish the sermons of The Mother Church, and at the same time claim not to be subject to its orders.

Mr. Whipple—That is exactly what the Deed of Trust says shall be done.

Mr. Krauthoff—That will be a matter of argument.

The Master—Leaving the discussion of that question for the present, what is the present evidence that is offered? I have not been able to make out exactly what the point is now.

Mr. Whipple—I have not, either, but he offers a Christian Science Quarterly, and now—

The Master—That is identified.

Mr. Whipple—Why, yes; he says that it is a copy of it; but what it is—

The Master—That has been identified by the witness. Now, do I understand that it is offered in evidence?

Mr. Whipple—I judge so by his handing it to the stenographer.

Mr. Krauthoff—I offered it in evidence.

The Master—Do you want to see it?

Mr. Whipple—I object to it, because I do not think—

The Master—Will you point out anything in it that you offer in evidence?

Mr. Krauthoff—I offer the whole document.

The Master—The whole number of The Christian Science Quarterly?

Mr. Krauthoff—The whole number of The Christian Science Quarterly.

The Master—Is there objection?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—I do not think that you can do that, without pointing out something in particular in it that has a bearing on the case.

Mr. Krauthoff—The whole document has, if Your Honor please. May I make myself clear? This is the sermon which is preached in Christian Science churches. We offer it in evidence to show that it is published by The Christian Science Publishing Society. We offer it in evidence to show that their claim is that they have the right to publish the sermons of The Mother Church, and not be subject to the control of The Mother Church; and we have a right to show that as bearing upon our good faith in removing these trustees that they claim to be our preacher, but not subject to our control.

The Master—The witness identifies that as one number of The Christian Science Quarterly. You offer it to show that it is a publication by The Christian Science Publishing Society. Perhaps there is no objection to that.

Mr. Whipple—Well, not for any such purpose as it has been offered for. It is admittedly The Christian Science Quarterly. The Christian Science Quarterly is admittedly published by The Christian Science Publishing Society; and Your Honor will remember that under the Deed of Trust the publication of that quarterly is imposed as a duty upon the trustees.

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—I think that I will admit that for the present, anyway.

Mr. Whipple—Very well.

[The copy of The Christian Science Quarterly, for the quarter of April, May and June, 1919, Vol. XXX, No. 1, is marked Exhibit 35. R. H. J.]

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, there are two of these Quarterlies that I have shown you—

The Master—Do you desire to offer more than one of them?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, no; only just one.

Mr. Whipple. This is a copy that Mr. Watts let me have.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, I understand.

The Master—One is offered and identified. Now, do you wish to offer another?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, no; only one is offered.

The Master—That is what I say.

Mr. Krauthoff—It seems to me that the one I handed to the stenographer, and that he numbered, has passed out of his hands.

Mr. Whipple—No, I do not think he numbered it, that is the trouble.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, we have this one now, and this is Exhibit 35.

The Master—Now, it has been numbered, and I have admitted it subject to the objection of the plaintiffs.

Q. Now, this Quarterly has in it 13 lessons, and the titles are given in the Quarterly, one for each Sunday—

Mr. Whipple—May we hand an illustrative copy to Your Honor? It is not the same month, I think, but it is of the same character.

Mr. Krauthoff—Is that for another quarter?

Mr. Whipple—I do not know. What is your number?

Mr. Krauthoff—April, May and June.

The Master—It is the same thing.

Mr. Whipple—Of the present year.

Q. Then, in addition to the 13 titles that there are on this Quarterly that is offered in evidence, there are 13 other titles which appear in the Quarterly for January, February and March of 1919? A. Yes.

Q. Twenty-six titles in all? A. I think that that is correct.

Q. Now, these 26 titles are the only titles of the Bible lessons, or the lesson-sermons in Christian Science?

A. They are.

Q. The same titles are used twice a year? A. Twice a year.

Q. Those titles were established by Mrs. Eddy? A. They were.

Q. And these lesson-sermons, or Bible lessons—we will call them Bible lessons—consist of a Golden Text, Responsive Reading, both the Golden Text and the Responsive Reading being selected from the Bible, and then correlative passages from the Bible and Science and Health? A. That is correct.

Q. Divided into six sections? A. Yes.

Q. And they are read by readers? A. They are.

Q. Usually a man and a woman? A. Usually.

Q. In each case the second reader first reads the first section from the Bible? A. That is correct.

Q. And then the first reader reads the correlative passages from Science and Health? A. That is correct.

Q. You understand these passages are thought to be correlative? A. They are.

Q. That means that the quotations from Science and Health have some bearing on the selections from the Bible? A. A commentary, if you like to use that term, on the Bible.

Q. You have served on this Lesson Committee? A. Just a short time, yes.

Q. And you do not take any sentence in Science and Health and match it against any statement in the Bible? A. No; you try to make it intelligible.

Q. In other words, it is the use of intelligence in the preparation of these lessons? A. That is right.

Q. A very important work? A. Very.

Q. It is done now by how many people? A. Six people.

Q. By whom are they selected? A. By the Board of Trustees.

Q. And how much of their time do they give to this work? A. Well, if you asked them, you would probably find that they give a great deal of their time.

Q. And your statement of your position is, Mr. Eustace, that the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society have the sole right to select this committee? A. Absolutely the sole right.

Q. And The Mother Church, in whose services these lessons are read, has nothing to say about who shall compose that committee? A. Nothing whatever.

Q. Nor the branch churches? A. Nor the branch churches.

Q. At any time were any members of the Bible lesson committee appointed with the consent of The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Not that you know of. And, so far as you know, none who are now acting have been? A. They have known of it, The Christian Science Board of Directors have.

Q. I beg pardon? A. The Christian Science Board of Directors have known of those who were appointed.

Q. And if The Christian Science Board of Directors objected to any one of the six, that objection would not be controlling with you? A. Any objection that The Christian Science Board of Directors made on anything that had to do with The Christian Science Publishing Society would be given due honor and consideration.

Q. But it would not be controlling in any sense, would it? A. It would not be controlling in any sense of the word.

Q. Very well. Now, in your Bill in Equity, you say in paragraph 4, in describing the two general branches of activity, that, "The conception and plan of Mrs. Eddy for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science, as taught by her, involved two general branches of activity. The first, the organization of churches. . . . The second, by increasing the circulation throughout the world of publications containing the truths of Christian Science." Now, these Bible lessons, consisting of sermons read in the churches—to which one of these branches of activity do those belong? A. The Publishing Society.

Q. It does not belong to the organization of churches for the study of the Bible and teaching the doctrinal truths of Christian Science, as contained in Mrs. Eddy's textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures"? A. The branches organize themselves, and then they study this periodical issued by the Christian Science society.

Q. I understand. But you speak here of two branches of activity. To which branch does it belong—to one or both? A. Which do you mean? The Quarterly? To which does that belong?

Q. Yes. A. It belongs to the Publishing Society.

Q. What do the churches have to do with it? A. Why, it is used in their services.

Q. They buy it? A. They buy it.

Q. And you print it? A. We print it and issue it.

Q. And hence it is within your branch of activity? A. It is within our branch of activity.

Q. Suppose they never read it? A. That would be their loss.

Q. I see. Now, this Quarterly is one of the most valuable things that you have, is it not? A. It is one of the most valuable things we have.

Q. And will you be good enough to state how many copies of this you sell? A. I think about 450,000.

Q. Yielding about a dollar a year apiece? A. That is the price. It does not necessarily yield that.

Q. That is what you get for it? A. No, not quite that, because there is a discount to the churches.

Q. And they are sold to the branch churches and to The Mother Church? A. They are.

Q. And read by many Christian Scientists throughout the world who are not able to go to church? A. They are.

Q. And read by them daily? A. I hope so.

Q. By some of them. In connection with your work in the branch church at San Jose, you became familiar with the provisions of the Manual with respect to the establishment of reading rooms, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And every branch church, by the Manual of The Mother Church, is required to have a reading room of its own, or to join with some other church in the same vicinity in the establishment of a reading room? A.

I don't know that "the vicinity" means anything.

Q. I mean in the same city. A. In the same city.

Q. That is true, is it not? A. I think so.

Q. These reading rooms in many places are located in the church building itself? A. No, I think not.

Q. In some? A. No; I thought that that had disappeared entirely.

Q. At any rate, they are a part of the church activity itself? A. Certainly they are.

Q. The librarian in each reading room is elected by the local church? A. Yes.

Q. The rent for the reading room is paid by the local church? A. It is.

Q. And the whole management of that reading room is in the hands of the local church? A. I understand so.

Q. With the management of the reading room you have nothing to do? A. Nothing whatever.

Q. You do sell literature to these reading rooms? A. We do.

Q. And, under the Church Manual, the literature of The Christian Science Publishing Society, together with the works of Mary Baker Eddy and the Bible, is the only literature that may be sold in these reading rooms? A. Absolutely.

Q. And assuming that a branch church did not obey that part of the Manual, and undertook to sell literature that was not published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, would you as trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, under the Deed of Trust, have any power to compel them to buy your literature? Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment as to that. These hypothetically possible punishments for things that have nothing to do with this issue—

Mr. Krauthoff—They are neither hypothetical nor impossible.

Mr. Whipple—Well, they have nothing to do with this issue, I think. I ask to have it excluded.

The Master—If there is any custom or usage about it you might show that, perhaps.

Mr. Whipple—Yes; but that is not the question.

The Master—The answer to a purely hypothetical question I do not think can be of any benefit to us.

Mr. Krauthoff—The point that I tried to make, if Your Honor please, is this—

Mr. Whipple—Well, I will waive it rather than have a discussion. Perhaps it will take less time, and I am merely trying to save time.

The Master—Go on.

The Witness—May I have the question?

The Master—Read the question.

(The question is read as follows: "And assuming that a branch church did not obey that part of the Manual, and undertook to sell literature that was not published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, would you as trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society under the Deed of Trust have any power to compel them to buy your literature?")

A. None whatever.

Q. That depends upon the enforcement of the Church Manual? A. That would depend on their being Christian Scientists themselves.

Q. And upon the Church Manual? A. I suppose that would guide them in it.

Q. That is, Christian Scientists generally are guided by the Church Manual? A. They certainly ought to be.

Q. What control have The Mother Church and the branch churches over the literature exclusive of the works of Mary Baker Eddy that is sold in their reading rooms? A. The Mother Church, you say?

Q. What control has The Mother Church, or its branches, over the Christian Science literature, exclusive of Mrs. Eddy's works, that is sold in the reading rooms of the branch churches and societies of The Mother Church? A. None, whatever.

Q. None whatever? A. Except as Christian Scientists, if it was not correct Christian Scientists' literature, they would very quickly report it as incorrect, and why it was incorrect, and it would doubtless be changed at once.

Q. That is, it would be reported to the trustees? A. To the trustees.

Q. But the churches as such have no control over the literature that is sold in their own reading rooms? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Not that you know of. In your work as a member of a local church, you became interested in Sunday schools, did you not? A. I was indirectly interested, but never actively.

Q. The church had a Sunday school? A. The church had a Sunday school, yes.

Q. And there is a provision in the Church Manual about Sunday schools? A. There is.

Q. And about how Sunday school scholars shall be taught? A. There is.

Q. Coming back to this subject of reading rooms, for the moment. In the literature of The Christian Science Publishing Society, found in the Journal and the Sentinel, there are a great many articles on the subject of reading rooms, are there not? A. I think from time to time there are articles.

Q. Showing their importance to the Christian Science movement? A. Certainly.

Q. And pointing out the literature that is to be sold in them? A. I suppose so. I have not any direct article in mind in supposing it.

Q. Would it be possible to write an article on the proper conduct of a reading room without referring to the Church Manual? A. No; I do not know that anyone would. I do not know about that.

Q. You have not tried it? A. No, I have not tried it.

Q. Now, as to the Sunday schools. Those are provided for, I think you said, in the Church Manual? A. They are.

Q. Each branch church and The Mother Church have a Sunday school? A. They do. At least I suppose so.

Q. As provided in the Church Manual? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have a great many articles in the periodicals of The Christian Science Publishing Society, as you call them, on the Sunday schools? A. If there are a great many. I didn't know it, but then I suppose there are occasionally some.

Q. Well, there are some? A. Yes, some, I think.

Q. And these articles refer to the Church Manual? A. I will take your word for it.

Q. Does The Mother Church have what is known as a Board of Lectureship? A. I believe it does.

Q. You believe it does? A. Yes.

Q. And you have heard of it? A. I have.

Q. And that is provided for in the Church Manual? A. It is.

Q. The lecturers, the members of this Board of Lectureship, are appointed by The Mother Church? A. Appointed by the Board of Directors, I believe, yes.

Q. Yes, for The Mother Church? A. Well, I do not recognize, and I do not want to be understood as recognizing, that the Board of Directors is The Mother Church.

Q. Nor the governing body of The Mother Church? A. The directors are directors of The Mother Church.

Q. And when the Board of Directors appoint a lecturer, he is the lecturer of The Mother Church? A. He becomes by virtue of that appointment a lecturer of The First Church of Christ—a member of the Board of Lectureship of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, Mass.

Q. Of course the trustees are not the Publishing Society either, are they? A. Well, that is a little different. The Board of Trustees is The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. Coming back, then, to this Board of Lectureship—are any lectures on Christian Science delivered in any of the branch churches or societies, except through a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church? A. No, not that I know of.

Q. Not that you know of? A. Yes.

Q. These lectures are published by The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. At times.

Q. At times? Where do you get the manuscript from which to publish them? A. Usually we take it from a lecture given in The Mother Church.

Q. Who delivers the lecture to you? A. I do not know. It goes to our Editorial Department.

Q. You are not advised that those come to you from the clerk of The Mother Church? A. No, but that would be a very natural way for them to come, and a very correct way.

Q. Under your interpretation of the Deed of Trust, as you are now advised, you are not limited in the publication of lectures to lectures delivered by the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church? A. We would not publish any lecture that was not.

Q. I mean, you have the power to do it, as you understand it? A. We have only a power to conduct those publications according to Christian Science.

Q. I understand. But what, under the Deed of Trust, limits you in the publication of pamphlets? A. I really do not know that there is any, but we have to be Christian Scientists.

Q. Well, I appreciate that. And so, being Christian Scientists, you do not print any lectures on Christian Science except those delivered by the lecturers of The Mother Church? A. We would not.

Q. You have not? A. I have not; I would not.

Q. There is in connection with The Mother Church a Board of Education? A. There is.

Q. And you have attended that Board of Education? A. I have had that privilege.

Q. And only members of The Mother Church may attend that? A. That is true.

Q. So that you are a practitioner of Christian Science, I believe? A. I am.

Q. And devote a part of your time to that? A. All the time I can.

Q. All the time you can? And as a practitioner of Christian Science you have your name in the list of practitioners in The Christian Science Journal? A. I have.

Q. Only members of The Mother Church may appear in that list? Is not that true under a rule of the Publishing Society? A. Yes, under the rule of the Publishing Society.

Q. There is nothing in the Deed of Trust that regulates that, is there? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Nor in the Manual? A. Except to be good Christian Scientists.

Q. I understand. And being good Christian Scientists, you have not up to the present time put the name of anybody in that list who was not a member of The Mother Church? A. We certainly have not.

Q. Are you legally, by the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, restricted to that? A. Why, I should say not, except in so far as we are good Christian Scientists and therefore would not do it.

Q. This list of practitioners prior to April, 1919, carried with it the statement at the head of it: "The practitioners whose advertisements appear in these columns are members of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, U. S. A., and are amenable to its by-laws." For many years, you understand, that The Christian Science Publishing Society passed on these applications for advertisements in The Journal of Practitioners and Nurses? A. As far as I know always until just lately.

Q. Until just lately? A. And we are still passing on them absolutely for the advertisement.

Q. I don't understand that. A. We are still passing on them, so far as the advertisement is concerned; but we have for the last few months allowed the Board of Directors to make to us the recommendation as to who they considered fitted to have an advertisement.

Q. And that advice of the Board of Directors is not controlling on the trustees? A. If you mean it is controlling since the agreement was made, and the Board of Directors broke it within 48 hours, almost, I do not know that we are compelled by honor to accept it any longer.

Q. Now, the agreement was in writing, was it not, on the 1st of February, 1919? A. The agreement was a memorandum agreement which was part of a reconciliation, and which was promptly broken.

Q. Now, let me get back to that. Isn't there a clause in that memorandum which says that, whatever the trustees did, prior to Feb. 1, 1919, with respect to the recognition of practitioners and nurses, and churches and societies, was not done by the trustees under the Deed of Trust, but was done by the trustees at the request of the Board of Directors? A. Quite right.

Q. So that you were not acting under the Deed of Trust? A. We were only acting so far as what we published in our periodicals was concerned—was correct.

Q. But in passing on practitioners and nurses, and churches and societies, you were not acting under the provisions of the Church Manual? A. If you mean—

Q. I mean, you were not acting under the Deed of Trust? A. If you mean, Mr. Krauthoff, that we had never arrogated to ourselves the right to determine whether a church should be a branch church of The Mother Church, or a practitioner, or an individual Christian Scientist, be allowed to become a public practitioner, no, we have never done that. We have only passed on the churches and on the practitioners to find out for ourselves whether their advertisement was a fit and proper advertisement to carry in The Christian Science Journal.

Q. Well, Mr. Eustace, prior to the 1st day of February, 1919, did not the trustees of the Publishing Society undertake to say whether a practitioner could have a card in the Journal? A. Ah! Whether they might have an advertisement in the Journal, yes.

Q. Certainly. A. Yes.

Q. You, prior to the 1st day of February, 1919, passed on that question? A. We did. We still do.

Q. Well, you do not pass on it now exactly the way you did then? A. It is only the form of passing on it that is changed.

Q. Prior to the 1st day of February, 1919, your practice, as I understand it, was that the application came direct from the practitioners to the trustees? A. It did.

Q. And the trustees then stated that if the trustees declined to give a practitioner a card in the Journal that was an end of it? A. That was—if we could not accept their advertisement it was for good and sufficient reasons, and we would not accept it.

Q. And The Mother Church had no power to see that one of its members got a card in the Journal? A. No, it had no power.

Q. And the Journal is the official organ of The Mother Church? A. That is right; it is the official organ.

Q. Published by The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Yes, but that was nothing to do with that.

Q. I understand. Now then, this list of practitioners is used in reading rooms of the branch churches of The Mother Church? A. Is it, do you say?

Q. Isn't it? A. I suppose it is.

Q. That is, you do not know that people go to the branch church reading rooms asking for a practitioner and are given a copy of the Journal? A. I know in every town there are probably as many active workers who have not their cards in the Journal, practicing in Christian Science, as perhaps have their names in the Journal.

Q. Well, does a card in the Journal mean anything? A. A card in the Journal means that those people are ready to devote their entire time to the practice of Christian Science and are at the service of the public night or day.

Q. Your card is in the Journal? A. It is.

Q. There is a provision in the Manual about cards in the Journal, is there not, about the time that they are required to give—that practitioners are required to give? A. That is in reference to those holding official positions.

Q. Section 9, on page 82:

"Members of this Church who practice other professions or pursue other vocations, shall not advertise as healers, excepting those members who are officially engaged in the work of Christian Science, and they must devote ample time for faithful practice."

Are you officially engaged in the work of Christian Science? A. I have conceived of my work as being officially engaged in Christian Science work.

Q. What office do you hold in Christian Science work? A. I hold the office of trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society, established by Mrs. Eddy under a Deed of Trust.

Q. Now, coming back to this agreement of February 1, 1919. That agreement was read in evidence by Mr. Whipple in Governor Bates' letter to Mr. Whipple. Did I understand you to say that that agreement, if we may so call it, is no longer operative? A. Mr. Krauthoff, if I expressed my opinion, I think it was one of the most disgraceful and most dishonorable acts that could possibly have been performed by any one set of men with another set.

The Master—One moment, Mr. Witness. You are asked whether in your opinion it is any longer operative.

The Witness—I say, on account of its being broken that it is not operative any longer unless we choose to allow it to be so.

Mr. Krauthoff—I move that the previous answer of the witness be stricken out, if Your Honor please, as not responsive.

Mr. Streeter—I object to it being stricken out. I do not see why it should be stricken out.

The Master—I think it was irresponsible to the question. I do not see why it should not be stricken out.

Mr. Whipple—I think it is clear, if Your Honor please, that Mr. Eustace mistook the question. I think that is why his answer was beside the mark.

The Master—But it is not at all unnatural that he should have answered as he did.

Mr. Whipple—I think he thought he was asked about it.

The Master—Witnesses find it difficult to confine their attention to the precise question.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, exactly.

Mr. Bates—May it be understood, Your Honor, that when an answer is stricken out that the reporters are not to have it printed? I have noticed that they have printed the whole proceedings in one or two instances just the same. The effect of striking it out is so that it shall not be on the record and not published in the record.

Mr. Whipple—No. I understand that whatever is said goes into the record. The striking out means that it will not be considered by the tribunal.

Mr. Bates—I think it should be stricken out.

Mr. Whipple—Otherwise your record is not complete, unless what happened is transcribed.

Mr. Bates—I will leave it to Your Honor's judgment whether it should appear in the record. Your Honor understands this is being published verbatim as an official record in the press.

The Witness—Your Honor, may I ask that it be stricken out?

The Master—One moment. I think not now. Isn't that all governed by agreement of counsel?

Mr. Streeter—I did not understand Your Honor.

The Master—Isn't all that matter, what shall appear in so much of the stenographer's record as printed in the papers—isn't that all governed by the counsels' agreement? Have I anything to do with it?

Mr. Streeter—I do not see how you have. And not only that, but with reference to any such response as was made here, whatever Your Honor may order about its being stricken out—suppose you ordered it be stricken out, that means that Your Honor does not consider it.

The Master—Does not remain any longer a part of my record.

Mr. Streeter—Not a part of your record, but it cannot go out of the stenographer's record.

The Master—Of the official record.

Mr. Krauthoff—We do not press the motion to strike out, if Your Honor please, if Mr. Eustace wants it.

Mr. Streeter—We should object to having the record mutilated by making a hiatus here.

Mr. Whipple—The Court has ordered it stricken out. Do you want it stricken in again?

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, no, I am quite content to regard the incident as closed.

Mr. Whipple—That is, you started to say something about not pressing your motion to strike out. I just wanted to know where you were going to definitely land.

Mr. Krauthoff—I did not know at the moment that it had been stricken out.

Mr. Whipple—Well, all right.

Q. Mr. Eustace, coming back to this memorandum of February 1, 1919. Do you understand that the arrangement or agreement, as we call it, about the practitioners and nurses, and the churches and the societies, was a part of one comprehensive plan of settlement and unless the whole affair was adjusted that those steps were nothing? A. Why, I certainly took it as a part of the adjustment.

Q. Of the adjustment? A. Yes.

Q. And you distinctly stated in that adjustment, "This work has heretofore been done by the trustees at the request of the Board of Directors and by their authority, and not by the trustees under the Deed of Trust." A. We did.

Q. That was added by your counsel? A. It was.

Q. And that statement is true? A. That statement is inferentially true; they had never made the request of us at all to do it.

Q. Well, this statement that you did not do it under the Deed of Trust is true? A. Yes, that part of it.

Q. So that under the Deed of Trust it is no part of your duty to determine whether a branch church shall have a card in the Journal, is it? A. Oh, I didn't say any such thing. Whether they shall be a branch church, not whether they shall have a card in the Journal. That absolutely is our duty and we still maintain that, and we still do it.

Q. Then, as I understand it, a branch church may be formed in accordance with the Manual and be recognized as such by The Mother Church, and the Board of Trustees will still be free to decide whether or not that church shall have a card in the Journal? A. Absolutely.

Q. And The Mother Church has no control over that? A. No; no control in the sense in which you are using the word control.

Q. In other words, if a branch church is recognized by The Mother Church you do not put its card in the Journal unless you decide that it is proper to put it in? A. You see, Mr. Krauthoff, we have such a high regard and respect for The Mother Church and its Board of Directors that we are very glad for them to do that work and relieve us of a great deal of it, and therefore we are glad to accept their D. K. on any branch church or practitioner or nurse.

Q. In other words, when The Mother Church recognizes a branch church it is acting as an agency of the Publishing Society? A. That is right. It is very nice to have them do that.

Q. What part of the Publishing Society work relates to the organization of churches? A. What part?

Q. In your Bill in Equity you divided the two branches of activities that Mrs. Eddy established; first, the organization of churches. A. That is under the Manual.

Q. No; but you have stated in your bill, "The conception and plan of Mrs. Eddy for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science as taught by her, involved two general branches of activity. The first, the organization of churches." A. Well, that is The Mother Church and the branch churches.

Q. That is The Mother Church and the branch churches? A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, a card in the Journal is accepted as evidence of the organization of a church? A. It is.

Q. And then you say that notwithstanding The Mother Church has recognized it, you, the Publishing Society, have a right to determine whether a branch church shall go in the Journal? A. Perhaps you forget that it is not the advertisement in the Journal that constitutes the branch as a branch of The Mother Church.

Q. Isn't the advertisement in the Journal recognized in the Manual? A. Certainly it is.

Q. And to have a card in the Journal, isn't every church in the Journal required to recognize every other church in the Journal? A. It is.

Q. Are you at liberty to put any church in the Journal that is not recognized by the Board of Directors? A. By the Board of Directors?

Q. Of The Mother Church. A. Why, what do you mean? What are you referring to?

Q. I am not referring to any particular thing. I am asking you.

The Master—He has asked you a question. Now try to answer it directly, if you can.

Q. Suppose people organizing a branch church apply directly to the Publishing Society to be a branch church of the Publishing Society?

A. Well, we don't have branch churches.

Q. Oh, I beg pardon. A. The branch churches are organized under the Manual; it is nothing to do with the directors or trustees. They have nothing to do with that. The Manual declares exactly how the branch church shall be organized.

Q. Who determines whether a branch church has been organized in accordance with the provisions of the Manual? A. The branch church itself determines that.

Q. Without any action of The Mother Church? A. Without any action of The Mother Church whatever.

Q. So that your theory now is that a branch church can be a part of The Mother Church without The Mother Church having anything to say about it? A. There is nothing in the Manual that says that The Mother Church has got to do it.

Q. I didn't ask you what was in the Manual, I asked you what your theory was. A. I say that a branch church must organize according to the Manual or it is not a branch church.

Q. Who decides whether it is organized in accordance with the Manual? A. It must decide that question itself.

Q. And The Mother Church can be the mother of a child without having anything to say about recognizing it as such? A. You see, the children are born—

Q. Well, I am asking you that question.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment; that is not a real question. It is rather a weak attempt at an argument by illustration as between a mother and a child.

The Master—It is a good deal more argument than question. Let us see if you cannot put it in the form of a question that he can answer directly.

Q. Can a branch become a branch of The Mother Church without any action on the part of The Mother Church? A. Yes, according to the Manual it can.

Q. That is your present interpretation? A. That is my present interpretation.

Q. For many years you spent a good deal of time determining whether branches should be recognized or not? A. Whether they should be advertised—not recognized at all.

Q. Should be advertised? A. Yes.

Q. And do you not think that that advertisement was a recognition? A. It was an advertisement, and an advertisement alone.

Q. Was that all? A. That is all.

Q. Wasn't it accepted as the only evidence of the existence of a branch church? A. I cannot tell you what it was accepted as. I only know what animated my thought in everything that I did in connection with it.

Q. What did you do when you passed on a branch church's application for a card in the Journal? A. I endeavored to find out that it was thoroughly in accord with the teachings of Christian Science.

Q. And what else? A. That is all.

Q. Did you endeavor to find out how many people were joining it and belonged to it? A. Oh, yes. Of course there are certain things that we looked into to see if it was properly organized.

Q. And whether there was any room in the town for two of them? A. Any what?

Q. Whether there was room enough in a city for two churches? A. Yes.

Q. Or, to state it differently, whether the organization of two churches would weaken an existing church. A. Oh, we asked that question.

Q. And to what extent they subscribed for the periodicals of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. That question was asked for the purpose of determining what they were as Christian Scientists—how they felt with regard to things.

Q. That is, the test of being a good Christian Scientist was determined to some extent by the number of periodicals of The Christian Science Publishing Society that they purchased? A. Not at all. It indicated their wide-awakeness to the—

Q. I do not mean in a commercial sense. Do not misunderstand me. I mean the test of their growth and development as Christian Scientists. A. It indicated that, yes.

Q. Now, you say, then, after all that, that your present understanding is that neither the trustees nor the Publishing Society nor The Mother Church has anything to say about the establishment of a branch church? A. I do.

Q. Who has to say whether their card shall go in the Journal or not? A. The trustees.

Q. And if the trustees refuse to put the card of a branch church in the Journal, what is the remedy of the branch church? A. Why, they would have to take it up, I suppose, with the trustees and determine what was the best thing to do.

Q. I want to call your attention to this language of the agreement: "The recognition by the directors of the church or society as a branch of The Mother Church shall be accepted by the trustees, for the purposes of publication, as conclusive evidence of the fact that such branch church or society has been properly organized as a branch church or society." A. Mr. Krauthoff, that is—

The Master—What do you ask him about that?

Q. I ask you if that agreement is now recognized by The Christian Science Publishing Society as being still in force and effect? A. All agreements—no agreement is now in force.

Q. No agreement is now in force? A. No agreement that we made.

Q. No agreement about the recognition of churches or societies? A. Only in so far as we do it.

Q. As Mr. Whipple stated in open court, it is a matter of comity? A. It is a matter of comity, entirely.

Q. And that applies to practitioners and nurses. The Mother Church has no control over anything that goes into the official organ of The Mother Church? A. No control.

Q. No control, nothing to say about it, except advisory? A. Advisory, altogether.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Krauthoff, wouldn't you like to call attention to Sec. 6 of the By-Laws as to organizing churches?

Mr. Krauthoff—I shall be delighted to.

Mr. Whipple—Art. XXIII, Sec. 6, at page 72.

Mr. Krauthoff—I shall be very glad to.

Mr. Whipple—Why not read it and see what it says?

Mr. Krauthoff—(Reading):

"A member of this Church who obeys its By-Laws and is a loyal exemplary Christian Scientist working in the Field, is eligible to form a church in conformity with Sect. 7 of this Article, and to have church services conducted by reading the Scriptures and the Christian Science textbook. This Church shall be acknowledged publicly as a Church of Christ, Scientist. Upon proper application, made in accordance with the rules of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the services of such a church may be advertised in The Christian Science Journal. The branch churches shall be individual, and not more than two small churches shall consolidate under one church government. If the Pastor Emeritus, Mrs. Eddy, should relinquish her place as the head or Leader of The Mother Church of Christ, Scientist, each branch church shall continue its present form of government in consonance with The Mother Church Manual."

"Sec. 7. A branch church"—

Mr. Whipple—Well, that is headed, "Requirements for Organizing Branch Churches."

Mr. Krauthoff—It is referred to in Section 7.

"A branch church of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts, shall not be organized with less than sixteen loyal Christian Scientists, four of whom are members of The Mother Church. This membership shall include at least one active practitioner whose card is published in the list of practitioners in The Christian Science Journal."

Mr. Whipple—There seems to be in the audience here a little doubt, audibly expressed, as to what Mr. Eustace had testified to, and we thought it would be well to call attention to the statement itself.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is very natural that that doubt should be expressed.

Mr. Whipple—Not after they had read their Manual. It is only ignorance of the Manual that would create such a doubt.

Q. Mr. Eustace, you spoke this morning of a difference of opinion which arose on November 20th, 1915, and I would like to call your attention to a memorandum which you then prepared and ask you if you prepared it. A. November 20th—what is the question?

Q. Did you prepare that? A. I think I possibly did. In fact, I am quite sure that I did.

Q. And that was used in a discussion with the directors at that time of your respective statements of your position? A. Never that I know of.

Q. Was not that used with the directors? A. Never that I know of. I never heard it used.

Q. Does it state your position at that time? A. I would have to read it carefully through to see whether it does or not. I can give you an explanation of how I came to prepare that, if it is necessary.

Q. I should be very glad to have you tell me how you prepared it. A. The question had come up with the Board of Trustees—

The Master—Is that paper to be offered in evidence?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, if Your Honor please.

The Master—Have you shown it to the opposing counsel?

Mr. Whipple—Well, I can't see how it is admissible as it now stands. It is not part of the records. It is a memorandum prepared by Mr. Eustace, as I understand, which he never presented to the directors in any way, in 1916.

Mr. Krauthoff—1915.

Mr. Whipple—1915.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is offered as a part of the cross-examination of this witness, if Your Honor please, to show what his understanding was on Nov. 20, 1915.

Mr. Whipple—I don't think that is material at all. All that we have attempted to show is that there was a controversy and how soon it started, but the position that they took is of no consequence. I don't know what is in it.

The Master—All we know about that paper at present is that it is a paper which the witness says he prepared in 1915.

The Witness—I think I prepared—

The Master—One moment. Is there anything more than that, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is all he states. Now, we offer it in contradiction of his direct examination.

Mr. Whipple—What part of it?

Mr. Krauthoff—The statement that at all times The Christian Science Publishing Society was separate and distinct from the control of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Well, any paper that he prepared does not bear upon that subject, because the separation or the distinction between the two lines of activity which ought to be coordinated was created by Mrs. Eddy, not by this gentleman.

The Master—Suppose he prepared it and it never got out of his hands, would you have the right to use it?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, yes, as a statement of his own position. But it did come to the directors. We will prove that without any question. We do have the right on cross-examination to show him any paper that he prepared as bearing upon his direct examination.

The Master—That depends, doesn't it, somewhat on the circumstances under which and the purpose for which he prepared it? At present we know nothing more about that than that he says, "I prepared it."

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, will you indulge me a single suggestion? Representing Mr. Dittmore here, we are nominal defendants, or we are defendants in this case. Now, to this particular matter Mr. Eustace has testified, and he has testified pretty strongly, as to a certain position that he has taken. He has left absolutely no doubt as to his position or his claims. Now, Mr. Krauthoff presents to him a paper, which he admits that he wrote in 1915. He prepared it, he admits that he prepared it. I have not seen the paper, but I understand that the paper contradicts what he has said here now. That is, his views then were in contradiction of what they are now, and that the paper will so show. If that is so, if Mr. Krauthoff has stated it correctly, I feel that the paper ought to be admitted.

Mr. Whipple—Will you call attention, if you please, to anything that contradicts anything that Mr. Eustace has said?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, the whole document there.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me. Point out anything, I said.

The Master—Pause a moment. I still understand you offer it in evidence?

Mr. Krauthoff—I offer it in evidence.

The Master—Without undertaking to show anything further about it?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, if Your Honor please, Mr. Whipple asked me a question and I stated that the whole document is in conflict with the—

The Master—Well, whether it is or not, do you undertake to show anything further about it except what you show now?

Mr. Krauthoff—Except Mr. Eustace's statement that he prepared it.

The Master—You stop with that, do you?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is all I can show now.

The Master—Very good.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, he has already stated that it came from Mr. Eustace to the Board of Directors.

The Witness—It did not. Oh, excuse me.

The Master—I did not, and do not now understand he has said so.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Krauthoff said so.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, well, he isn't testifying.

Mr. Krauthoff—I don't regard that as testimony.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no. None of us do.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is on a parity with all the statements of counsel.

The Master—Now, is the paper objected to?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor, because we say it is not contradictory, and on other grounds.

The Master—Is that the only ground of objection?

Mr. Whipple—I say, on all grounds, on the other ground, largely, I must confess, so that we may shorten this record. My reasons for objection are so that we may not clutter up this record, but the legal ground is that it is not made admissible by the testimony.

Mr. Streeter—If I may ask, how can Your Honor determine whether that paper contradicts Mr. Eustace without taking it into the record? Mr. Krauthoff is saying that it does contradict him and my good brother is saying that it does not.

The Master—I do not think I should undertake to exclude it on that ground, but the evidence stops here, that he prepared it. For anything I know he may have changed his mind the next day before he ever showed it to anybody or made any use of it.

Mr. Krauthoff—We are entitled to show that he prepared it and those were his views at the time he prepared it. Now, if the next day he changed his mind, he can say that he changed his mind next day.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I will shorten this controversy by saying that you may read it, if you want to, and then let Mr. Eustace state the circumstances under which it was prepared. I am not saving time by objection, and that is all I want to do is to save time. You may have anything in you want.

[Document entitled "Memorandum" is marked Exhibit 36. W.H.M.]

Mr. Whipple—Now, read it and point out the contradiction when you get through.

Mr. Krauthoff—All right.

[Exhibit 36 is read by Mr. Krauthoff as follows:

[Exhibit 36.]

Memorandum

The question of The Christian Science Publishing Society's passing upon all cards for advertisement in The Christian Science Journal and Der Herold der Christian Science, whether these advertisements are of churches, societies, Christian Science practitioners, or nurses, must be viewed from the standpoint of what we have in the Church Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., and also in the Deed of Trust, constituting the Board of Trustees of date January 25, 1898. These seem to contain the data on which all questions concerning this subject are given.

First of all, in constituting the Board of Trustees, it seems evident that Mrs. Eddy intended that it should be an important, deliberative body, capable of thoroughly conducting all work connected with the publishing of the literature of the Christian Science movement other than her own publications, for Mrs. Eddy says in the Deed of Trust: "I have asked for a small Board of Trustees, and as I believe a strong board; one is a business man, another a doctor, and still another a scholar." The constitution and designation of this board and its members would indicate that it had a threefold office: First business; second, metaphysics; and third, scholarship. There must have been a motive in this choice, indicating that it was not just one phase of activity, namely business, that was to be the purpose of the board, but that its activities would be much more far-reaching, and would have to include metaphysics and scholarship.

In the Deed of Trust there occurs this statement in connection with the trust: "Upon the following perpetual and irrevocable trust and confidence." Therefore, the constitution of the Board of Trustees and the trust committed to its care—namely, to include business, metaphysics, and scholarship—is perpetual and irrevocable. There also occurs in the Deed of Trust the statement that "Said trustees shall energetically and judiciously manage the business of the Publishing Society on a strictly Christian basis, and upon their own responsibility, and without consulting me about details, subject only to my supervision, if I shall at any time elect or desire to direct them," thus throwing the responsibility for the entire conduct of The Christian Science Publishing Society, with its trust of the periodicals, etc., on the Board of Trustees, and providing that this trust shall be conducted "on their own responsibility."

Also, under Sec. 8 of the Deed of Trust, is the explicit direction that "Said Trustees shall have direction and supervision of the publication of said Quarterly, and also of all pamphlets, tracts, and other literature pertaining to said business, using their best judgment as to the means of preparing and issuing the same, so as to promote the best interests of the Cause." The two terms here used, "preparing and issuing the same," would indicate that the preparation of the material to be used in everything to do with The Christian Science Publishing Society was to be in the hands of the Board of Trustees, as well as the actual issuing of the literature. The terms "direction and supervision" also imply two specific acts, which should be taken into consideration.

In turning to the Church Manual

we find page 27, Sec. 6 of Art. I, that the Deed direction that "The business of The Mother Church shall be transacted by its Christian Science Board of Directors," and on page 79, in Sec. 1 of Art. XXV, is the explicit direction that "The Board of Trustees . . . shall hold and manage the property therein conveyed, and conduct the business of 'The Christian Science Publishing Society' on a strictly Christian basis, for the promotion of the interests of Christian Science." These two by-laws indicate that the business of The Mother Church and the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society are, in a sense, two separate affairs, and managed by their own boards, although of course working for the same purpose.

"In the Deed of Trust, a statement regarding The Christian Science Journal is given as follows: 'I also reserve the right to withdraw from said trust, if I shall so desire, the publication of The Christian Science Journal, but if I do not exercise this reserved action, then said Journal shall remain a part of the trust property forever.' Again in Section 12 Mrs. Eddy states, 'Upon my decease, in consideration of aforesaid, I sell and convey to said trustees my copyright of The Christian Science Journal, to be held by them as the other property of said trust.' On page 81 of the Church Manual, in Sec. 6 of Art. XXV, is the by-law: 'Periodicals which shall at any time be published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, shall be copyrighted and conducted according to the provisions in the Deed of Trust relating to The Christian Science Journal.' This by-law plainly puts all periodicals under the same régime as The Christian Science Journal, which is, according to the Deed of Trust, owned and published by The Christian Science Publishing Society—in other words, by the Board of Trustees. Therefore, these periodicals necessarily come under the provisions of Sec. 8 of the Deed of Trust, wherein the direction and supervision, and the preparation and issuance of literature in the trust, is in the hands of the trustees.

"In Sec. 8 of Art. XXV, on page 81 of the Church Manual, is this statement, under the heading, 'Books to Be Published': 'Only the Publishing Society of The Mother Church selects, approves, and publishes the books and literature it sends forth. If Mary Baker Eddy disapproves of certain books or literature, the society will not publish them. . . . A book or an article of which Mrs. Eddy is the author shall not be published nor republished by this society without her knowledge or written consent.' The term 'literature' here used, evidently includes articles by Mrs. Eddy, indicating that an article by Mrs. Eddy, published in one of the periodicals, is not to be published or republished without her consent. The implication from this might be that the term

'literature' applies to those societies as a whole, especially who do it. with Sec. 7 of Art. I, on page 7 of the Church Manual, in which is stated: 'It shall be the care of the Christian Science Board of Directors to provide a suitable building for the publication of The Christian Science Journal, Christian Science Sentinel, Der Herold der Christian Science, and all other Christian Science literature published by The Christian Science Publishing Society.' The use of the term 'other' Christian Science literature implies that the Journal, Sentinel, and Herold are Christian Science literature, and therefore come under the term used in the Deed of Trust, Sec. 8, and in Sec. 8 of Art. XXV of the Church Manual, on page 82: 'the books and literature it sends forth.' If we take the term 'literature' here in its broad sense, and allow it to include the periodicals of the Christian Science movement, then it must necessarily follow that the Christian Science periodicals, and all that goes into them, must be selected, approved, and published by the Publishing Society—in other words, by the Board of Trustees.

"Now with regard to the advertisements appearing in these periodicals,—it is difficult to separate an advertisement appearing in The Christian Science Monitor from an advertisement appearing in The Christian Science Journal or Der Herold der Christian Science. One of course is a business advertisement and the other is a personal advertisement, but both are advertisements, and both appear in the Christian Science periodicals. If one is subject to the supervision and acceptance of the Publishing Society, it seems a natural deduction that the other is equally so, since they are all, according to the Manual (Sec. 6 of Art. XXV) under the same régime. This being the case, then the question of the acceptance of a practitioner's advertisement would certainly come under the supervision of the Board of Trustees.

"While there is no specific direction on this point of a practitioner's advertisements in the Church Manual or in the Deed of Trust, an advertisement is surely a part and parcel of the literature sent forth, and if the rejection or acceptance of reading matter is under the supervision of the Publishing Society, then it would certainly seem that the advertisements, from whatever source they may come, are equally so, and that this is the intention of the Manual and the Deed of Trust.

"In the case of the advertisements of churches and societies, as well as of nurses, the Manual is explicit, for it plainly states under Sec. 6 of Art. XXIII, in speaking of churches: 'Upon proper application, made in accordance with the rules of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the services of such a church may be advertised in The Christian Science

Journal,' and in Sec. 31 of Art. VIII, in speaking of nurses, it says: 'The cards of such persons may be inserted in The Christian Science Journal under rules established by the publishers.' The evident indication here is that the rules under which churches and nurses can be accepted for advertisement are not only changeable as the need demands, but are made 'by the publishers.' From these two By-Laws it would seem that the inference might be drawn that advertisements of practitioners would pass through the same scrutiny and determination that the advertisements of churches and nurses must pass through.

"That it is the intention of the Manual that the acceptance of advertisements should be in the hands of the Publishing Society is also implied in the By-Law, Sec. 9 of Art. XXV, covering the removal of cards, in which is stated: 'No cards shall be removed from our periodicals without the request of the advertiser, except by a majority vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors at a meeting held for this purpose or for the examination of complaints.' The fact that no card can be removed except by The Christian Science Board of Directors or the request of the advertiser would seem to imply that the card was accepted through some other avenue than through The Christian Science Board of Directors, for it would be plainly evident that if The Christian Science Board of Directors accepted the card, it would go without saying that that same board could remove it. Therefore, the fact that it is explicitly stated what power has the authority to remove the advertisements of practitioners, churches, or nurses, indicates that it is not the power that accepted the advertisements.

"In connection with this point, there is also to be remembered that The Christian Science Board of Directors is the governing power of the Christian Science organization, and that everything to do with the membership of this organization—with the membership of The Mother Church—is under the direct control of The Christian Science Board of Directors. Therefore, anything affecting the good standing of a member of The Mother Church must necessarily come under the direction of the governing board of this Church. No person can have an advertisement in the periodicals as a practitioner or nurse unless he is a member of The Mother Church. To remove for cause the advertisement of any practitioner or nurse advertised, invariably impugns the good standing of that member, and therefore touches his membership with The Mother Church. To confer the privilege of an advertisement on a member of The Mother Church does not touch his standing, but to take away that privilege after it has once been conferred does do so, and therefore the power to take away the privilege of an advertisement rightly belongs with the governing board of the Church and its members—The Christian Science Board of Directors. However, the very fact that this danger of the removal of advertisements is guarded against by plainly stating how it is to be done, indicates quite conclusively that the privilege of an advertisement is conferred through another channel, and that the removal of an advertisement is not an ordinary proceeding, but is an exception.

"Under 'Discipline,' Art. VIII, Sec. 14, states: 'It shall be the duty of the Directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times.' Here again is a disciplinary supervision, which applies not only to the editing but to the general make-up of the periodicals, and therefore would extend to the removal of any advertisement. Under Sec. 9 of Art. XXV, under the heading of 'Removal of Cards,' there is the indication that a personal card advertised, whether of a church, society, practitioner, or nurse, is different from an ordinary advertisement, and while it would be thoroughly within the province of the Board of Directors to request the removal of an advertisement, even one in the Monitor, or at least to discuss why the advertisement was in the Monitor, Sec. 14 of Art. VIII, and Sec. 9 of Art. XXV, plainly confer upon the Board of Directors the authority, and also point out the modus operandi whereby personal cards from the Journal and Herold shall be removed.

"The fact that Mrs. Eddy asked for a small Board of Trustees, which request was plainly intentional, indicated that the Board of Trustees would have to personally be responsible for many things for which a larger board could not be held personally responsible. Among these, it would seem, could rightly be placed the acceptance of practitioners', churches', and nurses' advertisements. The fact, also, that the advertisements of churches and nurses 'may be' advertised, indicates that there should be a careful selection, and that the movement is thus safeguarded from an indiscriminate compulsion of accepting every denominational advertisement submitted. The further fact that the Board of Trustees is enjoined, on page 104 of the Manual, under Sec. 2 of Art. XXXV, to 'keep a copy of the Seventy-third Edition and of subsequent editions of the Church Manual; and if a discrepancy appears in any revised edition, these editions shall be cited as authority,' before them to guide and direct their actions, surely means that they shall strictly carry out the provisions of the Church Manual and the Deed of Trust, as laid down by Mrs. Eddy under divine direction.

"It seems difficult to draw any other conclusion from the Church Manual and the Deed of Trust than that the entire selection, approval, and issuance of everything going forth from The Christian Science Publishing Society primarily rests with the Board of Trustees, subject to the final analysis, in any instance, of The Christian Science Board of Directors. This conclusion seems to apply equally to all advertisements, whether in the Journal, Sentinel, Herald, or Monitor. The responsibility resting on the Board of Trustees from such a conclusion cannot be escaped, for it would seem that only by such a double check on everything can the movement be guarded against any danger of carelessness or inefficiency in any of the departments of the Publishing Society. The by-law governing the appointment of editors and business manager does not release the Board of Trustees from supervision of the editorial departments of the periodicals—of news any more than advertisements, or any more than the business affairs of the Publishing Society—for the by-law under 'Discipline,' charging the Board of Directors to see that the periodicals 'are ably edited and kept abreast of the times' covers both editorial and business, for 'kept abreast of the times' surely means in respect to the general makeup of the periodicals, as to paper, covers, etc., etc., thus indicating that this disciplinary supervision is as much, and no more so, in the editorial department than in the business; implying, therefore, that it is a disciplinary supervision, although one of the utmost importance, placing the final responsibility on The Christian Science Board of Directors, so far as not allowing 'offenses' to continue.

"One other point might be made in connection with the acceptance of advertisements for the periodicals—that in the Deed of Trust it expressly states in Sec. 6: 'Said trustees shall employ all the help necessary to the proper conducting of said business, and shall discharge the same in their discretion or according to the needs of the business.' The acceptance of the advertisements for our periodicals is no small labor, and could not be done without a great deal of help. Since the Board of Trustees are enjoined to employ all the help, the inference is that no help is to be employed except by the Board of Trustees, and if the necessary help to get the advertisements in shape was under any other supervision than that of the Board of Trustees, it would require help being engaged through another source than the Board of Trustees, although for the purpose of the Publishing Society.

"In order that there may be no conflict whatever of the Church Manual and the Deed of Trust, and one by-law with another by-law, it would seem that the only way to have these all perfectly knit together is that The Christian Science Publishing Society absolutely is responsible for all the literature of this movement except the publication of our Leader, and that this society is responsible for everything that goes into those publications, whether in the form of articles, news or advertisements, and that The Christian Science Board of Directors is in the final analysis responsible from a disciplinary standpoint to see that this work of The Christian Science Publishing Society is well done.

"November 20, 1915."

Q. Now that you have heard that read, Mr. Eustace, do you recall that you prepared it? A. I prepared it, and there are several changes that should be put in it, that I would put in it, and that I did put in it later on. But I want to say, in connection with this, that I prepared this as a brief in favor of the Board of Directors, handling the cause I was trying—that is what it was written for; and the only conclusion that I could come to was the conclusion that I drew there, that it absolutely rested with The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. That is, you desired, in November, 1915, that The Christian Science Board of Directors should pass on the acceptance of the cards of churches and societies and practitioners and nurses? A. I did not; but the question had come up on our board on account of certain difficulties that had arisen as to whether it was possible and right under the Deed of Trust and the Manual for the Board of Directors to do that work, and I said I would try to write a brief on the thing and see if it could be done, and that was my conclusion.

Q. Well, of course, in trying to write that brief you undertook to state your position as you then saw it? A. I undertook to state the position as favorably as possible to give the Board of Directors the privilege of doing that work.

Q. Well, you were working according to Principle? A. I was endeavoring to.

Q. Yes; and to see the right of it without regard to how it worked out? A. I was.

Q. Now, you state here that this question of accepting advertisements must be viewed from the standpoint of what we have in the Church Manual and also in the Deed of Trust. At that time, in writing the two phrases, you put the Church Manual first? A. What significance has that?

Q. I ask you if you didn't put the Church Manual ahead of the Deed of Trust at that time?

Mr. Whipple—Doesn't the paper show?

The Master—Doesn't it show for itself whether he did or not?

Mr. Krauthoff—it does, if Your Honor please.

The Master—Then why is it necessary for him to say whether he did or not?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, I thought it was a part of the cross-examination, in view of his statements on the direct. I will pass it.

Q. Now, at this time you pointed out a statement of Mrs. Eddy said to of Trust, with respect be in the Deed for a small Board of Trustees. That is in the letter accompanying the Gift to The Mother 1898, called a not in the Deed of Trust? Church—It does it say in the Deed of A. It is.

That is a typographical error. Yes, you say, "The constitution. No designation of this board and its members would indicate that it had a threefold office; first, business; second, metaphysics; and third, scholarship." Now, of the first three trustees, Mr. Bates and Mr. Neal and Mr. McKenzie, who do you understand was the business man?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. Aren't we getting far, far afield?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, if Your Honor please—

The Master—I am unable to see any importance in that question.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I will state what it is that I desire to prove, if it will aid the situation. The statement is that Mr. Eustace has built up an argument that he is the metaphysician of the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Mr. Whipple—What if he is? Of what consequence is it?

Mr. Krauthoff—It is of very great consequence.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I must confess that I cannot see it. I have been mystified by this cross-examination a great deal, but that is entirely beyond anything that I connect with any issue in this case.

Mr. Krauthoff—The point about it is this, if Your Honor please: For one of three trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society to constitute himself the metaphysician of these three is in violation of the principles of Christian Science.

Mr. Whipple—We have not had the principles laid down yet.

The Master—He has not, in anything that he has said here, made any such claim yet.

Mr. Krauthoff—No; but I want to show that in this document he did.

The Master—It seems to me at present too remote on anything that I have to consider.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

Q. Now, in this document of Nov. 20, 1915, you quoted freely from the Church Manual? A. I always think and quote freely from it.

Q. As a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. I do.

Q. And you do that today? A. I do it exactly the same today.

Q. No distinction between this document of Nov. 20, 1915, and the present? A. I said that there are some things in there that I changed myself, before.

Q. Will you point out what it was? A. Well, I would have to go through it.

Q. Will you do it by tomorrow morning? A. I will.

Mr. Krauthoff—And, I, you further about it, when I will, ask

Mr. Whipple—Has it been marked as an exhibit? Let it be marked, and then you may take it along, marked, and

Mr. Krauthoff—It is marked with you. 36. Marked Exhibit

Q. Do you recall the early part of 1916 when the letter was written from the trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Society to the Christian Science Society of Directors? A. I would want to see that letter.

Q. That is the letter that the Board of Directors returned to you? A. I don't know; I will have to see the letter.

Q. You will have to see the letter before you— A. Yes.

The Master—Has there been any reference to it so far in the evidence?

Mr. Krauthoff—I understand not. The history of that letter, as I understand, is that it was a letter written from the trustees to the directors. The original was returned by the directors to the trustees, and the trustees state that they do not have the original, nor do they have any copy of it, they say. So I will have to prove this document by other evidence, and then take the liberty of recalling Mr. Eustace for cross-examination on it.

Q. Now, Mr. Whipple read the statement of Sept. 30, 1918. I want to speak to you about some things in it. You state in the letter of Sept. 30, 1918, referring to a meeting of Sept. 11, 1918, that at that meeting the trustees stated to the Board of Directors exactly how they viewed the Deed of Trust and the Manual in their relations to the trustees and their work. Now, how did you state that you viewed it?

Mr. Whipple—Well, it appears right in that letter. Why go into it more?

Q. Did you state anything except what you have set out in that letter? A. I stated what is in that letter.

Q. You stated what is in this letter? A. Yes.

Q. And that statement is that there was no other course possible to the trustees than to abide absolutely by the Deed of Trust and the Manual, both in the letter and the spirit.

Mr. Whipple—Pause a moment. What he stated is in the letter—not in one part of it, but in the whole of it; and why read it and ask him if he did not state that, when he has said that what he stated is in the letter? It simply duplicates.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have the right—

Mr. Whipple—I doubt if you do have the right, sir, to use the record in that way. At any rate, it is not good discretion.

Mr. Krauthoff—As I understand, on cross-examination, if Your Honor please, I have the right to call his attention to a statement in this document with a view of basing a question upon it.

Mr. Whipple—That you are not

If you were trying to do that, do head.

Mr. Krauthoff—Thank you, Mr. Whipple. If you will give me time I will try to catch up with you.

The Master—Do it so far as possible without re-reading at length what has already been put in the record once.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is what we are doing.

Mr. Whipple—It is not time that he wants; it is eternity!

Mr. Krauthoff—That is what we are dealing with!

Mr. Whipple—I am glad that you have not lost your sense of humor.

Q. This is still your position, Mr. Eustace? A. My position has always been to be a genuine Christian Scientist, and obedient to what Mrs. Eddy has said.

Q. And to abide absolutely by the Deed of Trust and the Manual? A. It has.

Q. And that is true after you have had the advice of counsel? A. Our counsel has never advised us anything else.

Q. In your direct examination Mr. Whipple asked you if you had had advice of counsel when you wrote this letter of September 30, 1918, and I believe you stated that you had not conferred with Mr. Justice Hughes, but had conferred informally with Mr. Strawn? A. I did not say so.

Q. I misunderstood you. What advice of counsel did you have when you wrote that letter of September 30? A. I had no advice of counsel whatever.

Q. From any source. But now that you have had advice of counsel you are still of the same opinion? A. Still, in substance, of exactly the same opinion.

Q. I call your attention to the statement in this memorandum that the Deed of Trust is inferentially incorporated as part and parcel of the Church Manual. Are you still of that opinion? A. I couldn't be of any other opinion. I am.

Q. That is, that the Deed of Trust is part of the Church Manual. In this letter you pointed out that when Mrs. Eddy created the trust in the first instance she requested the trustees to continue the services of Mr. Armstrong as the business manager of the publishing house. Have you made a research to ascertain what the condition of the Church Manual was on Jan. 25, 1898? A. I don't know that I have.

Q. So that that statement would be affected by the Manual, would it not? A. I wasn't—read the statement.

Q. (Reading):

"The Board of Directors elect the editor and associate editors of our monthly and weekly periodicals, the editor of our daily newspapers and the business manager, but the trustees employ these officers and determine their salary, hence they are employees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, in other words, of the Board of Trustees and not of the Board of Directors. This is clearly pointed out by our Leader in the letter conveying the Deed of Trust, wherein she says: "I now recommend that these trustees continue at present the efficient service of Mr. Joseph Armstrong as the business manager of the publishing house."

Now, have you looked to see whether the Manual at that time, Jan. 25, 1898, gives The Mother Church any power to elect the manager of the publishing house? A. I don't think it did. I believe that the Manual at that time was in consonance with just the wording of the Deed of Trust, and I wouldn't like to say.

Mr. Whipple—The point of that, Mr. Krauthoff, is that he contends merely that the directors have never had the right to have or exercise any authority that Mrs. Eddy herself couldn't. Their wildest claim is that they exercise as great authority as her, and Mrs. Eddy made the request or recommendation merely, and not any direction.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, and the answer to it, Mr. Whipple, is that at that time the Church Manual did not give The Mother Church the power to elect the business manager.

Mr. Whipple—Mrs. Eddy was above the Church Manual, but, acting under the Church Manual, or otherwise, the Board of Directors could not exceed her authority, and she did not assume to exercise the authority of directing. She recommended to these trustees; your directors want to do more than that.

Mr. Krauthoff—They want to obey the Manual.

Mr. Whipple—Well, they take a queer way of doing it.

Q. In this memorandum you stated twice that the directors elect the editors and the business manager. You knew they did prior to the bringing of this suit? A. They did.

Q. Well, you have stated it in this memorandum? A. That statement is from the Manual. We were writing from the Manual.

The Master—Now, what question do you base on that statement?

Mr. Krauthoff—The question is that they did elect the editors and the managers before the bringing of this suit.

The Master—Well, what do you answer to that? Did they or didn't they?

The Witness—Yes; according to the Manual they did.

The Master—Now, what is the next question?

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Krauthoff, may I ask whether you can finish in a short time, or do you expect quite an examination?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, I haven't anticipated any immediate close.

Mr. Whipple—Well, if that is so, then perhaps we had not better continue too long in anticipation that Mr. Krauthoff would, because I would like to ask Your Honor what your direction would be with reference to next week. I am raising the question tonight, because it is important for all of us to know how we may use our time next week.

The Master—You expect to go on tomorrow, I take it?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

FOURTH DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room,
Boston, Massachusetts,
June 13, 1919, 10 a. m.

Herbert W. Eustace, Cross-Examination Resumed

Q. (By Mr. Krauthoff.) Mr. Eustace, on yesterday, in response to the question as to what was the governing power of The Mother Church, I understood you to answer divine Principle as revealed in the writings of Mary Baker Eddy. A. I think that is correct.

Q. That is also true of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. It is.

Q. In this bill of complaint, which you filed, in paragraph 4, you refer to the conception and plan of Mrs. Eddy for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science as taught by her. What information have you as to that conception and plan, other than the Deed of Trust, as you understand it? A. Nothing, except her writings, of course, as a whole.

Q. Her writings as a whole. Was it your privilege to know her in her lifetime? A. It was not.

Q. And you never conversed with her personally on the subject? A. Never.

Q. So as to that whatever bears on it is to be found in her writings, including the Deed of Trust and the Manual? A. In her written word, yes.

Q. In paragraph 7 you speak of the directors and say that, "Upon one excuse or another, the directors have sought from the trustees various information with regard to the work of the Publishing Society and the management of its affairs." The Mother Church is the beneficiary of the income of this trust in perpetuity, is it not? A. It is a beneficiary.

Q. Well, it is the distributing beneficiary? A. It is of the net profits.

Q. Now, what excuse did The Mother Church have to make when it asked for any information from the trustees of a trust of which the net profits were to be paid to it? A. What excuse does it have to make, do you say?

Q. Yes. A. I don't quite catch the meaning.

Q. Wasn't it the right of The Mother Church to ask any question of you it saw fit to ask? A. Up to a certain point, naturally, the agents of a beneficiary have a right, a certain right, to find out how the trust is being conducted.

Q. I mean the right to ask the question. I am not talking about the answer now. A. Reasonable questions, yes.

Q. I am referring to the excuse. You say, "Upon one excuse or another." What was the excuse? A. I really don't know, except the excuse of—

Q. You say here under oath, "Upon one excuse or another." A. You mean what were the things that they did?

Q. No. What was the excuse that you talked about? A. Why, the reasons that they gave in their various letters.

Q. You say those are all excuses. In paragraph 8—

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, I am going to suggest that Mr. Eustace have a copy of the bill so that he can refer to the language.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will be very glad to have that done.

(A copy of the Bill in Equity is handed to the witness.)

Q. In paragraph 8 at the top of page 14. You have the little book, I believe, haven't you? A. Paragraph 8? I have this one, yes.

Q. You speak there of "certain alleged wishes of Mrs. Eddy, the Donor, alleged by said directors to have been expressed both in the Manual of The Mother Church." Has the word "alleged" any significance there, or is that a mere adjective? A. I haven't found the place yet.

Q. Page 14. A. Oh, yes. Well, the alleged wishes were, as I understood them, the statements that the Board of Directors made with regard to what Mrs. Eddy intended they should do as to the government of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. Now, the wishes were expressed, as you understand it, in the writings of Mary Baker Eddy. They were not alleged wishes, were they? A. Why, they were not expressed at all, according to my interpretation.

Q. According to your interpretation? A. Yes.

Q. Did they rely upon anything that was not in the writings of Mary Baker Eddy? A. Unless it was their own imagination.

Q. I understand, but in their statements to you did they rely on anything that was not in the writings of Mary Baker Eddy? A. Their own imaginary interpretations of those writings.

Q. Well, they relied on their interpretation of those statements? A. I suppose so. I gave them credit for that.

Q. So that it is not a question of whether the wishes were alleged or not, it is a question as to what those wishes mean? A. They alleged certain wishes which we did not agree to.

Q. Now, what I am trying to get at is, was it that the wish was never expressed, or was it that you say that the interpretation that you placed upon it differed?

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, he has already answered. He has said the wishes were never expressed, although the directors contended they had been, and that is the significance of the word "alleged."

Q. Now, then, you further say, "although these alleged expressions and statements are admittedly inconsistent with the terms of the Deed of Trust." Now, what expressions and statements of Mrs. Eddy did the directors rely upon that are not expressed in her writings? A. What did they rely upon? I don't know.

Q. Well, you say here that the board required you to act "in accordance with the interpretation by said Board of Directors of certain alleged wishes of Mrs. Eddy," and then you go on and say that those "alleged expressions and statements are admittedly inconsistent with the terms of the Deed of Trust." Now, what statements and expressions of Mrs. Eddy did the directors rely upon, other than the expressions and statements contained in her complete works? A. Why, just as I have stated, their own interpretation of what they thought she had said.

Q. Well, I am not asking you about their interpretation of what they thought she had said. What statement of Mrs. Eddy did they rely upon for their interpretation? I will get to the correctness of the interpretation directly, but let us begin with what statements did they rely upon other than the ones contained in her published writings? A. Why, you will have to refer to their "letters" to see what interpretation they put upon it.

Q. Now, all of these statements are in writing, then? A. Amplified by countless conferences.

Q. Whatever these statements are, they are in the writings between the directors and the trustees? A. Oh, no, I wouldn't say entirely. I would say that countless interpretations were given.

Q. I am not talking about interpretations, Mr. Eustace. What statement of Mrs. Eddy's did they rely upon, other than stated in her complete works in writing? A. I don't grasp what you mean, Mr. Krauthoff, because—

Q. Perhaps we can get at it this way: Did any director ever say to you that Mrs. Eddy stated to him orally that so and so was to be the case, and that he relied upon her oral statement? A. Why, yes, they have said—

Q. Now, then, you don't know whether Mrs. Eddy made those statements to them or not? A. And I haven't the slightest interest whether she did or not.

Q. Although you are obedient to every direction of Mary Baker— A. All her written word I am obedient to.

Q. All her written words? All right. Not to her oral statements to others?

A. No, because each one must necessarily hear what a person says with his own interpretation of what is said.

Q. So then we come down that you are obedient to the written word?

A. I am.

Q. Now, then, the allegation in your bill is that these alleged wishes of Mrs Eddy were alleged by the "directors to have been expressed both in the Manual of The Mother Church and otherwise, on occasions long after the date of the Deed of Trust." A. Yes.

Q. Now, what do you understand is the binding force and effect of the statements in the Manual with respect to The Christian Science Publishing Society, it being understood, of course, that all these statements in the Manual, that now appear in the Manual, were put in after Jan. 25, 1898, except one? A. I, first of all, accept the Deed of Trust, under which I am operating as a trustee, as my absolute authority as to how I am to conduct that trust.

Q. Well, Mr. Eustace, do you accept that as a separate and distinct document disassociated from everything that preceded it and followed it? A. I accept that document in toto, just as it is, and I have to.

Q. I am asking you whether you accept it as a single isolated act or a part of a general transaction? A. I accept it—

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. How can that be answered? It does not seem to me a question, if I may say so, frankly, capable of being answered.

Mr. Krauthoff—In my judgment it is, if Your Honor please, very capable of being answered. Here is a man that has been a trustee under an instrument since 1912.

The Master—I suppose ultimately the Court will have to construe the instrument.

Mr. Krauthoff—Certainly.

The Master—How he accepts it is a matter that cannot control the Court's interpretation.

Mr. Krauthoff—I appreciate that, but under the case that is made by this bill we have the right to show the conduct of the parties under this instrument and the manner in which this witness has accepted it and treated it.

Mr. Whipple—He has stated that. He has—

The Master—It seems to me he has stated that already pretty fully.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I be reminded of how he has stated it?

The Master—That would involve going over more of his evidence than is desirable to do at present.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well. I confess that at the present moment I am not clear whether Mr. Eustace accepts this Deed of Trust as a single isolated transaction, complete in itself, or whether he accepts it as a part of the general plan of Mary Baker Eddy for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science, and I would like to know for my own guidance in my question that I am about to put which of those two versions is the correct one from his standpoint.

The Master—He can answer anything about that that he desires.

A. I accept, as I stated before, that Deed of Trust as the instrument, the authoritative, irrevocable instrument under which I am acting as a trustee. Everything else that Mrs. Eddy has written I accept, in so far as I can make it consistent with that Deed of Trust.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, let me take up the Manual. Have you a Manual convenient? Now, let us take up the Manual and see how far it is inconsistent with the Deed of Trust as you interpret it. Will you turn to Article I of the Manual, please? A. All right.

Q. Section 1 and Sec. 2 of Article I, as I understand it, do not bear on The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, inasmuch as we are apparently embarking upon a new quest, I desire to raise the objection that this is all immaterial. I take it that we are now going to take this Manual and go through it, and ask the interpretation of the witness as to his views of the consistency or inconsistency of certain specific statements in the Manual as compared with the Deed of Trust. As Your Honor has just indicated, this Deed of Trust is to be interpreted by the Court, and I take it it is elementary knowledge that subsequent declarations cannot affect that, and to say that Mrs. Eddy did not know it is to me a reflection upon her wisdom and foresight and judgment that I should not think a consistent believer in Christian Science would be guilty of. And what difference does it all make what his view is with regard to the Manual as compared with the paper which must control? I offer this at the outset of the inquiry so that we may save time, if Your Honor takes that view.

The Master—I think I have intimated what my view is at present, but the understanding of the witness, one witness, is hardly a matter that can control the interpretation of the document that has to be made.

Mr. Krauthoff—I appreciate that, and I am not asking for his understanding as a witness.

The Master—How can it be anything else?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, he is a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

The Master—We all understand that. Now, I do not think you should spend time by taking the Manual and going through it, section by section. That would protract the matter too far. If there is anything special in it you want to call his attention to, I think you may do so.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

Q. Now, taking up Sec. 3 of the Manual, referring to the election by the Board of Directors of the editor and manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Mr. Streeter—Whereabout is that? You say Sec. 3? Do you mean—

Mr. Krauthoff—Sec. 3 of Art. I, at the bottom of page 25.

Mr. Whipple—This is entirely different from what he has. Can't we have one with the pages the same?

Mr. Krauthoff—It is in the little black book.

The Master—That you referred to yesterday?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Q. How many letters have the trustees from the directors advising the trustees that the directors have elected the editors and the business manager?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you not receive one in June of each year during your incumbency of the office of trustee? A. Certainly not each year, no.

Q. Not each year? A. Not that I have seen.

Q. Have you those letters here? A. I suppose they are here. All the correspondence is here.

Q. Will you produce them, please? A. Have you those?

Mr. Whipple—I will ask if Your Honor thinks those are material. Whatever was done by the directors in that respect cannot affect the clear terms of this instrument. I am merely offering this suggestion so that the issue may be clearly defined, and for the purpose of saving time, which is likely to be a good deal protracted in the examination. If Your Honor prefers to take the testimony and deal with it finally, why, we are perfectly willing, but we think that the time ought to be saved.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please—

The Master—My view I think I have already fully stated, but it may not ultimately prevail, and I think that I can hardly, in advance of seeing the letters, peremptorily exclude them from the record.

Mr. Streeter—Will Your Honor indulge me a moment? While we occupy a rather unique position with reference to the respective claims of my brother Bates, on the one hand, and brother Whipple, on the other, there are some things in which we are directly interested, and one of them is to know what the claims of the trustees are with reference to the Trust Deed, on the one hand, and the Manual, on the other. The trustees plant themselves solidly, primarily, and fundamentally upon the Trust Deed. Now, taking their interpretation of the Trust Deed, there are tremendous inconsistencies between the Trust Deed and the Manual. We want to know, and I think we have a right to know, what the trustees' claim is as to the power and authority of the Manual over them, when the directions appear to be inconsistent with the Trust Deed. In other words, we want to know, not on the directors' account—not in that suit—nor on account of brother Whipple—we want personally to know for our client what the claim is—whether Mr. Eustace and his associates claim that they are not bound by the Manual. While they say with lip service, “We are obedient to all the writings of Mrs. Eddy,” we want to know whether they recognize the provisions in the Manual as any way binding upon them; and I hope Your Honor will permit Mr. Krauthoff, on the one hand, and Mr. Whipple, on the other, to have this witness clearly state to Your Honor what the position of the trustees is and has been on that question.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please—

The Master—I have already told Mr. Krauthoff that he might go on with these letters. Ought we to go farther with this discussion now?

Mr. Whipple—My only thought is this, which I present with entire deference, that we have stated so repeatedly what our position is—we have stated it in the bill, we have stated it in the opening, the places where the claims of the parties ought to be stated, and the witness has replied to it so frequently, that it did not seem to me conceivable that anyone could be in any doubt as to what the position of the trustees was with regard to the Manual. They have said that they are bound by every provision of the Manual—first of all, by the Deed of Trust, which was declared by Mrs. Eddy to be irrevocable, and which was divine and inspired in and of itself. She knowing it to be irrevocable, any provision of the Manual that was subsequent must be construed and dealt with as a matter connected with the deed itself, which fixes the rights of the parties and their duties. Can I state it any more clearly than that?

Mr. Streeter—I think so. I do not think brother Whipple has quite stated that proposition to our country apprehension. We may not be able to understand it so well as our metropolitan friends do. He says that they are obedient, that they recognize the Manual and that they are obedient to the Manual. He says the provisions of the Trust Deed are irrevocable. It appears here that the provisions of the Manual are inconsistent with the Trust Deed. After saying that they stand on the Trust Deed, and also that they stand on the Manual, I want to know, before we get through with this, I want to know directly, and my client and my people behind me want to know, what their position is on this question—Where there is in the Manual a proposition that is inconsistent with their interpretation of the Trust Deed, do they stand on their interpretation of the Trust Deed, disregarding the provisions of the Manual entirely? That is a plain question, and it seems to me that it is capable of a plain answer.

Mr. Whipple—I have stated it absolutely plainly, and I shall not repeat it at this time.

Mr. Streeter—Then, if you will pardon me just one further statement—

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Streeter—I understand that the position of the trustees is that they stand on the irrevocable provisions of the Trust Deed as they interpret it; and where there is anything in the Manual that appears to be inconsistent with that, they reject the Manual and do not intend to be bound by it in any way or shape. That is my understanding of their position.

Mr. Whipple—That is not a correct understanding, except with the qualifications.

Q. Have you found the letters, Mr. Eustace?

The Witness (addressing Mr. Watts)—Have you found them?

Mr. Watts—I have not found any. The Witness—I think that there are some.

Mr. Watts—It will take some time to find them.

Mr. Krauthoff—The letters beginning in June, 1913. While Mr. Watts is finding the letters, let me ask you—

Q. When you became trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society in December, 1912, who was the manager? A. Mr. Ogden. In 1912?

Q. 1912. A. Mr. Ogden.

Q. How long did he continue to be the manager? A. Up to Aug. 1, 1917.

Q. What did he then do? A. He became trustee of The Christian Science—a member of the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. You have no personal knowledge of how Mr. Ogden became manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Only what he has told me, and I think I have perhaps read his correspondence on it.

Q. Yes. And what did he tell you? A. I think he told me that he had received two telegrams, one from the Board of Trustees and one from the Board of Directors.

Q. Did he tell you that he had been elected by the Board of Directors? A. I think the telegram said so.

Q. And what, if anything, did you do after December, 1912, with respect to employing Mr. Ogden as manager of the— A. Simply continued him in the employment of the Publishing Society.

Q. You took no steps one way or the other? A. No steps at all.

Q. You know his signature, of course? A. I do.

Q. Is that his signature (passing a paper to witness)? A. It is.

Mr. Krauthoff—We offer this in evidence.

“Boston, Massachusetts.

“Dear Friends:

“Inasmuch as the Board of Trustees of this society has today been good enough to elect me a trustee to supply one of the recent vacancies on the board, I hereby tender my resignation as business manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, to take effect Aug. 1.

“In placing my resignation, I wish to tell you that I am deeply grateful for the opportunities and blessings I have had during the past nine years as business manager, and I wish to thank you for the help you have all been to me.

“Gratefully yours,
“(Signed) “DAVID B. OGDEN.”

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 37. R. H. J.]

Q. Who succeeded Mr. Ogden as manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Mr. John Watts.

Q. Mr. John R. Watts? A. John R. Watts.

Q. Were you advised of the fact that he was elected to that position by The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. Do you mean have I received any written notification of that?

Q. Yes. A. I don’t remember any.

Q. Were you ever advised of it in any way? A. We discussed it.

Q. That he had been elected? A. I don’t know that. We discussed Mr. Watts’ being business manager.

Q. Yes. Now, have you— A. I testified to that yesterday.

Q. I understand. Have you any record of your employment of him? A. I don’t know that we have. I don’t know whether the minutes show it or not.

Q. Will you be good enough to look in July, 1917, and see if there is any minute record of Mr. Watts’ being elected business manager?

Mr. Streeter—Will you let me see the directors’ records for July, 1917?

Mr. Bates—You do not want to see them now, do you?

Mr. Streeter—I would like to.

Mr. Bates—For any special reason?

Mr. Streeter—Yes, I should like to see them. There has been a reference to them.

Mr. Bates—We will give you a chance to see them, but we can’t very well do so just this minute.

A. Here is a notation in the minutes of July 28.

Q. 1917? A. 1917. “The Board of Trustees was informed that Mr. John R. Watts, at present general assistant to the business manager, being acceptable to the Board of Directors and to the Board of Trustees, had been elected business manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society on the resignation of Mr. David B. Ogden."

Q. Had been elected by whom?
A. It does not say.

Q. Then, what did you do after that? What further does the record show? A. There is nothing else on that question.

Q. Is there any record there of the election of Mr. McKenzie as editor?

Mr. Whipple—I would like to say, although I think our position is perfectly understood, that under the Deed of Trust there is no provision for the election of an editor, and of course the trustees would naturally not elect an editor or elect a business manager. They hire them; they employ them. Therefore we object to these inquiries as not being pertinent to any issue in the case.

The Master—This inquiry, then, will be subject to objection by the plaintiffs.

A. What was it you asked?

Q. For the record of Mr. McKenzie becoming the editor in 1917.

A. At 2:10, on July 23, 1917.

Mr. Streeter—What is the date? A. July 23; there is a minute here: "At 2:10 the Board of Directors asked Mr. McKenzie to go over to their meeting, and at 2:45 Mr. Eustace was also asked to go over. Announcement was then made that the Board of Directors had invited Mr. McKenzie to become editor of the Journal, Sentinel, and Herald. Mr. Eustace was asked whether this would be agreeable to the Board of Trustees, and the action of the Board of Directors was heartily approved."

Q. What is the next record of Mr. McKenzie becoming an editor? A. There is nothing here that I see except on a salary matter.

Q. Will you read that, please? A. "July 24, 1917."

Q. You can omit the amount if you prefer; I am not interested in the amount. A. (Reading.) "On motion of Mr. Eustace, seconded by Mr. Merritt, the salary of the editor of the Journal, Sentinel, and Herald was made" so much a year.

Mr. Streeter—Why shouldn't you state it?

The Witness—$7500 a year.

Mr. Krauthoff—He may if he wants to.

Mr. Whipple—Why, there isn't anything about these records that ought to be kept from Christian Scientists.

Mr. Streeter—That is right.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have never thought so, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Then why do you suggest suppressing it?

The Witness—He did not.

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Eustace asked me if I wanted the record about the salary question. I said I was not interested in the amount. There isn't anything that may not be fully stated.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, so far as we are concerned we want these records entirely opened up, not only to the court but to the public, and by the public I mean the Christian Science public particularly.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, when you became a trustee in December, 1912, you found that Mr. Archibald McLellan was the editor-in-chief of the Christian Science periodicals? Is that true?
A. I did.

Q. And he continued to be editor, first editor-in-chief and then editor of all except the Monitor, until his passing in July, 1917? A. He did.

Q. Did you upon becoming trustee make any investigation to see how Mr. McLellan had become the editor in the first place? A. I did not.

Q. Did you employ him at any time as editor? A. I found him already employed.

Q. I mean, you made no reemployment of him at any time? A. None whatever.

Q. Nor any adjustments in his salary? A. Yes, I think there were adjustments in his salary.

Q. But no employment? A. Just continued.

Q. Whatever employment existed when you became trustee continued? A. Continued, yes.

Q. You also found that Mrs. Annie M. Knott was an associate editor?
A. I did.

Q. And she continued to be an associate editor until March of 1919?
A. Until April, 1919.

Q. Yes. This year? A. This year.

Q. That is true, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. Without any employment on your part, so far as you know? A. Just as she continued in the employment.

Q. The relations continued? A. Yes.

Q. The other editor—was that Mr. Willis at that time or Mr. McCrackan?
A. Mr. Willis.

Q. And Mr. Willis had been named before you became a trustee, John B. Willis? A. He had.

Q. And he continued as an editor without any employment on the part of the trustees? A. Without any further employment.

Q. Without any further employment, after you became trustee?
A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Willis was succeeded by Mr. McCrackan? A. By Mr. McCrackan.

Q. Have you the record of the manner in which Mr. McCrackan became an assistant editor of the periodicals? That would be 1916, I believe, would it not? A. Yes. In June, 1916, yes.

Q. Perhaps, Mr. Eustace, Mr. Watts can find that letter while I am asking something else. (A letter is produced and handed to the witness.) A. Yes. That is, I think, the first one I saw. I remember that one.

[A letter from the directors to the trustees, June 8, 1914, is marked Exhibit 38.]

[Exhibit 38.]

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
Boston, Massachusetts."

"June 8, 1914."

"Dear Friends:

"At the regular business meeting of The Christian Science Board of Directors held this morning, the following officers were elected: Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, David B. Ogden; Editor, Christian Science Journal, Sentinel, and Der Herold, Archibald McLellan; Associate Editor, Journal and Sentinel, John B. Willis; Associate Editor, Journal and Sentinel, Mrs. Annie M. Knott; Assistant Editor, Der Herold, Theodore Stanger; Editor, The Monitor, Frederick Dixon.

"Very sincerely,

"THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BOARD OF DIRECTORS,

"By JOHN V. DITTEMORE,

JVD—T "Secretary."

Q. That was Mr. Dixon's first accession to the office of editor of the Monitor, was it not? A. I believe that he was associate editor, appointed by Mrs. Eddy in 1908—November, 1908.

Q. At that time he was back and forth between England and America? A. No. At that time she sent for him, through Mr. McLellan, I believe, to become editor in charge of the editorial pages of The Christian Science Monitor.

Q. In 1908? A. 1908, yes.

Q. Did he act as editor from 1908 until 1914? A. No, he did not.

Q. This was the first time, then, that he became editor of the Monitor in chief? A. Yes, that is when he took office.

Q. Now, what did you do when you were advised that the Board of Directors had elected Mr. Dixon as an editor of the Monitor? A. Simply what you see on there—approved it.

Q. Approved, June 9, 1914, by the Board of Trustees? A. Yes.

Q. And of course you understood that the Board of Trustees was acting under the Church Manual when they did this? A. Yes; and I see nothing inconsistent at all with the Board of Directors electing those officers, and if acceptable to the Publishing Society, to the Board of Trustees, I see nothing inconsistent between our duties under the Deed of Trust and their action in electing those officers.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, Mr. Watts tells me that the first record he can find about Mr. McCrackan was under date of July 3, 1916. Will you be good enough to read that, so far as it applies to him? A. "July 3, 1916. Conference held with Mr. McCrackan and the work of associate editor was discussed."

Q. Now, then, to recapitulate, Mr. Eustace, Mr. Archibald McLellan, Mr. John B. Willis, Mr. William D. McCrackan, Mrs. Annie M. Knott, and Mr. Frederick Dixon were the editors of the Christian Science periodicals until Jan. 1, 1919, from the time you became trustee? A. Yes.

Q. No other editors? A. No.

Q. And the only business managers during your experience as trustee have been Mr. Ogden and Mr. Watts? A. That is right.

Q. In March, 1919, when Mrs. Knott became a member of the Board of Directors, she was succeeded as an editor by Mrs. Ella W. Hoag? A. She was.

Q. Have you the correspondence here between the Board of Directors and the trustees with respect to that incident? A. We have.

Mr. Krauthoff—There were some letters from the trustees directed to the directors. I will offer this as Exhibit No. 39.

[A letter from the trustees to the directors, dated May 6, 1918, is marked Exhibit 39.]

[A letter from the trustees to the directors, dated June 4, 1918, is marked Exhibit 40.]

These letters are read by Mr. Krauthoff, as follows:

"Cable Address 'Science, Boston.'

"May 6, 1918.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"Inasmuch as the work of Mr. Theodore B. Stanger can no longer be considered that of an editor, but is rather that of a translator of English articles into German for Der Herold der Christian Science, it is recommended that his annual appointment for editorial work shall not be made by your board as hitherto, but that this shall be left to the Publishing Society, as in the case of the translators for Le Héraut and the workers in the editorial departments other than the editors and associate editors.

"The editors and associate editors of the Journal and Sentinel now select the articles and editorials for translation and republication in Der Herold and Le Héraut each month. Hence Mr. Stanger's work is purely that of a translator.

"Yours sincerely,

"Dear Friends:

"Your letter of June 3, announcing the election of the editors and business manager of the Publishing Society for the ensuing year, has been received, and is appreciated.

"May we also thank you for your action regarding the question of employment of the editorial workers connected with Der Herold der Christian Science and Le Héraut, in leaving this with the Board of Trustees of this society, as is the case with other regular employees.

Q. What control, if any, have the trustees exercised over the editorial work of Mr. Dixon as the editor of the Monitor? A. The trustees exercise, in one sense of the word, no control whatever over the editors. They leave it to their demonstration. If they do not do their work well the trustees promptly call their attention to anything that is wrong.

Q. I mean now as to the broad question of policy, not the mere question of statement, but the general policy of editorial control, as to what shall be discussed in the editorials and what shall not, and how they shall be discussed. A. That is absolutely the demonstration of the editors.

Q. The demonstration of the editors? A. Yes.

Q. And is that true with respect to all of them? A. It is absolutely true in respect to all of them. They have the absolute right to talk with us any time they want to.

Q. May I ask, are the editorial statements contained in these periodicals generally accepted by those who read them as statements of the Christian Science point of view? A. I imagine so.

Q. That is to say, these periodicals, except the Monitor, are purely religious; I mean, the articles in all of them are on religious subjects? A. They are on Christian Science.

Q. Yes, on the religion of Christian Science; and those articles are taken and accepted by followers of Christian Science as statements of Christian Science? A. I think so.

Q. And as accurate in their doctrine? A. As accurate as any one individual can state Christian Science, up to his limit of understanding of what Christian Science is.

Q. Now, then, the Monitor has each day an article on Christian Science? A. It has.

Q. That is, an article with respect to a subject treated from the Christian Science point of view, and that is taken as officially representative of the Christian Science movement? A. In exactly the same way that the others are taken.

Q. The Monitor in its secular aspect, if we may so call it, is an international daily newspaper? A. It is.

Q. It discusses the affairs of the world at large? A. It does.

Q. And in discussion of the affairs of the world at large is very generally accepted by its readers as representative of the Christian Science movement? A. As representative of a certain statement of whatever is being discussed.

Q. Of course, accurately speaking, with respect to world affairs, Christian Scientists are individual in their opinions? A. Absolutely.

Q. But many readers of the Monitor take every statement in the Monitor, like those who believe in the Bible from cover to cover, as a statement of Christian Science? A. And they are very largely enlightened by somewhat doing that.

Q. But everything in the Monitor is taken as representative of the Christian Science movement? A. Well, it is representative, as I say, of the demonstration of the Christian Science movement up to the ability of the editor to give that.

Mr. Whipple—I take it that you are referring to the editorials rather than the news articles.

The Witness—Yes, of course.

Q. Well, a great many news items are written editorially, are they not? A. In a sense.

Q. What I mean to say is, they express the views of the author of it rather than a statement of the facts? A. Of course any statement does that, must necessarily state the views of the one writing it.

Q. You stated, I believe, that the Deed of Trust and the Manual could work together on this question of editors? A. That they could not, did you say?

Q. That they could. A. Certainly they can.

Q. That is to say, it is entirely possible for The Christian Science Board of Directors to elect the editors and the manager, and it is entirely possible for the trustees to employ them in the event that, as you state it, the trustees approve the selection made by the directors? A. That is very correctly stated.

Q. Without violating any law? A. Without violating anything.

Q. Either statutory or legal or otherwise?

Mr. Whipple—But the so-called election then becomes merely a nomination, does it not?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is another question.

Mr. Whipple—No, that is the same question.

Q. Now, then, we take this next step. Have you been advised that if the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society accepted the election by the directors as controlling on the trustees, without regard to the judgment of the trustees, that you would be violating some law? A. Why, I don't have to be told that.

Q. You know that? A. I know that if it was a control I would be untrue to my trust.

Q. Then do you place that upon any statute of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts? A. I place it on the Trust Deed.

Q. On the Trust Deed alone? A. Yes.

Q. Calling your attention to Sec. 7 of Art. I, on page 27, with respect to the publishing buildings, who owns the publishing buildings in which The Christian Science Publishing Society conducts its business? A. The title to the property, I believe, is in the Board of Directors.

Q. And belongs to the Board of Directors? A. I don't know whether it is in the Board of Directors or The First Church of Christ, Scientist.

Q. It belongs to The Mother Church? A. It belongs to The Mother Church.

Q. You pay no rent for the buildings on Falmouth Street, between St. Paul and Norway? A. No. We pay rent for other buildings, of course.

Q. You pay rent for other buildings to an institution known as the Shawmut Real Estate Trust Company? A. Yes; and for a garage and for storage room, and so forth.

Q. All to the Shawmut Trust? A. Oh, no; outside.

Q. Those are buildings not owned— A. Yes.

Q. Under what provision of the Deed of Trust do you occupy these buildings? A. Conducting our business.

Q. I know; but what provision of the Deed of Trust gives you the right to occupy buildings of The Mother Church free of rent? A. I don't know that there is anything at all in the Deed of Trust that does.

Q. It is entirely consistent with the Deed of Trust and the Manual for The Mother Church to provide The Christian Science Publishing Society with buildings free of rent? A. Absolutely; just as it would be consistent for you to provide us a building free.

Q. That does not violate any law of any kind? A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. And you have found no difficulty in obeying that part of the Manual? A. Not the slightest.

Q. Without regard to any limitation whatever? A. I do not know of any, unless there are some that I do not know of.

Q. In passing through the Manual, I am reminded of the Board of Education. When you attended the Board of Education and became a teacher of Christian Science, the person conducting the class taught what the Manual was in Christian Science? A. I do not know that that was specifically brought up. The whole teaching was Christian Science, and of course the Manual includes that, or, rather, the Manual is included in that.

Q. And as a teacher of classes yourself you teach a class each year? A. I do.

Q. And the students that you teach become practitioners of Christian Science, many of them? A. I hope all are practitioners because they cannot be Christian Scientists unless they are practitioners of Christian Science.

Q. At all times and at all places and in every capacity? A. Exactly.

Q. But what I meant by practitioners were those who publicly followed the profession of Christian Science and were recognized as such in the Journal. A. Yes, a certain number of us do.

Q. And of course as a teacher of Christian Science you taught your classes what the Manual was in Christian Science? A. I think you would have to qualify that in this, that I never attempt to teach any interpretation of anything.

Q. I do not mean the interpretation of the Manual, but what I mean is, did you teach your classes the relation of the Manual to the Christian Science religion? A. No more so than the relation of everything that Mrs. Eddy has written.

Q. It is all part of one comprehensive whole? A. It is all a part of one.

Q. On page 43 of the Manual in Sec. 9 there is a provision with respect to the use of written formulas by practitioners, or, rather, it applies to members, and of course it includes practitioners. In passing upon the applications of practitioners for cards in the Journal what attention is paid to that part of the Manual? A. That was one of the questions asked.

Q. That was one of the questions asked? A. Yes.

Q. And it is perfectly in accord with the Deed of Trust to exclude from the list of practitioners in the Journal a person who violates this provision of the Manual? A. It is in perfect accord with the provisions of the Deed of Trust to exclude from our periodicals any advertisement that we do not think consistent with our idea of what that advertisement should be.

Q. In Christian Science? A. When you say, "in Christian Science," it includes the Monitor, too, therefore I cannot say "in Christian Science." As applied to the advertisements in the Journal, yes, in Christian Science.

Q. Haven't you, in passing on advertisements for the Monitor, also applied the rules of Christian Science to those? A. Yes, in the sense that they must be right and honest and just.

Q. And you do not accept advertisements of patent medicines, for instance? A. No.

Q. Or things which in themselves violate the principles of Christian Science? A. Not at all.

Q. So that with respect to this question of formulas the trustees may enforce that without violating the Deed of Trust or any law of the land? A. By "enforcing"—of course we do not look upon it as enforcing. It is accepting or rejecting an advertisement. That is not enforcing anything. Every Christian Scientist is free to work out the problem of being in his own way.

Q. Yes, but they are not free to use written formulas? A. I don't know. Each individual must work that out for himself.

Q. But you did make it a rule that anybody who did use written formulas did not get their card in the Journal? A. I would not accept an advertisement for the Journal if I knew that the individual was using written formulas.

Q. Now, where in the Deed of Trust is that provided? A. Not at all.

Q. You are familiar, of course, with the provision in the Manual prohibiting the publishing of profuse quotations, Sec. 10, page 43, "from Mary Baker Eddy's copyrighted works without her permission," and with respect to plagiarizing her writings? A. I am.

Q. The Christian Science Publishing Society respects that, does it not? A. It certainly does.

Q. And that is done without violating the Deed of Trust? A. I know nothing inconsistent with that in the Deed of Trust.

Q. Sec. 11: "A member of this Church shall neither buy, sell, nor circulate Christian Science literature which is not correct in its statement of the Divine Principle and rules and the demonstration of Christian Science. Also the spirit in which the writer has written his literature shall be definitely considered. His writings must show strict adherence to the Golden Rule, or his literature shall not be adjudged Christian Science. A departure from the spirit or letter of this by-law involves schisms in our Church and the possible loss, for a time, of Christian Science." Do the trustees for the Publishing Society respect that provision in the Manual? A. Certainly they do. They respect every provision.

Q. Now, let us take them up one at a time, Mr. Eustace. We will get along quicker.

Mr. Whipple—Do you think that is a good idea? His Honor has suggested we do not go through them with this meticulous discrimination.

Mr. Krauthoff—I understood the rule of the Court to be that any particular things I desired to call attention to, I could do so. I am not taking every provision in this Manual. Coming back to the one I have read—

The Master—I do not see, Mr.

Krauthoff, why you could not perfectly well put them together, these last three at any rate, into one question.

Mr. Krauthoff—You mean formulas and adulteration? If Your Honor will bear with me—

The Master—You are taking up an unnecessary amount of time.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor will bear with me, I shall be very glad to be as brief as I may, but I am necessarily dealing with a very tremendous subject, one which will unfold as it proceeds, and I am going to ask Your Honor to accept my assurance that all this is vital to our defense.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, for a member of The Mother Church to buy, sell, or circulate Christian Science literature which is not correct in its statement would be a violation of the Manual as I have read it to you, and the literature that is issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society is generally accepted by Christian Scientists and members of The Mother Church, as complying with this provision in the Manual? A. As nearly as it is possible under the demonstration of the editors and writers.

Q. And unless members of The Mother Church could be assured that it was in compliance with the Manual, their ability to purchase it would be very seriously interfered with? A. Their own understanding would determine for them whether it was.

Q. And you mean the Church as an organization would have no control over that? No; each individual Scientist would have to determine whether the article was satisfactory to him as a Christian Scientist or not.

Q. How would that affect his answer to a complaint to remove him from membership in The Mother Church because he was violating the provisions of the Manual? A. In circulating?

Q. In buying, selling, or circulating Christian Science literature which is not correct in its statement of a divine principle. Suppose a member of The Mother Church was proceeded against for violating this section of the Manual; who would decide that? A. Why, I suppose if the Board of Directors proceeded against an individual, the Board of Directors would decide it.

Q. Very well. So that it is necessary for a Christian Scientist to know in some authoritative manner that he is reading Christian Science literature that is authentic? A. Why, naturally.

Q. In your advertisements you continually use the phrase, "sole publishers of all authorized Christian Science literature." Who authorized you to be the sole publisher of all authorized Christian Science literature? A. We are the publishers of Mrs. Eddy's works now.

Q. Under a contract with the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy? A. Under a contract with the Trustees under the Will.

Q. And what else makes you the sole publishers of all authorized Christian Science literature? A. We are the publishers of everything that Mrs. Eddy has authorized in the way of periodicals.

Q. Then that comes through your contract to publish Mrs. Eddy's works? A. The "sole" does, yes.

Q. Now, then, the literature that you put out in addition to the works of Mrs. Eddy, is that authorized Christian Science literature? A. You mean the periodicals?

Q. The periodicals? A. Certainly it is.

Q. Who authorized you to do that? A. Mrs. Eddy.

Q. How? A. Through the Deed of Trust.

Q. Point it out, will you, please? A. It is with the Journal. She gives the Journal authorization there, the Quarterly.

Q. She said the Journal? A. Yes.

Q. Now, what was the Journal at the time the Deed of Trust was executed? A. What was it?

Q. Yes. A. Very much as it is now, only it is enlarged now.

Q. I mean, of what body was it the organ? A. I think that it was the Christian Science Students' Association, or something like that.

Q. The National Christian Science Association? A. That is right, the National Christian Science Association.

Q. It was not on Jan. 25, 1898, the official organ of The Mother Church? A. Why, I think so.

Q. You think so? I wish you would investigate that more closely. A. I don't know. However, that is—

Q. You haven't studied that? A. No.

Q. Is there anything in the Deed of Trust which makes it the official organ of The Mother Church? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Not that you know of? What does make it the official organ of The Mother Church? A. I suppose I might correct that statement and say this: that the fact that this belonged to Mrs. Eddy, and that Mrs. Eddy was the entire Christian Science movement, as it were, so far as direction and government was concerned, that whatever belonged to her would of necessity be official, that she would use it in that capacity of being official.

Q. Now, let us get that clear. Did Mrs. Eddy ever teach that she was the entire Christian Science movement so far as government and direction were concerned?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment to that question.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, it is a very vital question in the case as it will proceed.

The Master—Now, I think that we shall have to stop there.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well. We shall reserve our views on that for some other time.

Q. You are familiar with the provision in the Manual that a member of the Church shall not patronize a publishing house or bookstore that has for sale obnoxious books? A. I am.

Q. What controls the trustees of the Publishing Society in the books that it publishes outside of the Manual?

Mr. Whipple—Will you read that question?

(The question last put is read.)

A. Which ones do you refer to?

Q. Any book. A. Do you mean "The Life of Mary Baker Eddy"?

Q. No; I mean any book that you see fit to publish. Who controls that?

A. Why, the trustees, of course.

Q. The trustees exclusively? A. Yes.

Q. And they are not limited. Were you advised that at one time in the history of the Publishing Society they published novels? A. No; I did not know that they ever did that.

Q. Is there anything in the Deed of Trust which regulates the books which you shall publish? A. Inferentially, yes.

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, as to these questions about the Deed of Trust, and questions like that, the Deed of Trust speaks for itself. It is elementary that a trustee must exercise sound discretion and good judgment, and this Trust Deed requires that on the part of the trustees, and it covers all these questions which counsel is putting with such meticulous nicety.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, I have not said very much about these objections of Mr. Whipple because I felt that this was not the time to argue the case, and that we, as counsel in the trial of the case, involving very large and comprehensive issues, might be trusted to proceed to develop our case. Mr. Whipple takes the narrow proposition that this Deed of Trust—

The Master—Is there any question now pending?

Mr. Krauthoff—I understand that there is, and that Mr. Whipple objected to it.

The Master—Is there?

Mr. Krauthoff—I will not press the argument at this time.

Mr. Whipple—I think the question was answered before I had my objection fully stated.

The Master—I thought so.

Mr. Whipple—And the objection was more to the line of inquiry than to that particular question.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, you are familiar with Sec. 14—"It shall be the privilege and duty of every member, who can afford it, to subscribe for the periodicals which are the organs of this Church." Now, which of the periodicals published by The Christian Science Publishing Society are the organs of The Mother Church? A. Mrs. Eddy stated that she had given the names to the periodicals.

Q. Are all of them organs of The Mother Church? A. I would certainly say so.

Q. Yes. A. I understand by the term "organ" that it means that which sounds forth that which The Mother Church stands for.

The Master—This seems to be a rather specific question, Mr. Eustace. He asks you to say which ones of the publications you issue are the organs of the Church.

The Witness—I would say all.

Q. That is, the Journal, the Sentinel, the two Heralds, and The Monitor?

Mr. Whipple—And the Quarterly.

Mr. Krauthoff—And the Quarterly.

The Witness—And the Quarterly.

Q. And your definition of an "organ" is that for which The Mother Church stands? A. That which sends forth or sounds forth the teachings of that which The Mother Church stands for; yes.

Q. —"And it shall be the duty of the directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times." Now, to what extent does that interfere with the Deed of Trust? A. Not at all.

Q. Not at all? A. Not in the slightest; no.

Q. It is perfectly in accord with every part of the Deed of Trust, without violating any law at all, for the directors to see that the periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times? A. I think that is their bounden duty, just as it is the bounden duty of every Christian Scientist to keep absolute watch of those periodicals, and insist that the trustees keep them right up to date in every possible way.

Q. And to see that they do it? A. And to see that they do it.

Q. Where is that found in the Deed of Trust? A. It is not found in it at all. It is something that is not inconsistent with it at all.

Q. At this point, Mr. Eustace, I would like to take up some documents which you have issued from time to time (passing a document to the witness). A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Are you proposing to offer these?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, I am going to offer them.

The Master—Can you do it all together, or are you going to do it one by one?

Mr. Krauthoff—I can offer them all at once.

The Master—How many of them are there?

Mr. Streeter—What is it that you are offering?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, there are five.

Mr. Streeter—What?

Mr. Krauthoff—They are what they call "Memorandums"—there are five Memorandums—A, B, C, and D—issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society, and covering distribution of literature by churches of Christ, Scientist.

The Master—Possibly this would be a good way to begin: "I show you the five documents," mentioning what they are.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

The Master—That will be the foundation of your next question, and then you may ask him about them.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

Q. I show you five printed pamphlets, known respectively as Memorandum A, Memorandum B, Memorandum C, Memorandum D, and a General Bulletin, all purporting to be issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society. Were they issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. They were.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, we offer the five in evidence, and I wish to call his attention to particular parts of them.

Mr. Whipple—On what ground, may I ask, if Your Honor please, are they offered? To show what?

The Master—Perhaps we shall find that out when he calls the attention of the witness to certain things in them.

Mr. Whipple—And if he does not call his attention to anything that seems to be material, then I take it that later they may be excluded.

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Streeter—Have you copies of these that you can give to us?

Mr. Krauthoff—I have no copies of these.

The Master—They are not in evidence yet. You need not mark them as exhibits at present.

Mr. Krauthoff—The reporter is proceeding to mark them as exhibits.

Mr. Whipple—I understand that His Honor thinks that they may not be marked yet.

Mr. Krauthoff—I now offer them in evidence.

The Master—If you show nothing more about them, than that they are documents or books, or whatever they are, published by the trustees, I do not think that that makes them evidence.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I offer them for the purpose of showing the essential unity of the Publishing Society and the Church, and to show that the Publishing Society has always treated itself as a part of the Church.

Mr. Whipple—We say that on neither of those grounds are they admissible, because the conduct of the trustees cannot change the trust.

The Master—I think you had better go on and call attention to what you desire to get in in those publications, and then we will see about admitting them in evidence.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

The Master—I do not yet admit them.

Mr. Krauthoff—You do not wish them marked as exhibits at present?

The Master—No. They may be marked for identification at present, if they need identification. But are there any other publications of a similar nature?

Mr. Krauthoff—No.

The Master—If you want them identified they may be identified.

Mr. Krauthoff—No; I do not need to have them identified.

Q. Now, referring to Memorandum A, this was issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society?

The Master—He has just said that they were all issued by that society, has he not? Why repeat it?

Mr. Krauthoff—Thank you.

Q. And sent by the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society to the churches composing The Mother Church and its branches—is that right? A. I suppose the business management sent them.

Q. You assisted in their preparation? A. I don't know whether I did on Memorandum A. What is the date of that?

Q. That says 1913. A. Well, that was probably issued before I came; but then I don't mind; that is all right.

Q. Now, I call your attention to this statement: "(For use of all members of distribution and of Monitor committees, and to be freely passed to all interested. Committees are requested to keep copies at hand for reference and to preserve copies as part of committee files.)" Now, these distribution and Monitor committees that are referred to in Memorandum A are the distribution and Monitor committees of the branch churches of The Mother Church? A. They are.

Q. They are not of the Publishing Society? A. They have nothing whatever to do with the Publishing Society.

Q. And you sent these to them. "We are in receipt continually of requests from our coworkers for information and direction by means of which the Monitor may be advanced in their respective communities."

Whom did you mean by the phrase "our coworkers"? A. Why, every Christian Scientist on earth.

Q. This was sent to branch churches? A. It is for free distribution, I think.

Q. For free distribution? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. All right. For everybody, without regard to the Church? A. I think so.

Q. You think so? A. I mean that if you asked for one you would not be denied a copy, whether you were—

Q. It was written for the churches, however, wasn't it? A. I think it was written for the help of anyone that wanted to see what was being done in regard to distribution work.

Q. We will get to that as we go along. "We offer these recommendations to the field generally, and invite each group of local workers to adopt and to use such as are suited to their present conditions, requirements, and equipment." The word "field" is very generally used in Christian Science, is it not? A. It is.

Q. And what does it denote? A. Every Christian Scientist.

Q. And when you speak of "local workers," whom did you mean by that? A. The Christian Scientists in the different places.

Q. Did you mean church members?
A. Not necessarily.

Q. Not necessarily. You quote next: "In The Christian Science Sentinel of Nov. 21, 1908, Mary Baker Eddy, Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, said: 'My desire is that every Christian Scientist and as many others as possible, subscribe for and read our daily newspaper.'" That was The Christian Science Sentinel that she was speaking of, was it not—No, the Monitor? A. The Monitor.

Q. Now, the word "our" has been referred to in statements of counsel, and when Mrs. Eddy said "our daily newspaper," whose newspaper do you think she was talking about? A. Why, the newspaper of The Christian Science Publishing Society, entitled The Christian Science Monitor.

Q. That is, when Mary Baker Eddy said "our daily newspaper," she meant The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. She meant the newspaper that she had founded.

Q. Did she mean as a newspaper of the Christian Science movement? A. She did; she meant The Christian Science Monitor.

Q. Who were "our"? A. "Our"?

Q. Yes. Whom did she mean when she said "our"? A. Anyone who wanted to accept it as their newspaper.

Q. And she did not mean the Christian Science movement? A. Why, of course it included that.

Q. "Our Leader knew better than anyone else what was essential to the welfare of man, and the purpose of her admonitions was to establish happiness among men. Christian Scientists are coming to understand better how The Christian Science Monitor can be an effectual means for blessing themselves and others.

"Distribution committees have been actively at work in the churches for many years circulating our periodicals and other literature."

Now, what did you have to do as a distinct branch of activity with churches? A. Why, the churches are our very best agents for the distribution of our periodicals.

Q. They are your agents, and without their agency what would happen to you? A. Why, we would have to find new avenues of distribution.

Q. "In some cases Monitor distribution has been made a part of the general committee work; in other cases the appointment of a special committee has been found advantageous, since the Monitor can have a somewhat wider field than our other literature.

"The Board of Directors of a local church may have to vote funds for distribution work in the beginning, but when the reports of the results of this work are frequently made to the membership of the church, so much interest is usually aroused that funds are abundantly supplied for its continuance."

Now, that paragraph, of course, was written for churches, wasn't it? A. I suppose it was written as information. I don't really know what all those things were, except for information. I suppose that they were the result of questions that had come in to the Publishing Society, and those memorandums were gotten up to avoid answering everything by letter.

Q. On page 17, I call your attention to this:

"Perhaps the first important point to be considered in committee work for the Monitor is the need of active support of this periodical on the part of the members of the local church."

That is true, is it not? A. I certainly hope it is true.

Q. Now, then, these memorandums A, B, and C, were issued in 1914, 1915, and 1916. Memorandum C was approved by the Board of Directors of The Mother Church, was it not? A. If that is the memorandum that we discussed very thoroughly with them, it doubtless was.

Q. I want to call your attention to this in Memorandum C:

"Every constituted Church of Christ, Scientist, has its reading room, where the Bible may be read and all the works of the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy. These writings are usually found in the lending library of the reading room, for those who wish to study at home, and they may be generally found in public libraries also, in so far as Christian Scientists have been successful in placing them.

"The progress of the movement is disclosed in the periodicals, which are:"

And then you go on and give the names of the periodicals, and the first is The Christian Science Journal.

"Concerning these periodicals which she established, Mrs. Eddy wrote (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany, page 353): 'Something in a Name.

"I have given the name to all the Christian Science periodicals. The first was The Christian Science Journal, designed to put on record the divine Science of Truth; the second I entitled Sentinel, intended to hold guard over Truth, Life, and Love; the third, Der Herold der Christian Science, to proclaim the universal activity and availability of Truth; the next I named Monitor, to spread undivided the Science that operates unspent. The object of the Monitor is to injure no man, but to bless all mankind."

"Our Leader gives the reason for church activity on page 583 of Science and Health: "The Church is that institution which affords proof of its utility and is found elevating the race, rousing the dormant understanding from material beliefs to the apprehension of spiritual ideas and the demonstration of divine Science, thereby casting out devils, or error, and healing the sick.' Our Leader was divinely led in establishing the Christian Science periodicals, and in the Manual, Art. VIII, Sec. 14, we read: 'It shall be the privilege and duty of every member, who can afford it, to subscribe for the periodicals which are the organs of this Church; and it shall be the duty of the directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times.'" Now, you got out Memorandum D in 1919? A. That is evidently just out; yes.

Q. That was not submitted to The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. Why, I didn't know that it was a case of submitting anything. It was a case of our deep appreciation—

The Master—The question seems to be capable of a simple answer. Was it or was it not submitted?

The Witness—I don't think so. I don't know. I don't think it was.

Q. Was there any reason for not doing that? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Not that you know of? A. No.

Q. Now, I call your attention to a statement in Memorandum D: "Our Leader was divinely led in establishing the Christian Science periodicals, and in the Manual, Art. VIII, Sec. 14, we read in part: 'It shall be the privilege and duty of every member, who can afford it, to subscribe for the periodicals which are the organs of this Church.'"—

The Master—You had just read that.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg pardon, if Your Honor please. I will ask you to bear with me just a moment.

Q. Now, why did you strike out of Memorandum D the words "and it shall be the duty of the directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times"? A. I suppose if they were stricken out, the latter part of it hadn't anything to do with the subscription for the periodicals.

Q. I did not ask you "if they were stricken out"; I asked you why you struck them out. A. I supposed that that was the reason.

Q. That what was the reason? A. That it had nothing whatever to do with the subscription for the periodicals.

Q. You say now that a sentence in the Manual, a complete sentence—that one part of that sentence, written by Mary Baker Eddy, has nothing whatever to do with the rest of the sentence written by Mary Baker Eddy? A. I didn't say any such thing.

Q. You said that you supposed that it was stricken out because you supposed it had no bearing on the first part of it. A. I said it had no bearing in Memorandum D.

Mr. Whipple—He said that it had no bearing on the matter of subscriptions for periodicals—that is the substance of it.

Mr. Krauthoff—Wait a minute.

Q. You mean that it is no argument to a subscriber to the periodicals of the Christian Science Church to assure them that it is "the duty of the directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times"? A. Not in the slightest; for the Manual already does it.

Q. The Manual does it. You did quote in Memorandum C the provision of the Manual in its entirety? A. If you say so, yes, I accept it.

Q. Well, I will ask you to satisfy yourself. I do not—A. If it is there I will accept it. It does not make any difference.

Q. In Memorandum D you strike out a part of it? A. All right.

Q. And you now say you did that in Memorandum D because it was no part of the subject under discussion.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me. He has not said he did it at all.

Q. Did you have anything to do with striking it out? A. I really can't tell you whether I did or not.

Q. You really can't tell? A. I went through them, and I suppose I saw them, but I don't know why it was done, except for the reason, as I say, that I suppose it had nothing to do—we were cutting it down; our purpose has been to keep our memorandums down all the time.

Q. Now, what else did you strike out? A. Aren't there a great many things struck out? I have not looked through it—

The Master—I think that the counsel and the witness had better avoid talking at the same time. When they are both talking at the same time I cannot tell what either says.

Mr. Krauthoff—Thank you, Your Honor.

Q. I call your attention to the fact that Memorandum C had 38 pages in it, and Memorandum D has 44. That was in the effort to shorten it? A. Other things had to go in, I suppose.

Q. Yes. And, in order to make more space in that memorandum, you struck out that part of the words of the Manual which say, "and it shall be the duty of the directors to see that the periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times." Now, who participated in that striking out? A. I really can't tell you; I don't know.

Q. Will you say that you had nothing whatever to do with it? A. I don't say any such thing.

Q. Who helped you to do it? A. I don't know. I don't know that I did it.

Q. You are a member of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and you have stated in the direct examination that in everything you acted together, and were harmonious about everything you did. A. Yes; I was absolutely harmonious on having that struck out.

Q. You will take the responsibility for it? A. I will take the responsibility for it.

Q. And for issuing these to the local churches with that stricken out, without taking it up with the Christian Science Board of Directors? A. Most certainly.

Q. I want to call your attention, Mr. Eustace, in Memorandum D, to this question: "May we all ponder Art. 8, Sec. 15, of the Manual." Now, of course the word "we" in that connection includes The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. It includes every Christian Scientist.

Q. And The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Of course.

Q. Will you turn to Art. 8, Sec. 15? I do not want to look at your Manual. The Master—To what?

Mr. Bates—Pardon me for an interruption just a moment. Mr. Krauthoff, I want to know if you will not call attention to the date on the memorandum.

Mr. Krauthoff—Memorandum D was published in the year 1919.

Q. Do you know the date on which it was issued? A. No, I do not.

Mr. Bates—That is the present year?

Mr. Krauthoff—The present year, after this controversy in suit.

Q. Now, then, I want to call your attention to Sec. 15 of Art. 8 of the Church By-Laws, which you say in Memorandum D we are called upon to ponder:

"Members of this Church shall not unite with organizations which impede their progress in Christian Science. God requires our whole heart, and He supplies within the wide channels of The Mother Church dutiful and sufficient occupation for all its members."

Is The Christian Science Publishing Society a channel of The Mother Church? A. Why, of course it is, in that sense.

Q. It is. Now, I want to call your attention to the General Bulletin issued in 1919 to your own employees, and I wish to read to you this statement:

"Visitors: The following requirements regarding visitors have been issued to the manager by the Board of Trustees:

"At a meeting of the Board of Trustees held Thursday, Jan. 16, 1913, it was unanimously voted that all visiting in the publishing house during working hours be discontinued, except when visitors are shown over the building by the proper custodian.

"This rule will apply to each and every department, and in making it the board feels that it is only bringing into action in the publishing house of The Mother Church what has been found to be essential in every well-organized and well-conducted establishment of like character and of like proportions."

That statement is true? A. Why, certainly, we always use the term "Mother Church," as a synonym.

Q. You are the publishing house of The Mother Church? A. We are the only publishing house that The Mother Church can use.

Q. Yes; and you are the publishing house of The Mother Church? A. Certainly we are.

Q. What control does The Mother Church have over the publishing house which is the publishing house of The Mother Church? A. It has no control whatever except to see that things are well done and call the attention of the Board of Trustees to anything that is not well done.

Q. And then the Board of Trustees use their own judgment about the recommendation of The Mother Church? A. The Board of Trustees must do so under its Deed of Trust.

Q. And that makes you the publishing house of The Mother Church? A. It certainly does.

Mr. Krauthoff—"Rule of conduct." The Master—What are you now reading from?

Mr. Krauthoff—This is the same General Bulletin of 1919:

"Rule of conduct: A framed copy of Article XXV, Section 7, of the Manual of The Mother Church has been placed in each workroom of the publishing house at the request of Mrs. Eddy, in order to remind employees of our Leader's provisions concerning the conduct which should prevail in the offices of the publishing house. Employees will profit by giving grateful heed to this quiet reminder."

"By-Law: No objectionable pictures shall be exhibited in the rooms where the Christian Science textbook is published or sold. No idle gossip, no slander, no mischief-making, no evil speaking shall be allowed."

[Manual of The Mother Church, Article XXV, Section 7.]

Q. That provision of the Manual applies to everybody in The Christian Science Publishing Society, I believe? A. It does.

Q. And that does not violate any provision of the Deed of Trust? A. Not at all; it upholds it.

Q. You are familiar with the restriction in the Manual with respect to the use of the initials "C. S.," and that rule in the Manual is observed by the Publishing Society? A. What are you referring to? I know the By-Law that you mean there, but how about the Publishing Society?

Q. (Reading) "A member of The Mother Church shall not place the initials 'C. S.' after his name on circulars, cards, or leaflets, which advertise his business or profession, except as a Christian Science practitioner." As I read that I find that that question does not arise, because you only advertise people as Christian Science practitioners. A. Yes.

Q. You would not advertise them in any other way? A. No.

Q. Is there anything in the Deed of Trust outside of the judgment of the trustees which limits the advertisements that may be placed in these periodicals? A. No, except that we must be Christian Scientists.

Q. And that would be your own interpretation? A. Would have to be, necessarily.

The Master—Let me ask, Mr. Krauthoff, whether you have now completed calling his attention to everything you want to point out in those five books?

Mr. Krauthoff—In the five books, yes, if Your Honor please.

The Master—What do you do, then, with the five books?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, I called his attention to them; they are a series, if Your Honor please. I do not care to offer any of them in evidence except the parts I have read. I would be very glad to offer them all.

The Master—That is the end, then, for the present of the five books, is it?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Streeter—Why don't you offer them, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I will offer the full five in evidence.

Mr. Whipple—It does not seem to me that we ought to have them put into the record.

The Master—What?

Mr. Whipple—It seems to me it will make the record unduly bulky and that there is no reason for having them put in, although we make no objection on any other ground.

The Master—I was unable to see anything material in the last one, the General Bulletin. The others I think it may be possible that—

Mr. Krauthoff—Of course, if Your Honor please, we are privileged to develop the materiality of them on our argument. I shall be very glad to develop the case as we proceed but I thought we were now introducing evidence.

The Master—Probably the best way would be to let them go in in that way, subject to objection, without stopping now to distinguish between them.

Mr. Bates—I understand Mr. Whipple objects to them.

Mr. Whipple—Well, what I should like to prevent would be the necessity of having these articles reprinted in the record, or copied in the record.

Mr. Streeter—Why can't they go in as exhibits?

The Master—They would not go in in any other way, would they?

Mr. Streeter—These extracts are being read and are being copied.

Mr. Whipple—If it may be understood that in the transcription of evidence which we are to have from the stenographer they will not be all written out, then I am content.

Mr. Krauthoff—Only the parts that we read.

Mr. Bates—Only the parts that have been read.

Mr. Whipple—And those parts written out only as incorporated in the questions which were put.

Mr. Krauthoff—Certainly.

Mr. Whipple—Very well. With that understanding I have no objection to their being marked.

[The documents above referred to are marked as follows: Memorandum A, dated 1913, is marked Exhibit 41. Memorandum B, dated 1915, is marked Exhibit 42. Memorandum C, dated 1916, is marked Exhibit 43. Memorandum D, dated 1919, is marked Exhibit 44. General Bulletin, dated 1919, is marked Exhibit 45.]

[Short recess.]

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, shall we resume, if Your Honor please?

The Master—Yes.

Q. Mr. Eustace, you are familiar with the requirements of Sec. 22 and 23 of Art. VIII of the Church Manual, appearing on pages 46 and 47, with respect to the duties of practitioners and patients. In accepting advertisements of practitioners for cards in the Journal, what requirement did you make as to the practitioners' observing these provisions of the Manual? A. Sec. 22 of Art. VIII?

Q. Yes; page 46. A. We expected him to be obedient to them, of course.

Q. That provision of the Church Manual can be enforced with respect to a practitioner whose card appears in the Journal without in any way violating the Deed of Trust? A. "Enforced," I never use that term. We simply do not accept his advertisement, that would be all.

Q. You are familiar with Sec. 24, which refers to the testimonials to be given in Christian Science meetings? A. Yes.

Q. This by-law applies to testimonials which appear in the periodicals and those which are given at the Wednesday evening meetings and a good deal of the periodicals, especially a large part of the Journal, and the Sentinel and the two Heralds, contain testimonials of physical healing in Christian Science? A. Physical, mental, moral, financial.

Q. And other forms of healing? A. All kinds of healing, yes.

Q. And in accepting testimonials for publication in the periodicals, what attention is given to this by-law in the Manual? A. Why, we expect the editors of course to watch and see that they are very carefully complied with.

Q. And that is not in conflict with the Deed of Trust? A. No well editing of our periodicals is in conflict with the Deed of Trust.

Q. No well editing? A. No.

Q. You have on page 48 a section headed, "Uncharitable Publications." "A member of this Church shall not publish, nor cause to be published, an article that is uncharitable or impertinent towards religion, medicine, the courts, or the laws of our land." That is enforced in the Publishing Society? A. I don't like the word "enforced" at all. We hate it in the Publishing Society.

Q. Well, what is the proper word? A. We ask them to use their best understanding of the meaning of that by-law and put it into operation as nearly as they know how.

Q. How many of the employees of the Publishing Society are furnished with Church Manuals? A. Why, I suppose every wise Christian Scientist, working in the Publishing Society, has a Church Manual.

Q. What effort do you make to see that they have one? A. No more effort than I make to see that you have one.

Q. You have one, of course, yourself? A. I think so. I have one on my knee now.

Q. "Numbering the People." "Christian Scientists shall not report for publication the number of the members of The Mother Church, nor that of the branch churches." That, of course, is applied according to the understanding of your employees? A. If they have any reason to apply it, it would be, of course.

Q. Well, you do not report for publication the number of members of The Mother Church nor that of members of the branch churches in the periodicals of the Christian Science Church? A. Why, not that I know of.

Q. (Reading.) "The periodicals of our denomination do not publish descriptions of church edifices, but they may quote from other periodicals or give incidental narratives." Is there any difficulty in understanding that and applying it in the work of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. I have never heard the editors complain of it at all or say that they found it difficult.

Q. That does not conflict with the Deed of Trust? A. Not in the slightest.

Q. Sec. 30 refers to monopoly. Would you accept for publication in the Journal the card of a practitioner who violated Sec. 30 of the Manual? A. I should have to be very careful as to saying that anyone was doing that.

Q. No, but if you found out that anyone was doing it. Of course the Manual was written for a purpose, wasn't it? A. I should have to have very conclusive and very strong evidence, without a shadow of a doubt, before I should conclude.

Q. I appreciate that, but this Manual was not written all at one time, as you understand it, was it? A. No. Mrs. Eddy says at the beginning of it—

Q. It was unfolded and written from time to time, each time to meet some need? A. Yes; not dictatorial command, she says, that one person may use upon another.

Q. Yes. Now, then, that being true, this section, of course, meets some human need, and if the occasion again arose where a local Scientist was endeavoring to monopolize the healing work in any church or locality, you would not permit that one to have a card in the Journal? A. Is that a hypothetical question?

Q. That is a hypothetical question. A. Why, I would think I could persuade them that it was better not to ask to have one.

Q. I think so. And if you did not persuade them, they would not get in. Now, with respect to Christian Science nurses, Sec. 31:

"The cards of such persons may be inserted in The Christian Science Journal under rules established by the publishers."

There are nurses who advertise in The Christian Science Journal? A. There are.

Q. And you are careful to see that they comply with the description set out in this Manual? A. We try to be.

Q. Page 53, Sec. 10, refers to the publication of unjust articles.

"If a member of The Mother Church publishes, or causes to be published, an article that is false or unjust, hence injurious, to Christian Science or to its Leader."

That, of course, is applied in the publishing house? A. Why, naturally.

Q. Beg pardon? A. Naturally.

Q. Referring to these articles that have appeared in the Journal and the Sentinel from time to time, it is the rule, I believe, of the Publishing Society to accept those articles only from members of The Mother Church? A. No, I don't think that that has been the custom. We were speaking to our editor the other day about that. That is something that has gone into effect apparently with Mr. McKenzie, with the Journal and Sentinel. Prior to Mr. McKenzie's time I don't think there was any such thought at all.

Q. You don't think that has been the thought? A. No, I don't think so. I never heard it until we were speaking about it the other day.

Q. Well, it is your information that that is now being enforced in the Publishing Society, that practice? A. I object to the word "enforced."

Q. I beg your pardon. What do you say, applied or followed, or— A. I think so. I think it is just followed.

Q. Followed. Now, there is nothing in the Deed of Trust which restricts you as to the character of the authors of these articles? A. No, and I am not in sympathy with that rule.

Q. It is possible within the terms of the Deed of Trust, as you understand it, for the trustees to accept an article by anybody? A. Any Christian Scientist.

Q. Any Christian Scientist? A. Yes.

Q. Turn to page 65, Sec. 3, "Obedience Required."

"It shall be the duty of the officers of this Church, of the editors of The Christian Science Journal, Sentinel, and Der Herold, of the members of the Committees on Publication, of the Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and of the Board of Education promptly to comply with any written order, signed by Mary Baker Eddy, which applies to their official functions. Disobedience to this By-Law shall be sufficient cause for the removal of the offending member from office."

Do you understand this Manual to be a written order signed by Mary Baker Eddy applying to your official functions? A. I consider that the Deed of Trust is the sacred instrument signed by our Leader, that that by-law especially applies to, and one reason why under no circumstances would I disobey it.

The Master—I don't think you have answered the question.

Mr. Streeter—We would like a direct answer to that question.

The Master—I am calling his attention to the fact that I do not think he has answered the question.

Mr. Streeter—If the stenographer will read that question, I would like to see what Mr. Eustace said:

[The question is read as follows: "Q. Do you understand this Manual to be a written order signed by Mary Baker Eddy applying to your official functions?"]

A. In so far as I understand it.

Q. In so far as you understand it? A. Yes. May I ask just a question here to make myself perfectly clear?

Q. Certainly. A. When I say, "In so far as I understand it," I mean as I understand the Manual in consonance with the Deed of Trust.

Q. Sec. 11 on page 74, "Teachers and practitioners of Christian Science shall not have their offices or rooms in the branch churches, in the reading-rooms, nor in rooms connected therewith." In passing on applications of practitioners for cards in the Journal, is that section in the Manual applied? A. Why, yes.

Q. And a practitioner who did not apply this provision of the Manual to his daily conduct would not have a card in the Journal? A. He would be asked in regard to it.

Q. Yes; and if he did not apply this provision of the Manual he would not get the card? A. No. I think we would not accept his card. We would not accept anyone's card who was disobedient to anything that he felt was disobedient to the Manual.

Q. Or anything that you thought was disobedient to the Manual? A. Well, I would be very careful of how I interpreted another one's disobedience to the Manual.

Q. But, after all, you would have to determine it? A. Yes, but there seems to be always a way found by which it works out without any enforcing.

Q. Yes, certainly. Now, then, Section 12: "In order to be eligible to a card in The Christian Science Journal, churches and societies are required to acknowledge as such all other Christian Science churches and societies advertised in said Journal, and to maintain toward them an attitude of Christian fellowship." At present there are about 1800 of these churches and societies, I believe you have said, in the world? A. About that.

Q. And you stated on yesterday that The Christian Science Publishing Society were the sole judges of whether anybody should get a card in the Journal as a church or not? A. Whether they should have an advertisement in our periodicals, yes.

Q. And so that when the three trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society put a card in the Journal upon their sole responsibility, as you say, then under this manual The Mother Church and 1800 branch churches and societies are required to recognize it as such? A. Apparently that is—I will take your word as the statement of the Manual.

Q. Well, is that correct? A. I think it is.

Q. Under what provision of the Deed of Trust do you create Christian Science churches? A. We do not. We accept their advertisements.

Q. Under what provision in the Deed of Trust do you require 1800 branch churches and societies to recognize a church? A. None whatever.

Q. Is this provision of the Manual enforced or not enforced? A. Enforced?

Q. Yes. I mean, does this provision of the Manual apply to the situation, or doesn't it apply? A. We should use our judgment on it in accepting the advertisement.

Q. Suppose you discovered that one of the 1800 churches and societies that were advertising in the Journal did not recognize one of the others, then what would you do? A. I cannot answer that question. I should have to write to them to see what it was that it was doing, and I should expect to make a demonstration of it and have them come into accord with every one.

Q. You would expect this provision of the Manual to be applied? A. I would naturally expect the spirit of that by-law to be applied.

Q. Well, up to this time, as I understand it, we have not found any conflict, have we? A. I never did find any conflict.

Q. I mean, you and I together this morning have not found any conflict up to this moment? A. I haven't found any conflict. I don't know whether you have.

Q. Well, of course, we couldn't both find it unless we both found it, could we? You haven't got any? A. I have got no conflict with the Manual at all. It is a sacred, spiritual guidance.

Q. I see. Now, then, coming down to Art. XXV, "The Christian Science Publishing Society":

"Sec. 1. The Board of Trustees, constituted by a deed of trust given by Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, the Pastor Emeritus of this Church, on January twenty-fifth, 1898, shall hold and manage the property therein conveyed, and conduct the business of 'The Christian Science Publishing Society' on a strictly Christian basis, for the promotion of the interests of Christian Science."

Now, may we agree that that was placed in the Manual with the written consent of Mary Baker Eddy after Jan. 25, 1908? A. Why, I suppose so. I don't know.

Q. It was not in the Manual on Jan. 25, 1898? A. Wasn't it?

Q. Was it? A. I think it was. I don't know.

Q. Well, we can get the exact facts about that later. A. Yes.

Q. Now, you have stated, I believe, in your communications—

The Master—Is it a matter that is easily ascertained? Does it take research to find that out?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, it does not take research.

The Master—Why can't you settle it right now, whether that was in the Manual in 1898?

Mr. Krauthoff—I should say as a fact that it was not, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Streeter—I think it appears self-evident from the article itself that it was not there. I think it appears self-evident from the article itself that it was put in after Jan. 25, 1898.

The Master—That I can hardly agree to. As a historical fact it ought not to be capable of any doubt.

Mr. Krauthoff—As an historical fact, if Your Honor please, it was not in the Manual on Jan. 25, 1898.

Mr. Whipple—Evidently this could not have been in the Manual before the deed was executed, because it refers to the deed.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have asked if the Manual is here.

Mr. Bates—We shall show that, Your Honor. The Manual is not here at present.

The Master—I thought that was a matter about which everybody would agree as an historical fact.

Mr. Whipple—I think so, yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will state as a fact from my own research that it was not in the Manual on Jan. 25, 1898.

The Master—Is that disputed?

Mr. Whipple—We will take the statement subject to investigation. If we say nothing further about it, it may be assumed to be a fact.

The Master—Yes; all right.

Q. Now, in your memorandum that we have read here in evidence you have stated that the adoption of this by-law inferentially incorporates the Deed of Trust into the Church Manual. You still say that, Mr. Eustace? A. I do.

Q. Then the next section in your Manual applies to the net profits of the business. Let me understand the manner in which this business is conducted. You print and publish the literature? A. We do.

Q. And you sell it? A. Throughout the world.

Q. At a fair price? A. We do.

Q. You don't give any of it away? A. No.

Q. You sell it to branch churches and societies and reading-rooms in The Mother Church and persons generally? A. We do.

Q. Outside of the Monitor a large part of your patronage is from Christian Scientists, is it not? A. I expect so.

Q. Practically entirely? A. We have no possible means of knowing.

Q. And the Monitor circulates generally? A. Yes.

Q. You conduct the business and then you pay the net profits over to the treasurer of The Mother Church? A. We do.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, we have come, I guess, to where we part company, for the present at least.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, I wouldn't be hopeless on that.

The Master—Oh, go on.

Q. "Sec. 3: The Christian Science Board of Directors shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship, for such reasons as to the board may seem expedient." That in the Deed of Trust reads just a little different, I believe. The Deed of Trust provides: "The First Members together with the directors of said Church shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship for such reasons as to them may seem expedient." A. Yes.

Q. Now, I believe that you have been advised that in that respect the Manual is in conflict with the Deed of Trust? A. That is one of the things that we are here to work out.

Mr. Whipple—Well, pardon me. We haven't said that it is in conflict with the Deed of Trust. What we have said is that the Deed of Trust is a part of the Manual, and therefore the Manual presents apparently an inconsistency.

Mr. Krauthoff—I see.

Mr. Whipple—From your human understanding of it.

Mr. Krauthoff—Thank you.

Q. That is, the Deed of Trust provides—

The Master—Can the date of the introduction of that provision into the Manual be fixed?

Mr. Bates—It will be fixed, Your Honor.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is the subject of some history—

The Master—Well, can the date be fixed? I don't care at present about the history.

Mr. Krauthoff—It was in 1901.

The Master—What day?

Mr. Krauthoff—I wouldn't undertake to say offhand, but I think in January.

The Master—Any doubt about that?

Mr. Whipple—We will accept that statement subject to investigation, and if we say nothing about it, it may be assumed that that is the correct date. Now, the burden is on us.

Mr. Krauthoff—I ought in that connection to state more fully, if Your Honor please, the history of it.

The Master—Well, not now.

Mr. Krauthoff—What I mean to say is, this provision appeared in the Manual prior to 1901, but in a different form, so it is not strictly accurate—

The Master—Well, I will take it in its present form.

Mr. Krauthoff—It appeared in 1901.

Q. Now, it also appears in Sec. 4 of Art. XXV with respect to editors and managers that that is practically a repetition of the same provision that I called your attention to earlier in the Manual, is it not? A. It is, in a way.

Q. To the extent that it is? A. Yes, to the extent that it is.

Q. So that nothing need more to be said about that? A. No.

Q. "Suitable employees." "A person who is not accepted by the Pastor Emeritus and the Christian Science Board of Directors as suitable, shall in no manner be connected with publishing her books, nor with editing or publishing The Christian Science Journal, Christian Science Sentinel, Der Herold der Christian Science, nor with The Christian Science Publishing Society." Now in what manner does The Christian Science Publishing Society apply that provision in the Manual? A. That we appreciate and invite the Board of Directors to at any time point out to us any employee in The Christian Science Publishing Society that they feel is in any way unfit to be there.

Q. And then what do you do after they point it out to you? A. We use our own judgment.

Q. You use your own judgment? A. Our own judgment.

Q. The language of the Manual is, "Shall in no manner be connected with." A. That is right. We use our own judgment as to whether they shall or shall not. In other words, whether they are fit or not, after the Board of Directors have given us their evidence, whatever it may be.

Q. So that provision of the Manual, literally stated, is not applied by the— A. Literally stated, of course, it is the Pastor Emeritus and The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Q. Yes. They have to be suitable to both? A. Yes.

Q. Section 6: "Periodicals which shall at any time be published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, shall be copyrighted and conducted according to the provisions in the Deed of Trust relating to The Christian Science Journal."

Do the trustees apply that provision in the Manual? A. We do.

The Master—What is the Deed of Trust relating to The Christian Science Journal, Exhibit "A"?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, that is the one.

Q. Now, in that connection, Mr. Eustace, on Jan. 25, 1898, the only Christian Science periodicals then published were the Journal and the Quarterly? A. I believe so.

Q. The rest have been started afterward? A. They have.

Q. The Sentinel. And by virtue of this provision in the Manual all of them come under the Deed of Trust, as you understand it? A. I do.

Q. This rule of conduct we have already called attention to. "Books to be Published. Sec. 8. Only the Publishing Society of The Mother Church selects, approves, and publishes the books and literature it sends forth. If Mary Baker Eddy disapproves of certain books or literature, the Society will not publish them. The Committees on Publication are in no manner connected with these functions. A book or an article of which Mrs. Eddy is the author shall not be published nor republished by the Society without her knowledge or written consent."

Now, that was not in the Manual on January 25, 1898, was it?

A. I don't think it was, no.

Q. But under this provision in the Manual the Publishing Society of The Mother Church does exercise the power of selecting, approving and publishing the books and the literature it sends forth? A. No; under the Deed of Trust.

Q. Oh, under the Deed of Trust. What do you do with this provision in the Manual? A. There is nothing inconsistent with that in the Deed of Trust.

Q. Nothing inconsistent? If Mary Baker Eddy disapproves of certain books and literature the society will not publish them. Where is that in the Deed of Trust? A. Why, Mrs. Eddy had absolute control over everything, reserved to herself the right in the Deed of Trust.

Q. Absolute control over everything? A. In other words, if she had objected to anything, it would not be published by the trustees.

Q. In her lifetime? A. Certainly.

Q. "Removal of Cards. Sec. 9. "No cards shall be removed from our periodicals without the request of the advertiser, except by a majority vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors at a meeting held for this purpose or for the examination of complaints." What is your present understanding of the application of that provision of the Manual? A. My present understanding is this: that it is a request to the trustees under their right under the Deed of Trust to govern and to control the publications. It is a request not to remove an advertisement of a Christian Science practitioner or nurse or society without having the consent of the Board of Directors.

Q. Well, now, if the Board of Directors of The Mother Church does order the card of a branch church removed, what action do the trustees of the Publishing Society take with respect thereto? A. The trustees would naturally ask for the evidence on which they considered this card no good.

The Master—Your question was, what action do they take? That implies, I suppose, that cases have arisen.

Mr. Whipple—Well, let us inquire if that has arisen. Has such case arisen?

The Witness—Oh, many times, removals.

Mr. Whipple—Well, has the case where a majority vote of the directors has been given?

The Witness—Oh, yes.

Mr. Whipple—Well, then, what do you do? That is the question.

The Witness—Why, we have approved it and taken the advertisement out.

Mr. Whipple—Always have approved it.

The Witness—Always approved it.

Q. I am not asking whether you always approve it. I am asking you what power do you claim to have in the premises?

The Master—No. You asked him what they do. That was your question.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg your pardon.

Q. As I understand, you pass on the question whether you will approve it or not? A. We have the absolute right to pass on whether we will approve it or not.

Q. That is, to state it clearly, if The Mother Church orders the card of a branch church to be taken out of the list of churches in the Journal, then the trustees decide upon their own responsibility whether it shall go out or not? A. Necessarily, having the governing power of the publication.

Q. And under the Manual every church in the list has to recognize every other church in the list? A. Under the Manual.

The Master—We have had that already, haven't we?

Q. So that, Mr. Eustace, it comes to this: The Mother Church may order the card of a branch church to be taken out of the Journal, the trustees may decline to do it, and the branch churches are required to continue to recognize a branch church of which The Mother Church has disapproved?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. That is merely a hypothetical case which has never arisen; and, furthermore, he has answered it.

The Master—I think I will not draw the line at this hypothetical case. There has been a good deal of talk about hypothetical cases.

A. May I answer it in this way, that it is not an order for a removal of card but it says, "No card shall be removed," and that I take as an instruction to the Board of Trustees to request of our Leader that we shall not remove a card except with the consent of the Board of Directors.

Q. That is, the statement in this Manual is a request from Mrs. Eddy? A. It is a request from Mrs. Eddy to the trustees.

Mr. Whipple—You will notice it gives no authority to order the removal. It is a statement that it shall not be removed except upon their passing upon it.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Haven't you seen that before? It is perfectly clear.

The Master—There cannot be any mistake about it, I think.

Mr. Krauthoff—If we may resume the trial of the case, if Your Honor please. Were you quite through, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Why, I am through if I am sure I have got that idea into your head, or at least have placed it before you so that you can comprehend it.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, don't worry about that. I am not accepting your—

Mr. Whipple—I am not worrying about it.

The Master—Suppose we stop here with this discussion.

Mr. Krauthoff—May we proceed with the case?

The Master—Go on, Mr. Krauthoff.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, you are familiar with the advertising campaign that was started in The Christian Science Publishing Society in April, 1917. A. I am.

Q. Or I should have said August, 1917? A. I am.

Q. Will you please state how that originated. A. Well, I think the proposal came from the trustees under the will.

Q. The trustees under the will of Mary Baker Eddy? A. Yes. I think they wanted to assist in the promotion and extension, of course, of Christian Science through the larger distribution of our periodicals.

Q. For this record the trustees under the will of Mary Baker Eddy are six in number, of whom at that time five were members of the Board of Directors of The Mother Church? A. That is correct; and Mr. Fernald of Concord.

Q. And the will provides for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science, just as your Deed of Trust does? A. That is right.

The Master—You mean in just the same terms as those employed by the Deed of Trust, is that your meaning?

Mr. Krauthoff—The same phrase is used, I understand. I mean the same phrase—

Mr. Thompson—I would suggest, if Your Honor please, if anything is to be made of this will it ought to be here. I don't think it is of the slightest consequence, however.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am merely stating it generally. I understand the language is exactly the same, "for the purpose of more effectually promoting and extending the religion of Christian Science as taught by me."

Mr. Thompson—Well, counsel hasn't any right to paraphrase a written document, if it is of any consequence.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have no thought of paraphrasing.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, my friend has put into the record a fact which everybody agrees to, that the trustees under Mrs. Eddy's will, it being a New Hampshire trust controlled by the probate and other courts of New Hampshire, that five of the six trustees are the five, or were at this time the five directors, Christian Science Board of Directors, and the sixth one was a New Hampshire gentleman representing the court there, Mr. Josiah E. Fernald. It also should appear in the record, which is a fact and will be agreed to, that Mr. Dittmore has been and now is the chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Eddy Trust, appointed by the Probate Court of New Hampshire of Merrimack County.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have no personal information about it. That statement may be taken subject to any proof we offer on that subject.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, you say this advertising campaign was taken up by the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy. Was it taken up with The Christian Science Board of Directors in any way? A. Why, we all discussed it together.

Q. You all discussed it together? A. Yes.

Q. Prior to that time had there been any report made to the trustees of the Publishing Society as to any plan of this advertising campaign? A. Plan on it, do you mean?

Q. Yes. A. Mr. Lesan had made a report, I believe.

Q. Mr. Lesan? A. Yes.

Q. Who is Mr. Lesan? A. Mr. Lesan is an advertising man in New York City.

Q. What is his name? A. Harry E. Lesan.

Q. Harry E. Lesan? A. Yes.

Q. Have you that report? A. No, we haven't it.

Q. Is it now in existence? A. I don't know whether it is or not.

Q. Will you look at the noon hour? A. Well, that would be difficult.

Q. Beg pardon.

Mr. Whipple—Before we go to that trouble, won't you state how it is material?

Mr. Krauthoff—I think that will appear as I proceed.

Mr. Whipple—Why not let it appear before you proceed any further? That is the way we determine the admissibility of evidence.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Krauthoff, we suggest for your assistance, if our friend Eustace can't find a copy of that report, Mr. Dittmore has a copy and you may have the use of it, if you want it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I should be very glad to.

Mr. Streeter—That will save Eustace the trouble of looking for it this noon.

The Witness—Thank you.

Mr. Krauthoff—Thank you very much. The point I am trying to develop, if Your Honor please, is that consistently The Christian Science Publishing Society has advertised that it was a part of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—We certainly claim they are a most important adjunct and activity in connection with it. That is the claim in our bill, and that Mrs. Eddy so projected it. Now you are trying to defeat her purpose.

Mr. Streeter—As I understand it, Brother Whipple, you claim that you are the whole thing.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no. That is the claim of the directors.

Mr. Streeter—Well, they do, too.

Mr. Whipple—We claim we are what Mrs. Eddy made us, and the directors claim that they are more than Mrs. Eddy herself.

The Master—What you want to do, if I understand you correctly, is to bring out some expressions used by the trustees of the Publishing Society in the course of its advertising campaign?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—Now, can't you get at that more directly and briefly by beginning with the report of some advertising man in New York?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, my understanding is that that report was addressed to the trustees and the directors. If I am wrong about that, why I am wrong.

The Master—If you have got anything issued by the trustees that you want to put in, why not put it in?

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

Q. Now then, after you took it up together what arrangement did you make with Mr. Lesan with respect to these advertisements? A. We started an advertising campaign.

Q. No, I beg your pardon. What arrangement did you make with Mr. Lesan? A. Mr. Lesan—I think I will have to refresh my memory on that.

Q. I beg your pardon? A. I would have to refresh my memory, but we gave him a retainer to conduct the campaign for us.

Q. And Mr. Lesan wrote advertisements? A. He did.

Q. And they were submitted to you for approval? A. Yes, they were.

Q. And they appeared in The Christian Science Journal and other Christian Science periodicals? A. Yes, and outside too.

Q. That is, The Christian Science Monitor was advertised generally in papers of general circulation? A. Yes, that is what I am referring to.

Q. That was the first time that such a plan of advertising had been followed? A. It was.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, have you the files of the Publishing Society showing these advertisements? A. I haven't them here.

Q. You have them at the— A. I suppose they are still in existence.

The Master—If there was anything published, there can't be any mistake about it. Can't you agree on that?

Mr. Krauthoff—I will come to what I want to call his attention.

Q. I call your attention to the advertisement in The Christian Science Journal for January, 1918, headed "What Is a Subscriber?"

The Master—How many different advertisements are there?

Mr. Krauthoff—I think some eight or ten I wish to call his attention to.

The Master—Are they all in the same terms, or different?

Mr. Krauthoff—No; different subjects. I have passed over several that I didn't think vital.

Q. I call your attention to that advertisement headed "What Is a Subscriber?" A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Would it not be well to name the periodical that it is in, giving the date of it?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is in The Christian Science Journal for January, 1918.

Mr. Whipple—On the front page, or on the inside cover?

Mr. Krauthoff—On the inside of the front cover.

Q. That was published in The Christian Science Journal with your approval? A. Yes, I guess so. I take the responsibility for everything that goes in, as publisher.

Q. Did you not personally know of that advertisement? A. I haven't a doubt I did. Let me see it. (The Journal for January, 1918, is passed to the witness for inspection.) I knew of all these, as a matter of fact.

Mr. Krauthoff—Does Mr. Whipple wish to see it?

Mr. Whipple—No, thank you. I will get it as you read it.

Mr. Streeter—Why don't you read what is material?

Mr. Krauthoff—I am going to do that now.

"What Is a Subscriber?"

The Master—Will that involve reading the whole page? Can't you read just what you claim is material?

Mr. Krauthoff—I think that the whole page is material, if Your Honor please. It is not large.

"What Is a Subscriber?"

"Christian Scientists" are told by Mrs. Eddy in the By-Laws of The Mother Church, Art. VIII, Sec. 14, that it is both their privilege and duty to subscribe for the Christian Science periodicals.

In the world of law and commerce, one who subscribes to an agreement or document of any kind, assents and agrees to its provisions, affirms his mental support of it, and then formally signs his name to it as evidence of his at-one-ment in thought with its aims and purposes. As the literal definition puts it, he "underwrites" his portion of the responsibility entailed by the document.

The Christian Science periodicals record the progressive unfoldment in human consciousness of the truth about God, man, and the universe. The Christian Science Journal, the Christian Science Sentinel, Der Herold der Christian Science, and Le Hérait de Christian Science each has its own field of usefulness in the line of spiritual activity which is clearly seen and understood by every thoughtful Christian Scientist. The Christian Science Monitor links in a common bond the progressive element in human affairs with the scientific right thinkers upon whose shoulders rest the vital issues of the hour, thus becoming an impersonal ambassador to the "Millions of unprejudiced minds" (Science and Health, p. 570) who are waiting and watching for that which will prove their deliverer.

"The true sense of being a subscriber to these periodicals includes much more than the mere payment of the subscription fee for a designated period of time, with perhaps only a casual or perfunctory inspection of the contents.

"Subscribing to the Christian Science periodicals is having a share in 'underwriting' the future peace of the world. Each of these periodicals will produce the maximum result when every one to whom a subscription goes becomes truly a subscriber."

Now, if Your Honor please, for the first time The Christian Science Journal has been used in evidence, and I believe that it is proper to offer one Journal in its entirety as an exhibit, so that it may be before the Court.

Mr. Whipple—I do not mind its being done if it does not entail upon the stenographer copying the whole thing. If it be taken simply as an exhibit, and that part of it be copied into the record which has been read, that will be agreeable to us.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is agreeable to us, so that it can be identified as an exhibit. With that understanding—

Mr. Whipple—I do not wish thereby to admit the materiality of anything that has been read as to any issue in the case, because it seems to me as remote as anything one could imagine from any issue; but it is interesting.

The Master—One copy may be marked as an exhibit.

Mr. Krauthoff—This is the one, the Journal for January, 1918.

The Master—And in some way, perhaps, you can mark the page which you have read.

Mr. Krauthoff—Will you [the reporter] mark the inside front cover as the exhibit.

[The inside of the front cover of The Christian Science Journal for January, 1918, is marked Exhibit 46, R. H. J.]

Mr. Streeter—While that is being done, may I ask a question, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Eustace, do you know whether Mr. Dittmore personally wrote that advertisement?

The Witness—No, I do not. It is a very good advertisement, however.

Mr. Whipple—It is a good one; it is a creditable piece of authorship.

Mr. Streeter—You don't know that he didn't write it, do you?

The Witness—No, I do not. It came to us, I suppose, through the usual channel of Mr. Lesan.

Mr. Streeter—Pardon me, Mr. Krauthoff. I do not mean to interject. I was only using time while that Journal was being marked.

Mr. Bates—Just doing a little advertising yourself!

The Master—Go on, Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Streeter—Oh, I can't compete with you and Whipple!

The Master—Proceed, Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Krauthoff—I cannot proceed, Your Honor, while this discussion continues.

Mr. Whipple—I am no orator!

Mr. Krauthoff—When counsel are through, if Your Honor please, I shall be glad to resume the trial of the case.

Mr. Streeter—Brother Krauthoff, if you will prevent your junior counsel from interrupting or interjecting remarks we shall get along all right!

Mr. Bates—I am very modest in my interjections!

Mr. Whipple—You are malicious as well as sarcastic!

Mr. Krauthoff—If I may have the floor, if Your Honor please, I would like to speak to the stenographer.

The Master—Go on.

Q. Now, this Christian Science Journal has on its outside cover, the words:

"Founded April, 1883, by Mary Baker Eddy, author of the Christian Science textbook, 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures'" and then the words:

"Official Organ of

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts."

I call your attention also to the circle, with the Biblical inscription, and the crown and the cross, or, to state it more accurately, the cross and the crown in the center. That is put on all the publications of Mary Baker Eddy, is it not? A. Yes, it is.

Q. Including the Church Manual—I mean at present? A. It does not seem to be on there.

Q. Well, I mean at present you put it on the Church Manual? A. I think it is the idea, that it is on all of them, but it is not—yes, it is on that; that is right.

Q. There is an advertisement in here headed: "Works on Christian Science," from which I desire to read: "Church Manual. Containing the By-Laws of The Mother Church." Are you familiar with the fact that this advertisement in its original form was worked out by Mrs. Eddy? A. No, I was not.

Q. It has been continued from the time that you became a trustee? A. There have been no changes in it, I think. Have there been changes in it?

Q. I mean the general form; I do not mean the words of it.

The Master—Have you got the page on the record?

Mr. Krauthoff—It is the first printed page, i.

Q. So that from this it appears that the Church Manual is a work on Christian Science? A. Why, certainly, it is.

Q. It contains the advertisements of Christian Science periodicals, articles on Christian Science, editorials by the editors, and then announcements from the church treasurer and clerk of The Mother Church, reports from churches as to the progress of Christian Science, testimonies from the field by persons who have been healed through Christian Science, and then it has the instructions, regarding cards, a list of Christian Science churches and societies. I desire to read the headings of this list on page iii in the back of the Journal:

"Christian Science Churches and Societies with notice of Regular Services and Reading Rooms where Christian Science Literature may be read or obtained. These are Branch Churches and Societies of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, U. S. A."

I also desire to read the instructions regarding cards, page i:

"Applications for advertisements in the list of practitioners in the Journal, Der Herold, or Le Héraut will be received only from members of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. Applications for advertisement in Der Herold are received only from those able to speak and write both English and German. Applications for advertisement in Le Héraut are received only from those able to speak and write both English and French.

"Applicants are required to accept and use as their textbooks the Bible together with 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' and other works by Mary Baker Eddy (Church Manual, Art. IV, Sec. 1); and to engage in no other profession or vocation than Christian Science healing (Art. XXV, Sec. 9).

"Nurses

"Applications for advertisements in the list of nurses in the Journal will be received only from members of The Mother Church, and applicants should have the qualifications stated in Art. VIII, Sec. 31, of the Church Manual.

"Societies and Churches

"When members of The Mother Church in a community believe that the time has come for the holding of regular services, and for the formation of a Christian Science Society, or the formation of a branch Church of Christ, Scientist, if they will write to The Christian Science Publishing Society, a letter will be sent regarding the steps to be taken in organizing their work, and the rules to be observed in order to have an advertisement in the Journal.

"The Manual, Art. XXIII, Sec. 6, under the heading, 'Organizing Churches,' says of a branch church formed according to the order indicated, 'Upon proper application, made in accordance with the rules of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the services of such a church may be advertised in The Christian Science Journal.' The regular services of a Christian Science society also may be advertised.

"Reading Rooms

"For the only literature allowed to be sold or exhibited at a reading room (Art. XXI, Sec. 3, of the Church Manual), see the catalogue of the Publishing Society as published in each current issue of the Journal. Art. XXV, Sec. 7, should be also considered, as it presents a view of conditions requisite where the textbook is for sale."

Mr. Krauthoff—I desire to read from the heading of the "Practitioners."

"The practitioners whose advertisements appear in these columns are members of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, U. S. A. and are amenable to its By-Laws. They have presented testimony to The Christian Science Publishing Society showing that they are qualified to advertise in the Journal as practitioners of Christian Science."

Then notice also the further statement:

"Authorized teachers hold but one class each year, with not more than 30 pupils in a class. The teaching year begins Aug. 1."

Q. Now, in connection with that notice you speak of the teaching year. There is a provision in the Church Manual with respect to teachers holding but one class a year, is there not? A. There is.

Q. And the Board of Directors, as shown by the evidence introduced on your direct examination, requested or directed the trustees of the Publishing Society to change the advertisement so that it should appear that the teaching year begins Jan. 1. That is true, is it not? A. Attempted to direct.

Q. Well, they sent you a letter on the subject? A. Yes.

Q. You treated that in your testimony as a recommendation? A. Naturally.

Q. Was that a function of The Mother Church or a function of the Publishing Society, to decide when the teaching year would begin? A. Are you asking me that?

Q. Yes. A. I should say it was neither one nor the other.

Q. Neither one nor the other? A. Yes.

Q. The Mother Church did decide it? A. Attempted to decide it.

Q. You say "attempted," and then you pass a judgment. What did you do when you say they attempted to change it? A. What did we do?

Q. Yes. A. We said in our answer what we did.

Q. You treated it as a recommendation and asked for the reason? A. We did.

Q. So that the order or direction, or whatever it is, that The Christian Science Board of Directors makes with respect to the conduct of church affairs, appears in The Christian Science Journal, the official organ of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, as a matter of right or a matter of comity? A. It appears there as a matter of comity.

Q. That is, if you approve of it it goes in? A. We naturally would approve of anything they wanted to send in the way of an announcement to the field. That is their affair.

Q. You did not do it with that one? A. In this instance we had carried a notice for six years which had been approved unanimously by both boards at the time it was put in, and to have it ordered out without a word of explanation, we naturally required an explanation.

Q. And it subsequently did go in? A. Subsequently we said we would put it in, and did so.

Q. In this same Journal, January, 1918, there is a reference to the advertising appearing in the Journal, or the advertising in the Monitor. What is the chief value of the Monitor as an advertising medium? A. I cannot answer that.

Q. To what extent does the fact that it is one of the official organs of The Mother Church give its advertising columns value? A. I do not know.

Q. You have never thought of that? A. No, I do not know what—I couldn't answer that.

Mr. Krauthoff—We offer the advertisement on the front inside cover of The Christian Science Journal of March, 1918, entitled "What Is Circulation?"

Mr. Whipple—Well, wouldn't it be enough to read it? You do not want another one marked, do you?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I thought this had to be marked.

Mr. Whipple—If you will read it into the record that will save a number on the exhibits, at least.

Mr. Krauthoff reads the following: "What Is Circulation?"

"The spiritual modus operandi is beautifully depicted by Mrs. Eddy in her definition of angels on page 581 of the Christian Science textbook as follows:

"Angels. God's thoughts passing to man; spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect; the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality."

"The highest human corporeal concept of the truth about man is expressed today in Christian Science, hence the circulation of knowledge and information about Christian Science must be the highest human concept of spiritual (and the only real) circulation.

"Every copy of Science and Health is an 'Angel.'"

"Every Lesson-Sermon, every Wednesday evening testimony meeting, every Christian Science lecture, is an exemplification of 'God's thoughts passing to man.'"

"Every Christian Science Journal, Sentinel, or Der Herold der Christian Science expresses 'spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect.'"

"Every Christian Science Monitor reflects 'the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality.'"

"As Christian Scientists perceive and embrace opportunity to encourage the circulation of these messengers of Christian Science, are they not aiding themselves and the world to entertain 'angels, the true ideas of God, the spiritual sense of being?" (Science and Health, p. 548.)

Mr. Krauthoff—Then in the same number, on the inside of the back cover:

"What Is Money?"

"Mrs. Eddy called the fund which Christian Scientists freely gave to build The Mother Church extension in Boston in 1906 'two millions of love currency.'" (Miscellany, p. 14.)

"Jesus, when viewing the rich men offering their gifts, said of the widow who threw 'two mites' into the treasury of the temple at Jerusalem, 'Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all' (Luke 21:3).

"The widow of Judea and the Christian Scientists of 1906 grasped a high concept of Love as ever current, they conceived the commodity used by men for their medium of exchange as being a symbol of the all-currency of love, and they expressed this concept in the highest terms of service to God and to their fellow man.

"The right concept of money is strengthened by studying Mrs. Eddy's comment on the contributions made by Christian Scientists to build The Mother Church extension. She said, 'In the now they brought their tithes into His storehouse. Then, when this bringing is consummated, God will pour them out a blessing above the song of angels, beyond the ken of mortals—a blessing that two millions of love currency will bring to be discerned in the near future as a gleam of reality; not a madness and nothing, but a sanity and something from the individual, stupendous, Godlike agency of man.' (Miscellany, p. 14.)

"That which makes the giving of Christian Scientists so much more effective than the mere giving of money is the understanding with which Christian Scientists give.

"It is impossible to compute the good done for the world, or to Christian Scientists themselves, by those activities of The Mother Church and its branches, all of which are the direct or indirect results of Mrs. Eddy's revelation of God's 'infinite resources' (Science and Health, p. 60). Through these channels Christian Scientists are furnished the opportunities to give scientifically. The mere contribution of funds for any purpose without some measure of the scientific understanding of giving really nullifies the effect of the gift.

"The unselfish support which Christian Scientists are giving to all of these activities of The Mother Church and its branches cannot be computed as money; it must be measured in terms of Mind. 'Giving does not impoverish us in the service of our Maker, neither does withholding enrich us.' (Science and Health, p. 79.) True giving is a symbol of constructive spiritual building."

The Master—Are you proposing to read something of about that length from every one of the magazines in the pile before you?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I had thought of it until Your Honor intimated that I was taking up too much time. I shall be very glad to try to shorten it.

The Master—J think we ought to contrive some way of avoiding that. It does not seem to me it has sufficient bearing on anything that we are investigating here. Cannot counsel agree as to all those magazines that Mr. Krauthoff may mark such extracts as he wants to have in the case, and they may be considered in and he can refer to them later in argument if he desires?

Mr. Whipple—We agree, Your Honor, to that.

Mr. Thompson—I think there is no objection from our standpoint, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Krauthoff—The understanding being, of course, that all of these advertisements in The Christian Science Journal appeared with the knowledge and consent of the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—That would appear, I think, from the evidence that you already have introduced, will it not? Can there be any possible question about it?

Mr. Krauthoff—I do not understand there is; I just wanted to be sure.

The Master—I do not think there is.

Mr. Krauthoff—I shall be very glad to do that.

The Master—It seems to me it is wasting our time to sit here and hear you read all of those things, and that it is filling up the record. This apparently is going into the record.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—To an undesirable extent, with matter not immediately relevant.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Krauthoff may indicate to the stenographer any parts that he desires to have marked in the entire bulk that he has there and they may be referred to in argument.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, if I may be pardoned, I think when Your Honor comes to understand this case in its entirety the relevancy of these articles will clearly appear.

The Master—Well, I will hear you on that later. I do not think it is necessary that they should be read in extenso now.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well. I shall be very glad to accede to that suggestion. We have now reached 1 o'clock. May we consider all of them accessible or shall I now pick out the articles?

The Master—Oh, I do not think you need to do it this minute.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no. We shall be content if during the next fortnight you pick out and call to our attention those parts that you desire.

The Master—Mark them, so that they will be indicated to the other counsel in the case, and then we will have the whole batch where it can be referred to.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well, Your Honor.

[Recess to 2 p. m.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, at the time of adjournment we were engaged in calling the attention of the witness to some advertisements in The Christian Science Journal, and an arrangement was made whereby the Journal should be regarded as accessible, and counsel for the directors would point out the particular advertisements that they desired the Court to consider. We have here also a number of issues of the Christian Science Sentinel published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, some of which contain the identical advertisement that appears in the Journal, and also advertisements that do not appear in the Journal, and I should like to have the same arrangement with respect to the Sentinels; that is, not to duplicate advertisements, but if there is any advertisement in the Sentinel that we desire to call the attention of the Court to, that we may do so.

Mr. Whipple—We agree, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Krauthoff—And I have one or two about which I desire to examine the witness personally.

Q. (By Mr. Krauthoff) Mr. Eustace, I call your attention to the advertisement on the inside of the back cover of the Sentinel of January 5, 1918, entitled, "The Manual of The Mother Church," and I will ask you to read the advertisement and state whether you agree with the statements that are therein contained? A. The whole of it, the whole of the advertisement?

Q. Yes. A. First of all is a book, "Church Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., by Mary Baker Eddy. The Manual of The Mother Church."

Mr. Whipple—I don't understand that you request that it be read aloud?

Mr. Streeter—Yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—He may either read it aloud or silently, as he prefers.

Mr. Streeter—We can't get that. Why not read it right in. Then we will have it in the record.

The Witness (Reading):

"The Manual of The Mother Church.

"The Manual of The Mother Church by Mary Baker Eddy is a handbook for the information and guidance of every member of The Mother Church. It contains the organic law of the Church of Christ, Scientist. It also contains the Tenets of The Mother Church, an explanation of the origin of the Church By-Laws, a historical sketch, the names of church officers, and an appendix containing essential information for every active Christian Scientist.

"Mrs. Eddy has interpreted and analyzed for Christian Scientists the purpose of the Church By-Laws in two principal statements—"Mental Digestion" ("The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany," p. 229), and in a letter to The Christian Science Board of Directors (Christian Science Sentinel of Aug. 22, 1914). Every Christian Scientist who sees that the extension of the religion of Christian Science is the most vital necessity in the world today, requires an intimate familiarity with the Church Manual.

"The By-Laws of The Mother Church constitute a record of the answers to Mrs. Eddy's prayers for the guidance and direction of this great movement which she founded and which is rapidly encircling the globe.

"The natural inclination and desire of a Christian Scientist is to own, study, and understand the revealed law of the Church of Christ, Scientist, and gain a realization of the vital necessity for its rules and admonitions.

"Of this I am sure, that each Rule and By-Law in this Manual will increase the spirituality of him who obeys it, invigorate his capacity to heal the sick, to comfort such as mourn, and to awaken the sinner."—Mary Baker Eddy in "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany," page 230.

"The Manual may be read, borrowed, or purchased at any Christian Science reading room in the world."

Q. The question is whether or not you agree with the statements contained in that advertisement? A. Of course I agree with it as far as I know, unless there is something to analyze there, I agree with it.

Q. And this advertisement refers to the statement in "Miscellany," which I will read to you from page 229, entitled, "Mental Digestion," and then I will ask you a question with respect to it. In the first place, may the record show that "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany" is published by The Christian Science Publishing Society at the present time, I believe? A. It is.

Q. And it contains extracts from the works of Mary Baker Eddy. I mean it is not limited to that. Is that true? (No answer.)

Q. Now, may I read you this "Mental Digestion"?

"Mental Digestion

"Will those beloved students, whose growth is taking in the Ten Commandments and scaling the steep ascent of Christ's Sermon on the Mount, accept profound thanks for their swift messages of rejoicing over the twentieth century Church Manual? Heaps upon heaps of praise confront me, and for what? That which I said in my heart would never be needed,—namely, laws of limitation for a Christian Scientist. Thy ways are not as ours. Thou knowest best what we need most,—hence my disappointed hope and grateful joy. The redeemed should be happier than the elect. Truth is strong with destiny; it takes life profoundly; it measures the infinite against the finite. Notwithstanding the sacrilegious moth of time, eternity awaits our Church Manual, which will maintain its rank as in the past, amid ministries aggressive and active, and will stand when those have passed to rest.

"Scientific pathology illustrates the digestion of spiritual nutriment as both sweet and bitter,—sweet in expectancy and bitter, in experience or during the senses' assimilation thereof, and digested only when Soul silences the dyspepsia of sense. This church is impartial. Its rules apply not to one member only, but to, one and all equally. Of this I am sure, that each Rule and By-law in this Manual will increase the spirituality of him, who obeys it, invigorate his capacity to heal the sick, to comfort such as mourn, and to awaken the sinner."

In your work as trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society do you accept that as the guidance and direction of Mary Baker Eddy? A. I accept that in the same way that I accept everything that Mrs. Eddy has written. I understand it, and demonstrate it in proportion to my proving its truth in daily life.

Q. Now, in this same advertisement that we have called your attention to is a reference to a letter to The Christian Science Board of Directors of Mary Baker Eddy, to which I desire to call your attention, reading it from the Christian Science Sentinel of Aug. 22, 1914:

"Words of Counsel

"The following heretofore unpublished letter from our revered Leader to The Christian Science Board of Directors, is herewith shared with the whole field because of its wise counsel to all Christian Scientists.

"Pleasant View, Concord, N. H.,
Feb. 27, 1903.

"Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Beloved Students:—I am not a lawyer, and do not sufficiently comprehend the legal trend of the copy you enclosed to me to suggest any changes therein. Upon one point, however, I feel competent to advise, namely: Never abandon the by-laws nor the denominational government of The Mother Church. If I am not personally with you, the Word of God and my instructions in the by-laws have led you hitherto and will remain to guide you safely on, and the teachings of St. Paul are as useful today as when they were first written.

"The present and future prosperity of the cause of Christian Science is largely due to the by-laws and government of 'The First Church of Christ, Scientist,' in Boston. None but myself can know, as I know, the importance of the combined sentiment of this church, remaining steadfast in supporting its present by-laws. Each of these many by-laws has met and mastered or forestalled some contingency, some imminent peril, and will continue to do so. Its by-laws have preserved the sweet unity of this large church, that has perhaps the most members and combined influence of any other church in our country. Many times a single by-law has cost me long nights of prayer and struggle, but it has won the victory over some sin and saved the walls of Zion from being torn down by disloyal students. We have proven that 'in unity there is strength.'

"With love as ever,
"MARY BAKER G. EDDY."

Do you accept that as the direction and guidance of Mary Baker Eddy in the discharge of your duties as trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. I consider that that is a private communication and had no right to be printed in the Sentinel of our publications.

Q. And you do not accept that, then? A. I am not at liberty to accept it or reject it, because Mrs. Eddy did not write it to me and did not give it for publication.

Q. I call your attention to a bulletin issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society of March 27, 1919. A. Oh, yes.

Q. Was that done under your direction? A. It certainly was.

Mr. Krauthoff—I would like to have it identified.

The Witness—I suppose that is a correct copy?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I think it is one of yours.

Mr. Whipple—Let me take it. (Inspecting the paper.) Isn't that something put out after the suit was brought?

The Witness—It is.

Mr. Whipple—Does Your Honor think that ought to be admitted as part of the record?

The Master—I didn't quite get the situation.

Mr. Whipple—This is something that was put out after the suit was brought.

The Master—Put out by—

Mr. Whipple—Put out by the trustees to guide their employees. I have no objection to its being read, and then Your Honor will deal with it, but it does not seem to me admissible.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, if Your Honor please, it is a statement by the plaintiffs as to the Church Manual, and that is competent, whenever they made it.

[Copy of bulletin above referred to is marked Exhibit 47, W. H. M., and is read as follows:

"Copy of Bulletin

"A difference of opinion as to the interpretation of the provisions of The Mother Church Manual and of the Deed of Trust constituting The Christian Science Publishing Society having arisen between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees, a legal action has been started today in an honest and earnest effort to ascertain definitely the responsibility of both boards in their relation to their respective 'Deed of Trust' and to the Church Manual.

"Workers in the publishing house will readily appreciate that no one employee or group of employees is sufficiently familiar with the details which have led to the present action to be in a position to discuss the subject.

"Consequently the Board of Trustees feel it is scarcely necessary to urge upon all employees of the Publishing Society the wisdom of refraining from gossip or discussion of the subject, and from criticism of any kind either within or without the publishing house, should there follow any publicity. However, the trustees wish to remind the employees of the Publishing Society of the following by-law of the Church Manual, Article XXV, Section 7, for the purpose of discouraging criticism and gossip:

"No objectionable pictures shall be exhibited in the rooms where the Christian Science textbook is published or sold, no idle gossip, no slander, no mischief making, no evil speaking shall be allowed. Infraction of this by-law will not be permitted.

"The Board of Trustees has confidence that the employees will carefully observe this request upon being reminded of the need of preserving silence on a subject so near and dear to every loyal Christian Scientist and so fraught with interest of the greatest moment to the Christian Science movement.

(Signed) "JOHN R. WATTS,
"Manager.

"March 27, 1919."]

Q. In the work of The Christian Science Publishing Society is that the form letter that was sent out at one time to practitioners asking for a card in the Journal? A. It was, the preliminary letter.

Q. That is, the first letter? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—I should think we might save the typewriting of that and have that go in as some of your other exhibits have, Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, this one I prefer to read.

Mr. Whipple—No objection to its being read, but you don't care to have it transcribed in the record?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, there is no particular reason for that.

Mr. Whipple—Very well. We will understand that it will not be.

[A printed letter headed, "The Christian Science Publishing Society, Boston, U. S. A.," is marked Exhibit 48, WHM, and is read.]

Q. So in writing to practitioners about cards in the Journal it became necessary for the practitioners to comply with the provisions of the Church Manual,—is that true, Mr. Eustace? A. Those questions were asked with a view to seeing how fitted they were to have an advertisement in the Journal.

Q. And that depended upon their compliance in part with the provisions of the Church Manual? A. Naturally it depended upon their reply to those questions.

Q. Now, the letters that you referred to in this letter, appearing in "Miscellany"—I will read you the first one:

"Mrs. Eddy's thanks. Beloved Christian Scientists:—Accept my thanks for your successful plans for the first issue of The Christian Science Monitor. My desire is that every Christian Scientist, and as many others as possible, subscribe for and read our daily newspaper. Mary Baker Eddy. Box G, Brookline, Mass., Nov. 16, 1908."

Are you advised whether the original of that is in a letter to The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. I don't know anything about it.

Q. You don't know whether it is a personal communication, when you called the attention of practitioners to that? A. It is in her published work.

Q. Oh, I see. The other one was in the Sentinel? A. The other was a letter sent, I suppose, to the editor of the Sentinel.

Q. No; it was addressed to The Christian Science Board of Directors. A. But it got into the periodicals.

Mr. Streeter—What page were you reading from?

Mr. Krauthoff—Page 352, the bottom of the page, "Miscellany."

Q. Now, then, the next one is the article that has already been read from the "Memorandum," in which Mrs. Eddy says, "I have given the name to all the Christian Science periodicals," and so on. Then you sent an application to these practitioners, an application for an advertisement in the List of Practitioners in The Christian Science Journal. Is that the type of application you sent them? A. That is the type.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, this need not be copied; it may be treated like the other, and if you will just take it—

Mr. Whipple—Do you think that you ought to read it?

Mr. Krauthoff—I do, yes; I want to call his attention to it.

Mr. Whipple—It is pretty long.

Mr. Krauthoff—I appreciate that, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Can't you omit some parts of it, just to facilitate the hearing?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—All right. They are marked as exhibits, but they are not to be transcribed.

[The printed document headed "Application for Advertisement in the List of Practitioners in The Christian Science Journal," is marked Exhibit 49. R. H. J.]

Mr. Krauthoff (reading)—

"Application for Advertisement in the List of Practitioners in The Christian Science Journal:

"Please read carefully the instructions on the back of this blank before filling it out. Write your name exactly as it appears in the records of The Mother Church."

These are questions now:

"At what date were you received into The Mother Church?"

"Are you thoroughly familiar with the Church Manual (73d or subsequent editions), by Mary Baker Eddy, and do you accept its guidance?"

"Do you yourself use or give to patients or others any written or copied formulas, whether in the nature of so-called extracts from personal letters by Mrs. Eddy, or from letters, lectures, addresses, or talks by others? (See Church Manual, Article VIII, Sec. 9.)

"Do you use the Bible, together with 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' and other works by Mary Baker Eddy, as your only textbooks in the study and practice of Christian Science? (Article IV, Sec. 1.)"

Then follows the question as to being members of the branch church, whether they have had class instruction, etc. And then it says:

"Please fill in the space below with the names of the Christian Science periodicals for which you subscribe."

Then there is a blank space left for each one, and a space left for a statement of how long they have taken it.

Q. What effort, Mr. Eustace, in connection with this blank, was made with respect to applicants for cards as practitioners, with regard to having them subscribe for all the periodicals of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. There was no effort made to have them do so. The effort was made (if they did not subscribe) to learn the reason why they did not subscribe.

Q. Well, in passing upon the application for an advertisement, what attention did you pay to the fact that they were not subscribers? A. Well, if their application showed that they did not subscribe for any of the periodicals, it would be prima facie evidence that they were not very active Christian Scientists.

Q. Well, in some way, Mr. Eustace, the impression has been gained by some people that unless they subscribed to all of them they could not get their card in the Journal. A. Of course there are many impressions.

Q. Did you ever make such a statement to anybody in any way? A. Absolutely never.

Q. Is this the letter that you sent to churches asking (passing a paper to the witness)— A. This is it. I don't know when this was sent, years ago, but then that is all right.

Mr. Krauthoff—Will you mark that, please.

[What appears to be a printed circular letter from The Christian Science Publishing Society, to "Dear Friends," without date, is marked Exhibit 50, R. H. J., and Mr. Krauthoff begins to read it.]

Mr. Whipple—This is not to be printed in the record?

Mr. Krauthoff—No; it comes under the same agreement.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

(Exhibit 50, R. H. J., is read by Mr. Krauthoff.)

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, calling your attention to this specific language:

"The Manual provides for the organizing of a branch church of Christ, Scientist, and also provides that services of a church may be advertised in The Christian Science Journal, therefore it is well for members proposing to form a church not to procure a state charter prior to making application for advertisement, as the relationship to The Mother Church is the important thing."

How did you understand that that relationship arose when you prepared this circular? A. You see, the reason of that is that some of the churches, or rather some of the bands of people forming churches, would get charters from the State, calling themselves Seventh, or Eighth, or Ninth, or Tenth Church, whatever it might be, and they would not apply for a card in the Journal.

Q. Yes. A. Some others; some other body would apply as Eighth Church, and that was put in there to avoid any complication in that field of there being two churches called Eighth Church, or whatever it might be.

Q. That is not what it says. If I may, I will read it again—"therefore it is well for members proposing to form a church not to procure a state charter prior to making application for advertisement, as the relationship to The Mother Church is the important thing." A. That is it.

Q. The question I want to bring to your attention is this: Did not the acceptance of the advertisement in the Journal establish the relationship to The Mother Church? A. It had become the custom, you see, to accept a card in the Journal as the designation of that church, and if they had applied as Eighth Church, or whatever other church might apply, and it was accepted as such, why, it was then known as Eighth Church.

Q. Coming back to the question, Mr. Eustace, the relationship to The Mother Church, not the question of numbers or names, what created the relationship to The Mother Church? A. Why, their having formed a church.

Q. What did the card in the Journal have to do with the relationship to The Mother Church? A. The card in the Journal had of itself nothing whatever to do with it.

Q. Why, then, should they apply for a card before they incorporated, if the relationship to The Mother Church was the important thing, as you stated? A. So as to avoid complication.

Q. Merely a complication of names? A. Merely a complication of names and for no other purpose.

Q. And that is the only explanation you can give of the phrase "the relationship to The Mother Church"? A. That is exactly it.

Mr. Whipple—That is the explanation; not the only one he can give.

Q. Isn't this the exact fact, Mr.

Eustace: That the fact that the card appeared in the Journal was accepted as the evidence of the relationship? A: It was the evidence of it having been accepted as an advertised church, with a certain name to it.

Q. And a Christian Science church not advertised in the Journal was not accepted as genuine by any Christian Scientist? A. Well, I cannot answer that.

Q. Did you ever hear that they were? A. No, I did not.

Q. Would you? A. Would I—

Q. Would you attend the services of a Christian Science church whose card was not in the Journal? A. Why—societies; there are hundreds of societies—

Q. I said a church. A. I would not unless their members were members of The Mother Church.

Q. And would you attend the services of a branch society, not a mere society of Christian Science, but a society claiming to be a branch of The Mother Church—would you attend the services of such a branch unless it had a card in the Journal? A. Why, certainly I would.

Q. Without regard to its card in the Journal? A. Why, yes. Societies do not have to have cards in the Journal.

Q. They do have cards in the Journal? A. Yes, they do, but they do not have to.

Q. They are branch societies of The Mother Church if they do not have cards in the Journal? A. I did not ever understand that societies were ever called branch societies.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the application from a Church of Christ, Scientist, for a card in the Journal. A. All right.

[A blank application from a Church of Christ, Scientist, for a card in The Christian Science Journal, is marked Exhibit 51.]

Mr. Krauthoff—This is a blank application from a Church of Christ, Scientist, for a card in The Christian Science Journal. It starts with the town, country or state, the title of the church, the signature of the readers, as to how many members of The Mother Church they have, the enrolled membership, the average attendance, questions with respect to church membership, the time of the services, and the address for services, and the address of the reading room, and when regularly open.

Q. I call your attention to these questions: "Is there any other Christian Science organization in your city or town? If so, please state by letter the reasons for your organization. Does the organization of this church reduce the membership of any other Christian Science organization in your community? If so, to what extent?"

Now, what did the Publishing Society have to do with those questions? You stated that the organization of the church of itself created it a branch church without any action by the Publishing Society or the directors. So what difference does it make to the Publishing Society as to whether or not there were two churches in a town or whether the membership of one was reduced by the organization of the other?

A. In one sense of the word, not in the slightest; and then in another sense of the word it was very important to know, if we were going to accept an advertisement of a church, that it was in harmony with the other churches and was not simply trying to disrupt the Christian Science movement in that place.

Q. What did that have to do with the organization of the church? A. Nothing to do with the organization of the church, except the indication that if it was doing it to pull down some other church it would not be a good idea to take its advertisement.

Q. In The Christian Science Journal? A. In The Christian Science Journal.

Q. Is there any provision in the Deed of Trust, covering that? A. Nothing except the fact that we are to be good Christian Scientists.

Q. (Reading): "Is the organization adhering absolutely to the Church Manual, Art. III, Sec. 6, regarding readers; Art. XXXII, Sec. 4, regarding annual lectures; Art. XXI, Sec. 1, regarding a reading room; and Art. XXI, Sec. 3, regarding 'literature in reading rooms'?"

"(For 'literature published or sold by The Christian Science Publishing Society' see the Publishing Society's current catalogue published in each issue of the Journal.)"

So you did ask these churches that desired to have a card in the Journal whether or not they were adhering to the Manual? A. We always endeavored to find out from every applicant for an advertisement whether they were genuine Christian Scientists or not.

Q. That was determined by their adherence to the Church Manual? A. That was indicated by their answers to those questions.

Q. Then the question was also asked how many of them took the Journal, the Sentinel, Der Herold and the Monitor? A. That is quite right.

Q. And that was evidence of whether they were Christian Scientists or not? A. It was evidence of whether they were active workers.

Q. (Reading):

"Notice: A church card must be withdrawn if at any time the organization selects a reader who is not a member of The Mother Church."

So that if it came to the attention of the Publishing Society that a branch that had a card in the Journal had selected a reader that was not a member of The Mother Church the card went out of the Journal? A. Naturally.

Q. And that arose out of a provision in the Church Manual? A. It did.

Q. Did you state that you had never known of a society being a branch of The Mother Church? A. I have never heard that expression; I have always heard it as a branch church.

Q. That is, they speak of the society as a branch church? A. No, no. A society is called a Christian Science society, not a branch church at all.

Q. Well, you did have applications with respect to the societies for a card in the Journal? A. Oh, yes.

Q. I call your attention, Mr Eustace, to a heading in the Journal for April, 1918: "These are branch churches and societies of The Mother Church." Do you understand they are a society of The Mother Church but they are not a branch society of The Mother Church? A. Oh, I did not designate it in that way at all.

Q. Oh, I beg your pardon. A. It is simply that I have always heard the expression "a branch of The Mother Church," but not in the sense of a branch society. It is called a Christian Science society in such and such place.

Q. Well, it is a branch society of The Mother Church? A. In effect it is, of course. [A printed form letter from The Christian Science Publishing Society, relative to the organization of a society, is marked Exhibit 52.]

Q. [Reading from Exhibit 52.] "Dear Friends: As a preliminary step to the organization of a society, study of the definition of 'Church' (Science and Health, p. 583) is recommended. It is desirable that members as individual students of Christian Science should be familiar with the Manual of The Mother Church. Before making application for an advertisement as an authorized society—" I call your attention to that phrase "authorized society." What makes a Christian Science society an authorized society? A. I suppose, in that sense of the word, the acceptance of it.

Q. The acceptance of the advertisement? A. Acceptance of the advertisement, yes.

Q. And that is done by the Publishing Society, you say? A. Yes, it is.

Q. Without any action of The Mother Church? A. Without any action of The Mother Church.

Q. And in that way it becomes an authorized society of The Mother Church, as you say? A. No; it is that because of the Manual providing for it; it is only called that after it has been accepted.

Q. (Reading): "It is necessary for the members of the prospective society to sever any connection which they may have with any church organization other than The Mother Church in Boston. The signing of the Tenets of The Mother Church by a number of Christian Scientists may begin the roll of membership. In the admission of every member, Article IV, Section 2, of The Mother Church Manual should be carefully regarded.

By-laws should be formulated applicable to local needs. These by-laws can be very simple, but are necessary to properly conduct the business of an organization, provide for the election of officers, and the admission and dismissal of members. Provision should be made in the by-laws for amending them or for adding new rules. In naming the title of a Christian Science society thoughtful attention should be given to Article XXIII, Section 2, of the Manual of The Mother Church.

Now, in this document, Exhibit 52, I call your attention to the statement that "By-laws should be formulated applicable to local needs." What did The Christian Science Publishing Society as such have to do with the by-laws of branch societies of The Mother Church? A. Nothing except in the acceptance of them as advertisers.

Q. Did you pass on their By-Laws when you accepted their card for advertisement? A. We usually saw a copy of their By-Laws; we did not pass on them, but we looked at them just as we looked at the answers to their questions to see whether they were in conformity in a general way with the teachings of Christian Science.

Q. And the Church Manual? A. Well, that is a part of the teachings of Christian Science.

Q. (Reading):

"Article III, Section 6 (Church Manual), states that 'Readers shall be members of The Mother Church'; and Article VIII, Section 17, forbids members of The Mother Church from becoming members of any church whose readers are not members of The Mother Church. This By-Law is viewed as applying with equal force to a society. Confirming this, Article XXIII, Section 10, makes it clear that if one leaves a branch church to join a society, he must give up one membership to be eligible for the other. Article XXIII, Section 12, shows that both churches and societies are under the same rule in regard to Christian fellowship.

"If you will write the Publishing Society stating in detail what progress the Christian Scientists in your community have made toward the formation of a society, a blank form for a society application can be sent in reply."

I want, Mr. Eustace, to call your attention to this language:

"A society whose advertisement has been accepted for publication has the privilege of calling a lecturer (Art. XXXII, Sec. 3)."

Q. Do you mean by that to say that a society whose advertisement is not accepted does not have the privilege of calling for a lecture by a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church? A. That is the inference from the Church Manual.

Q. So that by the acceptance of the advertisement of the society by The Christian Science Publishing Society, the society thus accepted by the Publishing Society may, under the Church Manual, have a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church deliver a lecture in the society? A. So I understand.

Mr. Whipple—That is by virtue of the Manual, I understand, and not by virtue of anything you do?

The Witness—No.

Mr. Whipple—By virtue of the Manual?

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to the interpolation of Mr. Whipple—not by virtue of anything the witness did—because the witness just stated that because they did accept the advertisement they did have the lecture.

Mr. Whipple—That is right, by virtue of the Manual.

The Witness—According to the Manual, I said.

Q. In other words, because you did something, the Manual gives to that a certain force and effect? A. All right.

Q. That is your statement, but you have to do it to make the Manual operative. Now, then, it continues: "—but is not required to give an annual lecture, maintain a reading-room, nor to conduct a Wednesday evening service at the beginning of the organization. The Manual does not provide that it is necessary for the membership of a Christian Science society to include an advertised practitioner." The rest of it is the same as in the church form—

Mr. Whipple—You do not care to have that transcribed?

Mr. Krauthoff—No; only as I have asked the questions.

[A printed form of application from a society, for a card in The Christian Science Journal, is marked Exhibit 53.]

Q. Exhibit 53 is an application from a society for a card in The Christian Science Journal. It gives the town, the date, the country, or state, the name of the readers, with date of admission to membership in The Mother Church, the enrolled membership of the society, the names of the enrolled members, asks how many members of The Mother Church there are, and then this statement is made:

"Each society desiring a card in the Journal is required to have at least four members of The Mother Church."

Is that a rule of the Publishing Society, or is that provided for in the Church Manual? A. That is the rule of the Publishing Society in accepting an advertisement.

Q. For a society? A. Yes.

Q. Adopted in analogy to the one about churches, which requires four members of The Mother Church to form a branch church? A. It is.

Q. Then the question is asked as to the willingness of members of The Mother Church belonging to the society to serve in the office of reader, whether all of the members have severed their former church membership. Was that any part of the work of the Publishing Society, to know whether the members of the society were really Christian Scientists? A. Certainly it was, in order to see whether it was a fit advertisement.

Q. Not to see whether they complied with the Manual? A. To see if they were fitted for an advertisement.

Q. Then you ask how many of them take the Journal, Sentinel, Der Herold, the Monitor, the time for the services, and then this question is asked:

"Does the society adhere absolutely to Art. III, Sec. 6, also Art. XXI, Sec. 3, of the Church Manual by Mary Baker Eddy?"

"[Art. III, Sec. 6, requiring readers to be members of The Mother Church applies to substitute readers as well as to regularly appointed readers.] Now, this Art. XXI, Sec. 3, is the one about the literature, isn't it? A. It is literature and reading rooms, yes.

Q. That is to say, before accepting the advertisement of either a church or society, you required them to comply with that provision of the Manual which limited the literature in the reading rooms to the works of Mary Baker Eddy and that published or sold by The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. We did not require it necessarily. We asked that question in order to confirm our judgment as to whether it was wise to accept an advertisement or not.

Q. And if they did not comply with that section of the Manual they did not get their advertisement? A. Well, it would be quite likely they would not.

Q. That is the reason you asked the question? A. It was to get information; that is why all those questions are asked.

Q. Then you ask this question:

"Does the formation of this society reduce the membership of any other Christian Science organization in your community? If so, to what extent? If possible, give the names, addresses, and dates of admission to The Mother Church of three persons outside of your own membership who can give good reasons for the forming of a society in your locality."

What did you have to do with that phase of the formation of societies? A. For the same reason that we did with regard to churches, to see if they were building up the movement or if it was its purpose to disrupt it.

Q. And you decided that in passing on questions for cards in the Journal? A. We certainly decided on whether it was an advisable advertisement or not.

Q. Now, you have the same provision in this application that you have in the churches, that if at any time the society selects a reader who is not enrolled as a member of The Mother Church, then the card goes out of the Journal? A. Yes.

Q. That is because the Manual requires the readers to be members? A. That is a rule that we adopted in conformity with the Manual.

Q. You mean it is valid because you have adopted it, not because the Manual provides it? A. Well, it governs the advertisement.

Q. I want to call your attention to this advertisement, which I shall ask the stenographers to take, because I want to base some questions on it. This is an advertisement from the Christian Science Sentinel of Jan. 4, 1919:

"Ours

"What wealth of meaning Christian Science puts into the word 'ours.'"

"The Bible and the Christian Science textbook are our only preachers," says the 'Explanatory Note' in The Christian Science Quarterly, written by Mary Baker Eddy.

"Our churches," says the Manual of The Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, also by Mrs. Eddy.

"Both the Manual of The Mother Church and the Deed of Trust under which The Christian Science Publishing Society was established and is conducted make it clear that all that our Christian Science Publishing Society has, or is, or is to be, is the possession of Christian Scientists."

Then comes the quotation from II Peter, first chapter, second to fourth verses, both inclusive:

"All things have been given to us in Christian Science—our preachers, our churches, our literature, our periodicals, our lectures, our reading rooms, our privileges, our responsibility, that through these we might be partakers of the divine nature."

Now, the word "ours" there, Mr. Eustace, I want to call your attention to. You say, in the first statement, that "The Bible and the Christian Science textbook are our only preachers." To whom does the word "our" refer there? A. To every one that accepts it.

Q. Does it not refer to the Christian Science churches? A. I take it in a very much broader and wider sense, that it is preaching to all mankind.

Q. And so when we say "our only preachers," what do we mean? A. Used technically, we mean the Bible and Science and Health.

Q. Oh, no. It says "are our only preachers." The word "our" refers to the people for whom they are preaching? A. Oh, yes; I see what you mean. Well, that "our" applies to every one that accepts those as their preachers.

Q. Then, "our churches." To whom do the churches belong?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. I think I have kept correct account, that he has answered that five times, defining what "our" means in different connections. We had it in the forenoon once or twice, and here again.

The Master—I am unable to believe there can be any possible misunderstanding about it.

Mr. Whipple—Of course, it speaks for itself.

The Master—It is merely cumulative, going on the same thing over and over again.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am sorry, if Your Honor please, that I have not made myself clear as to what I am trying to do.

Mr. Whipple—I am not claiming that you have not made yourself clear at all; I am claiming that you are repeating yourself so that it loses its force.

Mr. Krauthoff—If I may proceed, if Your Honor please, without aid from Mr. Whipple. What I am trying to do is to show—

The Master—I think you better proceed without telling what you are trying to do.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well.

Q. Now, when the Manual says "our churches," does that refer to the churches of The Mother Church? Will you turn to page 70 there? "Our churches" says the Manual of The Mother Church," at page 70. A. Whereabouts is that?

Q. Or is that an error? A. Yes; I think it is not page 70.

Q. It says page 70 in the Manual. A. No. I do not see exactly that expression.

Q. Well, it may be an error in paging. Let me call your attention to this statement now, going further: "All things have been given to us in Christian Science—our preachers." Now, you have explained that the preachers belong to the Christian Science movement. A. To the world.

Q. To the world. In your Bill in Equity you speak of two general branches of activity. Now, in which branch of activity are the churches? That is in the first branch described in your bill, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. "Our literature." In what branch is that? A. Why, it is the Publishing Society.

Q. "Our churches." It means the churches of The Mother Church? A. It means the churches of the Christian Science denomination.

Q. Then "our literature." What is the literature? A. The literature is the literature of the Publishing Society.

Q. Is it the literature of the Christian Science denomination? A. Certainly it is.

Q. The periodicals? A. They are the literature of the denomination.

Q. And the lectures and the reading rooms and the privileges—they are all of the denomination of Christian Science? A. Certainly.

Q. One more advertisement, and then we will pass the question of advertisements:

"Our Only Preachers.

"That Christian Science has profited by religious history and that it is not based on the personality of any human leadership, either past or present, is proved by the following 'Explanatory Note' which is read from The Christian Science Quarterly by the First Reader at every Sunday service in Christian Science churches before beginning the Lesson-Sermon."

Then follows a statement, the explanatory note:

"Friends:—The Bible and the Christian Science textbook are our only preachers. We shall now read Scriptural texts, and their correlative passages from our denominational textbook,—these comprise our sermon.

"The canonical writings, together with the word of our textbook, corroborating and explaining the Bible texts in their spiritual import and application to all ages, past, present, and future, constitute a sermon undivorced from truth, uncontaminated and unfettered by human hypotheses, and divinely authorized."

"Thus presented in the Quarterly in the plural number, an even deeper significance and mission of these 'preachers' is presented in the singular number, under the heading, 'The Christian Science Pastor,' Article XIV, Section 1, of the Manual of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, as follows:

"I, Mary Baker Eddy, ordain the Bible, and Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, Pastor over The Mother Church,—The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.,—and they will continue to preach for this Church and the world."

"Could anything be added which would show more clearly what leads the Christian Science movement, and how and where?"

Do you agree with the statements made in that advertisement— A. I certainly do.

Q. —to the effect that what is termed "our only preachers," as created by the Manual of The Mother Church, leads the Christian Science movement? A. As created by Mrs. Eddy and expressed in the Manual of The Mother Church.

Q. And perpetuated in the Manual? A. Perpetuated, I hope, in the heart of mankind.

Q. By the Manual? A. Expressed in the Manual.

Q. What is it that requires The Mother Church and the branch churches to have the Bible and Science and Health as their only preachers outside of the provision of the Manual? A. That is Mrs. Eddy's request.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, this advertisement which speaks of the Deed of Trust and the Manual—have you ever published that a second time in the Journal? A. I don't know.

Q. Have you undertaken to revise it for publication? A. Not that I know of.

Q. I wish you would look when next at the publishing house at your record of those things and see to what extent you have attempted to revise that advertisement. A. What is the name of that?

Q. The one in which the Manual and the Deed of Trust are both mentioned. A. I see.

Q. These advertisements were printed and published for the purpose of increasing the circulation of the periodicals? A. Yes.

Q. A number were written that have not been published? A. It may be a lot have been, I don't know.

Q. At the inception of these advertisements were they submitted to the directors of The Mother Church? A. At the inception they were submitted to the editors, to the directors, to the trustees—I don't know how many others.

Q. Were they always submitted to the directors? A. I think so; I think the directors always saw them.

Q. Saw all of them? A. I think so.

Q. Never by your direction was the submission of them to the directors suspended? A. I would have to look back and see if we ever had taken any action on that or not.

Q. Mr. Leeson continued in the writing of these advertisements under the arrangement made in August of 1917 for how long a period of time? A. He is still under that same arrangement, I believe.

Q. Did you not change the arrangement in March of 1918? A. You mean change the arrangement with Mr. Leeson?

Q. Yes. A. No, not that I know of.

Q. To refresh your memory, was not the arrangement that you made of August, 1917, an arrangement with the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy, and the directors and trustees, whereby he was to get $500 a month as advertising counsel, and then in March, 1918, you changed that to an arrangement whereby he was to get $10,000 a year? A. No; he came then into the employ of The Christian Science Publishing Society, giving his entire time to it.

Q. That was in March, 1918? A. I do not know the exact date.

Q. When you changed that arrangement did you confer with the Board of Directors about it? A. Not that I know of.

Q. The arrangement had been made in conference with the directors? A. The original arrangements on the advertising?

Q. Yes. A. Yes; it had been made with the directors, in their capacity as directors and Trustees under the Will, I suppose, as well.

Q. You changed it without conferring with them? A. We did; at least, as far as I know. I don't remember.

Q. And what instruction did you give Mr. Leeson at the time you changed the arrangement as to what his future relations with the directors should be? A. I do not know that we gave him any instructions at all except as he came into the employ of the Publishing Society.

Q. Did you not specifically state to him that he must remember that he was in the employ of the Publishing Society and had nothing to do with the directors? A. I did not; but that would be a very natural thing, perhaps, for him to be informed of; I don't know.

Q. You have no recollection of that yourself? A. No.

Q. Among the publications of The Christian Science Publishing Society is the Christian Science Hymnal? A. There is.

Q. That is sung in the churches, the branch churches and societies of The Mother Church, and in The Mother Church? A. It is.

Q. I want to call your attention—we have referred to it in passing, but I want the record to be explicit on it—to the second verse of "Onward, Christian Soldiers":

"Like a mighty army
Moves the Church of God;
Brothers, we are treading
Where the saints have trod;
We are not divided,
All one body we,
One in hope and doctrine,
One in charity."

Was your attention called to the insertion of that hymn in an article prepared by Mr. Paul A. Harsch for the Christian Science Sentinel? A. One verse of that hymn.

Q. The one I have read you? A. Yes; the second verse, isn't it?

Q. Did you order it stricken out of that article? A. I did.

Q. Why, Mr. Eustace? A. That is, I dislike— May I say that we did not order it? We spoke to the editor, who very kindly took it out. We don't order in the Publishing Society under any circumstances.

Q. It did go out? A. It went out, yes.

Q. With your advice and cooperation? A. With our advice and cooperation, if you put it that way.

Q. And why did it go out? A. Our proposal, or talk with the editor, was to the effect that we felt that at this time, when the effort was being made to say that we were divided, we did not want the idea of any division to be brought out, because we are not divided.

Q. Then the second verse was not stricken out because the statements contained in it are not true? A. It was not. It was the presenting the idea of division that we had it stricken out for or asked to have it.

Q. And the statement now of the trustees is that the hymn remains true? A. Why, of course it is always true.

Q. And there are other hymns in the hymnal that voice the same thought? A. Many, I believe.

Q. You are familiar with the statement of Mrs. Eddy that "Unity is the essential basis of Christian Science"? A. I am, indeed, and I love it.

Q. And you believe in it? A. I do, indeed.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, I wish you would take the records of The Christian Science Publishing Society and turn to June, 1902, with respect to the choice of editors. A. What year?

Q. Beginning with June, 1902. (A book is handed to the witness.) A. Which editor were you referring to?

Q. Why, all of the editors that were elected by The Christian Science Board of Directors in that year. What does the record of The Christian Science Publishing Society show? A. (reading): "June 17th, 1902. Special meeting convened at 11:30 when the trustees met with Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Johnson of the Board of Directors who made it known that Archibald McLellan of Chicago had been elected editor-in-chief of the Journal and Sentinel, and Miss Mary Speakman, assistant. Mr. McLellan was present, and signified his acceptance of the office and indicated that a salary proportionate to his present income would be four thousand five hundred dollars."

Q. Is that all the record recites? A. (reading): "Conference was had in regard to the work and he announced his intention to return to Chicago and there terminate his business connections. These elections were accepted, but awaiting further instructions, no action was taken. Judge Hanna signified his willingness to continue at work till the new editor arrived."

Q. Now, will you turn to June of 1903.

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Whipple, will you have Mr. Watts please get the whole Hoag correspondence for me?

A. I don't see anything here about that.

Q. Well, you are familiar with the fact that Mrs. Annie M. Knott began her— You will possibly find it later in the month in 1903. A. Oh, yes, Mrs. Knott came later. That is right, yes—July.

Q. Will you read the record in 1903, please. A. Yes, that is it.

"July 6, 1903.

"Special meeting of the Board of Trustees convened at 11 a. m., all members present. Official notice was received from the Board of Directors of the election of Mrs. Annie M. Knott, CSD, as assistant editor of the Journal and Sentinel. A letter was received from Mrs. Knott asking that the amount of $2500—twenty-five hundred dollars—per annum be considered as the proper return for her services. This amount was agreed upon and the following adjustment of salaries was had."

Q. Will you continue reading, please? A. (Reading):

"Mr. John B. Willis to receive $1800 per annum, Miss Louise F. Kallmorgan $1800 per annum, Mr. Leon Wood to receive $20 per week. A letter was prepared and sent to our Leader together with a copy of Mrs. Knott's letter."

Q. That is the only record you have of any election or employment at that time? A. I think it is, unless our correspondence shows something with Mrs. Eddy.

Q. Will you turn to 1904. A. I don't know. I haven't been through this to see, so I don't know what it is. In January did you say?

Q. It was usually in June, wasn't it? Mr. Whipple—Do you care to put in Mrs. Eddy's letter about Mrs. Knott in July, 1903?

Mr. Krauthoff—I should be very glad to.

Mr. Whipple—It reads as follows:
"Pleasant View, Concord, N. H.
"July 9, 1903.

"Beloved Student:

"It is just to pay Mrs. Knott her price and she will earn it, I trust. She is good, well educated and has been through the primary and normal classes under my instruction. A student qualified thus the directors know is needed on the staff editorial. Do not fail to secure her price and so inform her at once.

"With love,
"M. B. EDDY."

Mr. Bates—Just a moment. Who is that addressed to?

Mr. Streeter—Won't you read the address? Isn't there something else?

Mr. Whipple—It says, "The above is in Mrs. Eddy's own handwriting, evidently to Thomas W. Hatten," who was one of the trustees, I understand?

Mr. Krauthoff—Who put the memorandum on it that it was to Mr. Hatten?

Mr. Whipple—That I don't know.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is not on the letter itself?

Mr. Whipple—No.

Mr. Bates—That is not the original letter, is it?

Mr. Whipple—No. It is just a copy.

Mr. Bates—If it has not gone in, I object to it. If you have it, put it in. I object to that going in at the present time.

Mr. Whipple—It has gone in. Your objection is ex post facto.

Mr. Bates—You said you were offering the letter. Instead of that you are offering a copy.

Mr. Whipple—I did not pretend it was the original letter, of course, and your associate was perfectly willing it should go in. You have got to have more team play. You can't one of you assent to begin with, and the other one after it is done object.

The Master—May I suggest this: Let the letter that has been read by Mr. Whipple stand as it is at present. If the original letter can be produced hereafter, some change in the record may become necessary.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, the point I desire to make about it is this: Mr. Whipple said he desired to offer a letter with respect to Mrs. Knott. To that I acceded. Under that permission of mine he read a notation which is not a part of the letter, and I move that that notation be stricken from the record as not a part of the letter.

The Master—Let the record state that the notation on the letter is not a part of the letter itself. A. I don't see anything in 1904.

Mr. Whipple—I made that request in reply to a statement to state to whom it was addressed, and I find on the copy that illuminating statement, which seems to have caused some disturbance.

Q. Will you find the next year, June, 1905? A. I don't see anything in June, 1905, there.

Q. Do you find anything in June, 1906? A. No.

Q. June, 1907?

Mr. Streeter—Now, Mr. Krauthoff, let me suggest you ask him to look in September, 1906. I beg your pardon for interrupting.

Q. Will you look in September, 1906?

Mr. Streeter—And along about Sept. 25. A. Nothing on the 25th.

Q. Do you find anything in September at all? A. I will look through it.

Mr. Streeter—If you will allow me to interrupt, Mr. Krauthoff, suppose you ask him if he finds anything under date of Sept. 25, 1906, about Allison V. Stewart succeeding Joseph B. Clark?

The witness—Yes, there is.

Mr. Whipple—He is talking about editors.

Mr. Krauthoff—We are talking about editors now, in general, and we went all over that on the trustees.

Mr. Streeter—Did you have that record in?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes. I went over that about the trustees. I am now talking about editors.

Mr. Whipple—May I suggest, if Your Honor please, that we ought not to have our time taken in examining these records, which could just as well be done outside the court, and then we could put in in five minutes what we are spending half an hour on. This preparation of the case ought to be before we come into court and not keep every one waiting.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well. I will make this suggestion, then, that between now and our next hearing Mr. Eustace find the places in the record which relate to the election of editors.

Mr. Whipple—Or any mention of editors. Of course we say we never elected any editors, because there is no provision for it in the trust deed, or anything with regard to their employment, or communications from the august body.

The Master—If it is going to take much time to hunt that up, I think it would be better to wait till the next session.

Mr. Whipple—Your Honor sees the size of the volume, and we have only suggestions to guide us with regard to it.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I have the whole Hoag correspondence?

Mr. Whipple—Certainly. Let us see what you want. That is pretty general. I am afraid we will furnish you with so much it will take a good while to put it in. Just what do you want? The directors were never good enough to say anything to the trustees about Mrs. Hoag, as I remember it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I would like to have copies of the letters from the directors to the trustees about Mrs. Hoag. You did get some letters from the directors on that.

Mr. Whipple—Yes. Here is the first one.

Q. While that is being arranged, has the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society up to this time employed anybody to succeed Mr. McCrackan? A. We have not.

The Master—Will you remind me, Mr. Krauthoff, to succeed him as—

Mr. Krauthoff—As associate editor of the Christian Science periodicals.

The Master—Thank you.

Mr. Whipple—It hasn't appeared yet, Your Honor, in this hearing that Mr. McCrackan was dismissed by the Board of Trustees some time in May.

Mr. Krauthoff—According to your—

The Master—May?

Mr. Whipple—In May of the present year. That appeared in another hearing, but it has not been offered in evidence here, so that the references to electing some one to succeed him, when you have not been informed that he had been dismissed, is a little confusing.

Q. According to your records and your statement The Christian Science Publishing Society dismissed Mr. McCrackan on May 19, 1919? A. It did; at least I think that that is the date, all right.

Q. I am not now admitting, of course, that your action was valid, but that was the action on which the dismissal, or whatever it was, took effect?

Mr. Whipple—Well, I don't think that is very respectful to a decision of this Court in which it was found as a fact that the Board of Trustees did dismiss him. Now, you say you are not admitting that they did. That has been judicially determined. That is one thing, isn't it, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—With all due respect to Mr. Whipple, it has not been judicially determined that the Board of Trustees had a legal right to dismiss Mr. McCrackan.

Mr. Whipple—Do you want the Hoag correspondence? You have asked for it.

Mr. Krauthoff—If I may have it, but I am trying to bring out this, if Your Honor please, that on May 19, 1919, Mr. McCrackan ceased to be an associate editor of these periodicals; that from that date to this these trustees have not employed anybody to succeed him, and that the periodicals are now running with one editorial short.

Mr. Whipple—One editor, you mean.
Mr. Krauthoff—And one editorial, too.

Mr. Strawn—No more short than it was when he was nominally there.

The Master—Perhaps if there is no objection to that statement, it will save the taking of evidence to support it.

Mr. Whipple—We don't object to that, but the same condition had continued for quite a while, while Mr. McCrackan was neglecting his duties, before we dismissed him.

Q. Coming down to the 19th of May, 1919, at the present time, each number of the Sentinel contains two editorials instead of three as formerly? A. No. I think it was on May 24—what was the first Sentinel? May 24 was the first one. That—

Q. And since that time there have been two editorials in each number? A. There have.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, we call attention to a letter from Annie M. Knott to The Christian Science Board of Directors, dated March 19, 1919.

The Master—That is a letter from Mrs. Knott?

Mr. Krauthoff—Mrs. Knott, in March, 1919, was an editor of the Christian Science periodicals and was elected a member, as we claim, of The Christian Science Board of Directors.

The Master—From Mrs. Knott to the Board of Directors, to the defendants in this case?

Mr. Krauthoff—To the defendants, tendering her resignation as an editor.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, we don't see how this correspondence between Mrs. Knott and the directors, which we could not control and which we knew nothing of, can be admitted in our case.

The Master—How can it affect the plaintiffs, the trustees in the case?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, that letter, if Your Honor please, is only the basis of that which started the incident.

The Master—Only the basis of what?

Mr. Krauthoff—I mean it is the starting of the incident, and we merely make this statement now—

The Master—No; let us settle it about the letter.

Mr. Krauthoff—I don't offer the letter.

The Master—How can a letter written by Mrs. Knott affect the plaintiffs in the case?

Mr. Krauthoff—I don't offer the letter, if Your Honor please, if objection is made to it. I merely make this statement so that Your Honor will understand.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me. Your statement is very likely more objectionable than your letter.

The Master—Then the letter is offered, objected to and excluded, I suppose.

Mr. Krauthoff—The letter is offered and excluded. Now, if I may state this: On March 19, 1919, Mrs. Knott tendered her resignation to The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Mr. Whipple—That I object to and ask to have it stricken out as having no probative force. The gentleman withdraws the letter and then tries to state the substance of it orally.

Mr. Krauthoff—Then we will pass that.

Mr. Whipple—He is not a witness—at all.

Mr. Krauthoff—We will prove it independently.

Mr. Whipple—You will, if it is admissible. Otherwise, of course you won't.

The Master—We will take it for granted he won't try to, if it isn't admissible.

Mr. Krauthoff—Here is a letter to the Board of Trustees from The Christian Science Board of Directors, March 31, 1919.

[This letter is read and is later marked Exhibit 53.]

Mr. Krauthoff—Included in that letter was a copy of a notice.

[The copy of a notice dated is read and is later marked Exhibit 53a.]

Q. Did that notice ever appear in The Christian Journal? A. It did not.

Q. Why not? A. Because—what is the date of that?

Q. March 31, 1919. A. That was after our Bill in Equity was filed.

Q. Was that the only reason? A. That was the reason—the reason was that our Bill in Equity was filed and we didn't want of course to bring out any question of that character.

Q. You wrote a letter to The Christian Science Board of Directors April 1, 1919.

[The letter dated April 1, 1919, from the Board of Trustees to the Board of Directors is read and is later marked Exhibit 54.]

Q. Of course the publications, the Journal and the Christian Science Sentinel, are filled with many announcements of The Christian Science Board of Directors extending over a long period of years, inserted without any question as to their validity and effect, as you know; is that true, Mr. Eustace? A. I will take your word for it.

Q. I mean did you ever question the announcements of the Board of Directors prior to the change— A. I never filed a bill in equity before.

Q. Oh, it is all different now, is it? A. It is entirely.

Mr. Whipple—The difference is that you are enjoined from doing these things.

Mr. Krauthoff—I see.

Mr. Whipple—And you see you tried to do a thing you were enjoined from doing, although you didn't seem to know it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I see. I didn't know that. I am glad to be instructed.

Mr. Whipple—Yes; you were enjoined from electing the editor.

Mr. Krauthoff—But this happened before the injunction.

Mr. Whipple—This correspondence wasn't before the injunction.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, but the election was.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, but your election was a futile thing.

[Letter dated April 1, 1919, to Hon. John L. Bates is read by Mr. Krauthoff down to and including the words at the top of page 3, "informed me by telephone that it had your approval."]

Mr. Krauthoff—That is a matter not now in controversy.

Mr. Whipple—I think it is very much so. We say you also violated the injunction in that.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will be very glad to read it.

[Mr. Krauthoff continues to read the letter to the end and same is later marked Exhibit 54a.]

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, then, on April 3, 1919, The Christian Science Board of Directors sent to you a copy, wrote you a letter inclosing what purported to be a copy of Mrs. Knott's resignation to the Board of Directors. Here is a letter, April 28, 1919.

[The letter dated April 28, 1919, from the Board of Trustees to the Board of Directors is read by Mr. Krauthoff and is later marked Exhibit 56.]

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, you state here that the election by the Board of Directors of Mrs. Ella W. Hoag as an editor of the Christian Science periodicals is "an unwarranted assumption of authority." What do you mean by that? A. Exactly what those words imply.

Q. You are familiar with the fact that for the period beginning June, 1902, the directors annually elected the editors and the associate editors; you were familiar with that fact, that those editors and associate editors were always accepted by the Board of Trustees as the editors to serve as such, and because the Board of Directors did that which they had been doing for a period of 17 years you characterize it as "an unwarranted assumption of authority"?

Mr. Whipple—That I object to, because it is an unwarranted assumption in the question.

Mr. Krauthoff—Unwarranted assumption in the first place.

Mr. Whipple—No; in your question. When Mrs. Eddy had been living she had selected a number of the directors as long as she was living, and you were fully aware of it. Somehow or other you have got it into your head these directors are paramount in authority to Mrs. Eddy; they not only succeeded to Mrs. Eddy's authority, but had greater authority, and you seem to forget that when she was on earth she was dealing with these matters.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, in view of that statement of Mr. Whipple's it is only fair to make this statement.

The Master—I think this discussion is very much out of place on both sides.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg Your Honor's pardon. I didn't know I was discussing it.

Q. You are familiar with the fact, Mr. Eustace, that from 1911, at the passing of Mrs. Eddy, until June, 1918, a period of seven years, The Christian Science Board of Directors did annually elect the editors and the associate editors, and the manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. I believe that they did so.

Q. And with that knowledge in your possession, you treat their action in electing Mrs. Hoag to succeed Mrs. Knott as an unwarranted assumption of authority? A. I do.

Q. Is that based on the proposition that the Board of Directors could not fill a vacancy during the course of the year, or that they had no power to elect at all? A. They had no power, of course, ever to enforce their election—

Q. I am talking about the power of election. A. I do not know anything about their power of election.

Q. You said here that in electing Mrs. Hoag they were engaged in an unwarranted assumption of authority. A. They were. The Bill in Equity had been filed. It was an attempt to coerce the Board of Trustees on a question that we were absolutely disputing their authority on, to force an editor or anybody else on the trustees.

Q. Well, let us see—

The Master—Let me ask both counsel whether I have anything to consider in regard to the question of whether what was done was a violation of the court injunction?

Mr. Whipple—No, Your Honor. This is a matter—

The Master—Why should we go into this matter?

Mr. Whipple—There is not the slightest reason for it, but I have felt the same about some other matters as I think Your Honor has indicated that you have. These matters which have transpired since the filing of the bill and which were involved, and very critically involved, in the matter before Judge Braley, Mr. Krauthoff seems to want to rehearse. I do not think that they are admissible at all.

The Master—What have I to do, Mr. Krauthoff, with the question whether or not this action by the directors violated the Court's injunction.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is not the question to which I am addressing this evidence, if Your Honor please. We are met here by continued protestations on the part of Mr. Whipple and his clients, that in all things they are obedient unto this Manual as they understand it. We had the testimony this morning that there is nothing inconsistent on the part of the directors' electing an editor provided the trustees thereafter approve of the election and employ him. We are now offering, independent of any injunction, and as to an incident which occurred before the injunction was issued, to show that these trustees, in writing, had notified these directors that when the directors discharged duties under the Church Manual, and elected an editor, the directors were taking upon themselves an unwarranted assumption of authority, in direct repudiation of the Church Manual and in direct denial of every protestation they make regarding it.

The Master—Now having got in that correspondence, it appears that it is all subsequent to the filing of the bill.

Mr. Krauthoff—And it indicates a state of mind of these trustees.

The Master—Isn't that another reason why I am not concerned with it?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, if Your Honor please. What a plaintiff in a bill in equity says in correspondence after the filing of the suit in respect to any subject of controversy that there is in the suit indicates what his contention is with reference to the nature of his suit, it indicates the nature of the controversy, and it is a denial of his testimony just the same as if yesterday he went and told somebody of it. This is direct evidence of a repudiation of the Church Manual by these plaintiffs under the advice of their counsel.

Mr. Whipple—We protest against any such statement as that.

The Master—That is a question to be considered later. Now you have your correspondence in, and I suppose that that is the end of it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, it has not been marked and I would suggest that all of those papers that have been read be marked in the order in which they were read.

Mr. Krauthoff—They have all been marked by the stenographer.

Mr. Whipple—I beg your pardon. I am afraid that they did not have an opportunity to mark them at all.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg your pardon.

Mr. Whipple—You kept them in your hand, and the stenographer had no chance.

The Master—It strikes me that they can only be admissible, if at all, upon the ground that there is something in them which tends to contradict the evidence already given by Mr. Eustace.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor, and we say that there is no contradiction in the letter, and, above all, there is no evidence, not the slightest, not a scintilla of evidence that there is any violation of the Manual.

[The letters, etc. referred to are marked as follows:

A copy of letter from Charles E. Jarvis, corresponding secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors, to the Board of Trustees, dated March 31, 1919, is marked Exhibit 53. R. H. J.

A copy of a record of The Christian Science Board of Directors concerning the election of Ella W. Hoag, C. S. D., associate editor of The Christian Science Journal, is marked Exhibit 53a. R. H. J.

A copy of a letter from the Board of Trustees to The Christian Science

Board of Directors, dated April 1, 1919, is marked Exhibit 54. R. H. J.

A copy of a letter from "W-C" to Hon. John L. Bates, dated April 1, 1919, is marked Exhibit 54a. R. H. J.

A copy of a letter from Charles E. Jarvis, corresponding secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors, to the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, dated April 3, 1919, is marked Exhibit 55. R. H. J.

A copy of a letter from the Board of Trustees, to The Christian Science Board of Directors, dated April 28, 1919, is marked Exhibit 56. R. H. J.]

Mr. Streeter—Well, following my Brother Whipple's caveats from time to time, I do not want to be regarded as admitting the entire accuracy of his last statement.

Mr. Whipple—I presume you do not; and I assert further that it was a further instance of an unwarranted assumption of authority on the part of the Board of Directors. I suppose you will not admit that? That is the point that we are dealing with.

Mr. Krauthoff—The point that we are making, if Your Honor please, is this, that when Mr. Whipple says that the Board of Directors, in electing editors under the Church Manual, are engaged in an unwarranted assumption of authority, he thereby repudiates the Church Manual.

Mr. Whipple—May I reply to that, if Your Honor please, a moment?

The Master—The statement having gone in, I do not see how I can refuse you the right to reply.

Mr. Whipple—That is what I do want to do.

The Master—I do not think that the statement should have been made here.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, I hope you will let my friend reply, because it is so interesting to see him get between these two points that I would like to hear him state it over again.

Mr. Whipple—What do you want to hear me state now?

Mr. Streeter—I want to hear you say what you have said two or three times before, and I have not been able to understand it after you have said it.

Mr. Whipple—Now, an election, in one sense, means the installation of a person in office. What we have said is that an election which is in fact nothing but a nomination we have no objection to, the ultimate authority to employ and install in office resting with the trustees. Now, they attempted, and in that they were in contempt of Court, to elect, select and install. That they had no right to do under the Manual; and I think they know by this time that they have no right to do it, certainly, under the injunction; and that is where they were unwarranted in their action.

The Master—Now, having heard both sides so far, I prefer to leave the whole question until it comes up at the proper time.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Streeeter—It is very interesting to hear you say that.

Q. Mr. Eustace, commencing with your accession to the office of trustee, did you have any conferences with the Board of Directors of The Mother Church as to the discharge of your duties under the Deed of Trust? A. I did not. You mean—say that again, will you?

(The question is read as follows: "Mr. Eustace, commencing with your accession to the office of trustee, did you have any conferences with the Board of Directors of The Mother Church as to the discharge of your duties under the Deed of Trust?")

A. At what time?

Q. When you became a trustee, in December, 1912. A. We have had many, many conferences.

Q. To what did those conferences relate? A. Why, to countless subjects.

Q. And to what did the subjects relate? A. Why, to the Christian Science movement as a whole.

Q. And including The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Yes. We have had a number of conferences on that particular point.

Q. In your direct examination a letter was read in which it was stated to the directors that if the directors wanted to see the trustees on any business relating to the trustees, the trustees would receive the directors at the publishing house, but that if the directors wanted to see the trustees on any business relating to the directors, you would call on the directors? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, what possible business can either of you have that does not concern both? A. Nothing, except the welfare of the movement.

Q. How could any such differentiation be made if there was no thought of separation? A. Do you wish me to tell you that we were tired of the superior air that the Board of Directors was acting in, in regard to the trustees, and that we had decided that we would not stand for that any longer?

Q. Well, I wish you to tell me whatever is true about it. A. Well, that is the truth.

Q. Then you adopted this rule, that if they wanted to see you about the business of the trustees, they must come over and see you? A. We would be very glad to see them, night or day, any time.

Q. Then you also adopted the rule for the government of the directors, that if they wanted to submit anything to you they should do it in writing? A. That we would both do so.

Q. And none of the trustees would talk to the directors unless all of them did so? A. No; that was on the particular point of the letter of Sept. 30.

Q. And at that time you stated that Mr. Rowlands was not in town? A. We did.

Q. How often had Mr. Rowlands been absent from Boston since Aug. 1, 1917? A. I don't know.

Q. Do the minutes of the trustees record who were present at the meetings of the trustees? A. Probably they do.

Q. Will you turn to your minutes and tell me from which ones of them he (Mr. Rowlands) was absent? If Your Honor please, it occurred to me—

Mr. Whipple—We will look that up and give it to you later.

Mr. Krauthoff—That may be looked up and given at the next hearing.

Mr. Whipple—Yes. We will make a minute of that.

Q. Mr. Eustace, in your bill you make this statement:

"The directors have also insisted that the trustees should at once openly declare and agree that since the By-Laws of the Church as a whole indicated that the directors of the Church were intrusted with the business of the Church, they, the directors, were thus authorized and required to supervise and control the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society as a part of the Church"—

Do I understand that that statement that you make as to the directors' claim is denied by you,—that is, you claim that The Christian Science Publishing Society is not a part of The Mother Church? A. It is not a part in that sense of the word, that The Mother Church is under a Deed of Trust, and the Publishing Society is under a deed of trust.

Q. Well, I am not asking for deeds of trust. I am asking what your interpretation of the relation of The Christian Science Publishing Society to The Mother Church is.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment as to whether that has not been gone into ad infinitum, if not ad nauseam.

Q. You also state here: "The plaintiffs further aver upon information and belief that it is not a part of the plan of the defendants to appeal to the courts for an orderly determination of the question of their right to remove the plaintiff trustees under existing circumstances, but that on the contrary they propose to accomplish their removal by the exercise of the great and dominating influence which they carry by reason of their official position and in the exercise of their power to dominate and control members of The Mother Church by the powers of discipline which they hold, and to influence the action of other churches by refusals to grant licenses or appointments." Who told you that? A. Who told it?

Q. Yes. You say that you aver upon information and belief? A. That they had done that?

Q. Yes, or were going to do it. A. Because of the statements that we have heard.

Q. The statements that you have heard? A. The statements that the lecturers, some of the lecturers, had made.

Q. Prior to the filing of the bill? A. Prior to the filing of the bill, I think.

Q. What lecturer said it? A. Mr.—just state what you—

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. Should the name of the lecturer who depends for his living—I do not know that you (addressing the witness) have any objection to stating it, but I should very much doubt whether any good purpose would be subserved by having the names of the informants given, especially when they are subordinate to this Board of Directors who have indicated such a disposition of vindictiveness as they have shown.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, as to the last statement of Mr. Whipple, the evidence will unfold itself as to that. These directors are the governing board of a great religious organization. They are charged here with oppression in office. They are charged here with bad faith—

The Master—The question here is whether you, under your cross-examination, inquiring as to the information on which these statements are made, are entitled to have the names of the informants.

Mr. Krauthoff—We say that we are entitled to have them so that we may—

The Master—Mr. Whipple, as I understand it, has gone no further than to suggest that it is not desirable to give them.

Mr. Whipple—It is not desirable, and I think that it is a matter within Your Honor's discretion. I do not know that there is any objection to it, but it seems to me that there would be objection.

Mr. Streeeter—If Your Honor please, if I were one of the persons who were going to be named, I should hope and pray that Mr. Eustace would not give my name. If I were one of the hired men of the Board of Directors, I should not want them to know that I told Mr. Eustace any such thing. I think, for the protection of those men, it is well enough to exercise Your Honor's discretion not to permit those names to be used.

Mr. Whipple—The General speaks feelingly on the subject, because he knows what the directors do under those circumstances, or his client does.

Mr. Krauthoff—May we resume the question before the Court? We are charged here, as I said, with an abuse of our official power.

The Master—No, no; the question is now whether you have a right to the names of the persons who told the trustees these things.

Mr. Krauthoff—One of our contentions is that no such statement was ever made to the plaintiffs.

The Master—In other words, that they had no such information?

Mr. Krauthoff—They had no such information; and they put this into the Bill in Equity for the purpose of discrediting us before the Christian Science field.

Mr. Whipple—The testimony under oath is that they did have such information. I am not sure whether it came directly from the lecturers or from someone else who talked with the lecturers. We do know, and, if it is necessary to go into it, we can show pretty fully the plan and the propaganda that you had planned out, by which you were going to make this Publishing Society an empty shell, and do some other things which you have neglected to do.

Mr. Krauthoff—We challenge that statement in toto, and demand proof of it.

The Master—Never mind about that now. I do not care to go into that. I hardly think that my discretion goes so far as to enable me, or to authorize me, to tell the witness that he may refuse to state the names, or to order him not to state the names. If the defendants insist, or if the cross-examining counsel insists, on having the names, I do not see how I can direct the witness not to give them.

Mr. Whipple—If the witness should refuse to give them would he be in a position of disrespect to the Court? Because if he would, he would not like to do that thing. Would there be anything more than the inferences that might be drawn as to his failure to give the names? That we would take the responsibility of, but we would not like—

The Master—I should certainly hesitate a long time before I would take any action towards compelling him to give them.

Mr. Whipple—Well, if Your Honor thought that he ought to give them, we would not wait for any proceedings, or intimation, or order.

The Master—It does not seem to me that your objection is enough to warrant my directing the witness not to state them.

Q. Will you give the names of the persons from whom you got this information?

Mr. Whipple—May I say to the witness that, as I understand it, the matter is now left to him? A. I think that I will refuse to give the names, then.

Mr. Krauthoff—We shall ask, at the proper time, that the necessary steps be taken to compel an answer to this question.

The Master—We will take that up later.

Q. That is to say, Mr. Eustace, you filed this Bill in Equity against these directors, and made this statement under oath, on information and belief, and you have printed 140,000 copies of this bill, and circulated them, and you now refuse to tell these directors upon what basis you make that allegation.

Mr. Whipple—That is not the statement at all. He has stated the basis on which he makes it. He refuses at present to give the names of people who have given information, to make them the subject of vindictive behavior on the part of your clients; and that is all he says.

Q. You decline to give the names of the people upon whose statements you have based these allegations against these directors? A. At present I decline.

Q. You further state here: "The plaintiffs further aver upon information and belief, that the defendants have stated to many Christian Scientists in substance that they plan to obtain control of the Publishing Society, or to destroy it."

Now, what information have you upon that subject? A. I gave it yesterday, that—

The Master—Is there anything that you want to add to what you stated about it yesterday?

The Witness—Nothing at all.

Q. That was limited to the statement that came to you from the business manager, and the inference that you drew from what the directors said to you? A. Yes, it was.

Q. And you say— A. But the inference was a very clear inference.

Q. You say further, "and to accomplish that result"—that is, the result you claim, to make it an "empty shell," as I understand your statement—as I understand your statement, that came to you directly from Mr. Watts, and not from any of the directors. A. I also said that in a conference with the directors that was plainly indicated by inference.

Q. But that phrase was not used? A. I don't remember the actual phrase, "empty shell."

Q. You say, "and to accomplish that result by using their great influence with Christian Science churches and throughout the field to induce Christian Scientists not to continue to subscribe for and support the publications published by the society established and founded by Mrs. Eddy." Now, what, if anything, have the directors done to accomplish that result? A. Whether directly or indirectly, I think that they have done a very great deal.

Q. What do you know about that?

Mr. Whipple—Do you mean since the injunction was granted?

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, I mean at any time.

Mr. Whipple—That was a threat, that they were planning to do it then. It does not say that they had done anything. It says that they threatened it; and that is what they said practically to Mr. Eustace himself.

Mr. Krauthoff—No; it states that they said they would do it. Now, what had they done prior to the filing of this suit?

The Master—Is there any allegation that they had done anything?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, I do not think that there really is, if Your Honor please.

The Master—Then we had better pass that, I think.

Q. After this suit was filed, you issued this Bill in Equity, I understand? A. We did.

Q. You printed how many copies? A. About 140,000.

Q. And sent them to whom? A. To our subscribers, except the Monitor.

Q. Have you that many subscribers exclusive of the Monitor? A. Evidently.

Q. And how many letters have you received from your subscribers since you sent out this Bill in Equity?

Mr. Whipple—That I object to, if Your Honor please.

The Master—Why should we go into that?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, the point we desire to make about that, if Your Honor please, is this, that the statement of the trustees, outlined in this Bill in Equity, is the most damaging thing that could have happened to this trust which they are administering. Upon the sending out of this Bill in Equity, as they did send it out, they received a great volume of protests from individuals and churches with respect to the position taken by these trustees, showing that in the bringing of this suit and the taking of the position that they now take, they themselves are the injury to the trust, and not the directors.

The Master—Now, I shall have to exclude that. I cannot see that it is admissible in this inquiry.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, I have a number of further questions to put to Mr. Eustace about the conferences between the directors and the trustees, and that will be very much expedited by Mr. Eustace between now and the next conference taking his records and finding the dates of the conferences.

The Master—If I recollect aright, there are several points on which you have requested him to search the records.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes. So that, if it may be understood—

The Master—Also, if I remember aright, there are certain points in regard to which you have been requested to search the directors' records.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is true, and we will have them all searched before we come here again.

The Master—Both those records had better be produced at the next hearing.

Mr. Krauthoff—We shall do that. So that if I may continue my cross-examination at that time I shall be very glad.

Mr. Whipple—Now, will you tell us a little more definitely what period you desire our investigation to cover with regard to the conferences? We have put in all that we deem material. What more do you want? Tell us specifically.

Mr. Krauthoff—I would like to have Mr. Eustace locate every conference that he had with the directors after he became a trustee.

Mr. Whipple—Every conference that Mr. Eustace had?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Why, the records of the trustees do not show that, because undoubtedly he spoke to them as an individual.

Mr. Krauthoff—If you will pardon me, I think that the records will show that every time that they had a conference they came back and made a record of it on their books.

Mr. Whipple—Is that so, Mr. Eustace, that every time that you had a conference with the directors you went back and made a record of it?

The Witness—If the board had, but not if I did personally.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—I mean the trustees and the Board of Directors, certainly.

Mr. Whipple—What you want, then, is a record showing what conferences they had with the directors. Is that right?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—From what time to what time?

Mr. Krauthoff—From the time that Mr. Eustace became a trustee down to the present day.

Mr. Whipple—They have not had any conference since the bill was filed. Now we want your directors' records in court at the same time, covering the same period, and the same interviews. Will you have them here? Ours will be here, and we will have a memorandum of them. Will yours be here?

Mr. Krauthoff—We will give you a memorandum of all the conferences that we had.

Mr. Whipple—No, no. Will your books be here?

Mr. Krauthoff—The books will be here, subject to the order of the Court.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that is all that I want to know.

The Master—If the trustees' books are to be produced on certain points, what reason is there why the directors' records should not be produced?

Mr. Krauthoff—The directors' records will be produced under the order of the Court. The point that we make is that neither of us is expected to throw all of our records open to the other side.

Mr. Whipple—We do not ask for an order of the Court. Our records will be here, and have been here.

Mr. Streeter—Why should the records not be thrown open on both sides, the records of the two boards?

Mr. Whipple—You have nothing in your records that you do not want the public to know about, have you, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Bates—It is perfectly apparent. Your Honor, that there may be in church records many matters relating to church discipline, etc., that ought not to be opened up to the public. In so far as there are any records that are material to either of these cases, they will be open to my brothers, and they know it, but they are not open for fishing expeditions.

Mr. Whipple—We do not want to fish in that muddy pond!

The Master—Mr. Whipple goes a little further than you do in his offer to produce the trustees' records. He is willing to let you go all through them. Of course, for purposes of this case, he need produce only the records relating to some points which have been mentioned. The same is true as to you. You offer to produce your records on points that have been inquired about, but you do not say that you will throw open your records to him.

Mr. Bates—I do not think that there is any real controversy between us. Let me say this also: Our records differ from his in this respect, that there is a by-law of the Church which the trustees are so anxious to sustain that particularly requires that the transactions in the board room of the directors shall not be discussed outside. So far as they bear on this case, we recognize that they should be here, but so far as they do not bear on this case they certainly are not here. They are entirely different from the trustees' records, which are merely business records.

Mr. Thompson—If Your Honor please, we want these records, too, and—

Mr. Bates—We know you do.

Mr. Thompson—Wait a minute. We would like to know whether the records of March 17 have actually been made up in permanent form, in the form that you intend to have them stay, or whether, like many of your records, they are made up subject to alterations later to suit the occasion?

Mr. Bates—I object to that statement. That is absolutely untrue.

Mr. Thompson—It is not untrue, and we can prove it. It is absolutely true.

Mr. Bates—My brother knows that he ought not to make that statement.

The Master—You will have an opportunity to prove it at the proper time.

Mr. Krauthoff—We ask that that be stricken from the stenographer's notes, and that it be left out of the record.

Mr. Thompson—I ask that it stay just where it is, and I want to ascertain now whether that record is in permanent form or not.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is only fair to advise the Court that these proceedings are being published verbatim and circulated throughout the world. Counsel does not have a right to state as the fact a circumstance of that sort.

The Master—The statement amounts only to this, that he says he will prove something.

Mr. Krauthoff—The public, which reads the report of these proceedings, will at least take it as true until it is disproved.

Mr. Thompson—It is a singular thing that when an inquiry like that is made you should talk so much about my statement, and not answer my question. Are your records made up, or are they not, for March 17th?

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I have not conferred with the Clerk of the Church, and I do not know how the Clerk of the Church keeps his records. When the Clerk is produced as a witness that question will be answered satisfactorily.

Mr. Thompson—Ask him now and find out about it. He is right here in court. I don't want those records tampered with.

Mr. Abbott—The records have been made, and they are here in court.

Mr. Thompson—All right. The stenographer will take that down.

The Master—That seems to settle it.

Mr. Thompson—That settles it.

The Master—Shall we pause here? We will continue the hearing, then, until Monday, June 30.

Mr. Whipple—At 10 o'clock.

[Adjourned to 10 o'clock a. m., Monday, June 30, 1919.]

June 30, 1919

FIFTH DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room, Boston, Massachusetts, June 30, 1919, 10 a. m.

The Master—Are you all ready?

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Eustace, will you take the stand?

Herbert W. Eustace, Cross-Examination, Resumed

Mr. Krauthoff—May I proceed, Your Honor?

The Master—Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Krauthoff) Mr. Eustace, in your examination you referred to the works of Mary Baker Eddy, and they are published at the present time by The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. They are.

Q. And what is the accepted version of the Bible upon which the works of Mary Baker Eddy are based—I mean the Bible which is sold by The Christian Science Publishing Society, and which is generally in use in Christian Science churches? A. I don't think I understand your question, Mr. Krauthoff.

Q. I mean, it is the King James Version? A. Oh, yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, we may assume that the Court will take judicial notice of the King James Version of the Bible as an historical and public document, without its being formally offered in evidence?

The Master—I hear no objection.

Mr. Whipple—No objection to that, if Your Honor please. There is no need of marking it as an exhibit.

Mr. Thompson—Only for identification!

Q. I wish you would look at this and see if that is a set of what is known as "The Complete Works of Mary Baker Eddy," as published by The Christian Science Publishing Society under the contract with the Trustees Under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy (passing to the witness eight leather-bound books)? A. I think that that is the complete set.

Mr. Krauthoff—We desire to have these identified as exhibits, if Your Honor please. I will first offer a copy of "Science and Health with—"

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me, I really cannot quite see how these books are all admissible; I cannot see their pertinence to the very clear issue which is submitted to Your Honor. That remark, however, would apply to a great deal of the cross-examination; and perhaps it would be preferable to take these rather than to have a ruling upon them; but they do seem so remote that possibly we might ask for some suggestion as to how they become pertinent to the issue.

The Master—I take it that Mr. Krauthoff only offers them so far as to have them marked now, and he does not intend to go into the contents at the present stage.

Mr. Krauthoff—No, not at the present time, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Whipple—When do you?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, as the occasion may arise.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that is a little vague. Do you want to have them marked as exhibits?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, I would like to have the witness identify them, and I will offer them in evidence so that they may be available, and we may then in cross-examination quote from them. We may, in presenting our arguments to the Court, quote from them, and present statements of Mary Baker Eddy.

Mr. Whipple—I should think that that would be a pretty dangerous way of offering evidence. It seems to present it in no very discriminating way. It seems to savor of the shovel rather than anything else, and I do not quite see how we could argue very intelligently if we have volumes which we have never read, and which are not read to Your Honor, to deal with. If anything in them is said to be pertinent to the issue, I think that it should be pointed out; but to simply offer the Holy Bible, and then offer all the other publications that they happen to want to offer, is rather a wholesale way, and an unusual way, of putting in evidence.

The Master—Will not the best way be to let the books be marked, and then, when any particular use is desired to be made of them, we shall have a much more definite question to decide than we have now?

Mr. Whipple—I quite agree. That means that they are to be marked not as evidence, but marked for identification.

The Master—Marked for identification.

Mr. Whipple—And I understand that neither in argument nor otherwise will any parts be used as evidence in advance of calling our attention to those parts.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is agreeable.

Mr. Whipple—We are content, then.

Mr. Thompson—That applies to the other case also, so far as these documents are concerned.

The Master—Yes; I understand that it applies to all branches of the cases.

Mr. Krauthoff—And then that carries with it—

The Master—How many volumes, Mr. Krauthoff, do you now offer to have marked for identification?

Mr. Krauthoff—I have eight.

Mr. Streeter—Your Honor, should the titles of these appear in the record?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, I will read the titles. The first is the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, published by The Christian Science Publishing Society for the trustees under the will of Mary Baker G. Eddy, with the indorsement on it, authorized literature of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

Mr. Streeter—What is the date on the title page?

Mr. Krauthoff—The last date, General, that appears is the statement, Copyright, 1906—that is the last date; or, Extended 1917. I am not advised as to the precise date on which this was published.

Mr. Streeter—Now, doesn't that title page show the date of publication?

Mr. Krauthoff—It does not, but it must have been quite recently, because The Christian Science Publishing Society did not begin publishing this book until—

Mr. Streeter—I am fully aware of that, and that is why I inquired. Doesn't the date show, Mr. Eustace, on these publications that you took over under the contract of October, 1917, and show when you printed it and published it?

The Witness—It apparently does not on this, General Streeter. Does it on any of those?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, I do not find it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will ask that this be marked as an exhibit.

The Master—Why not mark these 57a, b, c, etc.? Would that not be more convenient?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

[The copy of Science and Health described by Mr. Krauthoff is marked 57 for identification. R. H. J.]

Mr. Krauthoff—The next is a book containing four subjects—"Unity of Good"; "Rudimental Divine Science"; "No and Yes"; "Retrospection and Introspection."

Mr. Streeter—What is the title of the book, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—It has all of those on the cover: "Unity of Good"; "Rudimental Divine Science"; "No and Yes"; "Retrospection and Introspection." My understanding is that originally these were published separately, but they are now published under one cover, and the four titles are retained.

The Master—Is there any date?

Mr. Krauthoff—There is no date.

[The copy of the book "Unity of Good," and other writings, described by Mr. Krauthoff, is marked 57a for identification. R. H. J.]

The Master—Now take the next one.

Mr. Krauthoff—The next is the book entitled "Miscellaneous Writings," 1883-1896, by Mary Baker Eddy, author of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

Mr. Streeter—Any date on that?

Mr. Krauthoff—None except the one that I have given.

[The copy of "Miscellaneous Writings," 1883-1896, described by Mr. Krauthoff, is marked 57b for identification, R. H. J.]

The next is a book bearing the title "Christian Healing"; "The People's Idea of God, Pulpit and Press"; "Christian Science versus Pantheism"; "Message to The Mother Church, 1900"; "Message to The Mother Church, 1901"; "Message to The Mother Church, 1902."

[The book last described by Mr. Krauthoff is marked 57c for identification, R. H. J.]

The next is the book entitled "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany."

[The book last described by Mr. Krauthoff is marked 57d for identification, R. H. J.]

The next are the "Poems" of Mary Baker Eddy, or rather, "Poems" by Mary Baker Eddy.

[The copy of the book last described by Mr. Krauthoff is marked 57e for identification, R. H. J.]

The next is the poem "Christ and Christmas," by Mary Baker Eddy.

[The copy of the book last described by Mr. Krauthoff is marked 57f for identification, R. H. J.]

And the next is the "Manual of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, by Mary Baker Eddy, Eighty-Ninth Edition, Boston, U. S. A., Published by The Christian Science Publishing Society for the Trustees Under the Will of Mary Baker G. Eddy, 1919."

Mr. Streeter—What is the date?

The Master—1919, I understood him to say.

Mr. Krauthoff—The date of publication.

Mr. Streeter—Yes. I meant another question. What is the date of the Manual?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, it is published in 1919.

Mr. Streeter—I understand that; but Mrs. Eddy passed on Dec. 3, 1910.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Streeter—What was the date of the issuance of the eighty-ninth edition?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, some time prior to her passing. I do not know the exact date. And as the Manual was reprinted from time to time I understand they kept the same eighty-ninth edition.

[The copy of Manual of The Mother

Church, described by Mr. Krauthoff, is marked 57g for identification, R. H. J.]

Mr. Streeter—Would there be any objection to Mr. Eustace's stating what the date of issue of the eighty-ninth edition of the Manual was?

Mr. Krauthoff—Not if he knows.

Mr. Streeter—If he knows.

The Witness—I think that what Mr. Krauthoff says is correct, that is, that it is a continuation of the Manual which was in existence in 1910.

Mr. Streeter—Yes, but how long before Mrs. Eddy passed on?

The Witness—I don't know that.

Mr. Krauthoff—In connection with identifying these volumes, if Your Honor please, I would like to have Mr. Eustace identify The Christian Science Hymnal, published by the The Christian Science Publishing Society (passing a volume to the witness).

The Witness—Yes, that is The Christian Science Hymnal.

Mr. Krauthoff—We would like to have that marked as an exhibit.

Mr. Whipple—Well, for identification.

[The copy of the Christian Science Hymnal, described by Mr. Krauthoff, is marked 58 for identification, R. H. J.]

Mr. Krauthoff—And I will ask Mr. Eustace to identify "The Life of Mary Baker Eddy," by Sibel Wilbur, as published by The Christian Science Publishing Society. That is the book (passing a book to the witness)?

The Witness—That is the book.

Mr. Whipple—Is that published by The Christian Science Publishing Society?

Mr. Krauthoff—Published by The Christian Science Publishing Society.

[The copy of "The Life of Mary Baker Eddy," by Sibel Wilbur, described by Mr. Krauthoff, is marked 59 for identification, R. H. J.]

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, in referring to the eight books that I first exhibited to you, which I understand have been identified as exhibits under 57 and 57a to 57g, that set of books is what is known as "The Complete Works of Mary Baker Eddy"? A. They are, yes.

Q. And when you refer in your testimony to "the printed word of Mrs. Eddy," those are the books to which you refer? A. Those are the books to which I refer.

Q. And in passing on the application— A. May I state, however, that when I refer to the printed works, I also take in the Deed of Trust, of course.

Q. Oh, yes, I appreciate that. Speaking of the Deed of Trust as a printed work of Mrs. Eddy, have you any information that it was printed in any form in her lifetime? A. Not that I know of, except apparently—

Q. In the Manual there is a provision that the Bible, together with "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, together with other works by the same author, should be the only textbook of a Christian Science practitioner for self-instruction in the principle of metaphysical healing. A. That is correct.

Q. And these are the works that you understand are referred to in the Manual? A. These are the guides of the Christian Scientist.

Mr. Krauthoff—I mean these eight books that I have shown you. If Your Honor please, I want to read into the records some dates of exhibits that were identified. I would like to have the record show that Exhibit 41, referring to "Memorandum A," was issued in 1913, and Exhibit 42, referring to "Memorandum B," was issued in 1915.

Mr. Thompson—What are these exhibits? What is Exhibit No. 41?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, these are those memorandums that The Christian Science Publishing Society prepared from time to time and sent out for work in literature distribution.

Mr. Thompson—Won't you, when you speak of Exhibit 41, tell us what it is?

Mr. Krauthoff—I will be very glad to.

Mr. Thompson—What is Exhibit 41?

Mr. Krauthoff—Exhibit 41 is "Memorandum A," entitled "Recommendations for Advancement of The Christian Science Monitor, Presentation of Methods," printed by The Christian Science Publishing Society, and it is desired to have the record show that that was issued in the year 1913 and bears that date. Then Exhibit No. 42 is "Memorandum B, Recommendations for Advancement of The Christian Science Monitor," published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, "Presentation of Methods." The record should show that that was issued in 1915.

Mr. Thompson—That is, you are reading the dates that appear on the printed document?

Mr. Krauthoff—I am reading the printed dates that appear on the document itself.

Mr. Streeter—May I ask, does that mean that it was originally issued on the date that appears on the document?

Mr. Krauthoff—I understand it was printed in the year that I am giving.

Mr. Streeter—May I ask another question? Do you mean that was a reprint or is that the year when it was originally published?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is the year in which it was originally published; I don't know whether it has been reprinted or not.

Mr. Thompson—How do we know that, if Your Honor please? How is it pertinent to read into the record what already appears as part of the exhibit? I cannot follow that. If there is any new fact that should be proved, I should prefer to have it proved rather than to have it stated by counsel.

Mr. Krauthoff—The situation is, if Your Honor please, that these documents were identified and were not read into the record in their entirety. Extracts from them were read, and in reading extracts I did not read the date on which they appeared. Now there is the document, Exhibit 41. All I am asking is to show that it on its face purports to have been printed in 1913.

Mr. Whipple—Do I understand you to claim, Mr. Krauthoff, that these were admitted in evidence, or merely identified?

Mr. Krauthoff—I understand these have been offered in evidence in their entirety, and that there were read into the record extracts from them. I wanted to read into the written record the dates. If the offering in evidence of them is deemed as sufficient identification of their dates, why, I have nothing further to say.

Mr. Whipple—If they are exhibits they carry whatever appears on them.

The Master—What they show on their face speaks for itself. It may be convenient, but it may not be very important, to have it specially stated.

Mr. Krauthoff—If their countenance is taken as their passport, I have nothing further to say.

The Master—But it does not follow from that that they were originally promulgated or published on the dates which they bear.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I will inquire further about that.

Mr. Thompson—Nor is there any admission made by counsel for Mr. Dittemore of anything more than that this document, for instance, Exhibit 41, bears on its face the figures "1913," whatever those may mean.

Q. Mr. Eustace, referring to this Exhibit 41, "Memorandum A," a presentation of methods for use in Monitor work, which bears the imprint "1913," can you tell when that was issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. No, I cannot.

The Master—I suppose you mean when it was first issued?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Q. What significance does "1913" have, if any? A. Why, it certainly indicates that it was sent out in 1913.

Q. Now, Exhibit No. 42, "Memorandum B," has "1915" on there. A. That would have the same—the same indication—that it was sent out in 1915.

Q. Exhibit 43, "Memorandum C" has "1916" on it. A. That was sent out, I suppose, in 1916.

Q. Exhibit 44, "Memorandum D" has "1919" on it. A. That would indicate that that was sent out in 1919. When they were prepared I do not know. They were probably prepared quite a little time before that.

Q. Then Exhibit 45, "General Bulletin, Summary of Standing Bulletins Applicable to All Departments," has "April, 1919" on the title page. A. I suppose that is when that was printed, too.

Q. In your examination, Mr. Eustace, your attention was called to the fact that The Christian Science Publishing Society was now being advertised and generally known as the sole publishers of all authorized Christian Science literature, and your explanation, as I recall, was that that title came to you by virtue of the contract that was made with the trustees under the will of Mary Baker Eddy in the fall of 1917. A: The "sole" part of it came there.

Q: Before that time you had advertised the literature you published as authorized Christian Science literature? A: I don't know whether we had or not, but it was because the Manual made it so.

Q: I call your attention to The Christian Science Journal for September, 1917, in the advertisement in the rear of it, page xciii, to the words at the top of the page, "Authorized Christian Science literature." A: Yes.

Q: And that is followed by a number of pamphlets and other documents. How does that become authorized Christian Science literature? A: Because the Christian Science—

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. Isn't that clear upon the document? Can anyone say for a moment, in view of this Deed of Trust, that it is not authorized by Mrs. Eddy herself in the Deed of Trust? She transferred all these publications by the Deed of Trust and no one can interfere with them, not even the directors.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, this advertisement includes literature that was not in existence at the time Mrs. Eddy executed the Deed of Trust.

Mr. Whipple—That is all right. When it came into existence it came into existence as a result of the work of the trustees of the society.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I shall be very glad to have Mr. Whipple become a witness if he desires.

Mr. Whipple—I do not need to; you do not need witnesses to declare the obvious.

The Master—Anything further?

Mr. Bates—May I suggest to Your Honor that the witness himself said it became authorized by reason of the Manual?

The Witness—Mr. Bates—

Mr. Bates—And his counsel should not be allowed to correct him.

The Master—Mr. Witness, just a moment. I want to hear counsel through on that. Anything further?

Mr. Krauthoff—I have a question pending as to how this became authorized Christian Science literature and I submit we are entitled to have Mr. Eustace tell us.

The Master—I did not quite hear the first part of what you said.

Mr. Krauthoff—I said we had a question pending as to how this literature which they advertised became authorized Christian Science literature and I submit we are entitled to have Mr. Eustace's answer as to that.

The Master—It does not seem to the master that that is a question to be settled by the opinion of the witness. We will get the facts and then it will be a matter for argument, and for decision, perhaps, if it is material. I shall therefore exclude the question.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, may I—

The Master—I have excluded it, Mr. Krauthoff, and I think I gave you a chance to say everything that was desired before I ruled.

Q: In the conference of Feb. 10, 1919, that you had with the Board of Directors do you recall Mr. Rathvon presenting a memorandum that he read to the conference? A: What date was that?

Q: Feb. 10, 1919. A: Yes.

Q: The second conference that you had. A: That was the second letter Mr. Rathvon read, I think.

Q: Yes. A: I don't just recall at this moment.

Q: I will ask you if this is what he read? (Handing paper to witness.)

A: I think that that is it, but we had the original probably, if it was handed to us.

Mr. Krauthoff—Will you be good enough to look or to have Mr. Watts look, Mr. Whipple, and see if you have the original there?

Mr. Whipple—Yes; he is looking.

Q: In your testimony heretofore, Mr. Eustace, your attention has been called to the provision in the Manual with respect to members of The Mother Church subscribing to the periodicals of the denomination, and your attention was directed to the question to what extent The Christian Science Publishing Society had applied that section of the Manual in its dealings with practitioners who were publishing cards in the Journal. I will ask you if that is a bill sent out by The Christian Science Publishing Society? (Handing paper to witness.)

A: I think it is, yes.

Mr. Whipple—When?

The Witness—May 2, 1919.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I have it identified as an exhibit?

Mr. Whipple—Do you offer it as an exhibit?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Whipple—How is it material? I cannot see, if Your Honor please, that this is material. It is a bill rendered and paid since this suit was instituted.

Mr. Streeter—May I see it?

Mr. Whipple—It seems to me to have no materiality.

Mr. Krauthoff—This document, if the Court please—

The Master—Let Mr. Streeter look at it.

Mr. Thompson—It is immaterial to us, as far as we are concerned.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, this document is material because the issue is tendered in the bill that the Publishing Society is under a management separate and distinct from that of The Mother Church, and that the Publishing Society is one of two separate and distinct branches of activity constituted by Mary Baker Eddy. Now, here is a bill issued by the Publishing Society claiming to be a separate and distinct activity, claiming to be immune from any provision of the Manual that binds them, and at the same time requiring other people to comply with it.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, the claim has never been made that these trustees, or any one of them, are "immune,"—as I believe you call it—from the Manual, and such a statement is absolutely without foundation, because the witness has testified to the contrary. His position has been stated repeatedly and clearly, and it is not as stated by counsel.

The Master—You might let me look at the document. Will you state again just upon what particular issue you claim that is material?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is material, if Your Honor please, upon the issue whether this Mother Church and this Publishing Society are one organization or whether they are two. That is what the lawsuit is about, and there is a distinct statement by the trustees.

The Master—How does this tend to show anything about it one way or the other?

Mr. Krauthoff—It shows that the trustees, who now claim to be a separate and distinct organization, are availing themselves of the benefit of the Manual when it comes to getting subscriptions to the periodicals which they say they are publishing.

The Master—You refer to the clause in fine print at the bottom of the bill?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—I suppose you gentlemen have both seen that?

Mr. Thompson—Yes.

Mr. Streeter—I would like to look at that again. I didn't read that.

Mr. Thompson—I saw that.

The Master—I have seen all I want to, and Mr. Whipple has seen all he wants to. You know the clause to which I call attention?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, yes, but I do not see that it is pertinent to the question. What we have said, and all that we say in the suit, is this—

The Master—I do not think we need to have it stated again, do you?

Mr. Whipple—I think not, Your Honor.

The Master—That clause being brought to my attention, I think I shall admit it for what it may be worth. It does not strike me as important.

[A bill from The Christian Science Publishing Society to Miss Estelle V. Simon for 50 cents, dated May 2, 1919, and stamped, "Received payment May 8, 1919. The Christian Science Publishing Society," is marked Exhibit 60.]

Mr. Krauthoff—This is a bill rendered by The Christian Science Publishing Society under date of Boston, Massachusetts, May 2, 1919—

The Master—One moment, Mr. Krauthoff. I think you have stated that before. Why repeat it?

Mr. Krauthoff—I didn't know that I had stated the details.

The Master—Can't you lend us your assistance so that the record may contain fewer words rather than more?

Mr. Krauthoff—I should be very glad to do so.

Q. This is a bill which contains the following statement. It is issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society under date of May 2, 1919:

"Each practitioner publishing a card in the Journal should be a subscriber to all the Christian Science periodicals in accordance with Article VIII, Section 14, of The Mother Church Manual."

How long prior to May 2, 1919, had that indorsement appeared on the bills sent out by The Christian Science Publishing Society?

A. I don't know, Mr. Krauthoff. I would have to look it up to see.

Q. I call your attention to one that you sent out on June 18, 1919, on which that does not appear. A. I don't know.

Q. You mean you don't know anything about this form— A. I don't know about that form of bill or the other. That is a detail of the publishing house.

Q. You mean that is a detail of the publishing house in whose charge? A. It is under the business manager.

Q. Do I understand in the system under which the Publishing Society is managed, that the manager of the Publishing Society, on his own responsibility, without consultation with the trustees, would strike a section of the Manual off of the bills that you are sending out? A. I really don't know that was done, or anything about it.

Q. Well, isn't this a fact, Mr. Eustace, that your attention was called to the fact that every time the Publishing Society mentioned the Manual it had something to do with the lawsuit and you took it off your bills accordingly? A. No. It had nothing whatever to do with it, and it was never mentioned in any way.

Q. You don't know how it came off? A. I do not.

Mr. Krauthoff—I would like to have that identified.

[A bill of The Christian Science Publishing Society to Miss Estelle V. Simon, for 50 cents, dated June 18, 1919, is marked Exhibit 61 for identification.]

Q. I wish you would look at that and see if that is a form of application that you had in use in the Publishing Society at one time. A. Why, I suppose it is. It is our printing.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I have that identified?

Mr. Whipple—If you don't offer it as an exhibit I don't care to look at it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am going to call Mr. Eustace's attention to some language in it.

Mr. Whipple—Then I understand it is offered as an exhibit?

Mr. Krauthoff—I offer the whole document but I don't care to have the stenographer transcribe it at length.

Mr. Whipple—I don't think it can go in as an exhibit until His Honor has passed on it, or some of us have seen it. It is your privilege to have anything identified that you want to.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am having it now identified and I will show it to you in a minute.

["Application for card in the list of practitioners in The Christian Science Journal," marked "Sample," is marked 62 for identification.]

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, I can't see any connection, even remote, with any issue in the case of this sample application for cards in the list of practitioners. It may be that there is some claim that the trustees did not conduct this business properly and that the directors were not satisfied with the way they were conducting it. Is that it?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, if Your Honor please. This blank is offered for this reason: On Mr. Eustace's previous testimony he said the Publishing Society did not require advertisers in the Journal to subscribe to all the periodicals. At that time we had a blank which had no reference to any requirements. We now have a blank in which that statement is distinctly made, and we are offering that statement to show that this Publishing Society required advertisers in the list of practitioners to subscribe to all the periodicals, and gave as the reason of their action the Manual of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—What difference does that make, if they do? I can't see, if Your Honor please. If it is for the purpose of contradiction of Mr. Eustace, it is a contradiction on an utterly immaterial point.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, it goes to a very vital issue of this case.

Mr. Whipple—What is it, pray?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, the issue is this, if Your Honor please—

The Master—Confine yourself to the admissibility of this evidence. We don't want to have the issues in the case stated too many times. I think we all must be familiar with them now.

Mr. Krauthoff—With all deference to everybody who has attempted to state them, they never have been really stated, and I find myself embarrassed when I offer this, because Mr. Whipple's theory of this case is quite—

The Master—If you offer that in contradiction of the testimony given by the witness heretofore I think I shall admit it.

[The sample copy of "Application for card in the list of practitioners in The Christian Science Journal," previously marked "62" for identification is marked Exhibit 62.]

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Eustace, to this language in Exhibit No. 62:

"All public practitioners having cards in the Journal are required to take in their own name the above-mentioned periodicals. See Church Manual, Art. VIII, Sec. 14."

And in this application "the above-mentioned periodicals" are The Christian Science Journal, the Christian Science Sentinel, Der Herold der Christian Science, and The Christian Science Monitor. Was that application blank in use and was that requirement made? A. I don't know at what period this was, but at one time this application was evidently in use and may have been in use for some time, because it was recognized, as I stated, I think, in my testimony, that the taking of the periodicals was a very good indication that the one asking for an advertisement was an active, earnest Christian Scientist.

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me, Mr. Eustace—the real question is whether the Board of Trustees as now constituted ever authorized or used that sample or whether it is some ancient thing that they have gotten from some other trustees.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg your pardon, Mr. Whipple. If Your Honor please, the question is not limited to the board as now constituted. It includes the board when Mr. Eustace was a member of it.

The Master—I think the question has been answered. You asked him if that application was in use by the board. He said it was.

The Witness—No.

Mr. Whipple—That it was not in use?

The Master—I understood the witness to answer that it evidently was at some time. Now the question is answered, I think.

Mr. Krauthoff—Here is a document I have submitted to Mr. Eustace, and I will submit it to Mr. Whipple. It is evidence along the same line.

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, this is a circular letter signed by David B. Ogden, manager. He evidently was not a trustee at the time. There is no date attached to it whatever, and if it is to prove something I think Your Honor would want to know what it is to prove—whether it was issued by the Board of Trustees when any one of these gentlemen were members or not. Shall I hand it to Your Honor?

Mr. Thompson—Let us see if it proves anything against us.

Mr. Krauthoff—That was the first question I was going to put to Mr. Eustace.

Mr. Whipple—Why not put your question before you offer the paper, and qualify the paper before you offer it?

The Master—One moment, gentlemen. Will all the counsel in the room look at the document now offered, and then I should like to see it myself.

[The paper is handed to counsel, and then to the Master.]

The Master—Now you desire to ask him if that was authorized by the board?

Mr. Krauthoff—By the Board of Trustees at any time that he was a member of it.

The Master—I think he may answer.

Mr. Whipple—That I don't object to, but you see he was offering this paper without any such question. Offer it and get it in and then find out whether it was ever authorized.

[The paper is handed to the witness.]

The Witness—Yes, I think this was shortly after I came here—came to Boston. I suppose it is correct.

Mr. Streeter—May I ask Your Honor—does such a document as that go into the record and is it to be printed so that we can see it, or is it not to be printed?

The Master—What do counsel desire about it?

Mr. Krauthoff—I prefer to have it printed in full in the record.

Mr. Streeter—We have no objection.

The Master—I understand the witness to answer that that was authorized by the Board of Trustees shortly after he came here. Did I get his answer correctly?

The Witness—I think that is correct; yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—I understood him to say it was used shortly after he came.

The Master—Yes, but the question put to him was whether it was authorized. He answered that it was used. I don't know whether that means that it was authorized.

The Witness—I mean that it was used. I take it that it was authorized. I would have to look up the record to see just what we did do in regard to it.

The Master—If it was used by the board it must be assumed to have been authorized.

Mr. Whipple—I take it so. But it would appear that it had been authorized by a former board and that no authority had been revoked.

The Master—That is another thing.

Mr. Whipple—I take it it does not make any difference, but I take it the board as now constituted, a majority of them have been elected since its use.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I have it numbered?

[Circular letter on letterhead of The Christian Science Publishing Society, signed David B. Ogden, Manager, and addressed "Dear Friend," is marked Exhibit 63. See copy below.]

Mr. Krauthoff—We offer it in evidence:

"The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,
"Boston, Massachusetts—"

The Master—Will it be necessary to take the time to read it in full? Do counsel desire to have it read?

Mr. Krauthoff—I have no desire to read it.

Mr. Streeter—We don't care for it.

Mr. Whipple—We will waive the reading of it, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Krauthoff—And the stenographers will copy it in full. I believe General Streeter desires that.

Mr. Streeter—I did not say so. I asked what you were going to do with it. If you are going to use it we desire to see what you are using.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, it is our desire to have it copied in full.

[Copy of Exhibit 63.]

"The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,
Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friend:

"Inclosed you will find two application blanks, one of which (yellow) contains questions which applicants are required to answer when desiring cards in The Christian Science Journal. The sample blank is sent you at the request of the trustees of this society for your information and careful perusal, because it is felt that it will be of great interest to you and that on becoming familiar with the present requirements for a practitioner's card, you will desire to place yourself in all respects on an equal footing with new applicants. The other blank (blue) please fill out and return to the Publishing Society to be placed on file in connection with the record of your card in The Christian Science Journal.

"You will notice the requirements relative to subscribing for the four periodicals of this movement, and in connection therewith, your special attention is called to Art. VIII, Sec. 14, of the Church Manual by Mary Baker Eddy, the first part of which reads, 'It shall be the privilege and duty of every member, who can afford it, to subscribe for the periodicals which are the organs of this Church.' Your attention is also called to Mrs. Eddy's definition of what constitutes 'the periodicals' as given by her in the first issue of The Christian Science Monitor, Nov. 5, 1903, as follows: 'I have given the name to all the Christian Science periodicals. The first was The Christian Science Journal, designed to put on record the divine Science of Truth; the second I entitled Sentinel, intended to hold guard over Truth, Life, and Love; the third, Der Herold der Christian Science to proclaim the universal activity and availability of Truth; the next I named Monitor to spread undivided the Science that operates unspent.'

"Every member of The Mother Church, and especially every public practitioner of Christian Science, earnestly desires to be obedient to the Church Manual and, in view of this fact and of the by-law mentioned, The Christian Science Publishing Society feels that one requirement for a practitioner's card in The Christian Science Journal must be that he is a subscriber to all the periodicals. This requirement should not work a hardship on anyone, as he who is ready and able to undertake public practice with his card in The Christian Science Journal can certainly 'afford' to take all the periodicals; and this splendid supply of authorized literature arriving regularly gives the practitioner, and indeed every Christian Scientist, just the missionary material he needs for reaching and helping mankind and directing inquiry to the Christian Science textbook for information and guidance.

"If you are not already subscribing in your own name for the four periodicals, it is believed that you will conform willingly to this requirement as soon as possible; and if there are other points in the application blank which you are not conforming to, that you will also be glad to adjust your practice to them. The Publishing Society feels confident that every practitioner will comprehend, appreciate, and welcome the necessity of fulfilling all the requirements of this new blank, and to this end this letter is being sent to every practitioner whose card is in The Christian Science Journal.

"The public practice of Christian Science is one of the most sacred offices in our movement and it is essential that this public activity be safeguarded with the utmost consecration, earnestness, and unselfishness.

"With kindest wishes,

"Yours sincerely,
"The Christian Science Publishing Society, by David B. Ogden, Manager.

"DBO-BL

"P. S. Referring again to the blank forms: The sample blank printed on yellow paper may be retained by you for future reference. The 'Blank for Card Department' printed on blue paper please fill out and return at your early convenience in the accompanying stamped envelope."

Q. Mr. Eustace, in the conduct of the business of the trustees within the last year and a half, to what extent have you borrowed money from local banks? A. From local banks, you say?

Q. Or from any source? A. To the extent, I think, of about $200,000.

Q. From whom was that money borrowed? A. From the First National Bank of Boston.

Q. Upon the note of the Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. On the note of the Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. What was the reason for the borrowing of the money? A. To make a complete payment to the Treasurer of The Mother Church.

Q. I don't quite understand, Mr. Eustace. Under the plan that the trustees operate, the six-months period mentioned in the Deed of Trust ends on Sept. 30 and March 31 of each year. A. It does.

Q. And under the Deed of Trust you turn over to the treasurer of The Mother Church the net profits? A. We do.

Q. And those profits should be represented, should they not, by cash on hand? A. They should.

Q. Why did it become necessary to borrow money? A. Because we had turned over to The Mother Church prior to that time funds that we really should not have turned over. We were carrying our plant as cash assets, which we later discovered is not really a correct way of doing it.

Q. You mean you were carrying physical property as cash on hand? A. As a cash asset; yes, sir; in substance, that is.

Q. And when you came to turn the money over you had to borrow the money in order to make up— A. In order to make the payments.

Q. How much money did you borrow at any time for the purpose of putting in a safe deposit vault? A. Putting in a what?

Q. Putting in a safe deposit vault. The Master—Assuming that he did borrow money for the purpose that you state.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will put it in another way.

Q. Did you at any time put any of the funds of The Christian Science Publishing Society in a safe deposit box, any of the currency? A. Why, yes, we did.

Q. How much did you put in? A. I don't know. I would have to look it up.

Q. Was it in the neighborhood of $140,000? A. I don't know. I haven't the slightest idea.

Q. Why did you do it? A. Are you referring to the time of the suit, when we filed the suit?

Q. Why did you take the money of the Publishing Society and put it in a safe deposit box? A. In the first place, we had a perfect right to keep the money of the Society in a safe deposit box if we wanted to.

Q. I am not asking you as to the right of it. I am asking when you did it and why did you do it? A. I don't know as there was any other time except the one time. There may have been other times, too. But the time you are referring to, I suppose, is the time when the suit was filed, and we felt we ought to have cash on hand in case there was any attempt to tie up the business of the Publishing Society by the directors of The Mother Church.

Q. Now, how did you get this money that you put in the safe deposit box? A. Why, we drew it out of the bank.

Q. Out of the bank. Out of which bank? A. Why, I don't know. I suppose out of the First National. We have several banks.

Q. You have in mind the provision in the Deed of Trust which says that: "Said trustees shall deposit in a responsible and reliable bank or trust company all surplus funds over and above the sum necessary to defray the running expenses of the business until the same shall be paid over to the Church Treasurer." A. Yes.

Q. And you construe the word "deposit"—to put in a safe deposit vault? A. Certainly, if we want to.

Q. Not to put on deposit to your credit on the books of the concern? A. Either way.

Q. Did you have the advice of counsel on that? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Is it not true, Mr. Eustace, that you took from the funds of current business of the Publishing Society, currency at times aggregating in the total $140,000, and placed that in a safe deposit box? A. I can't say about the amount. I didn't know it was that amount.

Q. Who did it? A. The business manager did it.

Q. Mr. Watts? A. Mr. John Watts.

Q. Under your direction? A. Under our direction.

Q. Did you make any record of it in your proceedings? A. I don't know. I would have to go back over the record to see.

Q. At the time that this money was in the safe deposit box were you paying interest at a bank on any obligations? A. I would also have to look that up.

Q. You would have to look that up? A. Yes.

Q. And of course you are familiar with the fact that money on deposit in a trust company in Boston draws interest on daily balances? A. I am.

Q. And some of the funds of the Publishing Society are so deposited? A. Well, they are all on daily balances.

Q. Drawing interest on daily balances? A. Our funds draw interest on daily balances, yes.

Q. So that the details of this currency transaction are not within your definite knowledge? A. Not at the present time.

The Master—I understand they were all subsequent to bringing this suit?

Mr. Krauthoff—No. He said about the time of bringing this suit.

The Witness—It is all since this claim has been on.

Mr. Krauthoff—He said it was since the difficulty with the directors was on, but he hasn't said it was subsequent to the bringing of the suit itself.

The Witness—I would have to look that up.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, the witness has stated in substance that it was in anticipation of complications which might arise by the intent of this Board of Directors to remove the trustees, and it was wholly under the Deed of Trust providing a sum necessary to defray the running expenses of the business, because it was expected that the running of the business would be embarrassed by this dictatorial attitude of the directors.

The Master—Perhaps we hardly need to go into that now. I wanted to be sure I understood what he meant to say. Proceed.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have not assumed, if Your Honor please, from Mr. Whipple's statement, that he has any personal knowledge about this currency transaction.

The Master—We don't any of us assume that.

Q. I wanted to call your attention, Mr. Eustace, to another provision in the Deed of Trust:

"No authority is intended to be conferred upon the trustees to incur liabilities beyond their ability to liquidate promptly from the current income of the business."

Q. Now, when it came to the point that you were required to borrow money to make the payment to The Mother Church, did you explain to the directors that you were in the necessity of borrowing money because you had theretofore turned over more than you should have turned over? A. We did not.

Q. You did go and borrow the money? A. We did.

Q. And paid the interest on it? A. Paid the interest.

Q. Has that debt been fully liquidated? A. That debt has been fully liquidated.

Q. Out of what? A. Out of the current income of the last six months.

Q. Of the six months ending— A. March the 31st.

Q. 1919? A. 1919.

Q. Now, what were the net profits of the business for the six months ending March 31, 1919? A. I would have to look at our figures to see the exact figures.

Q. Was it approximately $243,000? A. $231,000, I think it was, wasn't it?

Q. Approximately $231,000? A. I think so.

Q. Of that how much have you paid to The Mother Church? A. I think we have paid $100,000.

Q. When is the rest going to be paid? A. It will be paid as rapidly as we can see our way to doing it safely.

Q. I don't understand again, Mr. Eustace. Did you not have on hand on March 31, 1919, these net profits in cash? A. No, we did not.

Q. How could there be net profits unless you had them on hand in cash? A. Well, I explained to you, Mr. Krauthoff, that what we had been doing in the past was carrying our plant and other accounts—which you would have to go over our balance sheet in order to see it—we have been carrying them as virtually cash. Consequently since they were not cash but were simply an asset we could not turn over the cash because we didn't have it on hand.

Q. And so the question as to when you will pay over the net profits for the six months ending March 31, 1919, cannot be determined until you make some money in the next six months with which to pay them? A. Yes. And our purpose is from now on to get our business in such shape that we do not carry our plant as an asset at all, and then we shall have the cash on hand to turn over.

Q. In your testimony this morning you spoke of this Deed of Trust, as one of Mrs. Eddy's printed works and explained that it was not printed, so far as you know, in her lifetime. You caused it to be printed some time last fall, did you not? A. We had a plate made of it.

Q. You printed about 500 copies of it and distributed them? A. No. We printed 500. We didn't distribute them.

Q. You distributed a number of them? A. Distributed a few dozen.

Q. You personally? A. Did I personally? No. I distributed—

Q. You handed copies of it to some people? A. Oh, yes, some of my friends. I always gave copies at any time. If they were not printed they were typewritten.

Q. Then you caused it to be filed at the office of the State Capitol? A. We did.

Q. Why? A. Because we thought it was an important document, that it was an outrage that it had not been filed immediately after December the 3rd, 1910.

Q. Then you also caused it to be filed in the office of the city clerk of Boston— A. We did as—

Q. —for the same reason? A. As a second precaution for its safety.

Q. In distributing the Deed of Trust to people, did you state to them your contentions with respect to your relations as trustees to the directors, and ask their judgment about it? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Not that you know of? A. Not that I know of, unless we discussed it. We probably talked the thing over.

Q. Did you explain to anybody that under the provisions of this Deed of Trust, as you construed them, the trustees were not required to be members of The Mother Church? A. That is self-evident, of course. I should never hesitate not to state it. I don't know that I did state it. I quite possibly did explain it. I shouldn't hesitate to.

Q. You do not hesitate to say now that under the Deed of Trust they are not required to be members of The Mother Church? A. That is self-evident. It doesn't say so. They must be loyal Christian Scientists.

Q. And as you understand it they may be such without being members of The Mother Church? A. I can conceive that they might be.

Q. But you are a member of The Mother Church? A. Yes.

Q. And were when you were named as trustee—and are still? A. Yes, I am, and was.

Mr. Whipple — Aren't there hundreds of thousands of loyal Christian Scientists who are not members of The Mother Church? All these branch churches—aren't they loyal Christian Scientists?

Mr. Krauthoff—Our understanding about that is this, if Your Honor please—

The Master—Wouldn't it be better to leave it until after you get through your cross-examination?

Mr. Krauthoff—I would be very glad to.

Q. At the time that Mr. Dixon was named as editor of The Christian Science Monitor were you made acquainted with the correspondence had with Mr. Dixon in which he stated that he wanted his relations with the trustees and directors made entirely clear in order that there might be no misunderstanding about it? A. I was.

Q. And you were advised of the letter that he wrote to the directors in which he said that he would always regard the directors as the court of last resort? A. I don't know that that was said.

Q. Was that the understanding when Mr. Dixon was made editor of the Monitor? A. Never that I know of.

Q. You never heard about it? A. Not that I am aware of. I would have to see the letter again. I think I saw the letter. I am not sure that I saw the letter, but I remember the conferences that we had.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will show you the original letter. In the conferences that you had with Mr. Dixon at the time that he was made editor of the Monitor was it not stated then by Mr. Dixon that the directors were to be the court of last resort? A. Certainly not. I never heard such a statement.

Q. I am reminded that the exact language was that the directors were to be the ultimate court? A. Not that I know of.

Q. You had no such understanding with Mr. Dixon? A. Why, never.

Q. At the time that you claim that you employed him? A. Never. I never heard such a claim.

Q. In the Bill in Equity, so-called, on the cover the exact term being—the Bill of Complaint in this case—one of the things that you ask is to enjoin the Board of Directors from creating and maintaining a publishing society. How do you arrive, Mr. Eustace, at the claim that you are authorized to conduct The Christian Science Publishing Society separate and distinct from The Mother Church and without any control over the Publishing Society by The Mother Church, to publish the official organs of The Mother Church, to sell your literature in the reading rooms of The Mother Church, and at the same time to say to The Mother Church that it cannot start a publishing society of its own?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment about that. That seems to be quite a lengthy argument, and while I don't approve it, it does not seem to be a question. It is a lot of successions of—

Mr. Krauthoff—I will state it more shortly.

Q. On what basis do you make your claim that you are entitled to enjoin The Mother Church from creating and maintaining a publishing society of its own?

Mr. Whipple—May I suggest, if Your Honor please, that we refer the distinguished counsel to the bill which the Court read and on the basis of which the Court granted an injunction. The witness is not to be asked a question like that.

The Master—It does not seem to me that that is a proper question.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, if Your Honor please—

The Master—I don't know on what ground—how he argues it out. I don't think we want to stop for that at the present time.

Mr. Krauthoff—We are met here with a bill which asks for relief to the extent of enjoining us from erecting a publishing society. Now we are entitled to know from the plaintiff in this case upon what facts he bases any such claims for relief.

Mr. Whipple—The facts stated in the bill.

The Master—Must it not be upon the facts stated in the bill? Could it possibly be upon anything else?

Mr. Krauthoff—Then upon what facts stated in the bill does he make this claim?

The Master—No, I don't think he is required to state that now. There is the bill.

Q. Mr. Eustace, in your previous testimony your attention was called to a request, or whatever it may be called—a direction—from the Board of Directors with respect to an announcement to be placed in the Christian Science Sentinel with respect to the election of Mrs. Hoag as an editor by the Board of Directors. That notice was not published, as I understand it? A. It was not.

Q. I call your attention to the Christian Science Sentinel of May 10, 1919, and to the subject "Editorial Announcement" (passing to the witness a copy of the Christian Science Sentinel referred to). A. Yes.

Q. And that is the notice that you did publish? A. That is the notice we published.

Mr. Krauthoff—We offer that notice in evidence.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. That all happened after the bill was filed; and the action with regard to it on the part of the directors we claim was in contempt of the order of this Court.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, if Your Honor please, we are entitled to show the conduct of the plaintiffs in this case up to the present moment in their refusal to recognize the right of the directors of The Mother Church to put a notice in the official periodicals of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—It depends on the notice.

Mr. Krauthoff—It does not depend upon a notice. When the directors of The Mother Church send a notice to be published in the official organ of The Mother Church, it becomes a notice without any further discussion.

The Master—I understand that the application and the refusal were both subsequent to the bringing of the suit?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I understand that the letter was mailed after the suit was brought. I am right about that, am I not? But we claim that we have the right in this case to show the continued action of these trustees in refusing to recognize the right of the directors of The Mother Church to put notices in the official organs of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—We do not think so, if Your Honor please. This very thing they were enjoined from doing. They were enjoined from electing an editor; they were enjoined from interfering with the administration of its business by the publication society trustees; and what they undertook to do was to ask us to publish in one of our journals a notice of a thing which they had done in contempt of court. That is what they asked us to do. It was all after the bill had been filed and the injunction had been issued, although one would think at times that even the distinguished counsel for the defendants did not know that an injunction had been issued—not until recently!

Mr. Krauthoff—It is proper, if Your Honor please, in that connection to correct Mr. Whipple's statement. Mrs. Knott tendered her resignation to the Board of Directors before the institution of this suit. Before the institution of this suit Mrs. Hoag was elected an editor of the Christian Science periodicals by the Board of Directors under the Church Manual. After the beginning of the suit the directors sent to the trustees a notice of the election of Mrs. Hoag. The trustees did not print the notice that the directors sent. We now offer the notice which the trustees themselves printed, being an act of the plaintiffs in derogation of the authority of The Mother Church to control its own periodicals.

The Master—You offer to show it as an act by the plaintiffs subsequent to the bringing of this suit and the issue of the preliminary injunction?

Mr. Krauthoff—As a continuation of the claim that they make of separate control and a refusal to recognize the control of the directors under the Church Manual.

The Master—Is it objected to?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—I think that I ought to exclude it.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, may I inquire if we may note an exception at this time to Your Honor's refusal? Is that the proper practice, or are all of your exclusions excepted to without a formal exception?

The Master—I had supposed that all my rulings are subject to exception hereafter.

Mr. Whipple—I did not suppose that that was the practice. I had supposed that either counsel dissatisfied with any ruling of Your Honor should note it at the time and then—

The Master—Well, then, why not note your exception now, Mr. Krauthoff, and then you will be safe in any event?

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well. I will ask you to note my exception.

Mr. Thompson—We feel, if Your Honor please, that that rule which you have just announced should be observed, that if counsel desire to make any objection or take any exception, or raise any law point, they should do it at the time, and that we should not be confronted later with a vast mass of objections which are then brought forward for the first time.

The Master—There ought to be due notice in some form, of course.

Mr. Thompson—That is the customary form.

Mr. Streeter—I may say that that is the practice up in the country, that the exception has to be noted at the time that the ruling is made.

Q. Mr. Eustace, you stated that the manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society and the editors of the periodicals of The Christian Science Publishing Society have been employed by the trustees since you were a trustee? A. They have.

Q. I call your attention to a notice in the Christian Science Sentinel of Aug. 4, 1917, being the first five paragraphs of the notice (passing to the witness a copy of the Christian Science Sentinel of Aug. 4, 1917). A. Yes.

Mr. Krauthoff—We offer in evidence the first five paragraphs (passing to Mr. Whipple the copy of Sentinel referred to).

Mr. Whipple—Where is it?

Mr. Krauthoff—These first five paragraphs here (pointing).

Mr. Whipple—Well, I cannot see very much probative value of anything that is not already in, but if you think that they are desirable I have no objection to their going in. Don't you think that you had better cut the paragraphs off to prevent this whole paper being put into the record?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is the reason why I am offering only the first five paragraphs.

Mr. Whipple—All right. You might take a scissors or something and cut them out rather than to have the paper marked as an exhibit.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is easier to read them into the record.

Mr. Whipple—All right. That is satisfactory.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, this is a notice in the Christian Science Sentinel of Aug. 4, 1917, under the heading "Editorial

"Notice"

"By unanimous action the following changes in the personnel of the offices of The Mother Church and of The Christian Science Publishing Society are announced:

"Edward A. Merritt, C. S. B., has been elected a member of The Christian Science Board of Directors.

"William P. McKenzie, C. S. B., has been elected Editor of The Christian Science Journal, Christian Science Sentinel, and Der Herold der Christian Science.

"John R. Watts, C. S., has been elected Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society to succeed Mr. Ogden.

"David B. Ogden, C. S. B., and Lamont Rowlands, C. S., have been elected Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society to succeed Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Merritt, respectively."

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, I call your attention to the Christian Science Sentinel for—it is the Eighteenth Volume of the Christian Science Sentinel, at page 831—

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Krauthoff, may I call the attention of the stenographers to the fact that the word "elected" in what has just been read was not underscored in the text from which it was read? They might make a mistake from your emphasis on that word.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I will be very glad to call attention to any italics that I may want in the record at any time.

Mr. Whipple—Well, you did then; you italicized it vocally.

Mr. Krauthoff—I see:

Mr. Whipple—And I did not want the mistake to go into the record.

Mr. Krauthoff—I call your attention to the article headed "Mr. McCrackan Elected an Associate Editor" (passing to the witness a copy of the Sentinel, who, after perusing it, returns it to Mr. Krauthoff). We offer that announcement in evidence as a part of Mr. Eustace's cross-examination.

Mr. Whipple—You need not trouble to show it to me. You may read it.

Mr. Krauthoff—"Mr. McCrackan Elected an Associate Editor. Announcement is made of the election of William D. McCrackan, C. S. B., of New York City, as an Associate Editor of the Journal, Sentinel, and Herold, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Mr. Willis."

I also call your attention on the same page to the announcement, "A letter from Mr. Willis." That is Mr. John B. Willis, who up to that time had acted as an associate editor of the Christian Science periodicals. It is headed, "A letter from Mr. Willis."

"In announcing—"

Mr. Whipple—I cannot see how Mr. Willis' letter is very important. I have not objected to the putting in of whatever was authorized by the Board of Trustees, but Mr. Willis' letter or his views or construction of this situation or the relations of the parties cannot be very important, can they?

Mr. Krauthoff—Mr. Whipple overlooks, if Your Honor please, that this notice was put in the Christian Science Sentinel, which Mr. Eustace says was being published on Mr. Eustace's sole responsibility.

Mr. Whipple—Well, if we publish a letter of somebody else it does not signify that we wrote the letter.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am not offering the letter alone; I am offering the statement which precedes it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, let me see it. You did not call my attention to that. You said that you wanted me to read the letter.

Mr. Krauthoff—The first four lines are what I want to call attention to first.

Mr. Whipple—I see nothing harmful in those first four lines. They seem a grateful expression of appreciation of Mr. Willis' services.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, the point about the first four lines, if Your Honor please, is that it is The Christian Science Board of Directors that is announcing the retirement of Mr. Willis.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, you mean that the directors wished to—oh, they did a lot of superserviceable things.

Mr. Krauthoff—Which you published in your periodicals.

Mr. Whipple—Certainly, certainly, a great many of them.

The Master—It all comes to this, that the publishing trustees published in their periodical an announcement by the directors regarding the editorship of a Christian Science publication. Do I state it correctly?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—No one disputes that they did so?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no, Your Honor.

The Master—Why is it necessary to encumber the case with all that printed matter?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, if Your Honor please, the statement that you make, and ask if anyone disputes that they did so, is not accurate. The bill of complaint in this case embodies the issue that—

The Master—I asked if counsel disputed it, and I understood that no one disputed it.

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, you mean that that statement of the Master will be the evidence of the fact?

The Master—No. The witness' evidence, as I gather, is to the effect that I have just stated myself, and it is not disputed.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is, that The Christian Science Board of Directors announced the retirement of Mr. Willis as an editor?

The Master—And the trustees published it in a Christian Science publication.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—Is that not the whole story?

Mr. Krauthoff—That is all of it, if Your Honor please, and that is all that I wanted to offer.

The Master—Can't it stop there?

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, have you any explanation to make of why these were always announced as elections, and not as employments by The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. None at all.

Q. Wasn't it that the field took these editors as editors elected under the Manual? A. I have already stated in my testimony that there was nothing inconsistent with our employing some one that was satisfactory to us that was also satisfactory to the Board of Directors.

Q. Have you any further explanation to make of these announcements? A. I have no explanation whatever to make of them.

Q. In the correspondence about Mrs. Hoag's being employed by you, you stated that The Christian Science Publishing Society had accepted Mrs. Knott's resignation as an editor. Did Mrs. Knott resign in writing to The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Where do you see that statement?

Q. Well, I won't take the time now to hunt it up. A. Well, will you state it again, so that I can get it exactly?

Q. In a letter written by The Christian Science Publishing Society to the Board of Directors, the Publishing Society told the Board of Directors that the Publishing Society had accepted Mrs. Knott's resignation? A. Yes.

Q. How did Mrs. Knott resign to the Publishing Society? A. Mrs. Knott had a conference with the trustees, and in that conference I understood her to say that she did not intend any disrespect to the trustees, and that she was not sure really to whom she had resigned, and we took that as a verbal resignation to the trustees.

Q. The position vacated by your removal of Mr. McCrackan on May 19, 1919, has not been filled? A. It has not.

Q. When do you expect to fill it?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, if Your Honor please—

The Master—I think that you will have to leave out their expectations, Mr. Krauthoff. It will take us long enough to find out what they have done.

Q. Have you found any loyal member of The Mother Church who is willing to accept a position under The Church Manual to which he has not been elected as provided by The Church Manual?

Mr. Whipple—I object to that because it is a question which has been put in flagrant defiance of the ruling which Your Honor has just made. It is not only an improper question to put, but it is especially improper because it has just been ruled out, and it is not respectful to the Court.

The Master—If you will pardon me, I would like to hear the question read.

[The question is read as follows: "Have you found any loyal member of The Mother Church who is willing to accept a position under The Church Manual to which he has not been elected as provided by The Church Manual?"]

I do not see how I can admit that, Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Krauthoff — If Your Honor please, I want to say one word in response to what Mr. Whipple has said. If there is the slightest suspicion that this question is in violation of any sense of courtesy to Your Honor I will withdraw it, and I will withdraw it now, to be absolutely sure of being free of any claim of offense in that direction.

Mr. Whipple—I think that that is very handsomely and wisely done.

Mr. Streeter—He has your approbation, anyway, brother Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I think that that is all right. Everybody seems to approve it, and so we will go on merrily again!

Q. Mr. Eustace, did the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society in May, 1918, take up the question of the liability of The Christian Science Publishing Society to pay a federal income tax? A. I think it was in 1918 that we did that.

Q. And over the signature of Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Ogden and yourself you filed a claim of exemption? A. I think we did, yes. I would have to see the papers, but I think that that is correct.

Q. Have you your files here on that subject which show the claim which you did file?

Mr. Watts—No.

Q. Will you be good enough to have them here at 2 o'clock? A. I will.

Q. And did you also file one in 1919? A. I don't know whether we did or not.

Q. I wish you would look up as to that also, and have that here. And while you are looking for those two, will you please look for the return made for second-class postage under the act of Congress of 1917; and also the return that you made to the assessors of the City of Boston as to the ownership of the property which is in your possession? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, I want to call your attention to this statement of Mrs. Eddy in "Miscellaneous Writings," page 264, lines 10 to 13:

"Unity is the essential nature of Christian Science. Its Principle is One, and to demonstrate the divine One, demands oneness of thought and action."

Do you accept that statement of Mary Baker Eddy as a correct statement of a principle of Christian Science? A. Absolutely and unqualifiedly!

Q. Page 131, line 9: "Christian Scientists preserve unity, and so shadow forth the substance of our sublime faith, and the evidence of its being built upon the rock of divine oneness,—one faith, one God, one baptism."

A. I do.
Mr. Whipple—Well, there was not any question, but you ask whether he subscribed to that?

The Witness—I understood so.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, that is right.

Q. Page 138 of "Miscellaneous Writings," lines 19 to 21:

"I once thought that in unity was human strength; but have grown to know that human strength is weakness,—that unity is divine might, giving to human power, peace."

That statement is also accepted?
A. In proportion to my understanding of its meaning.

Q. On page 251, I call your attention to the address of Mrs. Eddy to the general association of teachers in the year 1903:

"You have convened only to convince yourselves of this grand verity: namely, the unity in Christian Science. Cherish steadfastly this fact. Adhere to the teachings of the Bible, Science and Health, and our Manual, and you will obey the law and gospel."

In studying these words of Mrs. Eddy have you ever given any weight to the fact that she mentions the Bible, Science and Health, and the Manual all in one and the same breath, as it were? A. Why, just as she mentioned her other works, of course. She at one time named the order of her works, the importance of them, as you are probably aware, and she named Science and Health as the first; "Miscellaneous Writings" as the second; "Unity of Good" as the third; the Church Manual as the fourth; "Christ and Christmas" as the fifth, and "Rudimental Divine Science" as the sixth. That was the order of importance in Mrs. Eddy's opinion, I believe, as she wrote to the London Outlook.

Q. And all of these are one complete whole as taught by Mary Baker Eddy?

Mr. Whipple—All of what?

Mr. Krauthoff—All of these which she has stated.

Mr. Whipple—Do you mean all of these publications?

Mr. Krauthoff—I mean all of these published books of Mary Baker Eddy.

The Witness—Certainly, they are all her writings.

Q. And no one can be a loyal Christian Scientist without accepting all of them? A. Well, he only accepts all of them in proportion to his understanding and demonstration of them.

Q. Certainly. But he starts with the proposition that all of them are true? A. Why, of course he does!

Q. You are familiar with the articles of Blanche Hersey Hogue on the Church Manual in the Sentinel of Sept. 10, 1910? A. Well, I wouldn't like to say that I was, no. I read it, I suppose, at the time.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Eustace, I am going to leave you this pamphlet, "Fulfilling the Law," and I would like to have you read it between now and 2 o'clock, because I would like to ask you something on it then. A. I will answer anything on it now if you will read it.

Q. Oh, I thought— A. If you will ask me any question on it I will answer it now if I can.

The Master—What pamphlet is this? Is it an exhibit in the case?

Mr. Krauthoff—Not yet. I was asking him about the Sentinel, and I want to offer it as an exhibit, and then I want to offer in connection with it the statement of Mrs. Eddy as bearing upon it. While that is being found I will ask about another subject.

Q. Mr. Eustace, in the Christian Science Sentinel for Feb. 2, 1918, is the article entitled "Life," and that is the article to which you have referred in your correspondence with the directors as being an article which, in your opinion, should not have been published in the periodicals because in violation of the provisions in the Manual with respect to publishing articles of which Mrs. Eddy is the author, without her consent? A. That is the article.

Q. How did the article get into the Sentinel? A. Well, it is hearsay as to how it got in, but I suppose it was sent—

Q. What do you know about it? A. I think that it was sent—

The Master—If it is only hearsay do you want it?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, he, if Your Honor please, is the plaintiff in this case who says that these periodicals are published upon his sole responsibility, and I am trying to find out how much that means.

Mr. Whipple—Well, you do not suppose that that means the reading over of everything before it goes in, do you?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, it would seem that it meant that with respect to publishing a periodical.

Mr. Whipple—Don't lots of people have to do things through others who do them upon sole responsibility?

Mr. Krauthoff—I am not asking for any hearsay, if Your Honor please; I am asking only for what he knows about it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that being so, he says that he knows only by hearsay, and your question goes by the board.

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, I beg your pardon, then.

The Master—That is what I understood him to say.

Mr. Krauthoff—I did not so understand it.

The Master—It was for that reason that I asked the question.

Q. As you understand it, all that you know about this article appearing in the Sentinel comes to you by hearsay? A. Yes, I think that that is so.

Q. Who told you about it? A. I think that Mr. McKenzie was the first one who told me about the article.

Q. Then afterwards the trustees took up with the directors the matter of publishing that article in pamphlet form? A. We did.

Q. Why did you take that matter up with the directors? A. Because it was at the time of the war and we thought that it was a very excellent article, and at that time we were heartily in accord with what the article said.

Q. Well, I was not speaking about the virtue of the article; I was speaking of why you took it up with the directors. A. Because we thought—we were contemplating putting it in a little vest-pocket form to send to the trenches.

Q. I will put it in another way: Why did the directors have to do with whether you published it in vest-pocket form or not? A. Well, for one thing, the directors—five of them—are trustees under the will, and we would not have thought of taking anything that Mrs. Eddy had written and putting it in pamphlet form without their knowledge and consent.

Q. Then you did not take it up with the six trustees under the will? A. No, we did not.

Q. This article is copyrighted by The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Yes, we copyright everything.

Q. You copyright everything that goes in? A. Yes.

Q. And the directors concluded that it would not be expedient to publish that in pamphlet form? A. Well, it was a unanimous thing, after talking it over, that it was not wise to do it.

Q. And it was not so published? A. No.

Q. Referring to the annual meetings of The Mother Church, you are familiar with the fact that the clerk of The Mother Church, in making his annual report, had a chapter, if it may be so called, upon The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. No, I am not.

Q. Do you mean that you have never noticed that at the annual meeting of The Mother Church the clerk of The Mother Church refers to The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. I remember only once myself.

Q. Were you present at the annual meeting in the year 1918? A. That is the year that I was referring to.

Q. And do you not know that the clerk of The Mother Church asked the trustees of the Publishing Society for such information as they might wish to put in this annual report, and that they did furnish certain information? A. That year they asked for it. Mr. Jarvis asked. We did not know what use he was going to make of it.

Q. Didn't he tell you that he wanted it for the annual report? A. We supposed, of course, he was going—

Q. I beg pardon? A. We supposed, of course, that he was going to talk about the growth of the Publishing Society in his report;

Q. To The Mother Church? A. To the membership, yes.

Q. Do you have any annual meetings of the Publishing Society? A. We do not.

Q. Do you make any annual reports except to this annual report of the clerk of The Mother Church? A. We do not make an annual report to the clerk of The Mother Church at all. We make no annual report whatever.

Q. And the information that you send to the clerk you send purely as a matter of courtesy? A. Purely out of courtesy.

Mr. Whipple—If you are going to take up a new subject, Mr. Krauthoff, perhaps we had better take our intermission, unless it would interrupt your thought.

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, no, not at all.

The Master—Is that agreeable, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—How long shall we stop? Five minutes?

Mr. Whipple—Five minutes.

The Master—We will suspend, then, for five minutes.

[Recess of five minutes.]

The Master—We will go on as soon as you are ready, Mr. Krauthoff.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, I call your attention to the Christian Science Sentinel for Sept. 3, 1910, and to the article therein contained called "The Church Manual."

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, this is one of two articles on this subject that I want to read to Mr. Eustace as a basis for my examination of him. I have copies of it printed in pamphlet form. Beginning there with "The Church Manual"—

Mr. Whipple—Are you planning to read the article?

Mr. Krauthoff—I want to read the article to Mr. Eustace and then make it the basis of a question.

[Copies of the pamphlet above referred to are handed to the Master and counsel.]

The Master—Will it be necessary to read the whole six pages? May we not assume that the witness has read it and couldn't you then ask him specifically what you want to ask him?

Mr. Krauthoff—It is a little difficult to do that, but if Your Honor so directs, I will do that. The whole article is one of which Mrs. Eddy directly approved in writing, and there is practically every part of it that raises a question.

The Master—Wouldn't it be well first to find out—

Mr. Krauthoff—I mean, as a basis of a question.

The Master—to find out first whether he is familiar with the article, and also with the fact, which you tell us of, that Mrs. Eddy approved of it in writing.

Q. Mr. Eustace, referring to the article on "The Church Manual" in the Christian Science Sentinel of Sept. 3, 1910, by Blanche Hersey Hogue, are you familiar with that article? A. No, I am not familiar with it.

Q. And are you advised of the fact that in the Sentinel of Sept. 10, 1910, is a statement by Mary Baker Eddy: "The article on the Church Manual by Blanche Hersey Hogue in the Sentinel of September 10 is practical and scientific, and I recommend its careful study to all Christian Scientists."

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, in view of Mr. Eustace's statement I would prefer to examine him about that at 2 o'clock, after he has read the article.

Mr. Strawn—Don't you intend to allow him any time for luncheon?

The Master—He hasn't answered your last question, has he?

Mr. Krauthoff—No.

Q. Please answer the last question. A. I am familiar with that statement in the Sentinel of Mrs. Eddy's.

The Master—He has now answered it.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes. He is familiar with the statement of Mrs. Eddy, but he is not familiar with the article. Under those circumstances I would be glad to read it or I would be glad to have the witness read it at adjournment. I don't think it is as long as Your Honor thinks it is. It is rather a small pamphlet.

The Master—I see that it is pretty nearly six pages of rather small print. What would counsel suggest in regard to reading it at length?

Mr. Whipple—I hardly know what to say. I cannot see the pertinency of the examination in any way, but if Mr. Krauthoff feels as if he must cross-examine on it I should suppose it would be well for Mr. Eustace, if he is willing to, to intersperse his luncheon with a review of it.

The Witness—I will be very glad to.

Mr. Whipple—Well, perhaps that is the best solution of it.

The Master—Will that be satisfactory, Mr. Krauthoff?

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, quite.

The Master—Let us take that course, then.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, I desire to call your attention to this statement by Mary Baker Eddy, on page 148 of "Miscellaneous Writings":

"The Rules and By-Laws in the Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, originated not in solemn conclave as in ancient Sanhedrim. They were not arbitrary opinions nor dictatorial demands, such as one person might impose on another. They were impelled by a power not one's own, were written at different dates, and as the occasion required. They sprang from necessity, the logic of events,—from the immediate demand for them as a help that must be supplied to maintain the dignity and defense of our Cause; hence their simple, scientific basis, and detail so requisite to demonstrate genuine Christian Science, and which will do for the race what absolute doctrines destined for future generations might not accomplish."

Now, as a loyal and consistent believer and advocate of the principles of Christian Science as taught by Mary Baker Eddy in her textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," do you accept that as a correct statement with respect to the Church Manual? A. I accept that as an absolutely correct statement including the Deed of Trust constituting The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. I am now asking you what you do with that statement with respect to the Church Manual. A. Including the Deed of Trust, I accept it.

Q. I ask you with respect to the Church Manual. A. The Church Manual? Yes, of course I accept it.

Q. With respect to the Church Manual? A. Certainly I accept it.

Q. In your direct examination you spoke of the Manual as a spiritual guide. Of course you do not mean that it is a guide to the Spirit; that is to say, Spirit itself needs no guide? A. No, of course not.

Q. You mean it is spiritual in its origin? A. I mean that it is a spiritual guide; in other words, it guides me spiritually.

Q. What does it do with respect to your human affairs? A. Do you want me to go into an explanation of how Christian Science is applied in human affairs?

Q. I would be very glad to have you.

The Master—I do not know about that. I think that is taking it a little too far.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, if I may be heard on that I should be very glad to state the relevancy of it.

The Master—State it as briefly as you can.

Mr. Krauthoff—The fundamental error which has caused this lawsuit is a refusal on the part of the plaintiffs in this case to accept as their guide the human footsteps that Mary Baker Eddy prescribed for Christian Scientists.

Mr. Whipple—(To the stenographer) Will you read that? I don't think I grasp it.

(The statement is read by the stenographer.)

Mr. Whipple—The human footsteps?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Aren't you speaking a little metaphorically, if not phantasmagorically?

Mr. Krauthoff—I mean the human footsteps, and, with all deference to the situation, it is not a subject for humor, it is the basis of this situation.

Mr. Whipple—Nothing is the subject for humor except your extraordinary statements; that is the thing. Nothing in the case is a subject for humor in the slightest.

The Master—The question before me is whether it will be proper for the purpose of this hearing, or desirable, to hear a statement from the witness on that abstract question.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, may I make a suggestion? As counsel for Mr. Dittmore we are not taking any large part in this particular matter, but here is a question put, and, if I understand what Mr. Krauthoff means, it is a question that we would like to have answered. Mr. Eustace says—

The Master—That is quite enough, General Streeter. If you want the question answered, and Mr. Whipple does not object, I shall not exclude it on my own motion.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, I want to state what I want answered—not a general abstract discussion. Mr. Eustace has said that he regards the Manual as his spiritual guide. I want to know, what I think Mr. Krauthoff was finding out, whether he regards that as a guide to him in so far as it gives directions as to the human affairs of the Publishing Society and the directors. It is a perfectly plain question.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please—

The Master—If that is any different from what Mr. Krauthoff asked him you will have an opportunity later to pursue the inquiry yourself, I suppose. Mr. Whipple, you were about to say something?

Mr. Whipple—I cannot see how, and especially in view of what has been said, there is the remotest relation to any issue in the case, any real issue, in the answer to this question; but there is evident to my mind a studied purpose on the part of the counsel for the directors to put Mr. Eustace, or the trustees, at a disadvantage with what they call the field.

The Master—Call what?

Mr. Whipple—Call the field; that is the great body of Christian Scientists who are watching these proceedings. Therefore, in order that that may not be done I am perfectly willing, very glad to have this explanation given, because I do not want to have it possibly said that the trustees fear in the slightest the fullest exposition of their justification in this matter from every point of view.

The Master—The witness may proceed, then. (To the witness) Do you desire the question read again, or is it sufficiently present to your mind?

The Witness—I might have it read again, if you please.

(The question is read by the stenographer as follows: "What does it do with respect to your human affairs?")

Mr. Whipple—(To the stenographer) Then he read something; just go a little before that and a little after.

(The stenographer read as follows:

"Q. You mean it is spiritual in its origin? A. I mean that it is a spiritual guide; in other words, it guides me spiritually.

"Q. What does it do with respect to your human affairs? A. Do you want me to go into an explanation of how Christian Science is applied in human affairs?

"Q. I would be very glad to have you.")

The Master—Now, go on, Mr. Witness.

A. As I understand, everything that Mrs. Eddy has written and given to us as Christian Scientists is for our guide spiritually; in other words, in proportion to our spiritual understanding of what she means, and in the application of that in our daily living, do we understand exactly what she means, and our human affairs take on a higher significance.

Q. That is, in proportion as we come to an understanding of the spiritual the human disappears in the process? A. The human vanishes.

Q. But, primarily, we are dealing with a human situation? A. Never, under Christian Science.

Q. I mean, a human situation in belief? A. Never; the belief vanishes. We are dealing with Mrs. Eddy's statement that "All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all."

Q. I know it; but we begin with the belief on the part of somebody in the human condition? A. We destroy that belief, we do not begin with it. We begin with that fundamental statement of Mrs. Eddy's and destroy that belief.

Q. We understand each other; I understand how you begin the treatment; but I mean when a patient comes to see you as a practitioner the patient has a belief of a condition—of a human condition. A. All right.

Q. And then you begin as a practitioner by destroying his belief in a human condition? A. In other words, my understanding of what Mrs. Eddy has given in her works enables me to destroy this human footstep, as you call it.

Q. Yes, having destroyed that human footstep, he takes another one? A. I suppose he does. I don't know what he does. He is well then.

Q. Well, you do, don't you? In your progress from one state or stage of consciousness to another you take footsteps? A. I start from the fundamental basis of what Jesus said, that the Kingdom of God is at hand.

Q. Yes. A. That we are right now in eternity, not that we are going to get there.

Q. I appreciate that. Now, none of us have demonstrated that fully in our daily living? A. That is being unfolded to each individual one every moment.

Q. In your conduct of the affairs of the Publishing Society, who is in charge of the affairs of the Publishing Society? A. We recognize fundamentally that divine Principle is in charge.

Q. And if anybody does not reflect divine Principle then what happens? A. Then the correction of whatever is wrong is made through whatever is the avenue that that correction should be made through.

Q. By some one superior in authority? A. Some one who is responsible for seeing that it is right.

Q. Some human being? A. Always.

Q. Seeing that some other human being— A. What you call human being.

Q. Yes—what you call human being—is seeing that somebody else called a human being reflects divine Principle absolutely? A. That is as it seems, yes.

Q. And in the conduct of the affairs of this Publishing Society do you find it necessary to have a center of authority? A. Naturally. God is the center of the authority.

Q. Oh, I know; but I mean in deciding whether somebody shall have a two weeks' vacation? A. Certainly; that is expressed.

Q. Who decides that? A. In Christian Science God is expressed in an infinity of activity.

Q. I appreciate that. Now, coming back, who determines the hours at which the people in the Publishing Society come to work? A. Expressed in the normal and natural way of what you call those who are responsible for that work.

Q. That is, the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. And so on.

Q. In other words, this Bulletin that was offered in evidence shows that in the conduct of the affairs of The Christian Science Publishing Society it has become necessary to make a number of rules and regulations? A. Yes.

Q. Relating to hours of labor, conduct of employees, and all the details that are set out in that book? A. Naturally.

Q. And those rules and regulations proceed from a center of authority? A. They do.

Q. And that center of authority in the Publishing Society is the Board of Trustees? A. That is as it is expressed.

Q. Now, in the conduct of the affairs of the church it also becomes necessary to have a center of authority, does it not? A. Naturally.

Q. How about the Christian Science movement? A. The Christian Science movement—that is the cause that Mrs. Eddy established.

Q. Does that need a directing head or center of authority? A. Mrs. Eddy has directed that through her works.

Q. Through her works. And as to the Christian Science movement—this human authority of which we have been speaking, does that apply or does it not apply? A. Not to the individual Christian Scientist—not in the slightest.

Q. I understand; but I am talking about the movement as a whole. A. Well, the movement as a whole includes all Christian Scientists, affiliated or unaffiliated.

Q. And does the Christian Science movement as a whole need, or does it have, any central or controlling authority? A. Not necessarily, outside of our Leader's writings.

Q. In your communication to the directors you pointed out that in the conduct of the affairs of The Christian Science Publishing Society you called upon every one to demonstrate Principle, and then if they failed to do it you pointed out the mistake? A. That is right.

Q. Of course, absolutely, Principle is demonstrated? A. That is right.

Q. And when a mistake happens, why, there is a failure on the part of somebody to recognize the demonstration of Principle, and it becomes necessary for some one humanly to point out the mistake? A. All right.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, some of the publications of The Christian Science Publishing Society were identified, that is, the Quarterly and the Journal, and I wanted to have others identified as exhibits.

Q. That is Der Herold der Christian Science? (Handing paper to witness.) A. It is.

Q. Published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, for June, 1919? A. It is.

Mr. Whipple—Let me ask if there is anything in particular in it that you attach any significance to or whether you simply offer it as a sample of a publication which is made by the trustees?

Mr. Krauthoff—This is being offered in order that the Court may have before it the character of the publications put out by the trustees.

Mr. Whipple—That being the offer, I have no objection to it, but I should think it would be much better to have one prior to the bringing of the bill, except that they are doing the same thing since; and if it was understood that this is a sample of what the trustees have been doing for a good many years we should be very happy to have it go in.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I will supply those prior to the bill.

Mr. Whipple—You need not if you assume that this is a fair sample.

Mr. Krauthoff—I understand that there has been no outward change in their form.

Mr. Whipple—All right; we will take that.

[A copy of Der Herold der Christian Science, for June, 1919, is marked Exhibit 64.]

A copy of Le Héraut de Christian Science, for June, 1919, is marked Exhibit 65.

A copy of the Christian Science Sentinel, of June 28, 1919, is marked Exhibit 66.

A copy of The Christian Science Monitor, of June 28, 1919, is marked Exhibit 67.]

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, in response to our question a moment ago—I say "our question," both the question I had and a question that General Streeter had—with respect to the extent that you apply this Manual to the conduct of your human affairs, you explained your views generally upon the subject of Christian Science. Now, as applied to the conduct of the affairs of the Publishing Society, how far do you apply this Manual? A. I apply it just as far as I understand it.

Q. Just as far as you understand it? A. Yes.

Q. Do you understand the language that The Christian Science Board of Directors shall elect editors? I mean taken by itself. A. Shall elect editors?

Q. Yes.
Mr. Whipple—Well, now, won't you please quote it properly and fully instead of putting it in that form?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, certainly.

Q. With respect to the provision of the Manual which provides as follows:

"The term of office for the Clerk and the Treasurer of this Church (also for the editors and the manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and the manager of the general Committee on Publication in Boston) is one year each, dated from the time of election to office. Incumbents who have served one year or more, may be re-elected, or new officers elected, at the annual meeting held for this purpose, by a unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting."

Now, how do you apply that statement in the Manual to the conduct of the affairs of the Publishing Society?

A. Why, just in so far as any statement that Mrs. Eddy has made; that, as I understand it, in keeping with the Deed of Trust, I act in obedience thereto.

Q. I am coming back to the Manual as a Manual, now, I am not asking you about the Deed of Trust.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. The witness has said repeatedly that the Deed of Trust is a part of the Manual, it is incorporated in it, and is referred to in it; that its inspiration is just as sacred, just as absolute—more so, because it is irrevocable; and that he construes the Manual with reference to the provisions of the Trust Deed and their irrevocability as understood by Mrs. Eddy.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I have the witness answer the question that I propounded—how he applies this statement in the Manual to the conduct of the affairs of the Publishing Society?

Mr. Whipple—That is not the question here. You are harking back to a question three or four questions back.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will state it over again.

Q. How do you apply the provision in the Manual which I have just read to you to the conduct of the affairs of the Publishing Society?

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, I object to that because it has been answered already in the record.

The Master—If the witness can add anything to what he has several times in my recollection said upon that point he is at liberty to do so; I don't suppose you want him to repeat over again what he has said.

Mr. Krauthoff—No, not at all; I simply want to get his full understanding.

The Witness—I have nothing more to say in addition to what I have already said several times.

Q. You have enjoined the directors from electing an editor?

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment; of course he has not, if Your Honor please. The Supreme Judicial Court of the Commonwealth has done it. This witness has not enjoined them, and it is just that foggy notion with respect to what the Supreme Judicial Court did that got you into trouble. You apparently thought that this gentleman had enjoined you and that it didn't make any difference what your directors would do in view of that.

The Master—You will have to change your question, I think.

Q. Adopting Mr. Whipple's form, upon your application and upon your claim that the Board of Directors did not have the power to elect editors, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts issued an injunction which has been construed to prevent the Board of Directors from electing editors?

Mr. Whipple—Now, I object to that because it is not a correct statement. The Court did not issue any injunction on any claim of the parties. The parties set forth the facts verified by an affidavit; the Court, on reading that statement of fact verified by affidavits, grants an injunction. You know that is the way things are done, don't you? It does not issue an injunction on any claim of a party. It issues injunctions upon a statement of facts which they believe to be true because they are verified.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will try to frame another question that perhaps will be more accurate in Mr. Whipple's consciousness.

Q. Upon the filing of the Bill in Equity in this case the Court did issue an injunction, and when you were advised by The Christian Science Board of Directors that they were proposing to elect a successor to Mr. McCrackan you filed a proceeding against them alleging that they had violated the injunction?

Mr. Whipple—Now, that is not a correct statement. Why don't you get the petition for contempt if you want to offer it, not this gentleman's construction of it? You know what was alleged in the petition for contempt, don't you? You ought to.

The Master—Aren't we spending a good deal of time on mere words, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Well, it is not a correct statement; if it were I would not mind at all. That was not the basis of the—

The Witness—That was not the basis.

The Master—Strictly speaking that is undoubtedly true but isn't it sufficiently near to correctness?

Mr. Whipple—No; it is so far from it; that is the only reason that I object

The Master—We can take the witness' answer and see what he is going to say.

Mr. Whipple—Why, he is not a lawyer; I presume he perhaps might have the same foggy notion of it that the counsel have suggested. It was an entirely different thing from that that was the basis of their complaint; and only the production of the paper itself, or some reform in your expression of it, would, it seems to me—

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I am not asking this man as a lawyer, I am asking him as a loyal Christian Scientist.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I think you have got to ask him as a witness.

Mr. Krauthoff—It may include a lawyer. I am asking him as a loyal Christian Scientist what application does he make of this provision in the Manual with respect to the power of The Christian Science Board of Directors in the present circumstances to elect editors to the Christian Science periodicals. I will ask him the direct question.

Q. Do you not now deny that The Christian Science Board of Directors have the power to elect editors? A. May I ask a question?

Q. Certainly. A. What do you mean by "power"?

Q. Well, the word defines itself. A. Does it mean power?

Q. Do you mean to deny that they have no right to do it, no authority to do it? You have spoken of it as an unwarranted assumption of authority. I will ask you to explain that. That is your own language; maybe you can do that. A. I thought I explained that the other day.

The Master—If you have anything to add, add it.

The Witness—I have nothing more to add.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, the witness did not explain it the other day.

The Master—He tells us now that he has explained it as far as he can, and he has nothing more to add. I think we will have to stop there.

Q. What application do you make of this provision in the Church Manual, Section 3, on page 80:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship, for such reasons as to the Board may seem expedient."

Mr. Whipple—That I object to, because it is involved in this hearing.

The Master—That is the question we have got to settle, it is a question of law. I do not think it is open to you to discuss it with the witness.

Mr. Krauthoff—I shall be glad to be heard on that, if Your Honor please.

The Master—I hardly think that can be worth while now, Mr. Krauthoff. I will exclude that question and save your exception.

Q. You became a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society in the fall of 1912? A. December, 1912.

Q. And you began to have conferences with the directors, The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. We had one conference, I think our minutes show, in 1913.

Q. Is that all your minutes show? A. That is all that our minutes show.

Q. At that time there was a good deal being done with respect to your building, was there not? A. I would have to look that up.

Q. I call your attention to a memorandum I have of the Board of Directors, Jan. 22, 1913:

"Voted, to comply with the request of The Christian Science Publishing Society that hereafter they keep no special Hymnal account; they to be able, however, at any time to render a separate account in regard to the business of the Hymnal."

Do you recall taking up with The Christian Science Board of Directors the matter of your keeping a separate Hymnal account? A. When was that?

Q. 1913. A. Well, I accept that. I am sure—we did probably talk it over.

Q. That is, at one time the copyright to the Christian Science Hymnal was in the name of The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. The copyright is still in the name of The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Q. Didn't they transfer it to The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. No; it has never been transferred that I am aware of.

Q. And The Christian Science Publishing Society is publishing the Hymnal and getting the proceeds of the sale of it? A. They are.

Mr. Whipple—That is why they had a separate account, isn't it?

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg pardon?

Mr. Whipple—Isn't that why they had the account separate?

Mr. Krauthoff—It may have been that that was one of the reasons why they had a separate account.

Mr. Whipple—It looks like a good one—a good reason.

Mr. Krauthoff—Perhaps so. I am trying to develop things here.

Q. On Feb. 5, 1913: "Voted, unanimously, that the board concur in the opinion of the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society that the letters C. S. can properly be used in The Christian Science Journal only following the name of a person who has received class instruction from an authorized teacher of Christian Science." Now, that refers to the list of practitioners in the Journal? A. Yes. A question arose as to what C. S. meant.

Q. And you took it up with the Board of Directors? A. Well, I wrote a sort of brief on it, as I understood it, and the matter was discussed, and it was agreed as it is being done now.

Q. Why did you take it up with the directors, Mr. Eustace? A. Why, Mr. Krauthoff, ever since I have been here I have always wanted to take up everything with anyone deeply interested, especially The Christian Science Board of Directors, on any point that is of value or interest to the Christian Science movement. That is the unity that we have spoken of.

Q. Now, the Bill of Complaint states that you have at all times conducted this business solely upon your own responsibility. A. That does not interfere with that. We can have conferences and requests and everything, and yet conduct the business on our own responsibility.

Q. How many other people did you take into your conferences on this question? A. C. S.?

Q. Yes. A. Well, I went back over all in the Journal. We discussed it with, I think, my fellow colleagues on the Board of Trustees. I don't know, I may have talked it to many. I don't know. I wouldn't like to say on that at all.

Q. On May 28, 1913, I have this memorandum:

"Voted to recommend to The Christian Science Publishing Society that its employees hereafter be granted a vacation of two weeks per year instead of one week."

Did you take that up with The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. You say that that was a recommendation from the Board of Directors to the trustees?

Mr. Krauthoff—I am reading the record of the Board of Directors, and I am asking you whether that was done or not?

Mr. Whipple—Are you reading from the original record of the Board of Directors? I think you better show that to—

Mr. Krauthoff—I am not reading from the original.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I am not going to take a statement read from a copy in that way. You must have the original records here if you are going to use them, because I am going to examine about them in redirect.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am not offering the record. I am asking this witness a question.

Mr. Whipple—You are asking to be allowed to read a record without producing the books. I can't let you do that. You must take the responsibility for them—

Mr. Thompson—We think for Mr. Dittmore that all reference to these records when made in this informal manner should be eliminated. If the records of these directors are going to play any part in this case we think they should be subjected to the strictest proof.

Mr. Whipple—Aren't they going to play a part?

Mr. Thompson—I suppose they are, but they can't play a part without being subjected to strict proof.

Mr. Whipple—They must play a real part.

Mr. Thompson—I don't care to have you get in a record through the informal reading of a memorandum.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am not offering records.

Mr. Thompson—You are in effect when you read and say, "This is the record."

Mr. Krauthoff—I will ask it in another way.

Q. Did you, in May, 1913—

The Master—Pause one moment. I think we must settle this matter first.

Mr. Thompson—I move to have every question containing the statement, "This is part of the records" or "I am reading from the records," stricken out as being impertinent, improper, and a very undesirable way in this case of proving what may be important matter.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am not offering them as statements of what the record is, but merely as memoranda to form the basis of the question, and any reference to the record may be eliminated.

Mr. Whipple—Then the answers must be eliminated, because the answers have been given upon the guaranty of good faith in the implication of counsel that they were part of the record.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will begin over again, Your Honor.

Mr. Whipple—That is right.

The Master—One moment. The questions and answers now under discussion may be stricken from the record.

Q. Did you, in January, 1913, take up with The Christian Science Board of Directors the question of keeping a special hymnal account? A. A special hymnal account?

Q. Yes, showing the receipts and—
A. That we had kept a special hymnal account always.

Q. Did you take up the question with them of whether thereafter you would continue to keep a special hymnal account? A. I haven't a doubt we did.

Q. And you have been publishing the Hymnal and receiving the proceeds of it? A. We have.

Q. Your statement is that the copyright is in the name of The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. It is.

Q. Did you in February, 1913, take up with The Christian Science Board of Directors the question of whether the letters C. S. could properly be used in The Christian Science Journal only following the name of a person who had received the class instruction from an authorized teacher of Christian Science? A. May my former answer stand on that? I answered it. It is correct.

The Master—No. I have stricken that out. You will have to answer it over again.

The Witness—The question as to what "C. S." meant arose and I prepared a brief on the question and talked it over, I believe, personally myself with the directors. Anyway, the brief was turned over to them and we all concurred that the "C. S." should be used as it is being used at the present time, meaning those who have had class instruction.

Q. And so in accord with that there is a statement in the Journal under the heading "Christian Science Practitioners":

"The letters 'C. S.' after a practitioner's name designate one who has had class instruction. Those without such instruction have no designation."

A. That, I think, occurred after that; yes.

Q. Now, by "class instruction" what do you mean, Mr. Eustace? A. There are certain Christian Scientists who have received the degree of "C. S. D." or "C. S. B.," who are designated as teachers of Christian Science, and they now hold one class a year consisting of not more than 30 pupils.

Q. That is done under the Church Manual? A. That is done purely as a church matter, yes.

Q. You are one of those teachers?
A. I am.

Q. And Mr. Ogden is one? A. He is.

Q. And the "C. S." means one who has received instruction from such a teacher? A. From such a teacher, yes.

Q. Did you in May, 1913, take up with The Christian Science Board of Directors the question of giving your employees a vacation of two weeks a year instead of one week? A. I was not aware that we did, but then it would be a very natural thing that we would talk it over together—but I don't know that we did. If we have a record of it we did.

Q. Did you in February, 1914, take any steps to have the Christian Science seal protected by registration or such other means as are available in the United States and all foreign countries? A. I think we probably did. That subject came up. I would have to refresh my memory on that.

Q. Did you take that up with the directors? A. Why, it would be a very natural thing to do.

Q. By the Christian Science seal is meant this circle on these exhibits that were introduced in evidence this morning? A. Yes, and that is on our Journal and Sentinel.

Q. And upon the two Heralds? A. Yes. It is, I think, on the Heralds.

Q. Did you ever take up with The Christian Science Board of Directors the fact that you had decided to thereafter discontinue both the $3 and $1 editions of the Life of Mary Baker Eddy and in place thereof issue a regular edition at a retail price of $2? A. Yes. We discussed, I think, that very thoroughly—what would be the best thing to do with that book.

Q. You took that up with the directors? A. Why, I haven't any doubt we did. As I say, we always like to discuss all those matters of interest as to the movement with the directors.

Q. Did you take up with the directors the matter of translating a Christian Science lecture or other suitable fundamental statement of Christian Science into the Italian language? A. Well, I don't know whether it was just that, but we have talked, I am sure, about the Italian translations.

Q. And other languages? A. I think so, yes.

Q. While I am on the subject of foreign languages, Science and Health has been translated into the German language? A. It has.

Q. And is printed on opposite pages, the English text and the German text? A. That is so.

Q. And that is also true of the French language? A. It is.

Q. And these two Heralds, the German Herald and the French Herald, are published with the English text on one side and the foreign language on the other side of the page? A. Yes.

Q. On opposite pages. And you have a number of pamphlets printed in various foreign languages? A. We have.

Q. And of course you increase those languages as the movement increases? A. Just as rapidly as we can.

Q. In translating Science and Health and other Christian Science literature into foreign languages, was any practical difficulty experienced in finding suitable words to express Christian Science and to express the phrase "infinite mind"? A. I think that is a very great difficulty.

Q. And words were selected, were determined upon, I believe, both in German and French? A. You mean for the translation of Science and Health?

Q. Yes. A. I don't know. We had nothing to do with the translation of Mrs. Eddy's books. We have now.

Q. But you are familiar with the fact that certain definite translations were agreed upon as the standard form of expression? A. No, I don't think I could say that, because as I remember it we decided to use the term "Christian Science" in our publications,—nothing to do with our Leader's works,—but in The Christian Science Publishing Society's publications.

Q. What I mean is this—
The Witness—Not a translation.

Q. You have on the Herald for June, 1919, the words in German "Christlichen Wissenschaft." A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which are the German words for Christian Science? A. Yes.

Q. And that is the word that appears in Science and Health? A. Yes.

Q. And is the standard word in the German language for Christian Science? A. I suppose it may be. I believe they have trouble with it.

Q. Well, I mean it is the— A. It is the one we have accepted for the time being, anyway.

Q. I want to call your attention to the practical difficulty, Mr. Eustace. Suppose the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, upon your theory of separate control and individual management, adopt another word. I suppose you are free to do that, as I understand it? A. In our translations?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, yes.

Q. Whenever you reach the conclusion that some other German word will more accurately represent Christian Science you feel you are free to do it? A. Certainly.

Q. Without any control of The Mother Church? A. Absolutely.

Q. What would be the practical effect of attempting to introduce Christian Science into a foreign language with two different designations for it? A. I don't think there would be any, no.

Q. You don't think it would cause any confusion in Germany to have Christian Science referred to in one part of the work of the movement as "Christlichen Wissenschaft" and in another part of the work of the movement under some other title? A. I don't think practically it would, no. But that is a hypothetical question, and it probably would not take place because the whole purpose of the two boards is to work cooperatively together.

Q. The whole purpose of the trustees and the directors? A. And the directors.

Mr. Whipple—They could not have unity otherwise. They have been working that way until recently.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is what we have been trying to prove.

Mr. Whipple—We admit it. Why try to prove it? We assert it. They have been trying to until the directors began to think they were the unit.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I assume that these statements of Mr. Whipple are not evidence?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no, not at all. They are merely helpful suggestions to the cross-examiner.

Mr. Krauthoff—And if I may resume the trial of this case I shall be very glad to put another question.

Q. Mr. Eustace, in the French Hérait there is also an accepted word for the thought of Christian Science in the French language?

The Master—Why can't we assume that his testimony about the words in French and Italian and all the other languages you can think of would be just the same as what he has given about German?

Mr. Krauthoff—I should be very glad to.

The Witness—Exactly.

Q. Upon your previous examination, Mr. Eustace, your attention was called to the letter of Mrs. Eddy published in the Christian Science Sentinel under the title of "Words of Counsel," published in the year 1914, and appears to have been written in the year 1903, and as I recall your testimony, it was to the effect that that letter should not have appeared in The Christian Science Journal, because under the Church Manual an article written by Mary Baker Eddy could not be published without her consent. Have you any explanation of how that article got into the Sentinel? A. No. I have none whatever, for I don't know how it got in.

Q. You are familiar, of course, with the fact that in the Deed of Trust itself the fixing of the salaries is left with The Mother Church? A. Left with the church, yes.

Q. And there is no minimum, I believe? A. I don't know; the minimum is $1000, I suppose, the original amount.

Q. Well, the Deed of Trust would determine that? A. States that, yes.

Q. Your salary when you first became a trustee was how much? A. I think it was two thousand.

Q. And the church has increased it from time to time? A. Has increased it from time to time.

Q. As the work of the trustees increased and developed? A. I suppose—I don't know exactly; I suppose that is the—doubtless may be it.

Q. Until now, I believe, it is $6000 a year? A. It is six thousand a year, yes.

Q. When was it fixed at that amount? A. I think some time in 1917.

Q. There has been no decrease of it since 1917? A. Not that I have experienced.

Q. And no intimation of any that you know of? A. Not that I know of.

Q. Do you recall in January, 1915, the question being taken up with the directors as to whether or not a lady in New York, Mrs. Lillian Young Cox, was entitled to have the word "Teacher" after her name in the practitioners' list? A. I don't recall that off-hand.

Q. Well, without regard to that special incident, I will ask you generally: Many of the Christian Science practitioners are authorized teachers of Christian Science of the character that you described a short time ago? A. They are.

Q. And in this list of practitioners in the Journal the word "Teacher" is placed in parenthesis after the name of one— A. Yes.

Q. —who is such a teacher; and that means an authorized teacher under the Manual of The Mother Church. Who decides whether a person is an authorized teacher under the Manual of The Mother Church and has the right to have that after their name in The Christian Science Journal?

Mr. Whipple—You mean, I take it, who has decided it heretofore.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, who has decided it heretofore—

Mr. Whipple—Or who has to decide it now? Which is it you want?

Mr. Krauthoff—I mean, who decides it under his theory.

The Witness—The Manual itself—

Mr. Whipple—Well, a single moment. That I object to. Mr. Eustace has no theory.

Mr. Krauthoff—All right, we will get at it another way. Go ahead, Mr. Eustace.

Mr. Whipple—Well, just a moment.

Q. How is it decided?

Mr. Whipple—Well, when?

Q. Prior to the 1st of February, 1919, how was it decided?

Mr. Whipple—That is better.

A. I have always taken it that the Manual decided—

The Master—No, you are asked, Mr. Eustace, How was it decided—

The Witness—I don't know, Your Honor.

The Master—prior to the date named.

The Witness—I don't know anything further than having gone through the college and having your degree and being a loyal Christian Scientist.

Q. What I am trying to get at is this: Did you prior to the 1st of February, 1919, put into the list of Christian Science practitioners the word "teacher" in parenthesis after the name of anybody who was not a loyal teacher of Christian Science and a member of The Mother Church and acting in accordance with the Church Manual? A. No.

Q. And you would not put in such a— A. May I say, when you say "acting in accordance with the Church Manual," I don't know how that is defined. I would say offhand, why, no, of course; they are supposed to be doing that.

Q. What I mean by that, is a member of The Mother Church and was in good standing in The Mother Church? A. No cards—no advertisements are carried in the periodicals from any except those who are members of The Mother Church.

Q. That is, either practitioners, teachers, or nurses? A. Any way. That is a rule of the Publishing Society.

Q. What application is made or was made by the trustees of the Publishing Society prior to Feb. 1, 1919, with respect to the removal of cards of practitioners or churches when so directed by the Board of Directors? A. On receiving notice or a letter from the Board of Directors saying that they had voted in accordance with a certain article in the Manual that So-and-So's card should not be in, we approved that and we took the advertisement out.

Q. Did you at any time take up with the society at Brunswick, Maine, the question of their maintaining two reading rooms? A. Yes, I remember we did have some correspondence on that.

Q. Will you please state the circumstances? A. I don't know that I can recall it or not.

Q. I don't quite understand. A local society was having two reading rooms? A. A local church, I think it was, was having two reading rooms, and I think we called their attention to the fact that Mrs. Eddy used the singular, "reading room," that a church may have.

Q. That is, as trustees of the Publishing Society, you reached the conclusion that a local church should only have one reading-room? A. Yes, only—that was advice to us. We didn't want them to be going counter to anything.

Q. That is, that was the advice that you gave the local church? A. Well, we called their attention to that and I think, if I remember correctly, they recognized that that was wise, and stopped it. However, I should want to refresh my memory on that.

Q. A good many questions have arisen prior to Feb. 1, 1919, with respect to the conduct of church affairs which came to The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Complaints would be sent in, of course.

Q. Well, requests for information, too, would there not? A. Oh, yes.

Q. That is to say, these churches which had in a sense been attended at their birth by The Christian Science Publishing Society passing on their cards for the Journal, would turn to the Publishing Society and write letters to the Publishing Society about church matters? A. Oh, I don't know.

Q. You did not know about that? A. Oh, I suppose there may be such cases, doubtless were, but I don't know that; I can't recall just at the moment. If you refresh my memory as to some instances, maybe I can recollect.

Q. Well, I haven't the precise church in mind. I was simply asking in a general way. And did you not instruct the young lady in charge of the Journal card department to answer those inquiries in some way that would either refer the persons to The Mother Church or refer them to the Manual or undertake to give them the desired information? A. We would always help them in any way we could.

Q. About matters relating to their own church affairs? A. Anything that they asked we would always try and do the best we could to help them.

Q. You had a number of inquirers with respect to this article that has been spoken of in counsel's opinion, called "A Mad World"? A. We did.

Q. And a number of churches wrote you and asked you as to the propriety of publishing that in local papers? A. I don't know whether they asked us as to the propriety but they asked us for our consent, because it was our article.

Q. Oh, they asked for your consent, and not as to the propriety? A. I don't know that they did. They wrote letters of appreciation of it.

Q. Did you ever advise a local church that it was a good thing to publish? A. No, I don't know that we did, but we congratulated them very highly and appreciatively for having done it.

Q. For having done it? A. Yes.

Q. Individuals came to you with respect to questions arising as to their duties as true Christian Scientists—that is, by mail? A. Oh, it may be; I suppose they did in the natural course of events; I don't know.

Q. And you gave them advice as to that, too? A. We would help them in any way we could.

Q. Do you remember the instance of Mr. Norwood coming to you and speaking to you about certain notices he desired to be put into the Monitor about some Society for Medical Freedom, and your explanation that as a Christian Scientist the broad channels of The Mother Church were sufficient to give him all the activity he needed without belonging to another organization? A. I do, very well.

Q. That was done with others? A. Well, I don't know; I don't remember any others. I had forgotten that till you recalled it to me.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is now 1 o'clock, Your Honor.

The Master—We will stop till 2 o'clock.

[Noon recess.]

Afternoon Session.

The Master—Proceed whenever you are ready, Mr. Krauthoff.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, we desire to offer in evidence this article of Blanche Hersey Hogue on the Church Manual, from the Christian Science Sentinel of Sept. 3, 1910, together with the statement of Mary Baker Eddy with respect to this article in the Sentinel of Sept. 10, 1910; and I will first read the statement of Mrs. Eddy:

"Take notice—The article on the Church Manual by Blanche Hersey Hogue in the Sentinel of September 10th is practical and scientific, and I recommend its careful study to all Christian Scientists."

The article reads as follows:

"Christian Scientists have for their instruction"—

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. Has Your Honor admitted this?

The Master—Well, in a way I have. I thought that he was now offering it.

Mr. Whipple—I must confess that I have forgotten, but I did not understand that Your Honor's ruling this morning was that you would admit it. This is the article on the Church Manual by some other person. All that Mrs. Eddy ever said about it was that it was a good thing to study; she recommended its study.

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, I beg your pardon. The statement is that this is "practical and scientific."

Mr. Whipple—Yes; that is right.

The Master—That is this article that we have here?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Supposing it is, that is very true; it is not a part of the Manual.

Mr. Krauthoff—It is a statement published by Mary Baker Eddy, the Leader of the Christian Science religion, as to this article being scientific, which, in the language of Christian Science, means that it is Christianly scientific. It is in accord—

Mr. Whipple—Do you mean that it stands right on a par with Mrs. Eddy's writings?

Mr. Krauthoff—In view of her indorsement, it stands in the light of the indorsement that she made of it. It is "practical and scientific."

Mr. Whipple—That is not very enlightening.

The Master—The indorsement goes no further than to recommend it and to say that it is "practical and scientific." What are you going to do? Are you going to read that whole article?

Mr. Krauthoff—May I be pardoned for a moment, if Your Honor please? When Mary Baker Eddy used the word "scientific," she did not use it in the sense in which that word is used in common parlance by persons who are not familiar with the terminology of Christian Science.

The Master—Well, very likely not, but that is as far as she goes, at any rate.

Mr. Krauthoff—The point that we desire to make in that connection is that when she says that this article is "scientific," she says that it is a correct statement of the principles of Christian Science.

The Master—Well, suppose it is, why should we have it read into the record now?

Mr. Krauthoff—For this reason, if Your Honor please, that it is an article upon the Church Manual. We are entitled to know to what extent the plaintiff agrees with this article, and to what extent he disagrees with it, as bearing upon his loyalty to the Church Manual.

The Master—Wasn't he this morning to read it over and be prepared to tell you if he was familiar with it, and then you were to ask him how far he agreed with it? Isn't that where we left it this morning?

Mr. Krauthoff—I believe so, yes.

The Master—Let us follow that course.

Q. Did you read the article on the Church Manual by Blanche Hersey Hogue, to which your attention was called? A. I have read it.

Q. Is there any portion of that article with which you are not in hearty accord? A. So far as I understand it, I see nothing objectionable about it.

Mr. Krauthoff—We offer the article in evidence if Your Honor please.

The Master—You have it here in this shape?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

The Master—Very good.

Mr. Krauthoff—And, in the circumstances, it will not be necessary to read it into the record in full, but we prefer to have it written into the record in full.

Mr. Whipple—I see no reason for that, if Your Honor please, we have so many bulky things in the record already.

The Master—I think that we want to avoid as far as possible putting into the record anything which is not immediately important and relevant.

Mr. Krauthoff—This, in my judgment, is, if Your Honor please. It is a direct statement upon the Church Manual itself, and, in my judgment, is of—

The Master—I do not think that that justifies bringing in an article in extenso into the record. You may be able in your argument to refer to such portions of it as you desire to rely upon.

Mr. Krauthoff—Then we may have one of these pamphlets identified as an exhibit?

The Master—I supposed that it had already been done.

Mr. Krauthoff—I do not think so.

The Master—If not, it may be identified.

[The article entitled "The Church Manual," on page 27 of the pamphlet entitled "Fulfilling the Law, published by The Christian Science Publishing Society," is marked 68 for identification. R. H. J.]

Mr. Krauthoff—We may in argument refer to any portion of that, as I understand it?

The Master—I suppose so. You may refer to anything that you put in in a similar way.

Q. Mr. Eustace, in the bill of complaint filed in this case, at the end of paragraph 5, on page 11 of the printed book, I find this statement:

"The trustees have paid over to the defendants in these two capacities, as directors of The Mother Church and as trustees, as earnings and profits from their conduct of the trust for a period of six months ending Oct. 1, 1918, a sum in excess of $450,000."

Now, that total sum of $450,000 is composed of two different amounts, is it not? A. Yes, as it says there, in their two different capacities—

The Master—That is pretty plain from the bill itself, I think.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, it says in the two capacities.

Q. And one of those amounts was paid to the trustees under the will of Mary Baker Eddy as royalties growing out of the printing of the books of Mrs. Eddy? A. Profits.

Q. Profits? A. Profits.

Q. You have a contract under which you agree to pay a royalty for the publication of her books?

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me. That is not so, Mr. Krauthoff. Haven't you ever seen it?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, I have read it, yes.

Mr. Whipple—Well, there is not the slightest thing about a royalty in it. The trustees are allowed 10 per cent of the gross receipts for their services and expenses.

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—And handling it very economically and efficiently, they made a profit out of it, which they turned over to the directors, and the rest goes to the trustees.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, I will get the contract, and I will examine Mr. Eustace further when I get the contract.

Mr. Whipple—Good!

Mr. Krauthoff—My understanding of what was done was this, that they published these books for the trustees under the will of Mary Baker Eddy, and as such they paid a royalty to the trustees under the will.

The Master—That being disputed, I suppose that we will have to wait until we get the contract itself.

Q. Now, then, you paid to the directors of The Mother Church as such, under the profits, as you claim, of The Christian Science Publishing Society, approximately $287,000 for the six months ending Oct. 1, 1918? A. I believe that is correct.

Q. I gathered from your statement this morning that you have now discovered that those were not profits?

A. No, not that they are not profits, but that in the past we have neglected to make any reservation, any cash reservation, for our plant, and also for outstanding accounts, and we carry no cash against our unearned subscriptions, which we feel is not a good way to do in our business.

Q. When was it that you borrowed this $200,000 with respect to the bringing of this suit? A. I don't know. Nineteen—I think it was sometime this year, the early part of this year.

Q. It was before the suit was brought? A. I will have to look it up. I don't remember, Mr. Krauthoff.

Q. Did you borrow it all at one time? A. Borrowed it all at one time.

Q. In order to pay profits that you had then discovered were not in fact earned?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

A. I did not say any such thing. I said that they were earned.

Q. They were not on hand in cash?

A. They were not on hand in cash, which is an entirely different thing.

Q. They were not earned in cash; they were earned in profits? A. They were earned in cash, but were not visible in cash.

Q. I see. They were in the form of profits which had not been converted into cash? A. Yes, so that we couldn't turn them over to the treasury.

Q. So that the sum of money which you turned over in cash was not profits, but it was money borrowed?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

The Master—Haven't we got the facts about that?

Mr. Whipple—I am informed that there were over half a million dollars of receivables that were due that had not been collected.

The Master—If we haven't got the facts, let us get them, but why spend time in disputing about characterizing the facts?

Q. In your examination, Mr. Eus-face, you were asked with reference to the character or nature of the subscribers to the several periodicals? It is a fact, as you understand it, that many of the subscribers to The Christian Science Monitor are not Christian Scientists? A. I suppose so.

Q. You have no way of apportioning them? A. We have no possible way of knowing what our subscribers are from that standpoint.

Q. The other periodicals are subscribed to largely by Christian Scientists? A. I would have to give the same answer to that.

Q. Your attention has been called to the fact that Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Ogden were chosen trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society in July or August, 1917. You have not chosen any trustees since that time? A. We certainly have not.

Mr. Whipple. There has been no vacancy, has there?

Mr. Strawn—Not that we know of.

Q. I want to call your attention to the statement of Mr. Whipple, which he made in the hearing upon the contempt proceeding—

"May I state what is without dispute, that Mrs. Eddy herself, during her lifetime, as grantor reserved certain rights of supervision and direction, if she saw fit to exercise them? And what Governor Bates has referred to as the uninterrupted course of matters for 17 years was merely the adoption by the Board of Trustees of the Publishing Society of any suggestion or supervision on the part of Mrs. Eddy before she passed away. In other words, while Mrs. Eddy lived, there was not a trustee of this organization who would not follow out in the fullest detail, minutely, any suggestion Mrs. Eddy made. If she nominated an editor, or asked to have one elected, there would not be the slightest hesitation in every one of these trustees obeying implicitly and to the letter the slightest suggestion of the great Leader of the Christian Science movement."

You agree with that statement of Mr. Whipple? A. I certainly don't see anything to disagree with.

Q. And these provisions in the Manual which are set forth as the direction to The Christian Science Board of Directors, and with the written consent of Mrs. Eddy, to elect the editors—do you regard that as an advice and direction of Mary Baker Eddy? A. I regard that as advice. To me, that by-law is very, very clear, and very explicit, showing exactly how Mrs. Eddy wanted us to cooperate in all our work, but in no way as changing the Deed of Trust, or our duties as trustees under that Deed of Trust.

Q. What I am trying to get is this, Mr. Eustace; Mrs. Eddy was, as stated by Mr. Whipple, and correctly so, the great Leader of the Christian Science movement. A. She certainly was.

Q. And the statement is that while she was alive, physically, everything that she suggested, or advised or directed was unhesitatingly done by everybody. A. Yes.

Q. That is because it was accepted as the statement of the Principle of Christian Science, not because Mary Baker Eddy was a person? A. Oh, yes, it was.

Mr. Whipple—That was not my statement. My statement was because it was reserved in the Deed of Trust. Very likely the other is true, but if you are quoting, I was stating it in its legal aspects.

Q. Well, it was true that in Mrs. Eddy's lifetime her statements were accepted as the statement of the Leader of the Christian Science movement? A. Certainly they were.

Q. And as statements of the principles of Christian Science? A. As far as we could understand the principles.

Q. Not because she was a person? A. Because she was the Leader of this movement.

Q. Now, then, what has her passing physically got to do with her statements being binding on people? A. Well, doesn't it say in there, what you are referring to, "with her written consent"?

Q. In the Manual? A. Yes.

Q. Yes? A. Well, didn't she put it in for a purpose?

Q. Just a minute. Don't let us misunderstand each other—

The Master—I think that you are getting rather away from the idea of cross-examination, and the answering of questions; you are getting into an argument. I hope that you will avoid that as much as possible.

Mr. Whipple—I think, if Your Honor please, that Mr. Krauthoff wants to see if the words "written consent" are not there, and if he has not discovered that it will be an indulgence to let him do it.

Mr. Krauthoff—The language of the Manual is "by a unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting."

Mr. Whipple—Yes, that is the point.

Q. Now, your statement, as I understand it, in the light of Mr. Whipple's assistance, is that Mrs. Eddy, having physically ceased to exist, it is no longer possible to get the consent of the Pastor Emeritus, given in her own handwriting, and, for that reason, The Christian Science Board of Directors did not have the power to elect the editors.

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, I did not make that suggestion. It was not with my assistance; and it is not a proper thing to incorporate in the question of counsel. It is perfectly obvious right there, and this witness, in speaking of it, asks if Mr. Krauthoff did not think that Mrs. Eddy put that in as a stipulation; that it should be in her own handwriting, for a purpose; and it is perfectly obvious what the purpose was.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I have the question read?

Mr. Whipple—I object to the question, because it incorporates an improper statement.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well; I will ask it in another form.

Q. As I understand it, Mr. Eustace, your statement is this: that this Manual says by unanimous vote of The Christian Science Board of Directors and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus, given in her own handwriting. Your statement is, as Mary Baker Eddy has physically passed on and hence it is physically impossible to get her consent; given in her own handwriting, it becomes impossible for the Board of Directors to elect editors? A. I see no way by which they could do such a thing.

Q. Then Mr. Eustace, as to these things that were done under the Deed of Trust of which Mr. Whipple spoke in the statement which I read to you, and to which you agreed, those are just as binding now as they were when Mrs. Eddy was physically here, except that this interferes? A. Which ones are you referring to?

Q. About the election of editors? A. There is nothing in the Deed of Trust about that.

Q. Well, I am just telling you what Mr. Whipple said.

The Master—I think that we are getting for beyond the limits of regular cross-examination, when you undertake to ask him about something that Mr. Whipple said. I do not see what we have to do with that, for the present purpose.

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, if Your Honor please, here is the position that we are claiming about that. Here are statements that counsel made—

The Master—They are not the witness' statements. Now, you may cross-examine him on any of his statements, but I think you are wasting time when you undertake to cross-examine him on Mr. Whipple's statements.

Mr. Krauthoff—You mean I cannot ask him whether he agrees to that statement of Mr. Whipple or not?

The Master—That, to my mind, is not within the limits of cross-examination.

Mr. Krauthoff—Made in another proceeding.

The Master—You have asked him that, and had it answered. And now, let us not waste time on that any longer.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I beg Your Honor's pardon. I have no desire to be insistent, but I was going to ask him about other statements made by Mr. Whipple. In order that I may defer entirely to Your Honor's views on that subject, these are not statements made by Mr. Whipple in this present suit, as the counsel for the plaintiff said, which they would be bound by, as a matter of law, as against them, but are statements made by Mr. Whipple in another proceeding of which the Court in this suit does not take judicial notice.

Mr. Whipple—If I may suggest, Your Honor, wouldn't it be better to read those other statements and see if any objection is made? You have read one statement I made; in which the witness says he heartily concurs. Let us take another. Perhaps you will get through without much difficulty. At any rate, we shall have something to talk about, if there is an objection.

The Master—I am at a loss to see why we should have this witness interrogated about Mr. Whipple's statements at all. You are here now to cross-examine him on the evidence he has already given. I think you are getting away outside of the limits of cross-examination when you go into that sort of thing.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, perhaps Your Honor is referring to the federal rule which limits cross-examination.

The Master—Not at all. I do not invoke the federal rule, but cross-examination in the state courts has its limits.

Mr. Krauthoff—I appreciate that. The point I am trying to make is this, if Your Honor please. Here are certain statements made by Mr. Whipple of which the Court does not take judicial notice in this case, and contentions made by their counsel.

The Master—I think, when we have finished with the statements made by this witness in giving his testimony, we shall have accomplished all we can expect to do here.

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, very well, then. If Your Honor please, I thought it was proper to ask him about what Mr. Whipple had said at this other time and place.

The Master—I think that takes it too far from the immediate purpose for which we are here.

Q. Mr. Eustace, your attention was called this morning as to the language in the Deed of Trust, in which it stated it did not require that the trustees should be members of The Mother Church. In that connection, have you, or any of the other trustees in your presence stated to anybody, at any time or place, that The Mother Church would cease to exist as an organization? A. I certainly have not, and I don't know anything about what my colleagues have done. They never have stated such a thing to me.

Q. That never has become the subject of discussion among you? A. Never.

Q. I want to call your attention to paragraph 3 of your petition filed, for a citation for contempt, in which you say, among other things:

"Said defendants in various ways have thus and otherwise interfered with the management by the plaintiffs of the business of the Publishing Society, under and in accordance with the terms of the Deed of Trust, under which they derive their authority."

That is correct; your statement is that you derive your authority under and by virtue of the terms of the Deed of Trust?

Mr. Whipple—That I object to. I do not think he can be asked to interpret that, especially when, if he followed the guidance of cross-examining counsel, he would be interpreting it entirely wrongly. That sentence speaks for itself.

Mr. Krauthoff—Then I will ask him that question.

Q. That statement is true, as I read it to you?

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. I think that you had better have the petition here. You cannot retry that petition, you know. That is all settled by the judgment of the Court.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am not attempting, if Your Honor please, to retry it.

Mr. Whipple—What is your idea, then?

Mr. Krauthoff—We do propose to hold these plaintiffs to the logical result of the contentions they made in those cases.

Mr. Whipple—Well, the logical result of the contentions in those cases was expressed in the Court's decision.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, that does not end it.

Mr. Whipple—I think it does, for the purposes of this trial, or at least, I submit, if Your Honor please, respectfully, that it does.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, in your testimony in chief, you referred to the fact, as you claim, that a certain agreement made by the directors of the church with the trustees was broken within 48 hours after it was made. Now, what agreement do you refer to? A. That the trustees and directors should meet together, and work all their difficulties out through demonstration of their understanding of Christian Science, without the aid of counsel or the Court.

Q. Neither side receding from the position that they had taken? A. Neither side waiving their legal rights in the slightest.

Q. Now, in what manner did the directors break that? A. Why, by immediately handing to us a paper which brought up the entire contention again, that we had already settled to that extent, and asking us to virtually sign—turn over every one of our duties and responsibilities under the Deed of Trust, over to the Board of Directors, and constituting them the final and absolute authority in the Christian Science movement, which we absolutely refused once and forever to do, unless ordered by the Court to do so.

Q. Now, you say "immediately." When did they present you that paper? A. Why, in substance, it was presented, I think—we met on the Monday. I think it was on the Wednesday or Thursday that it was first broached.

Q. Now, to get the date clear, the conference among counsel was held on Saturday, the 1st of February, 1919? A. Yes, with the agreement that we meet on Monday.

Q. That is, that the trustees and the directors meet on Monday? A. Meet on Monday.

Q. And the trustees and the directors did meet on Monday? A. They did.

Q. That is, Mr. Dickey, Mr. Merritt, Mr. Rathvon, and Mr. Neal were present? A. No, Mr. Neal was absent in the south, but left word, as we understood it, with the directors, that he was in hearty accord, and was present at the meeting on Saturday when they agreed to do this.

Q. Mr. Dittmore was not present on the 3d of February, 1919? A. No, Mr. Dittmore was absent.

Q. Mr. Ogden and Mr. Rowlands and you were present? A. We were.

Q. And this was held at the board room of the directors in The Mother Church? A. It was.

Q. No one else was present at the conference? A. No one else present.

Q. Mr. Jarvis was not in the room? A. He was not.

Q. Now, on that occasion was the meeting harmonious or contentious? A. It was exceedingly harmonious.

Mr. Streeter—What was that date? Mr. Thompson—Feb. 3.

The Witness—It was on Monday, Feb. 3d.

Q. Were there any statements made at that time about the Church Manual? A. Why, I suppose—I can't remember all that was done, but as we had always done if the subject came up (and I suppose it probably did come up) we affirmed our unswerving allegiance to everything that Mrs. Eddy had written.

Q. You are not now able to state whether the question of the Church Manual came up on Feb. 3, 1919, or not? A. Why, if it did, it didn't come up contentiously.

Q. What was the next time; what was the first cloud on the horizon that you saw after the 3d of February, 1919? A. Well, the first cloud was on the Thursday—I think Wednesday or Thursday, when this question was broached of signing, or doing something.

Q. How was it broached, and by whom? A. Well, if it is no infringement of personal confidence, may I—Mr. Dickey and I had a conversation.

Mr. Streeter—Had what? The Witness—Mr. Dickey asked me if I would have a talk with him, and I did so.

Q. And did the question arise in that conversation? A. The question did arise in that conversation, and Mr. Dickey felt that something should be done.

Q. And when was that conversation? A. As I say, I think it was on the Wednesday or Thursday afternoon.

Q. Where did it happen? A. I think it was out at his house.

Q. How long did the conversation continue? A. I don't know; maybe an hour or hour and a half; an hour or an hour and a half; I don't know.

Mr. Streeter—Pardon me, Mr. Kraut-hoff. Wednesday or Thursday afternoon doesn't mean much? What day in the month?

Mr. Whipple—Wednesday or Thursday after the first.

Q. The 5th or 6th? A. Yes, the 5th or 6th.

Q. The 5th or 6th of February? A. I think it was then that it occurred.

Q. Now, what was Mr. Dickey contending for, if anything, in that conversation, Mr. Eustace?

Mr. Whipple—I do not object, Your Honor, to narrating the conversation or the substance of it, but to attempt to state Mr. Dickey's contention, that I do object to.

Q. I would be glad to have you tell now just what was said and done on that occasion.

Mr. Whipple—That is right.

A. You asked about the cloud. When Mr. Dickey broached our doing anything in writing, that instantly aroused in my mind a suspicion that there was something wrong; that this meeting that we had had was, after all, not gone into, apparently, in the spirit in which we had gone in, with the determination to absolutely work things out according to demonstration.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, you have stated your suspicion? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Well, he calls it suspicion; you called it cloud—referred to it as cloud. "What was the first cloud?"

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, we move to strike out his statement as to the suspicion. Wait a minute; I asked for the cloud. I guess I am responsible for that. I will withdraw the reference to a cloud. Let us get back to what was said and done.

Q. What did Mr. Dickey say in that conversation, and what did you say? A. Oh, I can't repeat the conversation at all. I really don't remember enough about it.

Q. What is the substance of it? A. Well, the substance of it was, as I have stated, that we should do something; that the trustees should do something to still a supposed storm that was arising in the field.

Q. What was it that the trustees were to do? A. We were to give a written statement, recognizing in substance that the Board of Directors was in entire authority, and that we were in absolute obedience to the Manual. The disobedience to the Manual was an absurdity, because we had never admitted for one instant that we were. The other, we never had admitted, and never would admit.

Q. Did Mr. Dickey claim any authority for the directors in that conversation other than the authority that he claimed under the Manual? A. I don't know what he claimed.

Mr. Whipple—I pray your Honor's judgment as to that; anything that he said.

The Master—What he claimed, the witness may state.

Q. What did he say? What did he say about it? That is what I mean. A. I don't know. It was more what was going on in the field that he talked about, and the desire to have the storm stilled, and he thought, I think—no, I can't say what he thought.

Q. Now, this storm in the field that he was talking about, was anything said on that occasion about that having any effect upon the affairs of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Not at all; not that I know of, on the affairs of the Publishing Society.

Q. Well, on The Mother Church? A. No, not in that sense.

Q. What did the storm in the field have to do about it, from anything Mr. Dickey said, or you said? A. Well, that the field was getting roused up over the propaganda which we cannot help but feel the Board of Directors put forth.

Q. Now, this "propaganda" that you are talking about? A. Yes.

Q. You have it in writing? A. We have it, largely what was reported to us; some in writing.

Q. And you think that the Board of Directors as a whole were responsible for that? A. Well, I can't say anything except that the results were there.

Q. Was that discussed at this meeting on Thursday or Wednesday, Feb. 5 or Feb. 6? A. That was in substance what was referred to, of course, to still the storm.

Q. Mr. Dickey then intimated that the trustees should make some statement in writing? A. That was, as I understood it, that we should make some statement that could really be given out.

Q. Did you object to putting it in writing, or did you object to making a statement? A. Well, my objection to the whole thing was that it was a renewal of that which we had determined to do by demonstration.

Q. May I recall your attention to the question? Did you object to putting it in writing, or did you object to the statement itself as being true, or not? A. Well, of course, I wouldn't put it in writing, and neither would I affirm it in any way. I think I have said 20 times that I would never acknowledge the Board of Directors as the supreme and final authority in the affairs of the Publishing Society. Mrs. Eddy established that with the trustees of the Publishing Society.

Q. Now, you declined on that occasion to agree to this proposition in writing that Mr. Dickey made. Did he have it in writing, then and there? A. No.

Q. Or did he speak about reducing it to writing? A. No, reducing it to writing.

Q. Well, then, you separated on this occasion, I believe? A. Separated?

Q. I mean, you and Mr. Dickey? A. Oh, no. In what way do you mean, separated?

Q. I mean you went home and left him? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Then you met again on the 10th of February, the following Monday? A. The following Monday we met again, yes.

Q. And who was present at that meeting of the trustees and the directors? A. I think the date you named—I think Mr. Ditemore was present at that meeting, either that or the following one.

Q. And at that time the written memorandum that you have spoken of, was presented? A. Yes, I think that was the meeting. Things have followed very rapidly, in rapid succession, but I think that was the meeting when it was absolutely handed to us to sign.

Mr. Streeter—What was the date?

The Witness—That would be the tenth, I think.

Mr. Streeter—Feb. 10?

The Witness—Feb. 10.

Q. Mr. Eustace, referring to Mr. McCrackan, in the year 1918 you took up with the directors on many occasions the question of the manner in which he was discharging his duties as an editor of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Well, I don't know that on many occasions—did I say?

Q. Well, I read your testimony, to show the matter was under discussion somewhat informally a number of times. A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Why didn't you exercise the power that you claimed you possessed of discharging him then, and why did you take it up with the Board of Directors? A. Why, Mr. Krauthoff, I have said over and over again that our one purpose and effort was to always cooperate with the Board of Directors in every possible way, and until they attempted to absolutely nullify everything, we never gave up hope of doing so.

Q. In your testimony in the contempt case, you were asked as to whether or not The Mother Church was regarded as the center of the Christian Science movement, and you said: "Yes, if you care to use such a term. I should not have applied it in that way." Is The Mother Church the center of the Christian Science movement? A. May I answer it in my own way?

Q. Certainly. A. I recognize—

The Master—Hadn't you better ask him first whether he did make such and such statements, if you expect to use it in contradiction of something he has testified to here?

Mr. Krauthoff—No; I am not using it in contradiction; I am calling his attention to it.

The Master—Then I don't think you have the right to use it at all.

Mr. Krauthoff—Very well; I will phrase the question in this way.

Q. Is The Mother Church the center of the Christian Science movement? A. If I may make an explanation, I will say yes.

Q. First answer it yes or no. Then you can make your explanation. A. Yes. But I take the Church, The Mother Church, in two senses; one the definition of the Church given in the glossary of Science and Health, "the superstructure of Truth and Love," which is, of course, identical with the definition of man, virtually, and then The Mother Church, as established in Boston is simply the outward expression of what you referred to this morning as the human organization.

Q. Then, if we may understand you aright, the organization to which you belong as a member, and is called The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, or The Mother Church, you do not regard that as the center of the Christian Science movement? A. Yes, I do, but I have an improving and enlarging sense of what that church really is.

Q. Well, as an organization, is it the center of the Christian Science movement, or is it not? A. Well, there again, I can't answer that question. Yes, it is.

Q. I call your attention to the statement of Mrs. Eddy.

Mr. Whipple (to the witness)—Pardon me; you hadn't finished.

The Witness—No, I hadn't.

Mr. Whipple—You say, "Yes," and you were about to add something.

The Witness—It is the center of the organization, symbolizing what the Church really stands for, but not in any other sense, as dominating another Christian Science church.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the statement of Mrs. Eddy in "Miscellany," page 236, line 12:

"Too many centres may become equivalent to no centre."

You are familiar with that statement? A. Yes; that is, with regard to reading rooms.

Q. And you are in accord with it? A. Yes.

Q. In exercising what you now claim to be the editorial control vested in the trustees, your attention was called to an article written by Mr. Merritt, one of The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. It was.

Q. And you directed that to be not inserted in the Christian Science periodicals? A. The trustees brought the matter to the attention of the editor and we agreed mutually that it would be wiser for neither a director or a trustee to write articles to be published in our periodicals at the present time.

Q. You received a number of letters from churches and individuals after you sent out this bill of complaint called the Bill in Equity? A. I suppose so.

Q. And you prepared a form letter of an answer to them? A. We did.

Mr. Krauthoff—I offer that form letter in evidence, if Your Honor please, from the testimony in the contempt case.

[Form letter dated May 5, 1919, from the testimony in the contempt case, marked "Exhibit 69," being as follows: May 5, 1919. Board of Directors, Mrs. Julia S. Selover, Chairman, First Church of Christ, Scientist, 810, Sixth Street, Devils Lake, North Dakota.

"Dear Friends:—We realize and appreciate in full measure your interest in the controversy which has arisen between the directors and trustees. We tried earnestly to prevent an open break. It was only when an institution founded by our great Leader for the promotion and extension of Christian Science was threatened with destruction, and that her inspired purposes were likely to be defeated, that we did the only thing which it seemed we could do, viz.: to appeal to the highest tribunal in the Commonwealth where our Leader established her trust, to determine the controversy and instruct us as to our duty in the performance of the sacred trust and confidence with which we had been endowed.

"While this appeal is pending, it is not becoming for us to discuss the merits of the controversy. We will ask merely that all Christian Scientists will believe that we have not taken this step without a full realization of its seriousness, and in the belief that what will ultimately result will be in the best interests of the Christian Science movement.

"Meantime, we ask that you will suspend judgment while we await the decision of a tribunal in which the whole world must have confidence.

"Yours sincerely,

"BOARD OF TRUSTEES."

Q. Now, then, you say here that the "institution founded by our great Leader for the promotion and extension of Christian Science"—that refers to The Christian Science Publishing Society, and that, you say, "was threatened with destruction." In what manner? A. By destroying the purposes of the Deed of Trust.

Q. You mean it would destroy The Christian Science Publishing Society for the directors to elect editors? A. I believe that the slightest divergence from what Mrs. Eddy's intention was would eventually destroy anything that she had established.

Q. Now as to that intention; is it your statement, Mr. Eustace, that from Jan. 25, 1898, the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society was conducted in the manner in which you now claim the right to conduct it, or is the claim you now make of recent discovery? A. In substance, yes.

Q. Which? A. It is conducted now as it was then, in substance. Of course, Mrs. Eddy herself directed it very largely, as she reserved the right in the Deed of Trust to do.

Q. You are only claiming now the right to conduct the business the way it has been conducted for twenty years? A. If that way has been correct and according to the Deed of Trust, yes.

Q. And if it has not been correct and in accordance with the Deed of Trust? A. No.

Q. In which way is it correct and in accordance with the Deed of Trust, and in which way is it not?

Mr. Whipple—That I object to, if Your Honor please. I do not want everything that Your Honor has to decide to be foreclosed, even by Mr. Eustace.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, we have the right to ask that question for this reason: this suit is brought upon the theory that for 20 years the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society has been conducted in the manner in which the counsel for the plaintiff in the year 1919 discovered that they thought it should have been conducted. The suit is brought upon the theory not that it should now be conducted differently from what it ever has been conducted, but that at all times it has been conducted in the way counsel now say it should have been conducted, and that the directors have assumed an authority and have ventured into a domain from which they were excluded, and that they have become ambitious; at one time they are charged with attempting to establish an oligarchy. Our defense is, if Your Honor please, that for 20 years, of which 10—more than 10, 12—were in the lifetime of Mary Baker Eddy, this Deed of Trust was administered precisely as we now ask it to be administered, and that during this time this Publishing Society obtained the great prosperity that is characterized in this bill of complaint. And we have the right to ask this man how much of it has been conducted in accordance with the Deed of Trust and how much of it has not.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, this suit was not brought, as stated by counsel, based on any theory at all. It was based upon a condition, not a theory—a situation which is set forth in the bill of complaint; and I cannot have Mr. Krauthoff continually stating what our theory was in drafting the bill, quite different from what anyone who drafted it ever entertained. We have set forth in the bill the facts upon which it is based, and the hypothetical questioning of a witness upon a theory which Mr. Krauthoff has entertained cannot be helpful.

The Master—Anything further?

Mr. Krauthoff—Nothing further.

The Master—You have a right to investigate with this witness the manner in which, so far as his knowledge extends, the business has been conducted, as a matter of fact, since the date of the trust deed; but I am unable to see that any good purpose can possibly be subserved by your requiring him now to point out how much has been in accordance with the trust deed and how much not. That requires too much of an opinion to be expressed by him upon the question which, after all, is one which must be settled ultimately by the Court.

Q. Mr. Eustace, are you familiar with the incident whereby the paragraph in the editorial of Mr. McCrackan referring to the Church Manual was eliminated? A. I think I am somewhat.

Mr. Krauthoff—That paragraph was read in evidence on the hearing of the contempt case and I will not now re-read it.

Q. What did you have to do with that? A. The same thing, pointing out to the editor what seemed to us a little impropriety in that being brought into an editorial at the present time.

Q. Had you at any time prior to that time, during your entire tenure as a trustee, undertaken to censor any editorial written by an editor of the publication, and to point out paragraphs to be taken out? A. Prior to the filing of the Bill in Equity, did you say?

Q. Prior to the time you took this out of Mr. McCrackan's article? A. Oh, we had pointed out many times things. We didn't order that taken out. The editor very kindly took it out.

Q. Many times you had pointed things out? To whom did you do it? A. We have pointed it out to Mr. McKenzie.

Q. Had you ever pointed out anything to Mrs. Knott? A. No, we never did.

Q. To Mr. Willis? A. We may have pointed out to Mr. McKenzie things about Mrs. Knott. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever tell Mrs. Knott you wanted any part of her editorials taken out? A. I don't think we ever did.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Willis to do it? A. No, not that I know of, although there were editorials that I might have thought could be improved.

Q. I am asking you what you did? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. McLellan that you wanted parts of his editorials taken out? A. No. I should say that we did not.

Q. When you came in as trustees you found Mr. McLellan was the editor of the periodicals? A. Mr. McLellan was editor.

Q. And he was also a member of the Board of Directors? A. He was.

Q. And a trustee of Mrs. Eddy's property. Or did you know of that? A. I believe he was. I don't know about that.

Q. And the directions that were given to Mr. McLellan with respect to the editorial conduct, were they given by the trustees to Mr. McLellan or by the directors to Mr. McLellan direct? A. Well, I can't speak for the directors. I don't know whether they gave him any instructions or not. Mr. McLellan, I believe, exercised his prerogative as editor to be editor.

Q. And as director to be director? A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. In what manner, Mr. Eustace, did the directors begin to arrogate to themselves the claim that the publications were theirs and under their control? A. Why, I think the letters that we have on file show that.

Q. Did the directors at any time claim that the publications were the personal property of the directors? A. Oh, I don't suppose so.

Q. They did claim that the publications were the publications of The Mother Church? A. I don't know what their claim was. It was very difficult for us to understand it. It seemed to be so inclusive of everything that the Deed of Trust contained.

Q. Heretofore your attention was directed to a memorandum offered in evidence as Exhibit 4a, being the letter of Sept. 30, 1918, in which you undertook to set out your views. As I understand your statement, that memorandum was correct at the time it was made and is still correct. Is that true, Mr. Eustace? A. Largely so. I see no—that is, the spirit of it is absolutely true.

Q. Then in this memorandum of Sept. 30, 1918, you refer to a certain memorandum prepared by the Board of Directors and presented to the Board of Trustees for their acceptance at certain joint conferences held by the two boards in the month of February, 1916. That, I understand, is the memorandum that is set forth in Mr. Dittmore's pleadings? A. It is, I believe.

Q. And you rejected that memorandum at the time as a contravention of the Deed of Trust and of the Church Manual? A. We did.

Q. In this letter of Sept. 30, 1918, you make this statement:

"In order to make the question perfectly clear, we wish to state, in our Leader's words, that the Deed of Trust, under which the trustees legally operate, was prepared by our Leader and given as 'a Gift to The Mother Church.'"

That is your understanding of it? A. Why, everything that induces people to accept the teachings of Christian Science must inevitably be a gift to The Mother Church, and that is the work of The Christian Science Publishing Society, to promote the interests of Christian Science.

Q. In order that The Mother Church — A. It must always inure to the prosperity of The Mother Church.

Q. And anything that interferes with the prosperity and the harmony and the efficiency of The Mother Church interferes with Christian Science? A. Any disobedience to the Deed of Trust as given by our Leader, would certainly do so.

Q. And also with the Manual? A. With anything she has written.

(Recess.)

Mr. Krauthoff—It being 3 o'clock, does Your Honor wish to take a recess of five minutes? I think that perhaps an intermission of five minutes would be grateful at this time.

The Master—What do counsel say about it? I have no objection. If you all agree, we will stop for five minutes.

Mr. Whipple—I understand that that is not to be a precedent. We have not usually been interrupting the afternoon session, which is shorter than the morning session. If you want an intermission this afternoon, I see no objection to it, but I do not think that we ought to do it every day. If we do, we shall lose about 15 minutes in the afternoon.

Mr. Krauthoff—I do not want it on my own account.

The Master—Perhaps, when the intermission is taken, it would be well to open not only all the windows, but the doors, for five minutes.

[Recess of five minutes.]

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, your attention was directed this morning to certain returns made by the trustees under the income tax law, and to the city assessors of Boston, and also to the matter of second-class postage. Have you found your various files on those returns? A. We have not.

Q. Did you look for them? A. We had them looked for.

Mr. Watts—We will try to have them in the morning.

Q. Will you please look those up and produce them in the morning? A. We will have another look for them, Mr. Krauthoff. We did not have very long to look this noon-time.

Q. With respect to the selection of Mr. Rowlands as a trustee, how was your attention first directed to Mr. Rowlands as an eligible one to be named as trustee? A. Mr. Rowlands I met a number of years before, and everything that I had ever heard about Mr. Rowlands confirmed me in the impression that I had when I first met him, that he was a devout, consecrated Christian Scientist, and a thoroughly alive, awake, business man.

Q. And in that way led up to appointing him trustee in 1917? A. We did.

Q. In the letter of Sept. 30, 1918 (Exhibit 4a), this statement is found: "This Deed of Trust, according to Sec. 1 of Art. XXV of the Church Manual, is inferentially incorporated as part and parcel of the Church Manual." That statement was true at the time, Mr. Eustace? A. It was.

Q. And still is? A. So far as I know, it always will be.

Q. Mr. Whipple asked you if you had written that at a time when you had consulted counsel, and your answer was that you had not. Now that you have consulted counsel, you are still of the same opinion? A. That it is inferentially incorporated in the Church Manual?

Q. Yes. A. Why, self-evidently so. It is referred to there.

Q. In consulting with your counsel, what works of Mary Baker Eddy did you submit to them? A. Any they asked for.

Q. And what was that? A. I think the Church Manual, all the history of the Publishing Society, and of course the Deed of Trust and the Church Manual.

Q. And what other history of the Publishing Society did you submit? A. Just the old incorporation papers, and anything that we had leading up to that, and the dissolution of that.

Q. Do you mean the incorporation papers of The Christian Science Publishing Society, formed in April, 1917? A. No; no; there was—

Q. 1897, I mean. A. In 1897, I suppose so, yes; I think that that was the date it was formed.

Q. You haven't the records of that society? A. Of that corporation? Yes.

Q. Yes. You say you have those records? A. Yes, we have them.

Q. And those were submitted to counsel? A. Yes.

Q. You stated, I believe, that the instrument of Jan. 15, 1898, which you had copied into the book, had not been submitted to them—the document which is headed "Gift to The Mother Church"? A. No; nothing had been submitted to them prior to that letter of Sept. 30.

Q. I mean you had never submitted it to them before their advice to you. I mean, as the basis for their advice to you, you submitted to them the Church Manual and the Deed of Trust of Jan. 25, 1898? A. And the correspondence that passed between the two boards.

Q. And then you stated that you also submitted to them the incorporation papers of The Christian Science Publishing Society, formed in April, 1897? A. That we took to Mr. Justice Hughes. I do not know that it was submitted to Mr. Strawn and Mr. Whipple.

Q. Did you submit any other of the works of Mary Baker Eddy than the Church Manual and the Deed of Trust to your counsel? A. No, not that I know of at all.

Q. Did you submit to them this letter that you had written on Sept. 30, 1918? A. Why, certainly we did.

Q. You showed them that letter? A. Yes.

Q. And did you also submit to them the letter which you had written in November, 1915, that has heretofore been read in evidence? A. No. Do you mean the one as to which you asked me if I had prepared it?

Q. Yes. A. The one that I call a brief for the Board of Directors, being the passing on the cards?

Q. Yes. A. No; we certainly did not, because that was not one of our records; it was simply a little memorandum that had never been destroyed.

Q. In your letter of Sept. 30, 1918, you speak of the power of the directors, or rather the duty of the directors, which in the Manual is stated in these terms, "and it shall be the duty of the directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times." You speak of that as a disciplinary function. What do you mean by that, Mr. Eustace? A. I think the letter says there, but I am glad to state that I think that it is the duty of the Board of Directors, and I would like to add "of every Christian Scientist," to call the attention of the trustees to anything that is wrong, or contrary to Christian Science, in any of our periodicals.

Q. That is, after it happens? A. After it happens, always.

Q. But it is not the privilege of the directors to discipline in advance of the event? A. How could they do so?

Q. By giving directions. A. Why, certainly not! They haven't any authority to give directions.

Q. Your thought of discipline is limited to that which happens after the event? A. Why, yes. I never supposed anything else.

Q. In the opinion of your counsel that has been offered in evidence, there is a statement with respect to the direction which the directors had theretofore given about the organization and recognition of the branch churches and societies of The Mother Church. I want to call your attention to the fact that the directors sent to the trustees a notice to be put in The Christian Science Journal, the official organ of The Mother Church, over the signature of the Christian Science Board of Directors, and that your counsel, in their letter of January 27, 1919, said that that would appear in The Christian Science Journal. It did not appear. A. What was that in relation to, Mr. Krauthoff?

Q. Well, it reads this way:

"The following paragraph, together with its heading and signature, shall be printed in all issues of The Christian Science Journal hereafter printed, and shall be placed therein immediately before the matter headed, 'Instructions Regarding Cards':

"Organization and Recognition of Branch Churches and Societies of The Mother Church

"When members of The Mother Church in a community believe that the time has come for the holding of regular services, and the formation of a Christian Science Society, or the formation of a branch Church of Christ, Scientist, in accordance with Art. XXIII, Sec. 6 and 7, of the Church Manual, they should write to The Christian Science Board of Directors for information concerning organization and recognition as to a branch of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors."

Now, in the letter of the counsel, the statement was made that it would be inserted:

"The trustees also will cause to be published, commencing with the April issue of the Journal, and in all subsequent issues, under the heading, 'Instructions Regarding Cards'"

the statement that I have read to you.

Now, I have looked in the April, 1919, Journal, and the July, 1919, Journal, and have not found that notice. A. Isn't that in substance in there? I thought it was.

Mr. Whipple—It is in July, I think, because I have it before me.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I see April?

Mr. Whipple—April is not here.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I see the July Journal?

Mr. Whipple—Yes. There it is, under "Instructions Regarding Cards."

Mr. Krauthoff—That is to say, you have it in the July Journal under the general subject of instructions regarding advertisements. "Organization and recognition of branch churches and societies of The Mother Church." And then it begins: "When members of The Mother Church in a community believe," etc. But where is the signature of The Christian Science Board of Directors?

Mr. Whipple—Well, you have the book; he cannot see, probably; but if you say it is not there, why, we accept it.

The Witness—I really do not—what has the signature got to do with it? The notice was the thing.

The Master—You agree, do you not, that the signature is not there?

The Witness—It self-evidently, Your Honor, is not here.

The Master—All right.

Q. And it is not in the place that it is stated to be—not in the place that it is requested to be? A. I think, if I remember correctly, that thing was all done by mutual—we were meeting with the Board of Directors, I think, at that time, weren't we, again? I think that those things were talked over. It is not very clear to me, but I think that thing was done very conscientiously, because we were carrying out the spirit of our agreement to the very letter in every way as far as we understood it.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, in your direct examination your attention was directed to the pamphlet called "Purification." What is the history of that pamphlet? A. The history of that pamphlet—

The Master—That is too general, Mr. Krauthoff; ask him something direct about the pamphlet, if you desire to.

Q. That was a pamphlet consisting of a number of articles on Christian Science? A. It was.

Q. Who directed the writing of those articles in the first instance? A. We asked Mr. Dixon if he would write them.

Q. And he did write them? A. He did.

Q. When did you first take up with the Board of Directors the matter of putting those articles in pamphlet form? A. We didn't take it up with them about putting it in pamphlet form at all. We put it in pamphlet form.

Q. What was the first information the directors had of that pamphlet? A. I really do not know.

Q. They called your attention to it? A. They did.

Q. And asked you not to send it out? A. They asked it not to be sent out until they had had a conference.

Q. It did go out? A. After we had had a conference, yes.

Q. It went out pending the time during which they asked you to hold it up? A. No, that is not correct.

Q. You mean it was after? A. We had a conference with them when they brought up one or two statements that they felt in the pamphlet were not wise to send out. We had a general discussion of it, and when we left the Board of Directors we said that we would take it under consideration and decide what to do. We did take it under consideration and decided to make the one or two minor changes that were necessary and to put Mr. Dixon's name on the pamphlet, and then we ordered the pamphlet to go out.

Q. And told the directors what you had done? A. I think we telephoned them that we had; I am not sure whether we did or not.

Q. Wasn't that done at a time when these directors had asked you not to send that pamphlet out without their further authority? A. The last word, as I remember, of the conference was that we said we would take it under consideration and decide what to do, and then I think we telephoned them that we had decided to put the name on and make the changes, if I remember correctly.

Q. With respect to the election of Mr. Merritt as a trustee, will you be good enough to look between now and tomorrow morning and get the correspondence that passed between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees about that? In some way our files on that are not complete—I mean our original files. A. Did you say that passed between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees on the subject of Mr. Merritt's election as a trustee?

Q. In February of 1917. A. I didn't know that any had.

Q. Well, look and see, will you, please. A. All right.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, you recall at the meeting of Feb. 3, 1919, between the directors on the one hand and the trustees upon the other that you made a report as to the cards of the practitioners in the Journal, I mean the cards of practitioners and churches, and said this report showed that for the year 1918 you had received 698 applications from practitioners, that you had accepted 377, that 182 were deferred, and 139 pending. What is meant by a deferred application? A. Why, that the one applying is asked to wait and perhaps have more experience in practice, or for many reasons; maybe each one was a little different reason.

Q. Or more fully comply with the Church Manual? A. It might—something on that might be there, yes.

Q. And you had also deferred five applications for churches—I mean societies? A. I suppose that was so, yes.

Q. When you retained counsel and submitted to them the question of the discharge of your duties as trustees, did you do that for the purpose of finding out how you could reconcile the Manual and the Deed of Trust and comply with both, or did you do that for the purpose of seeing how you could retain your position as trustee without the directors having any control over you? A. First of all, I wouldn't give the snap of a button for my position as trustee. I am here to serve the cause of Christian Science. Therefore my only purpose was in consulting counsel to find out how we could absolutely carry out exactly what Mrs. Eddy wanted us to carry out.

Q. And as evidenced by all of her writings? A. Evidenced by all of her writings.

Q. And was your attention directed to any statute of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that had any bearing on this question? A. Not that I remember.

Q. No criminal law was pointed out that you were in danger of violating? A. Oh, we were shown—we saw clearly of course that we could not be untrue to our trust and at the same time retain the confidence that Mrs. Eddy had reposed in us in the Deed of Trust.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, if under some principle of equity jurisprudence which the Court may apply it is possible for you to administer both the Deed of Trust and the Manual, reconciling them in every particular without any conflict at all, you would be very glad of it, wouldn't you? A. Why, there is no conflict in one sense of the word in my mind at the present time, and never has been. The conflict has been on the other side.

Q. I am not talking about any limited conflict in any sense of the word, I am stating the proposition openly and broadly. If it is possible for the Court to so reconcile this Manual and the Deed of Trust that you can be loyal to both of them in all their particulars, without any claim of conflict on the part of anybody, you will be very glad of it?

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment.

The Master—What difference does it make whether he would be glad or sorry?

Mr. Krauthoff—It makes a very great difference, if Your Honor please.

The Master—He will have to take what the Court says, I suppose.

The Witness—I was going to say, may it please the Court, that I shall obey the mandate of the Court under any and all circumstances.

Mr. Krauthoff—Because the Court ultimately will pass on the question of what is wise and best for the whole situation.

Mr. Whipple—Who will?

Mr. Krauthoff—The Court will.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, that is right.

The Master—I cannot see how we are helped by inquiring as to what the witness' state of mind would be in the event of a certain supposed future decision of the Court.

Mr. Krauthoff—No; but the witness' state of mind as reflected in the action of his counsel may make it much easier for the Court to reach a right conclusion.

With that, if Your Honor please, I have no further questions to ask, except as to these documents that I have asked that the witness may produce in the morning.

The Master—Yes, you have.

Mr. Krauthoff—Expressing my appreciation of your courtesy.

The Master—Those will be forthcoming in the morning, I suppose. I suppose the next thing in order is to find out whether Mr. Dittmore's counsel desire to cross-examine.

Mr. Thompson—We would like to ask a few questions, if Your Honor please.

Cross-Examination on Behalf of Defendant Dittmore.

Q. (by Mr. Thompson) Do you feel able to be subjected to further cross-examination, Mr. Eustace? A. I should enjoy it, Mr. Thompson.

Q. Now, the source of the doctrines of Christian Science is the book called "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mrs. Eddy? A. That is our textbook.

Q. And that book has been interpreted and written about by various loyal Christian Scientists, hasn't it, from time to time? A. They have expressed their opinion on various subjects in that book.

Q. These very periodicals that we have been speaking of are intended, among other things, for the purpose of carrying articles conveying the correct interpretation? A. I think so; elucidating it according to the writer.

Q. I suppose there is a possibility for an honest difference of opinion, isn't there, occasionally, about the meaning of Mrs. Eddy in some of her writings? A. Oh, absolutely.

Q. It isn't any sign of a man's dishonesty or faulty character that he does not agree with every other Christian Scientist's interpretation of her meaning? A. Not at all.

Q. Take, for instance, two articles that have been referred to; one I think has been called "Purification," by Mr. Dixon. I think there was another one called "Possession," by Mr. Dickey? A. There was.

Q. It is not to be supposed that every Christian Scientist would agree with every word in either of those articles, is it? A. I don't think so.

Q. As a matter of fact, there was a good deal of difference of opinion, wasn't there, about them? A. I think so.

Q. At one time or another Mr. Dittmore has written articles, hasn't he, for some of these periodicals? A. Yes.

Q. It is not to be supposed that every Christian Scientist would agree with him, either, is it? A. No, it is not.

Q. Then we have, besides the doctrinal side, the business side of this enterprise. Although the Manual, as you say, is intended for a spiritual guide, it has certain practical aspects, too, hasn't it? A. It has.

Q. Among others the requirement that every Christian Scientist should contribute a dollar a year? A. That is one of them.

Q. And there are other equally practical suggestions in that book, are there not? A. Every member of the Mother Church.

Q. The Mother Church, I mean. And both directors and trustees are in receipt of what would very commonly be considered a very large income, are they not? A. They are.

Q. The publishing trustees have a considerable number of employees, have they not? A. Yes.

Q. Servants and agents. How many, for curiosity, are now at work for you? A. I think somewhere about 780 odd, I think it is.

Q. For the trustees alone? A. Yes.

Q. 780? A. I think something like that.

Q. Then there is this requirement in the deed that the net profits of the Publishing Society be paid to the treasurer of The Mother Church every six months? A. Yes.

Q. Subject to the order of the Board of Directors at the present time—that money, is it not—by Art. 25, Sec. 2, of the By-Laws? A. Yes, under the By-Laws. Under the Deed of Trust, it is subject to the order of the Church.

Q. It used to be subject to the order of the First Members and directors? A. I don't know about that, but I suppose whatever constitutes the Church.

Q. Well, there haven't been any First Members for a long time, have there? The old office called First Members has been abolished for a good while, hasn't it? A. As far as I know.

Q. The general understanding has been that the function formerly performed by the First Members has become vested in the directors? A. I suppose in a general sense that must be so.

Q. In a general sense. Now, you have to render accounts, do you not, or, rather, you do render them as trustees to the directors? A. We render them to the treasurer.

Q. To the treasurer, and I suppose there is a possibility of honest difference of opinion as to whether the accounts showing net profits are correctly computed or drawn on the right theory, or what not? A. I think that is quite right.

Q. You yourself have explained one possibility of doubt here this afternoon, have you not? A. I have.

Q. Some method of bookkeeping may be in dispute? A. I feel very strongly on that.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Dittmore? Roughly—I don't care for the exact date. A. Oh, I must have known him seven, eight, or nine years.

Q. Well, perhaps more than ten? A. Maybe.

Q. Well, you have known him ever since you were in Boston? A. Of course; I have been here seven years, that is right. I must have known him two or three years before that—ten years probably.

Q. Ten years. He has been a director, I think, since May 30, 1909, if I have got the date correctly? A. I think that is correct.

Q. And you have known him pretty nearly since that time, haven't you? A. I have virtually, because of meeting him in Boston.

Q. Now, you have often had conferences with him about both classes of questions, haven't you, about these doctrinal questions and about the business questions? A. I have.

Q. And you have recognized him as a man anxious to live up to his own conception of whatever his duty may be as a director, haven't you? A. No matter how much I might differ with that, I would have to say that I think he is.

Q. That is all; I want to avoid any controversy with you at present as to which is the correct conception; I am merely trying to get from you a brief and hasty picture of Mr. Dittmore as an honorable opponent of yours. Now he has been that, has he not? A. I must say that—I must give him credit for that, as I expect him to give me credit for the same thing.

Q. I don't think you will be disappointed, sir. You have recognized him for a good many years, or, I won't say that, but for a number of years, or since this present controversy began to grow up, and for a good while before it reached its present acute stage of litigation—you recognized Mr. Dittmore as a man holding contrary views to you, and perhaps to your associates, on certain matters of doctrine and also of business management, and also this great question of the relationship of these two boards? A. I think that is absolutely correct.

Q. Did you ever find him personally discourteous, profane or abusive in his conferences with you? A. Never to me; I never have.

Q. He has conducted himself as you would feel a Christian gentleman ought to holding a violent difference of opinion from another man, has he not? A. He has.

Q. Has he ever seemed to you arbitrary or vindictive in his methods of asserting his opinions? A. He has been strong in them, but I have been the same, so I have no—

Q. Now, this controversy began to emerge as a separate matter of controversy which was likely to lead to trouble perhaps two years ago, didn't it, or three? A. Yes; I suppose since 1916.

Q. And in the early stages of it there was a memorandum prepared, I think in 1916. You perhaps know that Mr. Dittmore himself drew that early memorandum of 1916? A. Well, I knew it for a fact when I saw it in his bill.

Q. Now, Mr. Dittmore was not a party, was he, to this attempted compromise of February, 1919? He didn't attend the meetings and refused to join in the effort to compromise, did he not? A. I should say he did not.

Q. Did not. So that any strictures that you may feel justified in making upon the action of the other directors in reference to keeping or not keeping their agreements would not apply to Mr. Dittmore? A. They could not apply to him.

Q. Now, I want briefly to run through a number of detailed questions touching them simply for identification, on which there was a difference of opinion known to you between the trustees, or yourself representing the trustees, and Mr. Dittmore, without the slightest regard to who was right or wrong on these particular matters. The first that I heard mentioned here was some question about your policy in corresponding with the field concerning Roman Catholics. There was some question long ago about that, wasn't there? A. There was.

Q. And in each case it will be understood that on these questions you held one view and Mr. Dittmore the other; I won't ask each time. A. Not always.

Q. Well, if there is any case where you held the same view let me know, please, because unless you say the contrary I will assume you and he differed. That might shorten our examination. A. Then may I say that at one time, on the Roman Catholic question, if we can call it such—

Q. Yes. A. —I thought we were quite in agreement.

Q. And at another time you seemed to fall out? A. At another time we were quite in disagreement.

Q. Then there was a question of the limitation of floor space for the sale of Mrs. Eddy's works before the contract with the Trustees under the Will, in December, 1917, wasn't there—some little discussion about whether you were allowing enough floor space for the sale of her works before that time, or wasn't there? A. I don't remember that.

Q. Wasn't that when Mr. McLellan was there? A. Mr. McLellan was there, and Mr. Stewart.

Q. Do you recall that there was some, not complaint exactly but representation made by Mr. McLellan to the other directors about being cramped for floor space there? A. Oh, yes; Mr. Stewart made a complaint.

Q. Mr. Stewart; perhaps that is what I am thinking of. A. Mr. Stewart made a complaint.

Q. And Mr. Dittmore, as usual, took a position on that one way or the other, didn't he? A. I don't know what position he took on that.

Q. Well, then, generally, isn't it within your knowledge that Mr. Dittmore was on one or two committees to confer on some subject—it makes no difference which—with Mr. Ogden, some question of difference of opinion between the directors and some matter of policy being carried out by Mr. Ogden, and Mr. Dittmore was on a committee of two of the directors to confer with him? A. He was on with the trustees; he came as a committee from the directors a number of times to the trustees.

Q. That is what I mean. A. Yes.

Q. Then there was this question of the right of the directors to approve appointments on the Bible Lessons Committee; that was a subject of controversy on which he took a position, did he not? A. He did.

Q. You recognize that Mr. Dittmore as a director, as he conceived of his duty, thought that he ought to find out, whether you agreed with him or not—he ought to find out as much as he could about the internal affairs of the Publishing Society, did he not? A. I believe he did.

Q. He wanted rather a detailed knowledge of what was going on down there, didn't he? A. He did.

Q. He wanted to know, if any employee was discharged what the reason was? A. It may have extended to that. I think it did at times.

Q. He acted as if he felt that it was a part of his duty, didn't he? A. Always.

Q. And on one or two occasions he made himself as a director, or coming from the directors, the spokesman of the directors in reference to the dealings between the trustees and some of their employees, did he not? A. Well, I wouldn't like to say—you mean he assumed—

Q. I don't mean that he assumed any authority that he didn't have from the directors, but I mean that he appeared there as a director making investigations about the discharge of some employees. I won't go into who they were. A. Yes, I think that is perhaps correct.

Q. Without going into any details there was a question—there was a more or less constant controversy, wasn't there, between the directors and the trustees as to whether Mr. Watts was treating the employees as they ought to be treated or not? Wasn't that a subject that frequently came up? A. I think it came up several times.

Q. And on that subject, as usual, Mr. Dittmore took one side and the trustees took the other? A. I think Mr. Watts could tell more about that than I can.

Q. I know it, but I have you on the stand now, so I want to get what little knowledge you have now. That is a fact, isn't it? A. I don't know that I can say that that is a fact, because I am not aware—

Q. Then we will pass on to something else. There was a question about the articles in the Sentinel and the news in the Monitor. There was at one time some talk about the articles in the Sentinel being stale and the news in the Monitor not being up to date? A. Well, the articles in the Sentinel being stale—I think that is correct. I don't know about the other.

Q. There was something about the Monitor not getting the current news quite as quickly as possible? A. There was one question that arose in connection with the armistice.

Q. That is, the Monitor lost the news of the armistice in the edition where it would be expected? A. They thought an edition should have been put out about that.

Q. There was an article in the Monitor about the War Relief, wasn't there, in which it was stated how much money had been sent overseas? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Dittmore thought that was a misleading statement, did he not? A. I have learned so since this suit began. I didn't know it before.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Dittmore, all through this controversy, took the position with the directors and trustees that there ought to be an independent audit of the books of the trustees made on behalf of the directors by some accountant selected by them? A. No, I didn't know he had said that.

Q. Did you know that any of the directors had taken that view? A. No, I didn't. That was something entirely—

Q. Something new? A. Something new to me.

Q. It was a well-understood fact, wasn't it, that Mr. Dittmore's views as to the relations between these two boards were rather, perhaps, not more extreme, but more concise and more definitely expressed than those of the other directors? A. I think that Mr. Dittmore expressed himself very strongly on those points.

Q. He stood for the supremacy of the Board of Directors in dealing with the Board of Trustees, did he not? A. He did.

Q. And on that he always seemed unwilling to make any form of compromise, did he not? A. I imagine evidently he—he didn't make any compromise.

Q. Yes, exactly. Now, then, there were some doctrines occasionally published that Mr. Dittmore thought might introduce schism or unnecessary division of opinion among the body of Christian Science people? Didn't he have a feeling that some of the articles were a little heretical that were getting into some of your publications? A. You are referring to the article "Possession"?

Q. Well, I don't know. Was there any such article? I am a mere novice on such matters as Possession and Purification. You tell me. You know about it. A. You referred to it a while ago. There was some discussion of the article, "Possession." It was printed in pamphlet form.

Mr. Thompson—I might say something about Purification, but I should defer to Mr. Krauthoff on Possession.

Q. Now, as to the extravagance of the trustees and the employment of incompetent agents, there was some talk made by the directors occasionally about that, wasn't there? A. I don't remember—nothing that impressed itself upon me at all.

Q. I only mean the mere fact whether you were not aware of the fact that Mr. Dittmore had got that idea into his head, that there was some extravagance on the part of the trustees, and some of the people that they employed were incompetent. Weren't you aware that that idea was persisting in his mind? A. No, I can't say that I was, in one sense of the word.

Q. Well, in some sense of the word. I don't care particularly what sense it is. A. Well, of course I realized, to use a slang expression, that Mr. Dittmore "had it in for" the trustees in the way they were managing the thing.

Q. Exactly. Then take the question of selling advertising space in the Monitor. Didn't you think he had something on the brain there, about the way advertisers were perhaps being misled as to the real circulation of the Monitor? A. I was dumfounded at that. I did not know anything about it.

Q. Well, is it a fact that in April, 1918, the actual circulation of the Monitor in Boston was about 2800? A. I think it may have been somewhere around 3500, or something like that—4000.

Q. As a matter of fact, the Monitor has generally in late years shown a deficit, hasn't it? A. Well, it always showed a deficit until the last year.

Q. Until what year? A. This last year.

Q. And that is owing to war conditions? A. No, not at all.

Q. What has turned the deficit into a surplus? A. It is the increased advertising. And of course our raising the price. We were selling at $5.00 and we increased the price to $9.00.

Q. That has turned what had always been a deficit into a surplus? A. Yes—with the increased advertising that we have had.

Q. Well, I suppose as long as the deficit lasted, that afforded a subject of criticism to anyone disposed to criticize? A. Oh, I suppose it might, if they didn't understand the operation.

Q. Now, do you recollect a meeting of Sept. 11, 1918? A. I remember it.

Mr. Thompson—I don't know that I do myself. I want to look it up.

Q. There was a meeting between the trustees and the directors on that day, wasn't there? A. There was.

The Master—What date is that?

Mr. Thompson—Sept. 11, 1918.

Q. Before that meeting there had been some personal conferences between you and Mr. Dickey, had there not, or some members of the Board of Directors? A. There had been some conferences between the two boards.

Q. It was quite common, wasn't it, that aside from these formal meetings of the directors, which were occasionally attended by the trustees, there would be passing to and fro between the directors and trustees in the same building and personal conferences on the subject which might later come up formally? A. Might be, I suppose.

Q. For instance, as when Mr. Dickey came to see you in February, 1919. So it isn't true that the only opportunities that the trustees had to discuss these matters was when they attended these formal meetings? That isn't true, is it? A. Well, of course we wouldn't consider the others as discussions with the directors; it would merely be as friend to friend.

Q. Friend to friend? A. Yes.

Q. They might have considerable bearing, such conferences, on what later might be done in formal meetings, might they not? A. I suppose they might, yes.

Q. That is, they were attempts to smooth things over and arrange matters so that when a formal meeting came some progress might be made? A. I think when the committees met that was always so.

Q. Do you recollect that on that occasion Mr. Dickey made a strong effort to conciliate the trustees or to smooth matters over? A. I do.

Q. And on that occasion he was almost apologetic, was he not? A. Well, he was very kindly.

Q. And he expressed regret for anything that might have seemed in the past an undue assertion of the power of the directors, did he not? A. Yes. It was especially on the point of the article "Purification."

Q. Now you recollect on that occasion the trustees took the position that they didn't recognize the directors as the successors of Mrs. Eddy in the full sense of the term? A. Absolutely.

Q. You took that position on that occasion? A. Absolutely.

Q. And that caused some dissent among the directors, did it not? A. I think it did, perhaps.

Q. And possibly our friend Mr. Dittmore may then have expressed his dissent; do you think he did? A. I am quite sure that he did then or later, very strongly. I think it was at that time that he did it.

Q. Yes. Well, at that time the subject of the interpretation of the by-law was taken up which enables the directors to declare vacancies on the Board of Trustees, was it not? There was some talk about that? A. You mean with regard to what?

Q. To the by-law that the directors may declare vacancies on the Board of Trustees. There is some by-law to that effect, is there not? A. Yes, there was a discussion of the word "expediency."

Q. You thought that it meant only for dishonesty or immorality? A. Anything contrary to the trust—the purposes of the trust.

Q. But you denied that it meant for any matter of policy which the directors didn't approve of? A. Absolutely.

Q. You thought that that power was limited to cases of absolute immorality where the trustee could be disciplined as a member, let alone being a trustee; that is, for something that would justify discipline as a member of the Church? A. Well, something that would justify any court in removing him.

Q. That is it—justify any court in removing him? A. Yes.

Q. Now there was another fertile subject of difference of opinion, wasn't there, on which Mr. Dittmore took what seemed to you an unyielding attitude, and that was on the decision of the question as to what goes out as official Christian Science literature—as to whether that decision rested with the trustees or the directors; that was always a bone of contention, wasn't it? A. I think that is correct, perhaps, to say that that always was a bone of contention.

Q. And on that, however the other directors might fluctuate from time to time, you thought Mr. Dittmore pretty unyielding, did you not? A. I don't know how the other directors—whether they fluctuated or not.

Q. You think they fluctuated on a good many other things, don't you?

Mr. Bates—I object to the question. That is characterizing.

Mr. Thompson—I press the question, and I press it in the case of Dittmore against Dickey. It is very relevant. I am asking for the conduct of the directors.

Mr. Bates—That is characterizing the action. I do not object to the fact, but I object to the characterization.

Mr. Thompson—You will find it in the bill. You will find you pressed in the Supreme Court for an order to the master which requires him to find upon several issues stated in the bill, affirmed by one party and denied by the other, regardless of its relevancy. You will find that issue stated right in the bill. I press the question.

Mr. Bates—I object to the form of the question, Your Honor. It calls for a conclusion and a description.

Mr. Thompson—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

Mr. Bates—It calls for a characterization of the action of the directors, not for what they did.

Mr. Thompson—No more than the bill itself calls for. You used some adjectives in describing—

Mr. Bates—I am not responsible for your bill.

The Master—What do you refer to in the bill?

Mr. Thompson—Your Honor has my only copy. It is along, I think, in the 14th, 15th or 16th. Mr. Dittmore is characterized as a man arbitrary, unfair, unruly, because he is the one who stood up for the position which they are now taking and have been taking for a day and a half or three days here to defend through the mouth of Mr. Krauthoff. He is the one who furnished them the data and they have been trying to put it in here.

The Master—If you will get back, Mr. Thompson, please—you refer to something in the bill.

Mr. Thompson—It is in our bill. I haven't any copy. Have you got a copy, General?

Mr. Streeter—No.

The Master (handing copy of bill to Mr. Thompson)—Just show me what you refer to there. You did not say what bill.

Mr. Thompson—I mean our bill, the Dittmore bill.

The Master—I understand you mean the bill in your case, Dittmore against the directors.

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir. A copy has been handed me now.

The Master—Just let me see what it is that you refer to.

Mr. Thompson—In their answer. Has Your Honor a copy of their answer?

The Master—No.

Mr. Thompson—I think I can find it quicker by seeing the answer.

The Master—Your answer?

Mr. Thompson—No, their answer. It is alleged in this bill that the directors did not consistently assert the position which they are now asserting, that the Manual supersedes the Deed of Trust wherever it conflicts with it, and that the Board of Directors is supreme—has the final supremacy over the Board of Trustees, but that from time to time they varied on that; they sought to compromise with the trustees, and that Mr. Dittmore objected to any compromise on those subjects. That is here somewhere, and if I have time I can find it.

Mr. Whipple—May I suggest you had better take it up in the morning?

Mr. Thompson—I will point that out to Your Honor tomorrow.

Mr. Whipple—If that is agreeable. It will give a little more time to look over the bill.

The Master—I don't find anything about fluctuating, and that calls upon the witness to characterize something.

Mr. Thompson—I will strike out the word "fluctuating."

The Master—It would be better to find out what they did. His answer whether they fluctuated or not would not help me any in the case as far as I can now see.

Mr. Thompson—If Your Honor looks over the bill and the answer you would see that it is an issue that does not involve just what they did but the general attitude of mind.

The Master—The general attitude of mind can be shown only by what they did.

Mr. Thompson—I suppose if I allege an attitude of mind a man who perceived it can testify. But it is not especially important; I will alter the word.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, there is one matter that I should like to have dealt with.

The Master—I want to hear what Mr. Whipple says.

Mr. Whipple—I should like, if possible, before we adjourn to have some understanding with regard to the opportunity we are to have to examine the directors' records. I think I am not using improper terms when I say that every suggestion we have made as to looking them over has been met with a somewhat impressive silence, and still they have talked a good deal about looking over our records. Our records from beginning to end are open. Now we shall want to examine these directors at a good deal—or may—at some length, with regard to their records. Our examination will be very much reduced if we can have the records to look over, to get at the things which are pertinent, so that we shall not have to occupy Your Honor's time while we are running through them to find what is pertinent to the issue here. And I would like to know now if counsel have anything to offer with regard to permitting us to look through those records.

Mr. Dane—If Your Honor please, I had assumed that Mr. Whipple's office was well aware of the arrangement that had been made some time on Friday or Saturday—

Mr. Whipple—I can't quite hear you.

Mr. Dane—Some time on Friday or Saturday of last week we were called on the telephone by Mr. Whipple's office and asked whether or not they could have an opportunity in advance of the hearing here on Monday to examine the directors' records, and we replied that we were having large abstracts made from the directors' records of all matters that related in any way to the pending controversy and that we would be very glad to furnish them with a copy of those abstracts. Some time later—I think the next day—we received word from Mr. Whipple's office declining to enter into that arrangement and saying in effect they did not want the abstract, but that they wanted an opportunity to look at the records, and thereupon we immediately wrote them that in view of the fact that they did not care for abstracts, the offer was withdrawn and that the directors' records would be at our office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, so that at the adjournment of this hearing they might have an opportunity to examine the records for themselves and determine what was or what was not pertinent to this case so far as their theory of the case was concerned, and that offer is still good.

Mr. Whipple—Well, now, if Your Honor please, I think that is a bit different from their letter, which is dated June 28, and which I hold in my hand, in which they say: "The records will be at our office immediately following the adjournment of court on Monday next, where they will be open to your inspection as to all matters pertaining to pending litigation." Well, now, that means that you are going to decide what you think is material to pending litigation, and let us see that. You have now said that we may examine them throughout, as I understand it, and see what we feel is pertinent to the pending litigation. That statement is entirely satisfactory. It is different, as Your Honor sees, from what is in the letter. I understand that the records are to be thrown open to us, and we will examine for the purpose of ascertaining what we would like to put in.

Mr. Dane—Of course, we had assumed counsel would not want to examine anything or would not want to put in anything into this case but what is pertinent.

Mr. Whipple—That is quite right.

Mr. Dane—I do not think there is the slightest difficulty if counsel for the directors and counsel for the trustees sit down in our office with these records, but what we can get what they are after and not have to take the time of the Court to bring the records into court.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, representing Mr. Dittmore, we want to ask a bit more. We want those records in court so that the records of specific dates which may occur to us, if we desire to submit them to the Court in comparison with some other matters, will be here, physically here, so that the Court can see them. And I will go further than what Mr. Whipple said, and ask you if without formal notice you will have the records of the directors here before the Master.

Mr. Dane—Certainly, the records of the directors will be here in court.

Mr. Streeter—That is all we want.

Mr. Whipple—Now are you going to have a representative at the examination this evening?

Mr. Streeter—I don't think so; if we want to we will go over.

Mr. Whipple—All right.

Mr. Streeter—But we have some sort of knowledge of what is in those records and what is not in them now.

[At 4:05 p. m., the hearing is adjourned to 10 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, July 1, 1919.]

July 1, 1919

SIXTH DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room, Boston,
Massachusetts, July 1, 1919.

Herbert W. Eustace, Resumed

Cross-Examination on Behalf of Defendant Dittmore, Continued

The Master—Proceed when you are ready, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—Yes, Your Honor. I will withdraw the question, "You think they fluctuated on a good many other things, don't you?" because I do not think it is necessary.

Q. (By Mr. Thompson) We have been going over, Mr. Eustace, a few of the detailed matters on which there was a difference of opinion between the directors and the trustees, in which Mr. Dittmore took a decided opinion, and I think I got down to the question of final decision as to what goes out as official Christian Science literature; and the trustees maintained that that final decision rested with them, and the directors were inclined to maintain that it rested with them. I think you said that? A. That is true.

Q. That is correct, isn't it? A. That is correct.

Q. Then the next subject to which I want to ask your attention is this. There was a question, wasn't there, whether the trustees were obliged to employ such manager or editors as the directors might elect, or whether they were to take the election in an advisory capacity. There was an issue there, wasn't there, between the directors and the trustees? A. Not until the present difficulty, I don't think.

Q. Well, I mean during the present difficulty? A. Oh, yes, of course.

Q. I think you have mentioned that already. A. That has been rampant.

Q. That was a very important subject? A. Yes.

Q. Before proceeding with that I would like to ask you a general question about Mr. Dittmore. When it is said of a Christian Scientist that he is a progressive and consecrated student of the Bible under Mrs. Eddy's writings, that means something, doesn't it? A. It ought to.

Q. It conveys a clear idea to your mind of what sort of a man a man is who is a progressive and consecrated student of the Bible under Mrs. Eddy's writings? A. I suppose that means under the teachings of Mrs. Eddy.

Q. Under the teachings of Mrs. Eddy? A. Yes.

Q. Now, was Mr. Dittmore such a man? A. I have no reason to say that he was not, because I suppose that he studied our Leader's writings and the Bible and applied them to his understanding.

Q. The next particular subject is this. There was a question whether the power of the trustees was absolute in formulating rules for the recognition of practitioners' cards and church cards in the Journal, or whether the directors had the final say about that.

That was an issue, too, wasn't it? A. Yes; that was somewhat of an issue for some time. I think perhaps not a very defined issue, but it was probably an underlying issue.

Q. It tended to come to the surface occasionally and underlay a good many discussions as a suppressed premise, a suppressed idea? A. The directors attempted, I think, a number of times to assert authority on that question.

Q. And you recognized Mr. Dittmore as a man who stood for the assertion of power in that matter by the directors, did you not? A. He did.

Q. Then I suppose, underlying all these controversies, as the subject became more and more vital and acute, was the contention that the directors were making, that if the position of the trustees was sound on these various matters the unity of the Church, as the directors called it, would be impaired? That was a phrase frequently used, wasn't it, in these controversies? A. Only of late.

Q. Well, I mean of late. As it got worse and worse that phrase began to be used, didn't it? A. Since the suit I think it has come up, largely.

Q. Then there was a question of the language of Paragraph 6 of your Deed of Trust, requiring the trustees to employ all the help necessary, and how to reconcile that with Article 25, Section 4, of the By-Laws, authorizing the election of the editors and manager by the unanimous vote of The Christian Science Board of Directors and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting. The directors took the view that, Mrs. Eddy having passed on, that left the Board of Directors with all the authority conferred by Article 25, Section 4, and that raised the question of the possible conflict between your employing and their electing these officials, didn't it? A. I suppose that is how they argued it.

Q. You recognized that that was Mr. Dittmore's position, didn't you? A. I never heard him state that, perhaps, but I supposed that was it, because it must have been their only basis of acting the way they did.

Q. Then there was another question. Paragraph 8 of your deed gives you the direction and supervision of all the publications, as I recall it, doesn't it—words to that effect? Then there is Article 3— A. I didn't get the question.

Q. I will put it again. If you don't hear me please tell me. A. Yes.

Q. Paragraph 8 of your deed of 1898 gives the trustees the direction and supervision of all the publications of the society, doesn't it? A. It does.

Q. And Article 8, Section 14, of the By-Laws, requires the directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times? A. That is part of that paragraph.

Q. I have just picked out the two parts that appear to me to be in possible conflict. A. Yes.

Q. Now, there was a difference of opinion as to the way to reconcile those two provisions, wasn't there, between the directors and trustees?

A. Yes; very strong.

Q. Then there was a question of Sections 6 and 7 of your deed, with regard to employing help. I have already referred to the provisions requiring you to employ the help; and Article 25, Section 5, of the By-Laws, "A person who is not accepted by the Pastor Emeritus and the Christian Science Board of Directors as suitable, shall in no manner be connected with publishing her books, nor with editing or publishing The Christian Science Journal"—you remember that provision in the By-Laws, don't you?

A. I do.

Q. Now, the question arose as to what was the reconciliation between the power apparently given to the directors by that provision of the By-Laws and the power plainly given to you by your deed to employ help, wasn't there? That would be a possible arguable question? A. Yes.

Q. Then, passing from these questions— A. That is, may I say this: That it would be from the standpoint I suppose you are speaking from. From my standpoint the Deed of Trust holds.

Q. Certainly. I am assuming here there are questions and that they have two sides. A. Yes.

Q. You have one side and the directors have the other. That is all so far. I am not going into the merits of these questions at all. I merely want to develop what the subjects of controversy were between you as a Board of Trustees and these directors, and especially what position Mr. Dittmore took in these various particular controversies that arose. Now, passing from these matters of the construction of documents, again, into matters of fact, wasn't there a question that came up pretty often about the extent to which the trustees were justified in maintaining a London bureau, and in publishing cables from London during the war? A. No, I never heard anything about that.

Q. You never heard about that question? A. Never until it came out.

Q. Did it ever come up before this suit was brought? A. Never that I know of.

Q. You don't remember that? A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact, the Monitor was paying out a very large monthly sum for cables from London during the war, wasn't it? A. No; only just for two or three months during the time of the armistice, when we had to send quite a little of our stuff under regular rates in order to get it through at all.

Q. It has been suggested to me—I do not know from what source—that in January, 1919, the cable expense was $21,208.75. Does that correspond to your recollection? A. Well, that wouldn't be very much. At that time, using the cables as we were, we instructed, or asked our editor, to not limit in the slightest the cables. When he went over there, we said, "If necessary, cable all your editorials. What we want to do is to publish a paper that gives the exact information and everything in connection with it, and do not hesitate to use all the money you want."

Q. And you had an elaborate London bureau maintained throughout the war, and also before the war? A. Not elaborate. You see it covers the whole of the Eastern Hemisphere.

Q. How many persons were connected with it? A. About 10 or 12, I should think—varied a little.

Q. Was there ever any question between the trustees and the directors as to the comparative expense of publishing Mrs. Eddy's works by the trustees and under Mr. Stewart, whether it was costing more when the trustees did it than it used to when Mr. Stewart did it? A. No, that has never been discussed.

Q. You don't remember that ever coming up? A. No.

Q. Now, were any questions ever raised by the directors in regard to the character of the advertising matter in the Monitor? A. I don't think of any; there may have been in some of our conferences some little thing, but I don't remember anything.

Q. Now I would like to ask you about another subject not having to do with your department at all, on which you may have some knowledge by accident. Is it a matter within your knowledge that for a year or two there has been some criticism by the directors or by Mr. Dittmore of the conduct of the treasurer's office? A. No, that is not in my knowledge at all, I don't know.

Q. Were you aware that at one time the directors caused an investigation to be made in the Publishing Society's office, by Mr. Merritt and Mr. Neal, of Mr. McCrackan's conduct? Did you know that a committee, consisting of Mr. Merritt and Mr. Neal, had been visiting your employees and making inquiries about Mr. McCrackan? A. No, I did not.

Q. You didn't know that? That never came to your attention? A. No, I don't think I ever knew of it; I don't remember it now and I think I would if I had heard of it.

Q. You knew, did you not, that in December, 1917, Mr. McCrackan had had a hearing before the board and had been exonerated from all charges? A. I knew that he had something to do with the board, that they had—

Q. They had had some sort of hearing? A. Yes.

Q. You knew that it had resulted favorably to him, did you not? A. I supposed so, in view of nothing happening.

Q. And it never came to your attention that afterward, after exonerating Mr. McCrackan, after a formal hearing, these directors, Merritt and Neal, without your knowledge, had been making an investigation among your employees for the purpose of obtaining matter to renew the charges? Did that ever come to your attention? A. No, I didn't know anything about that.

Q. This is the first time, isn't it, that the directors to your knowledge have ever attempted to declare any vacancies in the trustees? A. It certainly is.

Q. And do you recollect of any other occasion when the directors have ever attempted to declare a vacancy in their own body? A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. It is not within your knowledge that there has ever been such? A. Not that I am aware of. I don't know anything—I never heard of such a thing, but then I might not have heard of it even if it had been so.

Q. Well, it would be rather unlikely that a man as prominent in the Christian Science Church as you would not have heard if the directors had before this dismissed or ejected a director, wouldn't it? It would be likely to come to your attention? A. It might or it might not. I lived in California, and it is a long way off.

Q. Mr. Rowlands had an office near Mr. Dittmore's office, didn't he, in the building there? A. I think it is an adjoining office, I believe.

Q. Aside from these official controversies the relations between the individual trustees and Mr. Dittmore were friendly enough so that you were on speaking terms, would say "Good morning," and if you happened to feel like talking with him, you would talk with him, wouldn't you? A. I am very glad to say that we are on good speaking terms with all the directors and Mr. Dittmore.

Q. Exactly. Did you ever hear Mr. Dickey, before the vote of March 17, when they undertook to dismiss Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Dittmore at the same time—before that time did you ever hear Mr. Dickey say anything about Mr. Dittmore and any purpose of the directors in relation to him? A. Nothing any more than I might have said myself about Mr. Dittmore.

Q. I am only speaking of Mr. Dickey. You don't recollect any talk that he may have made? A. No, I do not.

Mr. Thompson—There is one letter here that, if I can find it, I want to ask you to identify; it may take me a moment, if you will pardon me.

Q. I have here only a copy, Mr. Eustace, but perhaps if you will look at it perhaps you can remember it by looking at this copy. (Handing paper to witness.) It is a letter that you sent Mr. Bangs. I dare say it has gone in already, but I want to be sure, so as to show your understanding of it. A. Yes; I think that is the letter, without the underlining.

Q. Yes, without the underlining; I will see that that is eliminated.

A. Yes. That was our letter, I think. We can give you a copy of it, anyway.

Mr. Thompson—It is not important enough for that. I will show it to Mr. Whipple, and he will have no objection, I guess, to that going in without the underlining.

Mr. Krauthoff (after examining paper)—That is all right.

Mr. Thompson—I will have that marked, if Your Honor please, and I will read it.

[Letter, dated Feb. 3, 1919, Board of Trustees to Frederick A. Bangs, First National Bank Building, Chicago, Illinois, is marked Exhibit 70.]

Mr. Thompson—It is understood that in the original letters there were no underlinings or italicizings, and the exhibit is to be understood as if it did not have any underscoring. The letter is as follows:

[Copy of Exhibit 70.]

“(Copy)”

“Feb. 3, 1919.

“Mr. Frederick A. Bangs,
“First National Bank Building,
“Chicago, Illinois.
“Dear Mr. Bangs:

“Your letter of Jan. 27 to the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society reached us this morning, and we are writing you at once in reply, to assure you that, although there have been some questions of a divergence of opinion between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees, these questions have all been satisfactorily and harmoniously adjusted and both boards are working in absolute harmony for that which every Christian Scientist loves more than all else—the cause of Christian Science.

“We know you will be glad to have this information, to enable you to correct instantly any impression to the contrary.

“Should you desire to write to the Board of Directors, we are sure they will verify this statement of the unified action of the two boards.

“With our kindest remembrances,

“Yours sincerely,

“BOARD OF TRUSTEES,

(Signed) “HERBERT W. EUSTACE,
“Secretary.”

Q. Now, may I ask you, who is Mr. Bangs; or, rather, what is his connection with the Christian Science movement? A. I do not know that he has any particular connection. He wrote us from Chicago.

Q. He is a Christian Scientist? A. Evidently. He wrote as one, and I understand he is one. I do not know Mr. Bangs myself.

Q. Was that letter a stereotyped letter sent out to a good many people, or was it an individual letter sent to Mr. Bangs alone? A. It was an individual letter sent to Mr. Bangs, but the substance of it was, I suppose, embodied in other letters, if we sent any others. I don't know that we did.

Q. You haven't any recollection whether, after this compromise of Feb. 3, 1919, you notified various persons who might be interested to the same effect? A. Anyone who wrote would be answered in that same way.

Q. I see. A. And do you know whether the directors were sending out similar letters also? A. Well, the understanding was that they would.

Q. And with whom was that understanding had? A. With the trustees.

Q. I know that, but what members of the Board of Directors particularly participated? A. Mr. Dickey, Mr. Merritt, and Mr. Rathvon.

Q. I see. You have personal knowledge that as a part of this compromise those gentlemen personally undertook to notify, wherever it might be appropriate to notify, persons inquiring in regard to the situation that the controversies had all been adjusted? A. I do not know that they undertook to do it personally, but that was the understanding between the trustees and the directors on that point.

Q. I mean, that they personally undertook that their secretary should do the notifying? A. They agreed with us that that should be done.

Q. And to that agreement or understanding, I think you have already said that Mr. Dittmore was not a party? A. Mr. Dittmore was not present at that meeting at all.

Q. In the course of your experience as a Christian Scientist, holding office from time to time in the Christian Science body, you have known of various cases of discipline, have you not, of individual members, or of minor officials of the Christian Science body, by the Board of Directors, for disloyalty or one thing and another? That is, such cases have come to your knowledge, haven't they, occasionally? A. No, they have not. I am very unfamiliar with anything of that kind.

Q. But you know of the fact that there have been in past years some such cases? A. I suppose there must have been such cases.

Q. And it is your understanding, isn't it, that under the Manual which governs these matters, persons coming up for discipline are, as a matter of common justice, and in accordance with Mrs. Eddy's wishes, entitled to be heard?

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please—

Mr. Thompson—Oh, I won't press it if you object to it. I understand you distinctly object to that question?

Mr. Krauthoff—I think I do.

Mr. Thompson—Very well.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, we prefer to state the reason.

Mr. Thompson—I am surprised that it should be objected to, but if it is we will withdraw it.

Q. Now, I have only a few more questions in detail to ask of you. Going back for a moment to this question of the treatment of your employees by Mr. Watts, on which I understood you to say Mr. Dittmore felt it his duty, if people came to him and complained, to make some sort of inquiry about it. A. I didn't know that I said that, because I did not intend to convey that, because that is beyond my knowledge.

Q. Perhaps you said this—that the directors felt that they had a right to know in general how the employees of your society were treated, and if they were discharged, whether they were unjustly discharged. That was one of the attitudes they took, wasn't it? A. Why, they never expressed that to me.

Q. Perhaps not; but you knew that that was their underlying feeling, didn't you? A. I think perhaps that may have been Mr. Dittmore's underlying feeling. I don't know whether the rest felt that way or not. I can't tell you how I got the impression, but it was more an impression, perhaps, than anything that was said.

Q. I would like to run over the names of a few persons concerning whom he may have had that feeling, and inquire whether in these cases there was a discharge or not. There was a Miss C. Louise Richardson, who was discharged on Feb. 14, 1918, wasn't there, or about that time? A. I would have to inquire into that.

Q. Did you ever hear her name? I am not asking you the grounds of the discharge; I am merely asking the fact whether there was such a person? A. We had several Richardsons in our employ.

Q. Well, I will pass to the next one.

Mr. Whipple—I will make this observation, Mr. Thompson, if it will affect your examination. Mr. Watts will be either the next witness or the second witness, and you may inquire from him as to all of these people, and then if you want to recall Mr. Eustace to ask him any questions about it that he may know, we will assent to that.

Mr. Thompson—I do not think it is really important enough. I will merely run through the names, and if you happen to know, tell me so, and if you do not, tell me—it is of no particular consequence. And there was a Miss Florence C. Hall who was discharged sometime in February, 1918? A. There was.

Q. And Mrs. Myra B. Lord, who was discharged sometime in 1918? A. There was.

Q. And George H. Clark, an advertising manager, who was discharged at one time? A. No; he resigned.

Q. He resigned? And John K. Allen. There was some trouble about him, wasn't there, in 1917? A. No trouble at all. The office was done away with, of advertising manager, and that left it vacant, and Mr. Allen simply went out.

Q. That is, he was in a way legislated out of office? A. Well, not in the sense of doing it to get rid of Mr. Allen, but his office was legislated out.

Q. That carried him with it? A. He went with it.

Q. Do you know whether he felt aggrieved at all at that situation? A.

No; I should say he did not. When I talked to him he took it in an exceedingly nice way.

Q. Then there was a Mrs. Mary L. Bryant, in charge of the lunch room. She was discharged, I think, in 1918, wasn't she? A. I believe she was.

Q. Then there was a Walter R. Zahler—a Hollander, a Dutchman, not a German. He was discharged, wasn't he? A. He was.

Q. And do you know that along in the early part of 1919 the directors got report from Mr. John Flinn and Forrest Price, Mr. Deland, Mr. Charles D. Warner, your Washington correspondent, in regard to the Monitor, and how it was getting on, and what changes they would suggest? A. I have heard of that to my absolute disgust.

Q. I have no doubt of that, Mr. Eustace; but I am only asking the fact. Did you know about the fact that they did have these reports from these men? A. I have learned of that, that they actually did get reports from the employees of the Publishing Society without the trustees knowing it.

Q. Then there was some question, wasn't there, about the attitude of the Monitor with respect to the packers' investigation, and Judge Hughes' connection with that? That made some talk, didn't it? A. Not that I know of, except with the packers themselves.

Q. The packers themselves? They didn't like it? A. The packers did not like it, no—although since then they have expressed, I think, a little different opinion.

Q. I am only speaking of one final editorial in which a postponement was suggested. That was what they liked, wasn't it? They wanted a little more time? A. I would have to see the editorial. I have forgotten which one it was; but they were appreciative of something that was put in.

Q. Have you sufficient knowledge so that if I should show you a column of comparative circulation of the Monitor since Sept. 30, 1912, for all these years since, you would be able to state whether it is correct or not? A. Well, we can supply you with the exact figures if you want them.

Q. I have no doubt of that. But I wondered if you carried it in your head so that if you saw this column of figures you could tell possibly? A. I might be able to.

[Paper is handed to the witness.]

Q. I do not know where it came from, but apparently it is authentic. A. No; those are not correct.

Q. Those figures are not correct? A. No.

Q. Then we won't put them in. A. But you shall have the correct figures; we will be very glad to give them to anyone.

Mr. Thompson—Perhaps Mr. Krauthoff would like them. I do not know that I care to have them. Would you be able to—

The Witness—I think I ought to be careful how I say they are not correct.

Q. I thought possibly you ought to be a little more careful than you were, because I assume that they were taken from some source without any intent — A. There was one figure there that seemed to me to be absolutely wrong.

Q. One figure? A. Yes. And the others did not seem in keeping, but —

Q. Well, it is of no consequence. If you do not offhand recognize them, it is of no particular importance at this stage. Now, as to the deficits, I would like to show you a statement here concerning the deficits in the Monitor from 1908 down to 1918, and see if that corresponds to anything in your memory. You have said, I think, the deficits have now ceased, but this was a period when there was a deficit. (Handing paper to witness.) These figures were furnished by the trustees, I think? A. Yes, I should say that those are correct.

Mr. Thompson—I will offer that in evidence if there is no objection.

The Master—Are those figures going to be a matter of dispute?

Mr. Thompson—I doubt it, sir. I think they were furnished by the trustees themselves at one time.

The Master—It must be something that is authentic and not questioned by anybody.

Mr. Thompson—I do not believe these will be questioned, sir.

The Witness—We can verify every figure for you and will be glad—

Mr. Thompson—It is to be understood that if these are incorrect you will verify them. I merely wanted to put them in now bearing on Mr. Dittmore's attitude—

The Master—If the point is in dispute, that is hardly evidence.

Mr. Thompson—One of the allegations in the bill is that Mr. Dittmore took a certain attitude with reference to the Monitor, and possible improvement that might be made in its financial condition, and so on; that he based that in part upon the deficits. I want to show in the case of Dittmore v. Dickey that there was a certain basis of fact for Mr. Dittmore's position, so that it cannot be called, as his fellow directors have characterized it, arbitrary, capricious and vindictive—that is all. I am merely trying to show that he was basing his opinions sincerely upon what he believed to be correct statements of fact—that is all, and not making them up out of whole cloth.

The Master—You show the witness certain figures. It does not appear where they came from. You ask him merely if those figures agree with his recollection.

Mr. Thompson—He says they are a correct statement.

The Master—Until we know something more about the figures it would not seem to be very important whether they agree with his recollection or not.

Mr. Thompson—Inasmuch as he is one of the persons who managed the Monitor and as he has had occasion to investigate the figures a good many times, when he says—and I think he goes a little farther than Your Honor suggested—I think he says it is a correct figure. Perhaps Your Honor would look at the statement.

The Master—It would not be easy for him to carry them in his head.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I see it, please.

Mr. Thompson—Certainly. If the figures are wrong they can be corrected.

The Master—If the point is to prove what the deficit was, I think there ought to be some definite way of showing it.

Mr. Whipple—May I suggest that I do not understand these percentage marks, and outside of that we can give you a more detailed statement year by year. But the figures themselves showing deficits for each year are substantially correct.

Mr. Thompson—Isn't that satisfactory to Your Honor?

The Master—You and Mr. Whipple now agree that they are correct?

Mr. Thompson—Except the percentages. We will leave out the percentages.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, leave out the percentages. And we will have one prepared which will give the annual deficit in building up this newspaper.

Mr. Thompson—Very well.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I be advised who prepared this document, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson—Possibly you may, but you can't be by me now, because I do not know. I think it was done by the trustees at the request of your clients.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I object to this memorandum without it being shown who made it.

Mr. Thompson—Why, you catch the point that Mr. Whipple and his clients state that aside from percentages those are correct statements of the annual deficits of the Monitor. Isn't it to your interest to show that there was a deficit?

Mr. Whipple—Let me suggest that Mr. Watts will testify—

The Master—It only goes in as the witness' testimony.

Mr. Thompson—That is all.

The Master—Those figures are, to the best of his recollection, substantially correct. You and Mr. Whipple agree that they are correct. Mr. Krauthoff is not prepared to make that admission at the present time.

Mr. Thompson—I do not ask him to make the admission. Let it stand as the witness' testimony.

The Master—It is the witness' testimony and nothing else.

Mr. Krauthoff—On which he will be subject to further cross-examination.

Mr. Thompson—Subject to further verification on the exact facts.

The Master—It is a part of the testimony.

Mr. Krauthoff—Then we object also, if Your Honor please, to these statements as being conclusions as to what is the deficit in the operation of the Monitor, and the manner in which the business is conducted is a matter of accounting.

The Master—As long as the witness is willing to say that it is correct, I will admit it. You may cross-examine on it when the proper time comes. [Paper headed "Monitor Deficit," covering the years 1908 to 1918, inclusive, is marked Exhibit 71.]

Mr. Whipple—The computation of the total we have not verified, and I do not suppose you have, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson—No, I have not. It is a mere matter of arithmetic. It is understood that the admission made by Mr. Whipple does not cover the figures of percentage in the right-hand column. The figures themselves are correct.

Mr. Whipple—Substantially.

Mr. Thompson—Substantially. Now, this shows that beginning with 1908 and 1909—I don't know which of those years this refers to—the deficit was $127,746.27; in 1910 it was $73,184.96; in 1911 it was $116,025.92; in 1912 it was $82,457.90; in 1913 it was $124,943.64; in 1914 it was $137,551.89; in 1915 it was $127,324.29; in 1916 it was $136,887; and for 15 months, 1917 to 1918, it was $89,099.92.

Q. Is it a fact, Mr. Eustace, that from Feb. 1, 1918, to Feb. 1, 1919, during that year the total spent by the Monitor on cable tolls was, practically, $95,074.01? Do you remember that? A. No, I don't remember the total, but I wouldn't be surprised at all.

Mr. Thompson—I think that is all, Mr. Eustace.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if the brother please—

The Master—One moment. Are you now proposing to cross-examine further?

Mr. Krauthoff—I wanted to ask as to the order of examination. Mr. Thompson has asked Mr. Eustace some questions that bear upon the case of Dittmore v. Dickey—the other case.

Mr. Thompson—That was my impression.

Mr. Krauthoff—And Mr. Eustace yesterday agreed to bring some further documents this morning, and I was now asking Your Honor's direction whether I should conclude, and also inquire as to the Dittmore-Dickey case before Mr. Whipple took up the witness, or whether you desired I should follow Mr. Whipple; because if I follow Mr. Whipple, of course then Mr. Whipple will have to follow me.

Mr. Whipple—That seems like a paradox.

The Master—What does Mr. Whipple say to that?

Mr. Whipple—Well, I should think it would be perfectly proper for Mr. Krauthoff to finish up any other or further questions, but I should hope that the game of battledore and shuttlecock as between the two defendants would not result in my failing to get any chance to redirect, because you may suggest something to Mr. Thompson, you see.

Mr. Thompson—I doubt it.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Thompson says he does not think that is so.

The Master—No doubt Mr. Krauthoff will remember that he has already employed two whole days in cross-examining this witness.

Mr. Krauthoff—And part of the third day.

Q. (By Mr. Krauthoff) Mr. Eustace—

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Krauthoff, first we have here the papers you asked for, I think. Do you want to call for them as you asked for them?

Mr. Krauthoff—If I may, yes.

Mr. Whipple—All right. Now, if you will name what they are I will hand them out.

Mr. Krauthoff—The income tax returns for 1918 and 1919.

Mr. Whipple—I hand you a duplicate original of a statement made by the trustees, purporting according to copy to be under oath, dated May 14, 1918, apparently addressed to the taxation authorities of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I have that, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Now wait and see if I am right on that. (Examining paper.) No; to the authorities of the United States, not of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts (handing paper to Mr. Krauthoff).

Mr. Watts—I think it was handed to both.

Mr. Whipple—I understand it was handed to both the federal authorities and the state authorities on taxation; that is, a statement similar to that and of which that purports to be a copy.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is not the one that my attention was called to.

Mr. Whipple—Well, then, perhaps you will produce the one that your attention was called to.

Mr. Krauthoff—I will. (Handing paper to Mr. Whipple.) Do you have the one on the second-class postage?

Mr. Whipple—I now hand you at your request a copy of the communication to Hon. A. M. Dockery, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, on six pages, from the business manager of the Publishing Society, dated Dec. 7, 1918 (handing paper to Mr. Krauthoff).

Mr. Krauthoff—May I have this identified and offered in evidence?

Mr. Whipple—How do you regard it as material?

Mr. Krauthoff—Why, just a moment. By the statement in the document that The Christian Science Publishing Society is maintained by and in the interest of a religious organization, namely, The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—How is that material? There has never been any question about that; it is perfectly elementary. Under the Deed of Trust we are bound to use all our revenues for the spread of the Christian Science movement. A part of them goes to The Mother Church to be used by them, and part to the trustees under Mrs. Eddy's will, and these are the results of efforts by the trustees themselves to spread Christian Science throughout the world. Now if that is not plain, I do not think any statement to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General of the United States can make it plain.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor—

Mr. Whipple—There isn't any question about it, and why should we lumber up the record with six or seven pages of argument upon the question to the Post Office Department?

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, the bill of complaint in this case tenders the distinct issue that The Christian Science Publishing Society is under a management separate and distinct from that of The Mother Church. This document shows that for the purpose of getting the second-class postage the trustees stated that it was maintained by and in the interest of The Mother Church, and—

Mr. Whipple—Now point out where they said that, please.

Mr. Krauthoff—and referred to the Church Manual.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Krauthoff, may Mr. Dittmore's counsel see that document?

Mr. Krauthoff (reading)—"Were any further evidence needed that The Christian Science Monitor is maintained by and in the interest of a religious organization, it may be found in the Manual of The Mother Church," and so on.

Mr. Whipple—Certainly, but that does not show that the directors are justified in attempting to assert such authority as they have been attempting to assert.

Mr. Streeter—Let me see it, please. (Letter handed by Mr. Krauthoff to Mr. Streeter.)

Mr. Whipple—It adds nothing, if Your Honor please, to what is plainly stated in the bill. We care nothing whatever about it, except for the sake of keeping this record within reasonable proportions, because the issue is not at all as Mr. Krauthoff has stated it here—not, at least, in our conception of it.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please—

The Master—One moment. While Mr. Streeter is examining this, wouldn't it be well to wait and see what he has got to say, and then you can answer them both?

Mr. Krauthoff—Certainly.

Mr. Streeter (after a pause)—We have nothing to say, Your Honor.

The Master—You have nothing to say? Then, Mr. Krauthoff, you will proceed, please.

Mr. Krauthoff—The point that we make, if Your Honor please, is—

The Master—Oh, no, I don't want to know the point you make. I want to know what you have to say in reply to Mr. Whipple's objection. I wouldn't go over and state again what point you make in the bill. We understand that. Now I want to know, how does this bear upon the issue raised by the bill?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, may I read one clause from the bill?

The Master—If it has not been read—if you think we are in danger of forgetting it, you may read it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I would prefer to read it in view of Mr. Whipple's statement. The bill states that the purposes of the donors of the trust—on Page 33, in Paragraph 18 of the bill—were: "To provide a management and control of the Publishing Society, separate and distinct from the management and control of The Mother Church." That is the allegation in the bill.

Mr. Streeter—What is the page of that?

Mr. Krauthoff—Page 38, Paragraph 18. This document which we offer in evidence has the distinct statement that The Christian Science Monitor is maintained by and in the interest of a religious organization, namely, The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Where does it say that?

Mr. Krauthoff—It goes on and says: "It may be found in the Manual of The Mother Church."

Mr. Whipple—Then you ought to have some way provided of putting in oral quotation marks.

Mr. Krauthoff—I am now stating—I am not reading the document in evidence.

The Master—Why do we need the whole document in order to get that part of it in? There must be a great deal in the document that nobody cares about.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, if Your Honor please—

The Master—Can't you agree that a certain answer was made to a certain question?

Mr. Krauthoff—In my judgment, the question cannot be accurately understood without taking the whole letter. It refers to the law under which it is being done; it states the argument of the trustees as to what they are; it quotes from the Church Manual in support of their right to reduced postage; it quotes from Mary Baker Eddy, and we offer the document as a whole document. I have no desire to have it made a part of the record if that is meant in the sense of spreading it in full; but as an exhibit, to be here for the purpose of referring to any and every part of it I offer the document.

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, if it will be satisfactory to distinguished counsel, I would offer this suggestion: the point I have in mind is more economy of printing and type-writing than economy of speech on the part of Mr. Krauthoff or other counsel. Therefore let it be marked, if you please, as an exhibit, with the understanding that it shall not be printed; but it may be read by Mr. Krauthoff to Your Honor, and I will ask him to point out then, when he does read it, the particular things that he thinks sustain any such thing as he has been saying to Your Honor, because it seems to us distinctly to show the other thing. And perhaps I may have the privilege of pointing out the other thing that it really does show.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is the reason that I wanted to offer it in its entirety.

Mr. Whipple—All right.

The Master—Mark it; let us get on.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now I inquired for your files on the election of Mr. Merritt as trustee—

Mr. Whipple—Aren't you going to read this?

Mr. Krauthoff—Oh, I will be very glad to.

Mr. Whipple—You did not read it, but I simply said I did not want to prevent your reading it, I only wanted to prevent the expense of its being printed, so I thought I did not want to deprive you of any privilege or right that you had.

Mr. Krauthoff—I have no desire to read it in full at this time, if Your Honor please. At the argument we will call your attention to such parts of it as we think are pertinent.

Mr. Streeter—Well, now—

Mr. Whipple—You don't want to read any part of it now that you think sustains this suggestion?

Mr. Krauthoff—I think all of it does. I will read all of it.

Mr. Whipple—Suit yourself, Mr. Krauthoff. I merely want to give you the opportunity to make intelligent your contention.

The Master—Now, Mr. Streeter.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, this record seems to be extending beyond all reason, so far as the expense is concerned. I may remind Your Honor that, as representing Mr. Dittmore, we are not in the position of our rich opponents. The directors, having, I am told, $1,000,000 cash balance in the bank, and the trustees with their large resources, can very well have all this stuff printed; but so far as Mr. Dittmore is concerned, he has to depend upon his own somewhat small resources and the resources of his friends. I want to make a protest at a proper time against extending this record at such enormous expense, so far as Mr. Dittmore is concerned. At the same time I do not want to undertake to keep out anything that ought to be put in here, and the arrangement that is already made is satisfactory to us, providing Mr. Krauthoff will furnish us a copy of this letter. This may be marked as an exhibit and not be printed, but he to furnish us a copy of it so that we shall have it, and then, not at the argument but before the argument—

Mr. Whipple—General Streeter, we will furnish you a copy now.

Mr. Streeter (continuing)—before the case is closed, Mr. Krauthoff, and Mr. Whipple, if there is anything in here that he wants, shall call attention on the record to what they propose to discuss. That will protect the rights of everybody, won't it, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson—It seems to me so.

The Master—You now have a copy?

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Whipple is going to give me a copy. Here is your document (returning paper to Mr. Whipple). We have a copy, and the understanding will be that it will be printed but that we are to be informed before this hearing closes what proportion of this unprinted document is to be relied on in argument by anybody.

Mr. Thompson—And all similar documents

Mr. Streeter—And all similar documents, of course, if there are others not printed.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, this letter has just been handed to me, and I will do this: at 2 o'clock I will ask the permission of the Court to read into the record the parts of it upon which I rely.

The Master—That ought to be satisfactory, I think.

Mr. Streeter—Perfectly satisfactory to us.

[The letter above referred to, being a communication from the trustees to Third Assistant Postmaster-General dated Dec. 7, 1918, is marked Exhibit 72.]

Mr. Krauthoff—I may keep this for the present, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, certainly.

Mr. Streeter—Now, what has become of the tax returns? Have those slid out of sight, or are they in?

Mr. Whipple—Not permanently, because we are going to put them in.

Mr. Streeter—Oh, yes.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Krauthoff has laid them aside temporarily.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now the Merritt correspondence?

Mr. Whipple—I hand you a copy of a letter dated Jan. 5, 1917, addressed to The Christian Science Board of Directors by the secretary of the Board of Trustees.

[Marked Exhibit 73.]

Mr. Whipple—The next is an original letter of Charles E. Jarvis, corresponding secretary of the Board of Directors, to Mr. Eustace, secretary of the trustees, dated Jan. 5, 1917.

[Marked Exhibit 74.]

Mr. Whipple—The next is a copy of a letter from the secretary of the Board of Trustees to The Christian Science Board of Directors, dated Jan. 10, 1917, bearing the stamp: "Approved Jan. 10, 1917, by the Board of Directors."

[Marked Exhibit 75.]

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, we offer in evidence Exhibit 73.

[Exhibit 73]

"Jan. 5, 1917.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"Mr. Thomas W. Hatten has informed the Board of Trustees that he has decided to resign his office of trustee, his resignation to take effect February the first, 1917.

"The remaining members of the board have interviewed Mr. Edward Merritt of Cleveland and feel that he is just the man for the office, and he is willing to serve on the Board of Trustees. They have therefore decided to fill the vacancy by electing Mr. Merritt a member of the Board of Trustees, but first would like to know if the Board of Directors knows any reason adverse to Mr. Merritt's election.

"Thanking you for as early a reply as possible,

"Very sincerely yours,

"BOARD OF TRUSTEES,

"Secy."

Q. (By Mr. Krauthoff.) On that date, Mr. Eustace, Jan. 5, 1917, you were secretary of the board? A. I was, yes.

[Mr. Krauthoff also reads Exhibit 74 and Exhibit 75, as follows:]

[Exhibit 74]

"January 5, 1917.

"Mr. Herbert W. Eustace, Secretary,

"Trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Mr. Eustace:

"I am instructed by The Christian Science Board of Directors to say in reply to your letter of even date advising the board of your intention to elect Mr. Edward A. Merritt of Cleveland to fill the vacancy on your board caused by the resignation of Mr. Thomas W. Hatten, that, not only have the directors no objection to the election of Mr. Merritt, but they feel that he will be a distinct addition to our Cause at headquarters.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "CHAS. E. JARVIS,

"Corresponding Secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors."

[Exhibit 75]

"January 10th, 1917.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"In acknowledging your letter of January 5th, in reply to ours of the same date, we are glad to advise you of the election on Saturday, January 6th, of Mr. Edward A. Merritt of Cleveland, as a member of the Board of Trustees and of his acceptance of said office to take effect Feb. 1st, 1917.

"Very sincerely yours,

"BOARD OF TRUSTEES,

"Secy."

Mr. Krauthoff—In this connection, if Your Honor please, we desire to point out that Exhibit 74, being the letter from the Board of Directors to the trustees, is stamped "Approved, Jan. 6, 1917, by the Board of Trustees." The answer, under date of Jan. 10, 1917, has stamped on it "Approved, January 10, 1917, by the Board of Trustees."

Q. Mr. Eustace, Mr. Thompson asked you something about the expense of cable tolls from London in the office of The Monitor, and you stated that you had instructed your editor to cable his editorials? A. Yes; if anything of sufficient importance arose to not hesitate to cable his editorials, or anything else.

Q. And who is the editor of The Monitor? A. Mr. Frederick Dixon.

Q. Was he in London at the time? A. He was in London. Of course he was in Boston when we gave him those instructions before he went over.

Q. I mean with respect to the time of these cable tolls. A. Yes, he was.

Q. You stated something about reports being secured from the employees of the Publishing Society by the directors. Did you refer to any particular director, or what director procured those reports?

Mr. Whipple—Why, if you will pardon me, what he said was that he had known that these reports were being secured today for the first time—

The Witness—No.

Mr. Whipple—Or, at least, since the suit was brought.

Mr. Krauthoff—I misunderstood him.

Mr. Whipple—And spoke of it as a proceeding on the part of the directors with which he was disgusted, that they should be meddling around among the employees of the Publishing Society without the trustees knowing it.

Q. Let me get that quite clear, Mr. Eustace. What report did you refer to in your testimony? A. The calling in of employees, especially in the editorial department, before the Board of Directors, and talking to them, and also Mr. Dittmore's activity with regard to employees of the Publishing Society in the editorial department, also.

Q. Now, when did the activities of Mr. Dittmore take place? A. Why, I suppose it was all taking place at the same time. It came on us as an absolute surprise, and seemed to be a regular conspiracy to undermine The Monitor.

Q. When did you first learn of Mr. Dittmore's activities? A. Since this suit, I think, was filed. It was all at the same time.

Q. Have you any knowledge at first hand of these activities? A. Only the knowledge that we have received resignations from certain employees, and their appearance—they gave us testimony as to some of the things that had been done.

Q. And this calling by the Board of Directors of the employees of the Publishing Society, as you term them—the editorial department—before the directors, when did that occur? A. I suppose at the same time, during the absence of the editor in Europe.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Krauthoff, perhaps it will help you to know that the record of all this business is in your directors' records. You do not need to ask at second hand about it.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, I was asking Mr. Eustace what he was testifying about.

Mr. Whipple—Well, he wasn't testifying; he was responding to Mr. Thompson's statements—

Mr. Krauthoff—I thought all of his statements were testimony.

Mr. Whipple—And his knowledge.

Mr. Thompson—In so far as he undertakes under your guidance, Mr. Krauthoff, to say that he knows that this was done by Mr. Dittmore, I should move to have it struck out, because as a matter of fact, the record shows it was a unanimous vote of the Board of Directors, so that Mr. Dittmore is no more responsible for it than anybody else.

Mr. Whipple—Apparently, as I understand, Mr. Dittmore was making the inquiries, but I think the Board of Directors' records, which we got at last night for the first time, show that the conspiracy, as it has been suggested, was hatched in the Board of Directors.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, coming back to the evidence, you spoke of The Monitor deficit, and you identified certain figures here as being, as you understand it, relatively correct. The Monitor is a part of the business of the Publishing Society? A. It is, absolutely.

Q. And in order to ascertain what it costs to publish The Monitor a somewhat elaborate accounting would be necessary, would it not? A. Yes; and furthermore, that deficit is a purely fictitious deficit from our standpoint. From the standpoint of the trustees, it is really not a deficit at all, in one sense of the word, because we take the business as a whole, and it would be impossible to determine, without a most elaborate system, as far as I am aware of bookkeeping, and know exactly what The Monitor was doing. And, if it is right, right here I would like to say, in connection with that deficit, that The Monitor was started at the request of Mrs. Eddy, without one cent of capital, and that deficit is therefore not any deficit at all; it is simply money that we have put in from our other periodicals, into establishing The Monitor of today.

Mr. Whipple—And its plant? Does it have any plant for printing it?

The Witness—Yes; plant and everything.

Mr. Whipple—Do these figures represent the cost of the plant?

The Witness—They do. They represent everything that has gone into

The Monitor, to make The Christian Science Monitor what it is today.

Mr. Krauthoff—May I suggest, if Your Honor please, that Mr. Whipple defer his questions until I am entirely through, because each of his questions opens a new line of inquiry for me and makes me talk longer.

Mr. Whipple—That is why I do it.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, in establishing a paper of the character of The Monitor, what is the practical experience in the earlier years of its history? A. Why, I think that it costs millions to do such a thing.

Mr. Thompson—Just a moment. If Your Honor please, if this is offered against Mr. Dittemore we object to it, because it is not shown that Mr. Eustace has ever been in the publishing business outside of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and if we are going to put him on as an expert on what it costs to start a newspaper, I think he, himself, would say perhaps he might not be wholly qualified to act as an expert on that topic.

The Witness—Modesty ought to make me say so, anyway.

Mr. Thompson—Therefore if you will be kind enough when you are urged to go into the realm of imagination to check counsel, I won't object.

The Witness—I will.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, that matter appeals to me in a different aspect, and for that reason we do not object to the question, but ask to have it allowed. The administration by the trustees of their great trust is involved in this hearing; and if as a result of Mr. Thompson's cross-examination there is any evidence that the building up of The Monitor has been an unwise piece of business administration, why, we want to show that these trustees at least have done their best; that they have acted in accordance with what they conceived to be good business administration. It has appeared from the testimony that it was at the specific request of Mrs. Eddy that The Monitor was started. Furthermore, we shall want to put questions ourselves to show that the enterprise of The Monitor is not to be judged by any pecuniary returns, because in accomplishing the great purpose of the trust it is one of the most effective agencies and of a benefit to the movement which is not easy to estimate. I mean, aside from any financial loss, if there really is any financial loss, in the establishment of the paper.

Mr. Thompson—I do not essentially differ from Mr. Whipple in regard to this matter. I offered, as I distinctly stated, this evidence about the deficit, not as against the trustees in the controversy between themselves and the directors, from which the directors have ejected us by expelling us from the board, or trying to expel us, but rather to show or disprove allegations of the directors in their bill in the case of Dittemore v. Dickey; that when we undertook to comment on what appeared to be a deficit in the running of The Monitor, on figures furnished by the trustees, we were actuated, not by an honest desire to do our duty, but by malice and a desire to build up a personal following, as it is stated, and other improper and ulterior purposes. The evidence was offered by me merely to show that a rational man in the position of Mr. Dittemore might rationally, sincerely, and honestly criticize and hope to improve the financial situation of The Monitor by reducing the deficit. Now I am a little surprised to see Mr. Krauthoff take up that testimony and endeavor to show that either that deposit did not exist or is justifiable. It would seem that that was Mr. Whipple's point rather than Mr. Krauthoff's point to make in this case, and would indicate that the directors are not very anxious to investigate the affairs of The Monitor, which is what we have always contended.

Mr. Whipple—I thought that was my job, but Mr. Krauthoff, anything that he does—and he has done a great deal to help me in the discharge of my job—is welcomed cordially.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, inasmuch as Mr. Thompson and Mr. Whipple have been good enough to refer to me, it is proper that I should state what it is that I am trying to do at the present moment. Mr. Dittemore claims that the directors of The Mother Church have acted improperly in that a large deficit, as Mr. Dittemore claims, resulted from the operation of The Monitor, and in that the other directors of The Mother Church refused to take cognizance of any such deficit. Now, I am trying to find out whether there was a deficit, and how it arose, and what there is to be done about it. I am not trying to prove that there is or that there was a deficit, or anything of that kind. I was trying to find out the truth about it, whatever way it operates.

Mr. Thompson—I cannot let that statement of our position go by unchallenged. Mr. Dittemore, for present purposes—

The Master—No one supposed you agreed to it. It does not seem to me we ought to listen to statements of that kind, and counter-statements, all through the case.

Mr. Thompson—I hope not, Your Honor; and if Your Honor feels that I ought not to reply to that, I will not, but I do not think there ought to be any confusion between objection to expelling a man because he differs with you in opinion and the question which of the two opinions is right. There is a vast difference between the two things.

The Master—You have stated the purpose for which you offered the evidence, and your view of it here, and there is no fault to be found with that.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, do you know of any fear in which the directors of The Mother Church stand with respect to the trustees of the Publishing Society?

Mr. Thompson—I pray Your Honor's judgment of that question, if that is offered against Mr. Dittemore.

The Master—We haven't got the question yet.

Mr. Thompson—I thought he had finished it.

The Master—Complete the question, please, Mr. Krauthoff.

Q. Do you know of any fear in which the directors of The Mother Church stand with respect to the trustees of the Publishing Society?

Mr. Thompson—I pray Your Honor's judgment, as against Mr. Dittemore.

Mr. Krauthoff—The allegation of the Dittemore bill, if Your Honor please, is that the directors have failed to take any effective action in the premises, "one reason for such opposition being that they stood in fear of the trustees of the Publishing Society."

Mr. Thompson—You don't ask that. You have asked Mr. Eustace. How does he know whether the directors were afraid of Mr. Dixon or not?

Mr. Krauthoff—I said in fear of the trustees of the Publishing Society.

Mr. Thompson—How does he know whether the directors were afraid of him?

The Master—I do not see how you can get at the directors' state of mind from this witness.

Mr. Krauthoff—This is the man of whom they are supposed to be in fear.

Mr. Thompson—I think they might well be.

The Master—It does not seem to me that that alters the case.

Mr. Krauthoff—It would seem that he would know if there were any such state of fear in his dealings with them; they have been rather elaborate.

The Master—It does not seem so to me.

Q. Do you know of any negotiations for any collusive settlement of this controversy between the trustees and the directors?

Mr. Thompson—I pray Your Honor's judgment, against Mr. Dittemore. I do not care about Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Krauthoff—The bill alleges, if Your Honor please, that Mr. Dittemore has reason to believe that a collusive settlement is about to be taken up between the directors and the trustees, and that certain private dealings are on hand between the directors and the trustees.

Mr. Whipple—There is in the Dittemore suit an allegation that he has reason to believe that a collusive settlement is likely to be made between the trustees and the directors in the suit in which the trustees are the plaintiffs. We are not in that suit at all, but of course if our people have entered into any negotiations for a collusive settlement they are not fit to be trustees, and it is only in that aspect that I should be very glad to have that question answered.

Mr. Thompson—Our objection to that word "collusive" is that it is a conclusion. If negotiations for a settlement are pending, that fact may be inquired about. Mr. Eustace's opinion as to whether any such negotiations are collusive or not is a matter for Your Honor and not for him or anybody else. I don't think you can put a conclusion like that to a witness. He is no authority on the subject, and I don't think he would pretend to be.

The Master—Why can't you ask him if there have been any negotiations regarding settlement, and we will judge for ourselves whether they are collusive or not.

Mr. Krauthoff—All right. I was using Mr. Thompson's language when I said "collusive settlement."

Mr. Streeter—Your Honor, it has already appeared that on Feb. 3, Dickey and Merritt and Neal did enter into a compromise, and they wrote all over the world that they had settled, and one of the letters has been—

The Master—I think it already appears. Is there anything further that needs to be brought out?

Q. Mr. Eustace, do you know of any efforts of settlement or any negotiations for settlement or adjustment, whatever it may be called, as between the directors and the trustees which have not been disclosed in your testimony? A. None whatever.

The Master—He says "none whatever"?

Mr. Krauthoff—He said "none whatever." And that is all, if Your Honor please.

Re-Direct Examination

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Mr. Eustace, while there have been, as you say, nothing that could be called negotiations for settlement since that time, I want to ask whether there have been overtures to the Board of Trustees purporting to come from the directors, as to whether some method could not be devised to have this controversy adjusted without a full hearing before the Court? A. Various friends of both boards have spoken to us, and I suppose have spoken to the Board of Directors, but—

Q. And have you or have the trustees stated always just your position and what could be done in that respect? A. Always.

Q. Have you concealed from anyone the terms upon which the trustees would make an adjustment? A. Never.

Q. I will ask whether it has been in substance that the Board of Trustees would do or assent to anything which enabled them properly to perform the trust upon their own responsibility, which was committed to them by Mrs. Eddy, the Leader of your movement? A. Those are the terms that we have always stood on.

Q. That is, simply that her great trust on the Board of Trustees should not be betrayed? A. That we must be faithful to our trust always.

Q. And under the terms of the trust? A. Under the terms—

Q. As she declared them? A. As she declared them.

Q. And anything short of that you would not listen to? A. We would not listen to for one instant.

Q. And anything that would give you the power to carry out that great trust as she laid it out—you would assent to anything else that they desired? A. Yes.

Q. I mean, you would make any concession? A. Anything right.

Q. Now, while it is perhaps out of order, something has been said about the announcement of this adjustment that you thought had been reached in February. My attention has been called to the April number of The Christian Science Journal, on page 41—a Special Announcement. Was that put out by the authority both of the directors and the trustees? A. That first of all appeared, I think, three times in the Sentinel preceding that April number. It was jointly agreed to by the two boards.

Q. I should have perhaps called attention first to the issue of the Sentinel of Feb. 22, 1919. Was that where it was first published? A. That was the first one.

Mr. Whipple—May I show it to Your Honor? It is the same in both papers. Attention has already been called to its inclusion under the heading, "Instructions regarding advertisements" in the July number. And it appears in the back of this April number of the Journal. Would it meet Your Honor's approval if I read it into the record rather than to have it marked as an exhibit?

Mr. Streeter—It seems as though that would be the best way. It is brief.

The Master—I hear no objection.

Mr. Whipple (Reading from page 41 of The Christian Science Journal for April, 1919)—

"Special Announcement

"The Christian Science Board of Directors of The Mother Church, with the concurrence of the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, announces that from this date all new applications of branch churches and societies, practitioners, and nurses, for advertisement in The Christian Science Journal, Der Herold der Christian Science, or Le Héraut de Christian Science, shall be made for recognition directly to The Christian Science Board of Directors of The Mother Church.

"The Christian Science Publishing Society has accordingly adopted a rule that only those cards which have first been approved by the Board of Directors of The Mother Church will from this date be accepted for advertisement in the Christian Science periodicals. Please, therefore, in future address all initial correspondence on this point to The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Department of Branches and Practitioners, 236 Huntington Avenue, Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

"Correspondence relative to payment for advertisements, renewal of cards, or changes of address should be sent as heretofore to The Christian Science Publishing Society."

The Master—What is the date?

Mr. Whipple—It is not dated, but the first publication of it was Feb. 22.

The Master—How is anybody going to tell what the words "from this date" mean?

Mr. Whipple—Simply by looking at the date of the paper in which it is published.

The Master—What is that?

Mr. Whipple—April, 1919, this is.

The Master—April what?

Mr. Whipple—It is The Christian Science Journal.

The Master—What day in April?

Mr. Whipple—No day is mentioned.

The Master—Then there is no date?

Mr. Whipple—No, Your Honor, except the month. The Christian Science Sentinel, in which it was first published, was on Feb. 22, 1919.

The Master—What do counsel understand "from this date" means there—April or February, or what?

Mr. Whipple—Well, we have always understood that whenever anybody saw the notice they would then send in their applications to the directors instead of to the trustees. We did not regard the date at the time we made the agreement as of any particular importance, because it was no financial gain, one way or the other. If they came to the Board of Trustees instead of to the directors the trustees turned them over to the directors. That was all that it amounted to.

The Master—It seems as if in publishing an announcement like that, using the words "from this date," some definite date should be stated.

Mr. Whipple—It wasn't very definite, but it was understood between the parties that the subject matter, after the date of the agreement between the parties, should be dealt with by the directors instead of by the trustees.

Mr. Streeter—Let me ask you, brother Whipple—was Feb. 22 the first date at which this announcement was published?

Mr. Whipple—I so understand it.

Q. Now, Mr. Eustace, prior to this arrangement which was reached on Feb. 3, the applications (new applications) for branch churches and societies—that is, Christian Science Societies—practitioners and nurses, for advertisement in your publications, had been all dealt with by the Board of Trustees? A. Always, except for two weeks or three weeks once.

Q. Well, now, always as long as you had been a member of the board, had they not? A. Always, yes.

Q. That is, in what distinguished counsel have called an uninterrupted practice? A. An uninterrupted practice.

Mr. Whipple—All the time you have been there. Now you spoke of a little interruption that you find in the records. I would like to offer, if Your Honor please, the correspondence on that subject. I have a copy of a letter to the Board of Directors dated Jan. 14, 1908, in which the Board of Directors who had—

The Master—Pardon me, Mr. Whipple. Have you got the whole correspondence right there?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—If you are going to offer it wouldn't it be well to show it to counsel on the other side?

Mr. Whipple—I was about to. I wanted to identify it.

The Master—Why not get it all together so that we can deal with it at once?

Mr. Krauthoff—We have no objection to that.

Mr. Whipple—I will first read the copy of the letter, dated Jan. 14, 1908. (Reading)—

[Copy of Exhibit 76.]

“Jan. 14th, 1908.

“To the Christian Science Board of Directors,

“Dear Brethren,

“We have today unanimously voted not to publish hereafter in the directory of the Journal any notices of churches or societies until the question of their recognition has been decided in each case by the Board of Directors. We therefore send to you applications which we have on hand, for your authorization to publish in the Journal directory.

“Since the Board of Trustees was organized this responsibility has been accepted by them, but a close study of the Manual shows that there is no warrant for placing this responsibility upon the trustees. If you should desire further information in this connection we shall be glad to furnish it.

“Yours fraternally,

“The Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society.”

[The copy of letter read by Mr. Whipple, being a letter from the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society to The Christian Science Board of Directors, dated Jan. 14, 1908, is marked Exhibit 76.]

Q. Now, after that for about two weeks you said the directors did perform the duties there referred to? A. Two or three weeks, I think, yes.

Q. At the request of the Board of Trustees? A. I think that is as it was.

Mr. Krauthoff—We object to that question.

Q. Well, this is the request following upon this letter? A. Following upon that letter.

The Master—Why not leave the letter, then, together with the fact that thereafter the trustees did act—

Mr. Whipple—I did, Your Honor. I said—following upon this letter.

Q. And your records show that up to that time uninterruptedly the trustees had always done it from the beginning? A. They do.

Mr. Whipple—I offer now the letter of Jan. 25, which Your Honor will see is 11 days later.

The Master—This is more of the same correspondence?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor—1908. On the same subject matter. (Reading):

[Copy of Exhibit 77.]

“The First Church of Christ, Scientist, “Falmouth and Norway Streets, “Boston, Massachusetts.

“Jan. 25, 1908.

“Board of Trustees of “The Christian Science Publishing Society,

“250 Huntington Avenue,

“Boston, Massachusetts.

“Brethren:

“In the absence of a by-law which sets forth the requirements for a practitioner's card to appear in The Christian Science Journal, the directors believe it is the province of the Board of Trustees to decide the conditions under which cards shall be published in The Christian Science Journal. They think the instructions on the back of the application blanks are very good, as are also those on the back of the applications for church notices.

“Sincerely yours,

(Signed) “WILLIAM B. JOHNSON, “Secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors.”

[The letter read by Mr. Whipple, being a copy of letter from William B. Johnson, secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors, to the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, dated Jan. 25, 1908, is marked Exhibit 77.]

Q. Then from that date does it appear in your records that the trustees resumed what they had been doing? A. It does—that there seems nothing to indicate anything else.

Q. And continuously did it from that time up to the time of your compromise agreement with the present Board of Directors in February of this year? A. That is correct.

Mr. Krauthoff — If Your Honor please, we object to the term “compromise agreement.”

Mr. Whipple — Agreement, then. Strike out the word “compromise.” I should not suppose you would object to what appears in your own records.

Q. So that as you stated a moment ago, with the exception of those 11 days, the work of dealing with the cards of the churches and societies and nurses and practitioners has always been done by the trustees and not by the directors? A. It has, as far as I know.

Q. And from the very beginning? A. From the beginning as far as I know.

Q. And last February at the request of the directors and as a part of the agreement—as we claim compromise agreement—the trustees gave it up to the directors? A. We did.

Q. Have they ever done it since? A. No.

Q. You are still doing it ever since? A. No. I beg your pardon. I thought you meant—

Q. Oh, they are doing it? A. We approve everything.

Q. Beg pardon. A. The trustees still approve everything before accepting the advertisement.

Q. It goes to the directors? A. It goes to the directors and they do the work on it.

Q. Now, prior to the time when the directors took that work over, with the assent of the Board of Trustees, did the trustees confer with the directors with regard to those questions when they arose—that is, what cards you should put in—both of practitioners and— A. Not at all.

Q. Were any objections made by the directors as to the manner in which that work was administered by the Board of Trustees? A. Occasionally in conferences they expressed the—they indicated that they thought we were pretty strict sometimes.

Q. Other than your being somewhat strict, did they criticize in any way the manner in which you administered that work? A. Not at all that I know of.

Q. I will ask whether or not you gave heed to suggestions which you did receive from the directors on any of those subjects matter? A. We were always glad to give heed to any of their suggestions.

Q. Well, that leads me to ask you the general question: Attention was called throughout the examination by Mr. Krauthoff to the multiplied number of instances in which the trustees seemed to have conferred with the Board of Directors in the administration of their own, the trustees', duties. You noticed that, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you whether or not that was generally your custom, to confer with the directors upon matters which affected the general lines of policy? A. As far as our records show we had one meeting with them, I think, in 1913, two in 1914, and our records apparently show no meeting in 1916.

Q. Well, did you have conferences with the individuals? A. No, not—

Q. None at all? A. Not that I remember.

Q. Well, there is some correspondence to which you have referred? A. There is some correspondence, I think.

Q. Why did you confer with them at all? A. I forget what the particular point was.

Q. I said why—not what about. A. I suppose to cooperate more closely.

Q. Well, you say you suppose so. Have you any doubt about it? A. No, I have no doubt.

Q. Did you feel it a duty, administering this great trust which was for the same purposes as their trust, to cooperate with them? A. Absolutely a duty.

Q. And in every way that you possibly could? A. In every possible way.

Q. Do you remember an instance in which you have ever failed to cooperate with the directors upon their request, upon any actual circumstance, upon any actual policy to be adopted? A. Not any of any kind that I know of.

Q. Have you disagreed with them in any respect as to what should be done in a particular instance or under a particular set of circumstances in the administration of your own trust? A. I think I can say no, in a general way.

Q. In other words, have you differed with them in any way except in declining to sign a paper which they asked you to sign saying that in the future you would do whatever they said and not what you thought best in the administration of your trust? A. No.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, we object to that question. The paper does not state that at all.

Mr. Whipple—Well, all right.

Q. Nothing except signing the paper which probably says what Mr. Krauthoff has in mind—except refusing to sign that paper? A. Well, that which led up to it; the various correspondence.

Q. Or anything further than from your point of view declining to abdicate your trust? A. That is exactly the term—to abdicate our trust, which we would not do.

Q. Now, referring for a moment to this matter of the administration of The Monitor, I understood you to say, and I will ask if it is a fact, that The Monitor was instituted at the personal request of Mrs. Eddy? A. It was, at her personal request.

Q. Did she outline the character of the paper that she desired published?

Mr. Krauthoff—One moment. The witness on direct examination stated that he never spoke to Mrs. Eddy, and whatever Mrs. Eddy did of which he knows is in writing.

Q. Did you find this paper in the archives of the Board of Trustees (holding up a paper)? A. I did; I can see through it from the back; I recognize it.

Mr. Streeter—What is the date of that?

Mr. Whipple—Aug. 8, 1908.

[Paper shown to counsel.]

Mr. Whipple—I am going to ask that this paper, which the Board of Trustees deem not only a paper of great importance, but of a peculiar sacredness, be not marked, and that we have marked instead a typewritten copy of it, but I will read it. "Box G, Brookline, Massachusetts."—under the crest which was the crest that Mrs. Eddy used, as you understand it, on her paper?

The Witness—I believe so.

Mr. Whipple (Reading):

"Aug. 8, 1908.

"Christian Science Board of Trustees, Boston, Massachusetts.

"Beloved Students:

"It is my request that you start a daily newspaper at once, and call it

The Christian Science Monitor. Let there be no delay. The Cause demands that it be issued now.

"You may consult with the Board of Directors, I have notified them of my intention.

"Lovingly yours,

"Mary B. G. Eddy."

The words, "Lovingly yours, Mary B. G. Eddy," being in what I think there is no doubt is her original handwriting.

Mr. Streeter—There is no doubt about it.

[Copy of above letter is marked Exhibit 78, R. J. M.]

Mr. Whipple—I desire now to offer a letter from Mr. C. A. Frye, in his handwriting, from Pleasant View, Concord, New Hampshire, dated March 12, 1901, addressed to Mr. McKenzie, who was at that time one of the Board of Trustees. It has to do with the Bible Lesson Committee. Do you want to look at it (showing letter to Mr. Krauthoff)? I will have the copy of it marked. Where it is not in Mrs. Eddy's handwriting it comes directly as a message from her through a gentleman who was at that time her private secretary.

"Pleasant View, Concord N. H.,
"March 12, 1901."

Q. Pleasant View was at that time the residence of Mrs. Eddy? A. I understand so, yes.

Mr. Whipple (Reading):

"Dear Bro. McKenzie:

"In reply to your letters of recent date, Mother requests me to say, at the time she sent in the name of Mr. Willis for a member of Bible Lesson Committee she did not remember that said Com. [Committee]"—

"Was" is evidently left out—

"elected by trustees."

[A copy of above letter is marked Exhibit 79, R. J. M.]

Q. You were asked in cross-examination whether you claimed authority by the Board of Trustees to select the Bible Lesson Committee, which writes up the sermons which are read in all the churches throughout Christendom—Christian Science churches, were you not? A. I was.

Q. And you stated that that was a part of the duty of the trustees? A. Was specifically stated in the Deed of Trust to be such.

Q. I noticed that Mr. Krauthoff and some others showed some signs of disbelief and some merriment when you stated that. Is that the message directly from Mrs. Eddy herself—that the trustees shall be responsible for those who are to prepare the sermons read in all her churches throughout the land?

Mr. Krauthoff—I object to that. It speaks for itself.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, it does speak for itself, better than anything I can say about it. But I should think that you would feel that you ought to do something about the attitude you took in regard to it, when you find that it is not only in the Deed of Trust but in this letter, although more limited.

Mr. Krauthoff—That attitude will be taken at the proper time.

Mr. Whipple—I wish you had kept it for the proper time.

Now, I wish to offer, if Your Honor please, two telegrams which are in the archives of the Board of Trustees. Here is one, which is probably a copy of one sent to the Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, Pleasant View, Concord, New Hampshire, dated Feb. 2, 1898; and this other is a copy of the reply. (Handing both papers to Mr. Krauthoff.) The first telegram from Mr. McKenzie to Mrs. Eddy, dated Feb. 2, 1898, reads as follows:

"Telegram received; office of assistant publisher was abolished. We can only establish new office and appoint incumbent. Shall we do so?"

(Signed) "Neal McKenzie."

[A copy of the foregoing telegram is marked Exhibit 80, R. J. M.]

Mr. Whipple—The answer reads as follows:

"Concord, New Hampshire, Feb. 4.

"W. D. McKenzie,
"99 Falmouth Street,
"Boston.

"She cannot further direct that business. Follow Deed of Trust. Has Mr. Bates handed it and mortgage to you?"

(Signed) "C. A. Frye."

[A copy of the foregoing telegram is marked Exhibit 81, R. J. M.]

Mr. Whipple—We will keep the originals, if we may, and let you take the copies.

Q. Have you had in mind and tried to follow that direction from Mrs. Eddy in regard to the question of editorships, as well as other matters connected with your press?

Mr. Krauthoff—May I ask to have the question read? (Question read.) That is the question, if Your Honor please, which relates to the whole case, and we object to it.

Mr. Whipple—Why, you say that these gentlemen have not been behaving in accordance with Mrs. Eddy's direction, and here is Mrs. Eddy's direction, "Follow the trust."

Mr. Krauthoff—We object—

Mr. Whipple—Isn't that just as sacred as any declaration as you have offered with regard to Mrs. Eddy's statements?—"Follow the trust"?

Mr. Krauthoff—We object, if Your Honor please, to what Mr. Eustace had in mind and as to what Mr. Eustace has said and done. The evidence is exhaustive on that subject.

The Master—I think he may answer.

A. I certainly have had in mind the spirit of that always.

Q. That is, Mrs. Eddy's own direction outside the trust itself? A. Her own.

Mr. Whipple—That is all.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Whipple—

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, I have a number of questions which have been suggested by the cross-examination. I would like to suspend for five minutes, because I am re-requested to go before Mr. Justice Pierce on a matter for a few minutes.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Whipple, before you do suspend, doesn't the telegram of McKenzie of Feb. 2 refer to a telegram received from Mrs. Eddy?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Streeter—Now have you that telegram?

Mr. Whipple—Apparently there was a suggestion about reestablishing the assistant editorship.

Mr. Streeter—Let me see the one of Feb. 2.

[Exhibit 80 handed to Mr. Streeter.]

Mr. Whipple—I will offer this.

Mr. Streeter—Is that the one referred to there?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, yes, no doubt of it. See, it is the same day. You let me just read that, and then I would like to suspend.

This is an earlier telegram:

"Feb. 2, 1898.

"Concord, New Hampshire.

"Rev. W. P. McKenzie, 99 Falmouth Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

"Be conciliatory till you get business into your hands. Papers are returned to him. She says let him be assistant P [publisher] now confidential. C. A. FRYE."

[The above telegram is marked Exhibit 82, R. J. M.]

Mr. Whipple—We may suspend?

The Master—We will suspend, then, a few minutes.

[Recess.]

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Reference has been made to certain correspondence in connection with the election of Mr. Merritt to the Board of Trustees. It appears that you wrote the letters? A. I did.

Q. Did you understand that the directors had any authority whatever with regard to the appointment of a trustee? A. None whatever. Mr. Merritt was at that time a lecturer, and in courtesy to the Board of Directors we naturally wrote them and asked them, not that we would not gladly consult with them on any question, whether a trustee or anything else, but not as having any authority whatever in the matter; and that was a matter of courtesy that we wrote to them about.

Q. Were you anxious that any trustee that you selected should be agreeable to and approved by the directors? A. Always, of course.

Q. Or that any editor that you employed should be agreeable to them. A. Absolutely. We wanted it so.

Q. Let me ask you whether you, in all these matters, attempted to comply strictly with the Manual so far as you could carry out the specific terms of the Manual? A. Always, in so far as we could do so.

Q. You said you had a good many meetings with the directors in 1917 and 1918? A. Yes. In 1916 we had I think 19 meetings, and in 1917 19, and in 1918 24, I think it was.

Q. You were shown an unsigned memorandum dated Nov. 20, 1915. You have the paper in mind? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Have we that exhibit here, Mr. Krauthoff?

Q. Meantime, can you state, without looking at it, what you wanted to state on your cross-examination when you were interrupted? A. With regard to that memorandum?

Q. Yes; how that paper happened to be drawn, what the purpose of its being drawn was. A. Yes.

Q. All right; state it. A. The question of the cards, whether it was the duty or privilege or right of the Board of Directors to pass on them for insertion in the Journal and Herald, had come up with the Board of Trustees, and I said that I would try, from the Manual and the Deed of Trust, to see whether it was possible for them to do that.

Q. For whom? A. For the Board of Directors to do it or not; and I dictated one afternoon to a stenographer just what Mr. Krauthoff read here. I do not think I saw that paper afterwards. I never corrected it until quite a long time afterwards.

Q. Did you correct it? A. Well, I just—in running over it once, I drew my pencil through two or three places that were self-evidently not correct.

Q. When? A. I can't tell you; it was some time afterwards.

Q. Not recently? A. Not in the last few months at all. I don't know when it was. I can't remember anything about it.

Q. Have you the corrected copy? A. I have the copy that I did that with. I made the statement at the time Mr. Krauthoff was questioning me that I made one or two changes in it. I never went through it to change it, to carefully take care of it.

Q. Will you let me take the copy that you did change? Are these red pencil marks your changes? A. Those are just the changes I made in it. There is only one that is of real importance.

Q. It appears that on page 6 in the third line of the first whole paragraph the word "Church" is inserted between the words "Science" and "organization," so that the sentence will read:

"In connection with this point, there is also to be remembered that The Christian Science Board of Directors is the governing power of the Christian Science Church organization." And that correction was made before any controversy came up here? A. Oh, yes.

Q. I mean such as we are now dealing with? A. Yes.

Q. The word "Church" was inserted by you— A. The word "Church" was inserted.

Mr. Whipple—I will call your attention to the other, and ask Your Honor to look at that at the same time.

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, we formally object to any alterations that this witness made in this document. It was a document that he prepared and it speaks for itself.

The Master—Just remind me what the evidence about the document is. It is a little dim in my recollection.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, it is a document which was delivered to The Christian Science Board of Directors, as this witness says, as a statement of the position of the trustees.

Mr. Whipple—Unfortunately the sworn testimony is a direct contradiction of that. Mr. Eustace testified that he did not deliver it and he did not know how it got into your hands. He said that it was something that he prepared for use which was not complete and which he subsequently corrected, and he was not permitted at that time to bring his corrected copy, and his testimony was that he did not know how you people got hold of it. And you see he has the advantage because he is really testifying under oath.

The Master—That being the fact, if you got his first draft by some means, why shouldn't he be allowed to say what his second was?

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, we have nothing to add to what we have said.

Mr. Whipple—Then on page 7, in the eighth line—

Mr. Krauthoff—Now, if Your Honor please, there is one other question, before Mr. Whipple proceeds. May I inquire of Mr. Eustace when he made those changes?

Mr. Whipple—I have inquired.

The Master—That has been brought out so far as the witness recollects.

Mr. Krauthoff—I did not remember that he stated when he did it.

The Witness—I said I did not know.

The Master—He can't remember.

Mr. Whipple—But he said it was not recently.

Q. Did you speak of months after the original? A. Oh, yes; it was some time after. I did not see the original for—I did not see it to pay any attention to it after it was dictated.

Q. I do not mean, to see the original, because it was what you spoke of as a draft. A. That is all; it was nothing but a draft, never intended for anything else.

Mr. Bates—May I call your attention, Your Honor, to the evidence, which shows that so far as Mr. Eustace stated, these have been made within a few months, and apparently since this dispute arose.

Mr. Whipple—He has specifically stated they were not.

Mr. Bates—And are self-serving corrections, and until we know definitely when they were made I do not think they ought to be allowed in evidence.

Mr. Whipple—He has said specifically that they were not.

Mr. Bates—You have put that into his mouth since.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no, I did not.

Mr. Bates—If you can fix the time when he made them, all right.

Mr. Whipple—I put all these questions before you or Mr. Krauthoff seemed to arouse yourselves to listen to the evidence at all, and he stated that he could not tell us just when it was, but it was before any of these subjects were put in controversy which are now in controversy.

Mr. Bates—Your Honor, I understood the evidence to be just the contrary—that he could not fix it as being before this time. I am willing to leave it to the record.

The Master—Suppose we let him try now and see what he says about it.

The Witness—I have not the slightest idea when I made those corrections, but it certainly is not this year, and I do not know that it was last year. It may have been sometime last year—I do not know; but it certainly is not this year.

Q. Were they made at all with reference to these proceedings, as the Governor has intimated, as self-serving declarations, to bring in here?
A. Nothing to do with this suit.

Q. Nothing whatever? A. I just simply ran through it, and I drew my pencil through what seemed to me self-evident things. It is not made for any purpose, anyway.

The Master—The point is to find out as nearly as you can when you did that.

The Witness—I am afraid, Your Honor, I can't say.

Q. Well, it was before the present year? A. It was before the present year, absolutely.

Q. What is your best recollection as to whether it was any time last year? A. Well, I do not know; I really have not the slightest remembrance. I know it was not this year.

The Master—It was not in 1919?

The Witness—It was not in 1919.

Q. Was it in 1918? Well, you have said as to that. You can't tell whether it was or not? A. I can't.

Q. But not in any way with reference to this controversy, as you have said? A. No. It is not worth while, anyway.

Mr. Whipple—Page 7, in the eighth and ninth lines, the words "would be" are stricken out, and in red pencil "might be" are written, so that the sentence will read: "And while it might be thoroughly within the province of the Board of Directors to request the removal of an advertisement, even one in The Monitor, or at least to discuss why the advertisement was in The Monitor," and so forth. Then on page 8, in the first full paragraph on that page, the words "subject to the final analysis, in any instance, of The Christian Science Board of Directors" are stricken out with a red pencil. Between the words "final" and "analysis," in red pencil is written the word "disciplinary." That was evidently an amendment before the whole thing was stricken out. That is erased with red pencil. So that the sentence as it originally read was this:

"It seems difficult to draw any other conclusion from the Church Manual and the Deed of Trust than that the entire selection, approval, and issuance of everything going forth from The Christian Science Publishing Society primarily rests with the Board of Trustees, subject to the final analysis, in any instance, of The Christian Science Board of Directors." Then the word "disciplinary" was inserted, so that it read: "Subject to the final disciplinary analysis, in any instance, of The Christian Science Board of Directors." Then the word "primarily" was stricken out with red pencil, the words "subject to the final disciplinary analysis, in any instance, of The Christian Science Board of Directors," were stricken out, so that the sentence read in this way: "It seems difficult to draw any other conclusion from the Church Manual and the Deed of Trust than that the entire selection, approval, and issuance of everything going forth from The Christian Science Publishing Society rests with the Board of Trustees." That is the way the sentence was left. Then the next sentence, as it originally was written, was this: "This conclusion seems to apply equally on all advertisements," and so forth. The words "seems to" were stricken out and "must" was written in, so that the sentence would be: "This conclusion must apply equally on all advertisements."

Now, I should like to have that paper marked the same number as the original exhibit, only having the letter "A" follow it, but I do not think that it ought to be printed again in the record.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is Exhibit 36.

Mr. Whipple—All right; mark it Exhibit 36-A, if you please, so that they can be compared.

[Revision of memorandum is marked Exhibit 36-A.]

Mr. Whipple—Now, may I exhibit it to Your Honor? That is the Page 7 which shows the first correction, and then the others appear on the following page. (Handing document to Master.)

Q. I think you have been permitted to state in your cross-examination your conception of the meaning of the words "The Mother Church" as distinguished from the directors of The Mother Church? A. I have.

Q. You have nothing to add on that subject? A. Nothing except that I wholly differentiate between The Mother Church and the directors of The Mother Church; in other words, The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Q. Did you find in the archives of the Board of Trustees certain rules which Mrs. Eddy had addressed in her own handwriting to the Board of Trustees? A. I did learn of those rules very shortly after I came here, and they were of immense importance to me.

Mr. Whipple—I want to put them in evidence. Do you object to my asking General Streeter if there is any question that these are in Mrs. Eddy's handwriting?

Mr. Krauthoff—No, I think not.

Mr. Whipple—I suppose the General knows her handwriting better than perhaps anybody else here.

Mr. Bates—I do not think so. We have some of her secretaries here.

Mr. Whipple—Beg your pardon.

Mr. Bates—We have some of her secretaries here.

Mr. Streeter—There is no doubt about that being in her handwriting—that first page.

Mr. Whipple—How about the second? A. The second is Mr. Frye.

Mr. Krauthoff—You may offer it in evidence.

Q. Will you read these—unless you can state them (handing papers to the witness)? First read the letter, if you please, from Mrs. Eddy's secretary, in which she transmitted the rules. A. This is—

"Pleasant View,
"Concord, N. H., Feb. 4, 1898.

"Dear Bro. McK.:

"I send you herewith a sheet which Mother wrote a few days ago for the trustees, but wanted to send by messenger.

Written on the back are the words. "For the Board of Trustees."

[A copy of the foregoing letter and inclosure is marked Exhibit 83. R. J. M.]

Mr. Whipple—I will now offer a letter from one of Mrs. Eddy's secretaries to The Christian Science Board of Directors, dated Dec. 7, 1904 (handing letter to Mr. Krauthoff).

Mr. Krauthoff—Have you the letter to which this is an answer?

Mr. Whipple—We have not.

The heading is, "Works on Christian Science by Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy. Address all inquiries to Joseph Armstrong, C. S. D., Publisher, 250 Huntington Avenue, Boston, Mass.," with a cut of the entrance to Pleasant View in Concord. This letter is typewritten. (Reading):

"Pleasant View,
"Concord, New Hampshire.
Dec. 7, 1904.

"Christian Science Board of Trustees,
"Boston, Mass.

"Dear Brethren:

"In reply to your letter of 6th inst., our dear Leader directs me to write you as follows: 'Answer for me that I say do what they, the trustees, think is best on this subject; I like their decisions.' The letter, as your copy will show you, relates to the subject of taking the institute's cards out of the Journal. In our Leader's behalf, I remain,

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "GEO. H. KINTER.

"Thos. W. Hatten, C. S. D., Secretary."

[A copy of the foregoing letter is marked Exhibit 84, R. J. M.]

The communication submitted by the trustees to the authorities charged with the duty of collecting the federal and the state income tax was asked for and handed to counsel. It was not offered. We now offer it as showing the opposite to what counsel claimed it would show. (Reading):

"Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Suffolk: ss. Boston, May 14, 1918."

Mr. Krauthoff—One moment, if Your Honor please. We asked for—

Mr. Whipple—You mean you don't want to put in what you asked for?

Mr. Krauthoff—We asked for the document upon information as to its contents. Now that it does not measure up to our information of its contents, it is not evidence of anything, I understand.

Mr. Whipple—That is, I understand, that counsel thinks he can speculate and call for something that he thinks will help him, and when he finds that it does not help him, that it is the other way, that he can get rid of it. I do not so understand the law.

Mr. Krauthoff—Well, we object to it.

Mr. Whipple—I understand that he has got to take what he asks for, whether it helps him or whether it hurts him.

Mr. Krauthoff—We do not make the objection on the ground of helping or hurting. We simply make the objection on the ground that statements of the trustees made in their own favor are not evidence.

Mr. Whipple—You make them evidence by calling for them.

Mr. Krauthoff—We have not offered them in evidence.

Mr. Whipple—No, of course you haven't. You have taken mighty good pains not to.

The Master—You having called for them, they having been produced, doesn't that make it the right of the trustees to offer them?

Mr. Krauthoff—I did not so understand the law. I understood you had the right to inspect the document and if you wanted to offer it you might, but the document is immaterial one way or the other and I will not press it further.

Mr. Whipple—You waive your objection?

Mr. Krauthoff—Yes.

Mr. Whipple (reading): "We, Herbert W. Eustace, David B. Ogden, and Lamont Rowlands being first duly sworn do hereby depose and say as follows:

"That we are the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, which is an unincorporated association organized for the purpose of publishing Christian Science literature; and that as trustees as aforesaid our principal place of business is in Boston, County of Suffolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts;

"That the source of income of said The Christian Science Publishing Society is the money which it receives for the periodicals, books, and pamphlets which it sells, the money which it receives for advertisements in the periodicals which it publishes, and the interest which it receives for money on deposit in bank between its semi-annual accountings;

"That disposition is made of the entire income of said The Christian Science Publishing Society above legitimate expenses by accounting for and paying the same semi-annually to the treasurer of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, for the support of said church;

"That said The Christian Science Publishing Society was instituted by a certain Deed of Trust executed by Mary Baker Eddy, and has no charter and no articles of incorporation;

"That all of the receipts, profits, and resources of said The Christian Science Publishing Society are used for religious, charitable, scientific, or educational purposes and no part of the net income of said organization inures or may inure to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

"That by reason of the aforesaid facts the said The Christian Science Publishing Society is an association exempt from taxation under the Federal Income Tax Act of Sept. 8, 1916, as amended by the Federal Income Tax Act of Oct. 3, 1917.

"HERBERT W. EUSTACE,

"DAVID B. OGDEN,

"LAMONT ROWLANDS.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me,

"Notary Public.

"My commission expires Feb. 27, 1919."

The name of the notary is not given, this being a copy. (Marked Exhibit 85, R. J. M.)

Mr. Whipple—I think we have finished the examination. It may be that between now and 2 o'clock we may think of a single question or so which we desire to put. We have practically—

The Master—Shall we stop? Two o'clock, then.

[Recess at 1 p. m.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

Mr. Whipple—We have no further questions, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Thompson—I have just one question I would like to put.

Re-Cross-Examination

Q. (By Mr. Thompson) Mr. Eustace, the fact that the trustees maintain what might be called an irreducible minimum of terms, that is, below which they would not listen to any suggestion of compromise, was a perfectly well known fact among the directors and everybody concerned, was it not? A. I think so; we tried our best to let it be known.

Q. And it has been known for several months, has it not, that that was the unalterable attitude of the trustees, that they would not do anything or consent to anything which would bring about any alteration in their fundamental views of their duties under that Trust Deed? A. That we would not change our fundamental views in any way.

Q. So that my question is this, that being the fact. In spite of that fact, in spite of its being perfectly well known, these suggestions of possible compromise kept coming to the trustees, didn't they? Yes, or No, please. That is a fact, isn't it? A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson—That is all.

Mr. Krauthoff—If Your Honor please, this morning it was understood that I was to point out the parts of the letter, Exhibit 72. I have marked it in lead pencil with brackets on the side. Shall I read the parts that I want?

The Master—What do counsel desire?

Mr. Streeter—I should think you better; I should think you better have those parts in. That would be my motion, and then we shall have it.

Mr. Krauthoff reads the following extracts from Exhibit 72, a letter from Mr. J. R. Watts, business manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, to the Hon. A. M. Dockery, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, District of Columbia:

"Dec. 7, 1918.

"Hon. A. M. Dockery,

"Third Assistant Postmaster-General,
"Washington, District of Columbia.

"Dear Sir:

"On Dec. 4, a hearing was had in your office relative to the position taken by this society that The Christian Science Monitor is entitled to be mailed at the special rate of postage provided by Sec. 1103, of the War Revenue Act of Oct. 3, 1917, Paragraph 4, Sec. 429, Postal Laws and Regulations, part of which reads as follows:

"Newspapers and periodicals entitled to be entered as second-class matter and maintained by and in the interest of religious, educational, scientific, philanthropic, agricultural, labor or fraternal organizations or associations, not organized for profit and none of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.'

"Your office accepts the fact as established, that The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and The Christian Science Publishing Society are religious organizations. The Christian Science Monitor is an organ of the Christian Science religion. It is subscribed for and read by Christian Scientists throughout the entire United States of America, and in all parts of the world, and the Christian Scientists, as a religious denomination, through their support of The Monitor, maintain its publication, and the publication of The Monitor would be impossible except for the support and maintenance given to it by the Christian Scientists.

"A hypothetical question was put by the solicitor, and was in effect this: What is to prevent the Washington Star owners from deciding to give the Washington Star to the Methodist or some other church, thereby escaping the effect of the zone system postage rate and obtaining an advantage over other Washington newspapers?

"Our response to this question is that there is nothing to prevent the Washington Star from doing so, excepting the fact that the owners of the Washington Star would not make such a transfer merely for the purpose of evading the increased postage rate under the zone system, nor for the purpose of taking any advantage under that law. Of course, if the law as made proved sufficiently alluring to justify the owners of the Washington Star making the transfer, in so doing it would doubtless bring one of the greatest blessings that could come to the Washington Star, in the event it should be maintained by and in the interests of a Methodist church. The one thing that would prevent such a transfer, would of course be the unwillingness of the owners to divest themselves of their ownership, and Congress well knew, as do the solicitor and ourselves know, that in making such a law the religious denominations would not find either a great number or any of the newspaper ownerships given to them. Furthermore, Congress could of course repeal the law with reference to this special provision at any time it felt some improper advantage was being taken by it.

"The Christian Science Monitor has been maintained for the past 10 years at a cost very considerably in excess of all its income, and it is incredible to believe that this Christian Science organization would so maintain at a loss to itself a publication if that organization did not consider such a publication as in the interest of its religion. The fact that this religious organization does so maintain The Christian Science Monitor, regardless of income, is conclusive evidence that it as a religious organization considers this publication in the interest of its religion.

"You will observe that we have acquiesced in the statement that the printed word of The Christian Science Monitor is not devoted 'exclusively' to the Christian Science religion. The fact is, however, that the only true value of any religion is the truth which it expresses, and the value of that truth to all mankind is measured exactly in proportion to its practicability, its availability, its proof, and demonstration in our daily living. You will agree with us, we believe, that The Christian Science Monitor is publishing the truth about the current world affairs, furnishing a correct basis for intelligent thinking, is blessing the world and making it a better place to live in, and thereby approximating the highest possible concept of true religion.

"Upon the question of whether The Christian Science Monitor is maintained by and in the interest of the Christian Science religion, the words of Mary Baker Eddy, Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, are of deep significance. In the oral statement in your office you were referred to the writings of Mrs. Eddy, as contained in her printed works, as follows:

"On page 4 of 'Miscellaneous Writings' Mrs. Eddy wrote,

"At this date, 1883, a newspaper edited and published by the Christian Scientists has become a necessity.'

"Again, on page 7:

"Looking over the newspapers of the day, one naturally reflects that it is dangerous to live, so loaded with disease seems the very air. These descriptions carry fears to many minds, to be depicted in some future time upon the body. A periodical of our own will counteract to some extent this public nuisance; for through our paper, at the price at which we shall issue it, we shall be able to reach many homes with healing, purifying thought.'

"On November 25, 1908, the desire to publish a Christian Science daily paper was manifested in the physical appearance of The Christian Science Monitor. The leading editorial of that first issue was the following paragraph, now quoted from 'The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany,' page 353:

"SOMETHING IN A NAME"

"I have given the name to all the Christian Science periodicals. The first was The Christian Science Journal, designed to put on record the divine Science of Truth; the second I entitled Sentinel, intended to hold guard over Truth, Life, and Love; the third, Der Herold der Christian Science, to proclaim the universal activity and availability of Truth; the next

I named Monitor, to spread undivided the Science that operates unspent. The object of the Monitor is to injure no man, but to bless all mankind.

"MARY BAKER EDDY.'

"Were any further evidence needed that The Christian Science Monitor is maintained by and in the interest of a religious organization, it may be found in the 'Manual of The Mother Church,' The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. On page 79, Art. XXV, Sec. 1, there is a by-law which reads as follows:

"The Board of Trustees, constituted by a Deed of Trust given by Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, the Pastor Emeritus of this Church, on Jan. 25, 1898, shall hold and manage the property therein conveyed, and conduct the business of 'The Christian Science Publishing Society' on a strictly Christian basis, for the promotion of the interests of Christian Science.'

"That none of the net income of The Christian Science Monitor 'inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual' is proven in Sec. 2 of Art. XXV of the Manual, which states:

"Disposal of Funds. Sect. 2. The net profits of the business shall be paid over semi-annually to the Treasurer of The Mother Church. He shall hold this money subject to the order of the Christian Science Board of Directors, which is authorized to order its disposition only in accordance with the By-Laws contained in this Manual."

Mr. Whipple—I think I would read the rest of it; there is very little of it.

Mr. Krauthoff—I beg pardon?

Mr. Whipple—Won't you read the rest of it? There is very little of it. In other words, I want to bring out, Mr. Krauthoff, that this is a letter, not signed by Mr. Eustace, not signed by any one of the trustees, but it is a letter of the business manager, employed by them.

Mr. Krauthoff—You mean you want me to read the omitted parts or the signature?

Mr. Whipple—Just this: "Sincerely yours, Christian Science Publishing Society, by J. R. Watts, Business Manager." It is his letter.

Mr. Krauthoff—Then may I ask, Mr. Eustace, if you knew of that letter being written before it was sent?

The Witness—I did.

Mr. Krauthoff—And approved of it?

The Witness—I approved of it.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is all, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Whipple—You may step aside, Mr. Eustace. Mr. Rowlands, will you testify, please?

Lamont Rowlands, Sworn.

Q. (By Mr. Whipple) Will you state your full name, Mr. Rowlands?
A. Lamont Rowlands.

Q. Where do you live? A. I live at 68 Beacon Street, Boston, my apartment here; my residence is Picayune, Mississippi.

Q. That is where you are legally domiciled? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been resident in Boston? A. Well, I think we moved here, took our apartment, in October, 1917. I became trustee the first of August, 1917.

Q. And shortly after that you removed to Boston? A. Yes.

Q. For a temporary residence, but not giving up your legal domicile in the South? A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you lived in Picayune, Mississippi? A. Well, I removed to Picayune in the summer that I was called here—early in the spring.

Q. Where were you born, Mr. Rowlands? A. Born in Michigan—Tecumseh, Michigan.

Q. Is that where you spent your childhood and youth? A. Well, a part of it.

Q. And where else, if you will tell us where you spent your early years. We are going to get a little history from you. A. I spent some time in Chicago, Illinois; some time on the Pacific Coast, some time in Alaska.

Q. Where did you begin your business career? A. Why, I—

Q. Or did you begin it so early you can't remember? A. I think I began quite early to make my own living, yes, sir.

Q. How early was that, Mr. Rowlands, when you were thrown on your own resources? I am not asking these questions expecting a punctiliously accurate statement as to the date. A. It is hard for me to say.

Q. If you will tell us in a general way. A. About 14 years old, I think.

Q. I beg pardon? A. About 14 years old when I started to make my own living.

Q. Where? A. In Tecumseh, Michigan.

Q. In Michigan? A. Yes.

Q. Then where did you remove to from Tecumseh, Michigan? A. To Chicago.

Q. What was your business there? A. Well, it varied.

Q. Had you attained your majority when you went there? A. No, sir.

Q. Then I suppose you followed different employments? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you go into business on your own account, and where? A. Well, what do you mean, establish a business of my own?

Q. Yes. A. Well, I had a business of my own in Chicago in—I am not sure about dates—I had no idea that I was going to be asked these questions. In 1903, I think.

Q. In 1903? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that business? A. The brokerage business.

Q. How long did you follow that? A. I followed it for about a year.

Q. And then what?

Mr. Streeter—How old is he?

Q. The General wants to know how old you are. A. I am either 42 or 43, I am not sure.

Q. Forty-two or 43. Tell us in a brief way of your business career after you were a broker in Chicago. What did you go into next? A. Why, I gave up that business and went with a firm by the name of Everz & Co., bond brokers, and stayed with them for a time. That is after I came out of Alaska. While I was in Alaska I was in the banking business there; I was connected with a bank in Nome for some time as assistant manager.

Q. Yes. A. Then I worked, as I say, for Everz & Co., and then from that I went into the lumber business.

Q. When did you go into the lumber business; about when? A. Well, I think it was 1904 or 1905.

Q. Have you been in that ever since? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Up to the time you became a trustee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you when you went into the lumber business? A. I was in Chicago.

Q. Where did you conduct that business—always from Chicago? A. Well, I lived in Chicago at the time I entered into business, but I went to Wisconsin to live; I lived in Wisconsin for a number of years.

Q. In the conduct of your lumber business? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that business? A. At Tomah, Wisconsin. That was one of our mills, and I lived there, as one part of the activity.

Q. What organization were you connected with? A. With the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company. It was not the Goodyear Company when I started in.

Q. Were you instrumental in organizing that company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a stockholder in it? A. Slightly.

Q. Is it in connection with that company that you have always done business since? A. More or less; yes, sir.

Q. You have had interests outside of that in the lumber business? A. Well, a very slight interest.

Q. Where have you conducted the lumber business? I mean, has it always been in Wisconsin? A. Oh, no.

Q. Where? What part of the country? A. Well, it is all confined to the United States, but in different parts of the United States. Washington, for instance—we own some holdings there and a logging operation. We have a mill, lumbering and logging operations, in Greenwood, California.

Q. The business consists of cutting lumber in different sections of the country where the lumber grows and preparing it and distributing it for the market? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it in that connection that you moved to Picayune, Mississippi? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To start the lumbering business there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you still interests in this organization that you have spoken of? A. Yes.

Q. And you have not had active connection with the lumber business since you became trustee; or have you been active since that time? A. Yes. As soon as I could conveniently do so and not embarrass my associates, I resigned my activities with the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company of Delaware—that was more or less of a parent organization—I had been looking after the management of that company, and I gave that up at the next meeting after accepting the trusteeship.

Q. Let me ask you about it, while I am on the subject: Were the operations of that company, or the companies with which you were connected in the lumber business pretty extensive? A. Of course that all depends upon what a person might consider to be extensive.

Q. What do you think about it? A. To my mind they were fairly large; yes, sir.

Q. Would you mind stating the overturn annually? I mean, in a general way. A. That would be rather hard for me to do, because—

Q. I want to get some idea of the business interests you gave up, and I agree with you that the term "large" or "small" is relative and does not give much of an idea. A. We have a Chicago office, a central office, through which we market a great deal of our lumber.

Q. From all over the country? A. Yes.

Q. How much do you market in the course of a year, approximately? A. Approximately, I should say at the present time we are marketing somewhere—

Q. Well, 1917 is more important? A. 1917?

Q. Yes. When you gave up your connection. A. This is just an estimate—

Q. Certainly, certainly. If you should be a few thousand feet out of the way I do not think it would be serious. A. It is likely to be more than that. I should say somewhere—the allied mills that we represented, probably between 75,000,000 and 100,000,000 of timber, or lumber.

Q. And the value of which was approximately— A. Well, I should say $25 a 1000 at the mills. A hundred million would be how much?

Q. Some of these business men will have to figure it. A. Would be about—I will figure it up for you if you want me to.

Q. Never mind. We will figure it up and hand it in a little later. How many different mills were in operation at that time? A. Well, we had three mills and a logging operation.

Q. And where? A. And then we were sales agents for—Oh, I suppose six or seven other mills.

Q. When did you take up Christian Science? A. About 15 or 16 years ago, when I first commenced to read Science.

Q. Did you at some time become a member of The Mother Church? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When? A. In 1905 or 1906. I am not certain which.

Q. Did you do anything in Christian Science by way of lecturing, or anything of that sort? A. I never did any lecturing.

Q. Yours was purely a membership in the church, without making Christian Science your calling, in any way? A. Yes, I served as an officer of the church, and I—

Q. What church? A. Well, the church in Wisconsin where I went to live, that church that started there.

Q. That is what I wanted to get at. You were connected with branch churches in Chicago and in Wisconsin? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you held any office either in The Mother Church or in the publication society before you were elected trustee? A. No.

Q. At the time of your election as trustee, what, if anything, was said in reference to your feeling with regard to your large business engagements? A. Do you mean, as to how I was to handle them?

Q. What was to be done? Were you to continue right along in your business, as you had done? A. No, not in accepting the trusteeship. I thought that as soon as I could do so I would give up my other activities.

Mr. Bates—I suggest that my friend Whipple should identify this subject. I do not know whether he is talking about his arrangement with his lumber companies, or what it was.

Mr. Whipple—Both.

Mr. Bates—Well, suppose we have it so we can know what he is talking about.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no, I want the whole situation.

Mr. Bates—I object to it, then.

Mr. Whipple—Both his relations to the trustees and what he did about freeing himself from his business arrangements. Both of them.

Mr. Bates—I wanted to identify his conversations.

Mr. Whipple—I will be glad to have him.

The Master—There is no dispute, apparently, between you.

Q. Do you understand, Mr. Rowlands? A. Beg pardon?

Q. Do you understand what has been said? A. Well, I am not sure whether I clearly understand it.

Q. Governor Bates wants you to be a little more specific when you are giving conversations, whether you are talking about conversations—

Mr. Bates—I suggest you should be more specific in your questions.

Mr. Whipple—With your trustees.

Mr. Streeter—I would like to have you speak a little louder.

Mr. Whipple—And General Streeter wants you to speak a little louder; and I want you to talk a little more promptly, if you can. Now, if there is anyone else who wants to express any wish about it, I will interpret theirs. With all this help now you ought to get on.

Q. What arrangement was made with the trustees, if any, about what you should do with your business arrangements? A. Why, if I do not answer properly the question—

Q. Do not disturb yourself about answering properly; just answer as promptly as you can, and as fully, and you leave it to these vigilant gentlemen, and if you are not answering right you will know it right away. A. Why, the understanding that I had with my associates was that I should have what time I needed to devote to my business interests until I could take care of them comfortably, and there was no limitation of any kind placed upon me.

Q. That was the arrangement, I understand, under which you took the position as trustee? A. Yes, sir. I told them I would always make it a point to be here any time they wanted me.

Q. Now, since you took the office, what part of the time have you devoted to the work as trustee? A. Well, I have not made a record of that—

Q. Well, I do not want a record of it; I just want a general idea about it. A. Oh, I should judge that I have been here, devoted—just an estimate—60 per cent of my time to it.

Q. Sixty per cent? It was in August, 1917—am I right?—that you were elected? A. Yes, sir. That is just an estimate, however. It would be very hard—

Q. Yes. Have you been conscious during this time that you have been trustee of neglecting any of the work required of you by the board or by the Deed of Trust? A. I have not.

Q. Beg pardon? A. I have not been conscious of neglecting anything that was required of me.

Q. Has your work been so adjusted that it could be done during the time that you were here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has there been any complaint on the part of the Board of Trustees or anyone else, so far as you know, that you have failed to devote to the work of the trust all the time that was necessary? A. Not that I know of, up to the time of the suit.

Q. Did you ever hear that suggestion before you saw it in the answer to the Bill in Equity? A. Why, at one time one of the directors asked me several times about my business affairs, and I thought it might be a criticism.

Q. When was that? A. That was—oh, I don't know; probably six or eight months ago.

Q. Who was the director? A. Mr. Merritt.

Q. What did he say about it? A. He did not say anything special, only asked me about my business, and then I asked him one day if it was a criticism, and he said, "No, none at all."

Q. Well, that seems to settle that. A. Those were not his exact words, if you want them.

Q. Was that the substance of them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did anyone else voice any criticism before this answer, that you had other interests which prevented your giving sufficient time and attention to the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Not from that standpoint. I think in one of my talks with Mr. Dittmore he expressed some anxiety that I could not spend more of my time here, but I do not think it was a criticism.

Q. Have you read this notice of dismissal that was served on you as a trustee of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, let me ask you in the first place, whether you have ever been conscious of not in every way conforming to the rules which are required of a good Christian Scientist? A. Why, I have thought I have conformed to those rules; I feel that I have.

Q. Both as an individual and as a trustee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you, to your knowledge, failed to understand or recognize the importance and necessity of promoting the interests of Christian Science by following these directions given by Mrs. Eddy in the Church By-Laws? A. No.

Q. Have you been conscious of inventing or adopting interpretations of the Church By-Laws that pervert their meaning and annul their effect? A. Not conscious of it.

Q. Have you been conscious of standing by those By-Laws according to their real and true meaning and construction? A. As I understand them, yes, sir, I have.

Q. Have you been conscious of trying to change the relation which always has heretofore existed between The Christian Science Publishing Society and its Board of Trustees on the one hand, and The Mother Church and its proper officers on the other? A. No, sir.

Q. Or have you in any respect consciously tried to convert and enlarge said trusteeship into an office or function of a new and different character? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you done anything consciously, otherwise than to attempt in good faith and honestly to protect the great trust that was committed to you and your associates by Mrs. Eddy? A. I have tried to fulfill the requirements of the trust to the best of my ability and understanding of Christian Science.

Q. It says here:

"Whereas Mr. Rowlands and other persons acting with him, including several eminent lawyers wastefully employed have set up said Deed of Trust against the By-Laws and government of The Mother Church."

Have you been conscious, either in company with eminent lawyers wastefully employed, or otherwise, of setting up the Deed of Trust against the

By-Laws and government of The Mother Church? A. I have not.

Q. This Deed of Trust that is referred to, you have been conscious, was made by Mrs. Eddy herself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, it is a trust creating the duty imposed upon the trustees by the great Leader of the Christian Science movement? A. It is.

Q. Are you conscious of allowing a sense of self-interest to interfere with the interests of Christian Science, your selfish interest interfering with the interests of Christian Science? A. No; I thought it had been just the contrary. I had been trying to give up a great many of my interests in order to devote more of my time to Christian Science.

Q. Are you conscious of having done anything, as a trustee or otherwise, except for the promotion of Christian Science? A. No; that has been my purpose.

Q. Have you consciously become self-assertive, contentious, or disposed to make trouble without regard to consequences? A. No. I feel that I have been firm in trying to carry out the provisions of the trust, and wherever the trust needed to be defended I felt it was my duty to do so.

Q. Well, do you think you have been in any sense self-assertive or contentious, or disposed to make trouble? A. No. Not unless the trust were attacked.

Q. I mean, to make trouble for the sake of trouble. A. No, sir.

Q. Or contentious about a thing that was of no consequence? A. No, sir.

Q. You have, you say, firmly defended your trust? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any purpose or desire, either in connection with what you have done or in connection with this bill which has been filed, to hold your position otherwise than for the promotion of the best interests of Christian Science and the spread of the doctrine throughout the world? A. No other desire whatever.

Q. And in accordance with the solemn wishes of your great Leader? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, I do not propose to ask Mr. Rowlands the series of questions which I put to Mr. Eustace with reference to the administration of the trust, because it seems to me it would be simply duplicating the record in that respect. I therefore shall ask no other or further questions at this time.

Cross-Examination

Q. (By Mr. Bates.) Mr. Rowlands, who first spoke to you about becoming a trustee? A. You mean how was the information conveyed to me?

Q. Yes. A. Well, I received a telegram from Mr. Jarvis, signed by Mr. Jarvis.

Q. Secretary of the Board of Directors? A. Yes.

Q. And have you the telegram here? A. I have not; I destroyed it.

Q. What did it say? A. Well, as well as I can remember, he asked me if I would consider becoming a trustee and asked if I could come to Boston.

Q. Do you remember your reply? A. I do not.

Q. Did you go to Boston? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In response to that telegram? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw Mr. Jarvis? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the directors? A. Yes.

Q. And had a conference with them in regard to becoming a trustee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long was that before you were appointed? A. Well, it was at the same time—in the same few days that I was appointed.

Q. It was about the time of your appointment? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you ever had any conference with any of the directors before that time in regard to becoming a trustee? A. Not that I remember. No conference, no.

Q. So that your first intimation that you were being considered for a trusteeship was the telegram from the secretary of the Board of Directors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you came on and consulted with them? A. Yes.

Q. And shortly afterward, almost immediately, you were appointed? A. Not by the board.

Q. Well, you were appointed almost immediately afterward? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you say you had an understanding with some one that you were not to give your entire time— A. I didn't say that.

Q. —to the work. What did you say? A. I said I had an understanding that I could devote as much of my time as seemed necessary—that was the substance of it—until I could get my business in shape, in proper condition, so that I could leave it.

Q. Then your understanding was that you were to give up your business? A. Not that. I never was asked to give up my business. I felt that that was a part of my coming here, that gradually I would have to get my business in such shape that I would not have to give it much personal attention.

Q. You thought that the acceptance of the trusteeship involved the giving up of your regular business, did you? A. Active business.

Q. As soon as you could get out of it? A. I want to qualify that statement. I don't believe that any man of affairs could give up all his business, because it would necessitate him serving on some boards of directors in order to protect his interests.

Q. Well, so far as any active interests in business were concerned, you expected to give them up? A. I expected to; yes, sir.

Q. And such understanding as you had was that you were to be allowed such time as might be necessary to get out of active business? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was there any time specified? A. None.

Q. Who was that understanding with? A. The Board of Trustees.

Q. And to whom did you talk on the Board of Trustees in regard to it? A. Mr. Ogden and Mr. Eustace, and I think that Mr. McKenzie was there at one time when we had a talk, but I do not think he was a trustee at that time.

Q. And with them you came to an understanding that you would get out of active business as soon as you could reasonably— A. No.

Q. —and devote your time to the trusteeship? A. I say it was not an understanding of that kind at all.

Q. I understood you to state it so. A. No. I didn't say that we had an understanding. I said they said that I might have as much time—

Q. Didn't you say that you had an understanding? A. Well, if I did, I withdraw that word.

Q. What word do you wish to use now? A. The trustees told me that I might have as much time as I needed to devote to my business.

Q. In order to wind it up? A. Yes—I don't think they said "Wind it up."

Q. No. I am not quoting the particular words; I haven't understood you were, but the effect of them. A. Yes. What are you driving at? What do you want me to say? Then I will say it.

Q. Oh, I don't want you to say anything except tell us the story as it happened. A. That is what I am trying to do.

Q. You wouldn't say anything because I wanted you to? A. Oh, I might help you out.

Q. I don't need your help except to answer my questions. A. I see; thank you!

Q. With that understanding you began your service on the Board of Trustees? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me, he has said there wasn't an understanding. I think, Governor Bates, you misquote him. He said that he felt himself when he accepted the position that it would involve a gradual withdrawal from active duty, and I don't remember that he said that there was any understanding or agreement, but at any rate, if he did say so, he withdrew it and qualified it, and still you persist in calling it an understanding.

Mr. Bates—I have fallen into the grievous error of quoting the words of my brother Whipple, who asked the question whether or not there was an understanding, and also of quoting the witness, who several times used the word.

Mr. Whipple—You have no excuse for being misled by me. You ought to be able to stand on your own foundation.

Mr. Bates—I don't propose to be misled by you, or by your interruptions.

Mr. Whipple—You now say you have fallen into a grievous error.

Mr. Bates—The "grievous error" was somewhat sarcastic. It does not seem to be such to you.

Mr. Whipple—Explain your jokes. We take them seriously if you don't explain them.

Mr. Bates—I can't explain them to you; I think the rest of them understand it.

Mr. Streeter—Do you gentlemen always quarrel this way?

Q. Mr. Rowlands, was there any definite date fixed when you were expected to be out of active business? A. No, sir.

Q. There was no date set about the 1st of January—nothing said about the 1st of January? A. Not as I remember it.

Q. Are you certain of it? A. No; I am not certain. Well, I think I can be reasonably certain that there was no date set.

The Master—That would be the 1st of January of what year?

Mr. Bates—The following year, 1918. The Master—1918?

The Witness—I can qualify that statement, if you would like to have me.

Mr. Bates—If you wish to.

The Witness—I was asked by some one how long it would take me to get my affairs into shape so I could spend a good part of my time here, and I said I thought about a year.

Q. Who asked you that? A. I can't remember, but I remember making that statement.

Q. Now, you recognize the Manual as binding upon you—the Manual of The Mother Church. A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you recognize that Mrs. Eddy was its author? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that it was written for the purpose of being a guide for all Christian Scientists? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that they are all bound by it, all loyal Christian Scientists feel that they are bound by it, do they not? A. They should be to the extent of their understanding.

Q. Is there any part of it that you cannot support or that you find is not binding upon you? A. Not from my understanding of it.

Q. And you recognize that The Christian Science Board of Directors is the governing body of The Mother Church? A. Yes.

Q. It is the only governing body there is in the Church, is it not? A. Well, that depends upon what you mean—"in the Church." It is a Church organization.

Q. Is there any other governing body in The Mother Church? A. Why, from the standpoint of the Church Universal, I should think that God or the Principle was the governing influence.

Q. There is no other human governing body? A. Do you mean the Church organization?

Q. Certainly. A. Well, in so far as their duties are set forth under the Deed of Trust and the Manual, yes.

Q. They are the governing body of the Church? A. In so far as that gives them power.

Q. Yes, exactly. And the Board of Directors is also bound by the Manual, is it not? A. The Board of Directors?

Q. Yes, of the church. A. Yes.

Q. And, therefore, if there are any duties laid upon the Board of Directors by the Manual, they must discharge those duties? A. Yes, by way of demonstration.

Q. And if they do not discharge them they are guilty of neglect of the rules laid down by Mrs. Eddy?

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment, just a moment. If Your Honor please, we shall not object to an examination on these subjects so far as is necessary to determine whether the trustees are good Christian Science members—good Christian Scientists or not. But I do not see that their conception of the duties of the trustees is important in that respect, and I am going to seasonably object to any such repetition of the catechism as Mr. Eustace was subjected to, and I am going to ask that the questions put to the other witnesses, the other trustees, be limited to determining whether they are good loyal Christian Scientists or not. This question as to the duties of the directors is not a question which is pertinent to that issue.

Mr. Bates—No, and that is not the issue that we asked it in regard to either.

Mr. Whipple—I beg pardon?

Mr. Bates—That is not the issue that we asked it in regard to.

Mr. Whipple—What is the issue regarding which you asked? Perhaps we can have a ruling on that.

Mr. Bates—No, I think there is no question that is before us; it is simply one of your remarks.

Mr. Whipple—I have objected to your question.

Mr. Bates—But the question was answered before you objected.

Mr. Whipple—No, I don't think so. If so, I ask that the answer be disregarded and objection be sustained.

The Master—Anything further, Governor Bates? I mean anything further in reply to Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Bates—I would like to have the stenographer read the question and the answer, if it was given.

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—The stenographer says there was no answer.

[Question read, as follows: "And if they do not discharge them they are guilty of neglect of the rules laid down by Mrs. Eddy?"]

The Stenographer—There was no answer.

The Master—You press that question?

Mr. Bates—I do; in cross-examination I have the right to ask the question and get his views.

The Master—Yes, I understand.

Mr. Bates—Because we are accused, bear in mind, Your Honor—we are accused of acting in bad faith and arbitrarily in this removal. Now, if we are carrying out the injunctions given to us in the By-Laws, then we have a right to show it, and we have a right to cross-examine this witness as to whether or not that is true.

The Master—I think I shall have to allow the question to be put subject to objection. I do not see my way at present to draw the line indicated by Mr. Whipple. I think it would be better to take the evidence subject to objection and consider the matter later.

Q. You may answer the question.

The Witness—Will you please have it read again?

[Question read]

A. I do not feel that I am called upon to answer a question of that kind, because then I am judging the directors—

Q. His Honor has ruled—the Court has ruled that you may answer the question. I ask you to answer it, yes or no. A. That is the best answer I can give; I cannot answer it yes or no.

Q. And do you recognize that the Board of Directors has any authority over the trustees whatsoever? A. None at all.

Q. And that all of those paragraphs in the Manual which seem to indicate that it has, you do not recognize? A. Not from my standpoint.

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. That I object to, because we are not agreed as to what the Manual means. He says those—

Mr. Bates—I am only asking him as to how—

Mr. Whipple—He says those indicate that the directors have authority over the trustees. I do not think there is a thing in the Manual, properly construed with the Deed of Trust, that indicates any such thing.

The Master—That is a question we shall have to consider later.

Mr. Bates—Yes, but I wait to get at this question.

The Master—You do not agree as to what the Manual means, and that is the trouble with all these questions. You may put your question in one sense, and he may answer it in another. I think I have intimated before, I do not see what good can come of arguing the question out with the witness, because the Court will have finally to determine in the best light it can what the correct meaning is of any disputed point.

Mr. Bates—If Your Honor pleases, Mr. Whipple asked the witness as to whether or not he was conscious of having disobeyed any by-law in the Manual. I think that opens up the door for me to ask him in regard to the special by-laws which prescribed the duties of the Board of Directors in regard to this board.

The Master—You may go on subject to objection.

Q. You are familiar with Sec. 3 of Art. XXV of the Church Manual, which reads as follows:

“The Christian Science Board of Directors shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship, for such reasons as to the Board may seem expedient.”

Are you familiar with that? A. What page is that on?

Q. Page 80. A. I am familiar with it.

Q. And do you recognize that The Christian Science Board of Directors have that power to declare vacancies?

Mr. Whipple—Well, now, just a moment, if Your Honor please. There is a provision in the Deed of Trust with regard to that, and it ought to be reasonably clear that the two statements of Mrs. Eddy, equally divine and equally inspired, ought to be considered together. Now it is not fair to the witness and it is not promoting the case in any respect to rip one of those things away from the other and ask the opinion of a layman with regard to one provision divorced from the other. We shall not get anywhere by doing it, and I respectfully object.

Mr. Bates—In view of the questions asked by my brother as to whether or not he had any consciousness of having disobeyed the By-Laws, I have a right to ask him as to how he arrived at such serene consciousness which he seems to possess in view of that specific by-law.

The Master—I do not see my way to exclude the question. It may be put on the understanding that I have already stated.

Mr. Bates—Will you read the question, Mr. Burt.

[Question read: “And do you recognize that The Christian Science Board of Directors have that power to declare vacancies?”]

The Witness—Am I called upon to answer that question?

Mr. Bates—Yes, the Court has ruled that the question should be answered. A. Wherever—

Q. No, I ask you to answer that question, yes or no. It is a simple question.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor’s judgment.

The Master—No, I should not require him to do that. A question of that character I think he has a right to answer in his own way.

The Witness—I cannot answer it yes or no.

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment.

Q. Answer it in your own way, then.

Mr. Whipple—May I suggest, when the Master is speaking, please do not interrupt.

Q. Mr. Rowlands, will you answer it in your own way? A. (After a pause.) Wherever there is a conflict in the Manual and the Deed of Trust

I will have to look to the Deed of Trust for my instruction and authority, and that is the basis of this case.

Q. Is that your whole answer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you consider that that paragraph is in conflict with the Deed of Trust? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what part of the Deed of Trust?

[Copy of Deed of Trust handed to witness.]

Mr. Whipple—Let Mr. Rowlands take one of the printed copies of the Deed of Trust; it is a little easier to read.

[Pamphlet containing Deed of Trust handed to witness.]

The Witness—This is better. Thank you. Page 8 of the Deed of Trust—I think this is Section 10. Would you like to have me read it?

Mr. Whipple—You better read it so as to make it clear.

Q. Read the part that you claim to be in conflict. A. (Reading): “Whenever a vacancy shall occur in said trusteeship for any cause, I reserve the right to fill the same by appointment, if I shall so desire, so long as I may live; but if I do not elect to exercise this right, the remaining trustees shall fill said vacancy. The First Members together with the directors of said Church shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship for such reasons as to them may seem expedient.”

Q. Do you regard that last sentence as in conflict with this paragraph in the Manual? A. I do.

Q. The First Members passed out of existence long ago, did they not? A. That I cannot testify to.

The Master—Is there any dispute about it? We all agree that they did, don’t we?

Mr. Bates—I don’t know whether my brother does or not.

Mr. Whipple—I understand the fact to be that people who used to be First Members are still living, and quite a number of them; but I also understand that their function in the church organization has been changed, that in the church discipline the First Members do not any longer do the things that they used to do. They were a self-perpetuating body, as I remember it, and their self-perpetuation has ceased.

The Master—Would the result of that be that although the persons are still living they are no longer First Members for our purposes?

Mr. Whipple—I think Your Honor has put a very perplexing question, and being merely a lawyer with a judgment about it, I should prefer to refer it to Mr. Rowlands, if I could, because it has given to all the counsel in the case a very great cause of study. Mr. Justice Hughes, as Your Honor will observe in the opinion which was referred to, considered it at length; and our opinion, the opinion of counsel, as far as they have any, is stated in that letter of opinion which is quoted in the bill.

The Master—I understand there is no dispute about the fact; nothing that you say shows me that there is any dispute about the facts of the case.

Mr. Whipple—No; I think the facts are all agreed.

The Master—There were persons who were First Members holding an office in the church, described in that way, as First Members.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Those persons are still living but the office no longer exists.

Mr. Whipple—I beg pardon?

The Master—The office has ceased to exist. Am I right?

Mr. Whipple—I think that the Church Manual has so been changed as to take away certain functions or perhaps all the functions that they formerly used to discharge in the church organization. I think that would be a correct statement.

Mr. Bates—If I may make the statement as I understand it, I think there can be no dispute about it. The powers of the First Members were transferred by a by-law under Mrs. Eddy’s direction to the directors of the church. Subsequently the by-laws in regard to First Members were eliminated, under her direction, from the Manual. Since that time they have ceased.

The Master—So far as I can understand it that comes to about what I stated.

Mr. Bates—That is exactly Your Honor’s statement.

Mr. Whipple—If I may be permitted to make a suggestion, their powers with regard to removal under the terms of the trust deed could not be transferred to either the directors or anybody else because that would be an attempted modification of the Deed of Trust, which was irrevocable. If there was an attempt to do it it could not be done.

The Master—That leads us into an argument which I did not want to set going at present.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, we did not, either; but we thought that poor Mr. Rowlands, who is not a lawyer, ought to be spared arguing that with Governor Bates, because of the very manifest advantage that the Governor would have with Mr. Rowlands on that subject.

The Master—There is as much as this without any dispute, that there are no church officers now recognized as First Members.

Q. And you agree to that, Mr. Rowlands, do you not?

Mr. Whipple—Well, one moment. It doesn’t make any difference whether Mr. Rowlands does or not.

Mr. Bates—Well, it does; I want to get at his construction.

The Master—Whether it makes any difference or not we will consider later, but that is the fact.

Mr. Bates—That is the fact, as I understand it.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, with the First Members eliminated and the Manual transferring their powers to the Board of Directors, do you still consider that that is in conflict?

Mr. Whipple—That I object to, if Your Honor please, because I have already said that the power of removal of a Board of Trustees cannot be transferred. You are asking a hypothetical impossibility under the law, and what is the use of putting a question of that sort and trying to puzzle a poor layman with it? It is bad enough for Judge Hughes.

Mr. Bates—The layman does not seem to be so much puzzled as his counsel, nor so much troubled either.

Mr. Whipple—That is just right, because he does not have the responsibilities of the legal aspect of it.

The Master—I am wholly unable to see that any useful purpose can be served by getting the answer of this witness to this question.

Mr. Bates—I will waive that question.

Mr. Whipple—So the responsibility is right back on you now, to solve it.

Mr. Bates—No; I think we have all the information that we want on it.

Q. Mr. Rowlands, I will read to you from Section 4 of Article 25 of the Manual, which is entitled, "Editors and Manager."

"The term of office for the editors and the manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society is one year each, dating from the time of election to the office. Incumbents who have served one year or more can be re-elected, or new officers elected, by a unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors, and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting."

Do you recognize that as binding upon the Publishing Society? A. In what way do you mean?

Q. Why, in every way that it could, reasonably. A. If it conflicts with the authority vested in the trustees under the Deed of Trust, I should say—

Q. Do you claim that it does? A. Yes, if it conflicts; but I do not see why it should if it were rightly exercised.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Eustace's explanation that he considered that that was not operative so far as the trust deeds were concerned because the consent of the Pastor Emeritus could not now be given in her own handwriting? A. I think that legally, if you try to make a legal document out of the Manual, that would hold.

Q. If you carried that out would it not lead to the extinction of the whole cause? A. Not at all.

Q. Are there not a great many of the By-Laws where the consent of Mrs. Eddy is required in order to make them operative, or appointments under them?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment as to that. Why should he be entitled to interpret the By-Laws in that respect? Counsel is simply conducting what might be called a contentious argument with the witness on very perplexing legal questions.

Mr. Bates—I want merely to show the inconsistencies.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, you cannot do that; you are trying to show an impossibility.

Mr. Bates—I could, probably, if you didn't interrupt so often.

Mr. Whipple—Then I ought to interrupt, to prevent it.

The Master—Of course you will have a full opportunity to point out any asserted inconsistencies; no doubt about that.

Q. I want to know now, Mr. Rowlands, as to whom you pay over the net profits of the Publishing Society? A. To the treasurer of The Mother Church.

Q. The treasurer of The Mother Church? A. I think so.

Q. And how is the treasurer of The Mother Church elected? A. I think it states in the Manual, doesn't it?

Q. Yes. Section 3, pages 25 and 26. A. Yes.

Q. I will read it:

"The term of office for the Clerk and the Treasurer of this Church (also for the editors and the manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and the manager of the general Committee on Publication in Boston) is one year each, dating from the time of election to office. Incumbents who have served one year or more, may be re-elected, or new officers elected, at the annual meeting held for this purpose, by a unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting."

Is the present treasurer of the Church elected with the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. He has no participation in that election.

Mr. Bates—Well, he knows.

Mr. Whipple—It doesn't make any difference whether he does or not, that isn't of any consequence.

Mr. Bates—I want to ask him the question to find out about it.

Mr. Whipple—I object to it, if Your Honor please.

The Master—I think it may be put. A. Well, I cannot tell you.

Q. Don't you know, Mr. Rowlands? Don't you know the present treasurer has been elected since Mrs. Eddy passed on? A. Well, it depends upon the construction of the Manual.

Q. Don't you know that he has? A. I couldn't say that I know, whether the provisions of the Manual have been carried out—if you are going to make a legal document out of this.

Q. Do you know whether or not the Pastor Emeritus has given her consent in her own handwriting to the election of the present treasurer? A. I do not know.

Q. Do you not know that she has not? A. I could reasonably believe that.

Q. Have you any doubt of it? A. Yes.

Q. You have doubt of it? A. That she has not.

Q. You haven't any doubt that she has not? A. Yes.

Q. And yet you recognize that the treasurer is properly elected, do you not, and you turn over to him hundreds of thousands of dollars a year? A. Well, I don't know whether that is a question for me to answer.

Q. Well, I am asking for the fact. Aren't you turning over to him hundreds of thousands of dollars a year? A. Yes; I will answer that.

Q. Because you recognize him as the treasurer of the church? A. Yes. I will answer that question.

Mr. Whipple—Treasurer de facto, at least.

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Bates—Wait a minute. I object now. Let your witness answer the question without assistance, if you please. I want to shorten the record, and I find on looking it over that there is more of Mr. Whipple in it than anything else.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that shows it is a good record.

Mr. Bates—That is a modest assertion with which I cannot agree.

Mr. Streeter—You are very interesting in your quarrels—you two gentlemen.

Mr. Whipple—But it needs a finishing touch, to have the General say something in it.

Q. Section 5, Article 25, which is the article of the By-Laws on The Christian Science Publishing Society, reads as follows, page 81: "A person who is not accepted by the Pastor Emeritus and the Christian Science Board of Directors as suitable, shall in no manner be connected with publishing her books, nor with editing or publishing The Christian Science Journal, Christian Science Sentinel, Der Herold der Christian Science, nor with The Christian Science Publishing Society." Have you been accepted by the Pastor Emeritus as suitable? A. I couldn't tell you; I hope so.

Q. Have you been accepted by her as suitable so far as you have any evidence? A. I cannot answer that. I can from my own standpoint—I feel that I have been.

Q. You have a metaphysical answer, but you haven't a business man's answer, have you? A. Not that I know of, no, sir.

Q. Because Mrs. Eddy passed on before you became a trustee or were ever considered? A. I have never acknowledged that she has passed on.

Q. That is your answer? A. Yes, sir. I never have acknowledged the passing on of Mrs. Eddy, or anyone, as far as that is concerned, because the basic principle of the teaching of Christian Science is that there is no death.

Q. Well, then, I should think that it would be necessary for you to show that you have been accepted as suitable. Can you do that? A. I hope to be able to do that; that is what I am trying to do.

Q. Well, can you, here? A. What?

Q. Can you, here in court? Have you any evidence of it, any document? A. Not on me, no.

Q. Any letter? A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you think that your interpretation of these By-Laws annuls or perverts their meaning? A. From the way you are putting your questions it might, but I want to make this statement: That there isn't anything about the Manual of The Mother Church or the By-Laws from the standpoint of the trustees but what we could put into full effect, be obedient to them, work in harmony with the Board of Directors and carry out the purpose of Mrs. Eddy; and there has never been a question in my mind but what we could do it. We always have been ready to cooperate with them from every standpoint; our effort and desire has been to do that, and through all this testimony I quite agree with Mr. Eustace. I accept his testimony.

Q. I think you are not answering the question.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, yes, he is.

Mr. Bates—I think you have gone away beyond the limits of it.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no; he is doing finely.

Mr. Bates—I have let you discourse for a while.

Q. Mr. Rowlands, you have been a member of the Board of Trustees since Aug. 1, 1917? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Two years lacking one month. Since you have been a member of the Board of Trustees have the trustees elected an editor? A. No, sir.

Q. And when first, so far as you recall, did any dispute arise between you or the trustees and the Board of Directors in regard to their supervisory powers? A. I think it was in 1918. I can't remember the date or just at the time.

Q. 1918? A. It is when the memorandum was brought up that has been spoken of here, and which is in Mr. Dittmore's bill.

Q. In September, 1918? A. Well, I couldn't tell. Oh, no; I would have to look up the record on that.

Q. At any rate, your best recollection is it was some time in 1918? A. I think that it was, because I came in 1917, and it seems to me as if it must have been in 1918, early.

Q. Now, since you have been serving as trustee have you made any radical changes in the publishing house? A. In what way?

Q. In any way. A. I should say not, otherwise than in changing—we have changed the paper over from an afternoon to a morning paper.

Q. That is, you have changed The Monitor from an afternoon to a morning paper? A. Yes.

Q. Anything else? A. We have tried to readjust the institution and put it on a better basis all the time, by putting in new machinery and such things, for facilitating—

Q. No radical change of any kind? A. Nothing that I can recall at the present time.

Q. Did you consult with the Board of Directors before changing the paper from an afternoon paper to a morning paper? A. We presented to them our recommendations in regard to it, told them what we intended to do, and they agreed with us and thought it would be the right thing to do.

Q. Have you had anything to do with the changes in bookkeeping that have taken place, that Mr. Eustace referred to this morning? A. There haven't been very many changes in bookkeeping, if you mean the methods. The method is practically the same. The change in the making of deductions in regard to our reserves—I think I have taken my share of responsibility in regard to that, yes, sir.

Q. You approved of it? A. Quite approved of it.

Q. Who suggested it first? A. Well, I think I made the recommendation—I am not sure—that we should during this time make liberal allowances and deductions.

Q. And do you recall what deductions you did make? A. Well, I cannot give them in detail, but I know that we installed a great deal of new machinery to facilitate the mailing out of The Monitor, and, making that displacement of machinery, we charged to the current period the cost of the machines. Then we also made a deduction, an extra deduction, some $50,000—I am not sure that these amounts are right—to protect our inventories, because we were forced, in order to supply the extra Monitors that were called for by the Welfare Committee, to lay in additional stocks, and at prices that we would not have had to pay had they not given us that order without much warning, because they did not know how many papers they would need. So we set aside a reserve to protect that inventory, which had grown quite large.

Q. How large a reserve? A. I think it was $50,000, or somewhere between $40,000 and $50,000, if I remember.

Q. How much have you set aside out of the net profits for a reserve during the past year in one way or another? A. Well, I should judge about $200,000.

Q. And if you had not established those reserves that $200,000 would have been turned over under your Deed of Trust to the church treasurer, would it not? A. There is a question about that, as to whether or not—

Q. If it was net profit it would have, wouldn't it? A. Well, I say there is a question about that, Governor.

Q. Well, that is what the deed requires, is it not? A. Mr. Eustace spoke of our bookkeeping. That is a thing that should be considered, because some time ago the Publishing Society, before I came, went on to a basis of giving credit to all the churches throughout the field, and before that time they had been doing it on a cash basis, which necessitated their carrying very large accounts with the churches, running up into I think something like $200,000 or $300,000; and we felt that, and of course, that had a tendency to deplete our cash reserves, and there has been a great deal of talk of late that we ought to build up our reserve on that account.

Q. Do I understand you that during the past year you have set aside $200,000 out of the net profits as reserves that previously had not existed, or as reserve funds that previously had not been in existence? A. Well, they couldn't have been in existence if we had not set them up.

Q. You had no similar fund in existence? A. Why, similar, but not similar amounts, perhaps.

Q. How does the amount compare that you have set aside for reserves this year with what you set aside the year before? A. I think it is some larger, but I wouldn't want to make the statement until I looked that up.

Q. Isn't it very much larger? A. Perhaps so, yes.

Q. And isn't it so much larger that it is a good deal over $100,000 larger? A. Well, I wouldn't call that large.

Q. Well, isn't it? A. What do you mean by "isn't it?"

Q. I ask if it isn't more than $100,000 more than you have set aside in any previous year? A. I wouldn't want to say that it is $100,000 more, because I am not sure—I don't think it is—than any year in the last five or six years. It may very likely be so.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Whipple, have you the books here?

Mr. Whipple—No; we haven't the books in court. I received your notice this morning a few minutes before I came into court, and we are going to ask you to point out a little more definitely what books you want, because if we should bring down all that you have notified us to produce it might seriously impede our business. We need our books. Mr. Watts will be put on as the next witness and you can make such examination as you want of these accounts. It will be a great deal better to have a man who is responsible for the accounts testify about it than a man who is not.

Mr. Bates—We want the books of the last three years, showing the balance sheets, and also showing the expenses, and we want the auditors' or accountants' reports in and for the last three years.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Watts will have them here tomorrow—those things that you have specifically mentioned.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, up to some time in 1918 your relations with the board had been pleasant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by "the board" I mean the Board of Directors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there had been no trouble between the trustees and the directors of any consequence? A. No. And I might add—our relations have not been unpleasant—

Q. Since that time? A. Since that time. We are, I think, able to recognize one another—

Q. You have a sort of mutual respect for each other? A. I know I have for the Board of Directors and I hope they have for me.

Q. You have respect for all the Board of Directors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You think they are men who are trying to do their duty as they see it? A. Why, I try to think that way; yes, sir. I don't always agree with them.

Mr. Bates—That would hardly be expected.

Mr. Whipple—Why not?

Mr. Bates—Well, because such good fellows as you and I can't always agree.

Mr. Whipple—That doesn't show anything.

Mr. Streeter—That is camouflage, apparently, with you and Whipple.

Q. Mr. Rowlands, you have stated in your bill that the directors have changed their course of conduct in regard to the trustees. I want to know in what respect they have changed their course of conduct in regard to the trustees? A. Specifically—can you give me anything?

Q. Specifically. A. I mean, can you ask me anything—

Q. No. I want you to give me the specific instances where they have changed their course of conduct in regard to the trustees of the Publishing Society. A. The first intimation I had was in the memorandum the agreement, as I remember—

Q. When was that? A. As I stated a while ago, I think that was early in 1918 sometime.

Q. That was in regard to the relative authority of the two boards? A. Yes.

Q. And is there anything else? A. Well, that, I think, is basically—

Q. If there is anything else let us have it. A. I stated practically all the reasons—but our correspondence, in the records, I think, shows all the rest of the—

Q. You don't recall anything else? A. Nothing that I think worth relating.

Q. The directors have not done any act inconsistent with what they had done before, have they?

Mr. Whipple—You mean up to the time they attempted to remove—

Mr. Bates—I think the witness understands. If he doesn't he will ask me.

Mr. Whipple—Well, it is proper that I should understand it, if what you ask is understandable.

Mr. Bates—Will you read the question, Mr. Stenographer? I want to see if my question is understandable.

[The last question was read by the reporter.]

Mr. Whipple—What time do you refer to?

Mr. Bates—I refer to the time since 1918 when your bill says they changed their course of conduct in regard to the trustees.

Mr. Whipple—You mean up to the present time or up to the time—

Mr. Bates—Up to the time of the bringing of your bill.

Mr. Whipple—Now you see you knew how to state that question and you have now stated it.

Mr. Bates—But that was a much more perfect question than those you have stated and that I objected to.

Mr. Whipple—The tu quoque argument doesn't get you anywhere, Governor.

Q. Will you answer the question? A. The litigation and all of the evidence, I should judge, would be the answer without my going into it.

Q. But you brought the litigation, didn't you? Didn't you? A. Yes. They forced it.

Q. Now, I want to know if there is any act of theirs that they have done in connection with the publishing house prior to your bringing of this bill that was inconsistent with their former action? A. Yes. I think there were lots of them.

Q. What was it? A. One of them was the very—seemingly, to me, very underhanded way in which they attempted to undermine the editorial department of The Christian Science Monitor.

Q. What have you reference to? A. I have reference to—

Q. Don't tell us now anything except what you know yourself. A. Did you have any idea I was going to?

Q. Yes. I thought you were going to tell us something you heard somebody say—some rumor or something of that kind. A. Well, I will try to.

Q. Now, what have you seen them do or heard them do in connection with the undermining of the editorial policy? A. I have got to say what I heard and saw them do?

Q. Yes. A. I have not been watching them all the time because I have great respect for them.

Q. Have you any facts? A. Yes.

Q. What are they? A. Why, the facts are that they called some of our men over there, and, as these men have stated to us, told them that their allegiance was to the Board of Directors.

Q. Wait a minute. A. I know, but let me tell this now.

Q. Are you telling now what some men have told you? A. Yes, men in our employ.

Q. But nothing that you have seen or know anything about?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, pardon me. He knows about it.

Mr. Bates—Except from what you describe as told you.

Mr. Whipple—He knows about it from the demoralization of his force.

Mr. Bates—If there is anything of that kind you can put it in in the proper way.

Mr. Whipple—We have, or, at least, Mr. Krauthoff did. We did not need to.

The Master—You better go on and state what you have known and seen personally.

The Witness—How far does that go, Judge, please? Our employees have come to us and told us about these conditions. That is the only way we could testify about it, because we haven't watched the directors or—

The Master—You have stated that once. Is there anything else?

The Witness—Yes. We were informed that the—

Mr. Bates—Wait a minute.

Q. Who informed you? A. Do I have to give the names?

Q. Yes. A. Why, Mr. Warner, our Washington correspondent, came before us and told us some of the conditions under which he had been laboring.

Q. Well, that isn't anything you knew of yourself—except what Mr. Warner told you—and I assume you can bring Mr. Warner if you want him as a witness? A. Why, I don't know.

Q. Is there anything else you know of yourself? You know the difference between hearsay testimony and what you yourself have seen? A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen the directors do anything, or known of their doing anything, except presenting to you this statement, which they thought set forth the relative authority of the two boards—have you seen them do anything else that was inconsistent with their former course of conduct? A. Well, other than—

The Master—Have you seen them? Answer that first.

The Witness—No, I haven't seen them. Can't I qualify that statement?

The Master—You have answered that question. I think you better stop there until another one is put. He has not seen the directors do it.

Q. Well, have you heard them say anything except in connection with this statement which they thought you should recognize? A. Yes. I have heard them say—

Q. What have you heard them say? A. I have heard them make remarks which would lead me to believe that they were going to—

Q. What were the remarks? A. You want the remarks?

Q. Yes. You can't tell us what they led you to believe.

Mr. Whipple—Why can't he?

Mr. Bates—He can tell us the substance of it.

The Master—State what was said to you, if you can, and as far as you can. If you can't do that, state the substance, but try first to say just what was said to you.

Mr. Thompson—Just a moment. In regard to this matter, unless it is true that Mr. Dittmore participated in these remarks, eliminate him from them except so far as what he himself said. We don't care to be bound by the remarks of other parties.

Mr. Bates—There would be nothing to be said if you eliminate Mr. Dittmore.

Mr. Thompson—Perhaps not. We will find out about that later.

The Witness—Well, in our negotiations at some of our meetings, it seemed to me from the attitude of the directors, they were quite threatening.

Mr. Bates—Wait a minute. Not what it seemed to you.

The Master—Now you were going to try, Mr. Rowlands, to state what was said to you and who said it. Go as far as you can on that line, and then we will see what next. What was said to you and who said it?

The Witness—Well, Mr. Dickey, for instance, in a meeting said to the trustees when this situation was up, that he—and he pointed his finger at us and said, "I wouldn't be in your place for anything under the sun."

Q. Did that indicate something that they had done which was a change in their course of conduct? A. Well, it seemed to me that it was an indication that something was going to happen if we didn't come over to their way of thinking.

Q. Is that all you have in answer to the question? A. Well, that is about the way the conversation always worked out. We didn't have much time or opportunity to say anything.

The Master—Now I think, Mr. Rowlands, that I would go on and state all that you remember being said to you by any of these directors—by whom it was said and what was said. Complete that before you go off on to anything else.

The Witness—I can only give the substance of our meetings, and that was that we were always made to feel that if we were absolutely disobedient to the By-Laws of the Church and that if we did not become subservient to the Board of Directors and follow their dictation, we would have everyone against us and that they always asked us and tried to force us to take that stand.

Q. Now, what was said that made you think that, Mr. Rowlands? A. Just what I stated.

Q. Well, was that said?

Mr. Whipple—Said in substance.

The Witness—The substance of it.

Q. Did anyone ever use the word "subservient"? A. Why, I think Mr.—

Q. No, not unless you can tell actually. Don't say, "I think."

Mr. Whipple—Can't he think?

The Master—Give your best recollection.

The Witness—Well, I will have to use the word "amenable."

Q. That is entirely different from "subservient," isn't it? A. Then it seems to me that the correspondence submitted here shows that we were supposed to be subservient to them.

Q. I am not asking you what your supposition is. The correspondence speaks for itself. I asked you for conversations. If you have given us all the conversations you remember that made you think that, we will stop right there. A. I can probably think of more.

Q. Let us have them.

The Master—Go right on, Mr. Rowlands. That is what we are trying to have you do.

The Witness—I can, as I said before, give the substance.

The Master—We understand that. Now go on and give the substance, and with whom the conversation was.

The Witness—I can't give the exact conversations because I can't remember them.

The Master—We understand that you are only going to try to give the substance, but go on and give it and tell us who said it.

The Witness—Well, I would have to say that they all had a voice in the conferences. I can't say just who said it because I didn't keep a diary or have any idea that it was going to be a matter for me to testify on in court.

The Master—Now, is that as far as your recollection goes?

The Witness—Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, when the word "amenable"—

The Master—One moment. Is that as far as your recollection goes?

The Witness—On the statements—

The Master—On the question of the conversations and statements made to you by the directors—have you now told us all you can recollect?

The Witness—All at this time, yes.

Q. When the word "amenable" was used, was it suggested that you were amenable to the By-Laws or to the Board of Directors? A. Board of Directors.

Q. Are you sure? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You think that is a proper word to use in connection with the board, do you?

Mr. Whipple—He didn't say he used it. He said your people did. Of course he is not guardian of their English.

Q. Now, has there been any change in the conduct of the directors in regard to the election of editors down to the time of the bringing of this bill? A. Not that I know of.

Q. And their previous conduct. Has there been any in regard to their election of managers of the Publishing Society? A. Not that I know of.

Q. And as a matter of fact, they have always, since 1902, elected the editors and the business manager?

Mr. Whipple—Just wait a minute. I object to that question. There is no provision in the Deed of Trust for an election of a business manager. An election means or implies not only a selection but the installation of the person selected in an office. There isn't any office of director. The director is an employee of the Publishing Society.

Mr. Bates—Manager, you mean.

Mr. Whipple—And the manager in the same way. They are employees. This is not a corporation. This trust is composed of three trustees, and they do not elect—they employ people. Now, to put a question as to the election—to say that they have been elected by the directors—doesn't mean anything in view of the terms of the trust. What has been done has been put in and it has been reiterated day after day here in the cross-examination conducted by Mr. Krauthoff. Whatever they wanted to produce in regard to each one is in evidence. Now what that is, what its significance is, and what it amounts to, is for Your Honor. Why should this witness be called upon with reference to it?

The Master—I didn't understand that the question called upon him to do anything more than to tell what the usual course of procedure had been since 1902.

Mr. Whipple—May I have the question read? I did not object to that. This is another question.

Mr. Bates—No, that was the question. You stated it right, Your Honor, as I remember it.

The Master—Didn't I state it right? [The question is read as follows:

"Q. And as a matter of fact, they have always since 1902 elected the editors and the business manager?"]

Mr. Whipple—There is the question: "They have elected him." Now he has asked if there is any change, and the witness has said no, but whether what they have done amounts to an election in any true sense—

The Master—I don't think we will be misled, will we, by that?

Mr. Whipple—I feel very sure that Your Honor will not be, but that, of course, is not a legal ground of putting in an improper question.

The Master—Do you desire to change the question?

Mr. Bates—No, Your Honor.

The Master—Do I understand that he has answered it?

Mr. Bates—No, he has not answered it. In view of the pleadings I think we have a perfect right to ask that question.

The Master—He may answer it. We all understand that Mr. Whipple objects to the word "election."

Mr. Whipple—I do not object to what has been done, and that has been gone into at length.

[Question read: "And as a matter of fact, they have always since 1902 elected the editors and the business manager?"]

A. As far as I know, in connection with what they do, yes, sir—

Q. Will you answer louder? I can't hear you. A. I say, as far as I know, in connection with their affairs, I can't state; I suppose they have.

Q. You suppose they have. A. But that does not mean an induction into office—

Q. Never mind— A. (Continued)—or employing them.

Mr. Whipple—I think he should be entitled to qualify his answer. What was that? What did he say?

[Answer read: "But that does not mean an induction into office—"]

The Witness—Or employing them.

Mr. Whipple—Or employing them.

Q. And these editors and business managers have been elected annually by the Board of Directors? A. I can't testify as to that.

Q. Haven't you been present at the meetings of the Board of Trustees when you have received notice of the annual election from the board? A. I don't remember of being at a meeting of the board when that took place.

Q. You were not present at all the meetings—

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, I am sure that Governor Bates put that question in good faith, but we have the records of the directors, and they do not sustain at all the state of facts that the Governor is assuming. In nineteen years there are accounts of five meetings in which they have gone through a process purporting to be an election. Now, of course, you do not mean to ask this witness to assent to a proposition that is not sustained by the facts on your own records?

Mr. Bates—No, absolutely not.

Mr. Whipple—I knew you did not.

Mr. Bates—The records sustain the whole question, and your statement of it is incomplete and incorrect, and when we get to putting in the records we shall show how complete they are.

Mr. Whipple—Why not put in your records?

Mr. Bates—Because it is not our turn to put in the records. I am cross-examining your witness. When the time comes for us to put in our case we shall put them in.

Mr. Whipple—I should hardly call it cross-examination. It seems to me more like something else.

Mr. Bates—I didn't ask you to call it anything.

Mr. Whipple—No, but you assert it to be such.

Mr. Bates—No, I didn't.

The Master—Go on and put the next question, Governor Bates; we shall not make any progress this way.

Q. Has the Board of Trustees since you have been a member of it ever written any letter or in any way claimed to the Board of Directors that they had no right to elect the editors and the manager of the Publishing Society? A. I think of one that was written either by the trustees or by the counsel since the bill was filed.

Q. Before the bill was filed? A. You didn't say that, did you?

Q. Yes. Kindly consider that all my questions—I am not sure that I did, Mr. Rowlands, but all my questions apply to what was done before the bill was filed. A. Why, the letter of Sept. 30 qualifies the situation as to what we considered an election.

Q. Did you in that letter anywhere object to the election of editors or to the election of the business manager by the Board of Directors?

Mr. Whipple—Doesn't that letter speak for itself?

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Bates—He says it does; I am asking him. I want to make sure.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

Mr. Bates—If you will admit that it does not, well and good; but I am going to leave it on the—

Mr. Whipple—I am not going to admit anything of the sort. The letter speaks for itself.

The Master—I think we had better see what the witness has to say about it.

The Witness—I would rather refer to the letter, because that states clearly.

Q. Well, so far as you know, there is nothing unless it is in that letter?

A. That is the only statement that I know of where that—

Q. Is there anything on record in the trustees' records showing that they have at any time prior to the bringing of this suit ever protested against the directors' electing the editors and the business manager? A. Well, ever since I have been on the trustees, or shortly after that, and since understanding the Deed of Trust as I do now, there has always been the objection to them employing or inducing into office—

Q. Mr. Rowlands, you have not answered my question. A. That is the best—

Q. I ask you if there is anything in the records of the trustees showing that they have ever at any time in any way objected or protested against the Board of Directors' electing the editors and the business manager? A. I think not.

Q. Your right to occupy the buildings as the Publishing Society that you occupy comes to you because of the provisions of the Church Manual?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

Q. Is not that a fact?

Mr. Whipple—I object. Why should he be called upon to construe how he gets the tenancy of the building?

The Master—Should it turn out that he is undertaking to construe anything, we will see. I think that the cross-examining counsel is entitled to get what he knows about it.

Q. Are the buildings owned by The Mother Church? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you occupy? And they were built by The Mother Church for the Publishing Society's use? Is that right? A. I am not sure about The Mother Church, but I think the field, —the members of the Church—contributed. I don't know whether they were all members of The Mother Church or not.

Q. Didn't they contribute to the church treasury? A. I am not sure.

Q. And weren't the buildings built by reason of the payment from the church treasury? A. I think they were; yes, sir.

Q. Yes. And their value is very near a million dollars, is it not? A. I am not competent to pass on that.

Q. Haven't you as a business man any knowledge of the value of the buildings you occupy? A. Why, no, because—I might have some idea about the buildings, but I wouldn't say about the property, because—

Q. Never have considered that at all? A. Somewhat, yes.

Q. Well, what is your own opinion? A. I have had an idea that that property was worth somewhere between $300,000 and $500,000.

Q. Do you know what it is assessed for? A. I do not, no.

Q. Did you know it was assessed for $700,000? A. I did not.

Q. The land on which the buildings are built is also the property of The Mother Church, is it not? A. I think it is; yes, sir.

Q. And the Publishing Society does not pay any rent to The Mother Church for the buildings? A. Not the—we pay rent, however, but not—

Q. Not to The Mother Church for the use of those buildings? A. No.

Q. Not for the use of those buildings. Now, the controversy that arose in 1918, about September, somewhere along that time, as you recall it, was in regard to a fundamental question of principle as to whether or not the Board of Directors had any supervisory powers over the Board of Trustees, was it not? A. As stated in the memorandum.

Q. Well, that is substantially it? A. I think so.

Q. And the Board of Trustees claimed that the Board of Directors had no power over them whatsoever? A. I think that is substantially so.

Q. And the Board of Directors claimed that both under the deed and under the Manual they had certain supervisory powers which they must discharge or duties which they must discharge? A. Well, I should judge that they are more than supervisory powers; absolute powers, they claimed.

Q. Well, that was their claim? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was fundamental? A. I think so.

Q. And if that claim was recognized, why, then you realized that you came under the board of government of The Mother Church? A. I couldn't say the board of government of The Mother Church.

Q. Well, the Board of Directors of The Mother Church? A. Well, yes.

Q. And if it was not recognized, why, then you were independent of them absolutely? A. Well, I think that we are independent of the Board of Directors.

Q. And you now claim, of course, that you are absolutely independent of the Board of Directors? A. Yes, but that does not mean any separation of the church or the activities of the society.

Q. No, but you claim, as far as your actions are concerned, that you are absolutely independent of the Board of Directors?

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. Isn't that set forth in the bill? Isn't that the proper place for the claim, if Your Honor please? I object to the question.

Mr. Bates—Well, I think it is a proper question.

The Master—The best way will be to have him answer, I think, if he can.

Mr. Bates—[To the stenographer] Will you read the question.

[Question read.]

A. Under the Deed of Trust, yes, with a due regard—

Q. And this— A. May I qualify that statement, because you are asking that so many times in different ways. But always with a high regard for the office of the Board of Directors and a desire to cooperate with them and consult with them in every way and to work out the purposes of the movement as we understand it.

Q. That was a vital question as between the Publishing Society and the Board of Directors? A. Yes, but it has been stated—

Q. It was an important question? A. Yes.

Q. And it was not merely an ephemeral difference that existed between the two boards, was it? A. I should not call it ephemeral.

Q. And if the Board of Directors recognized your contention, then it meant that they as the Board of Directors of the Christian Science Church had no authority over the organs which were being published as the organs of The Mother Church of Christian Science?

Mr. Whipple—Does Your Honor think that that argumentative question ought to be answered?

The Master—I didn't hear.

Mr. Whipple—Does Your Honor think that that argumentative question ought to be answered? We object to it. But if Your Honor thinks that all questions of this sort might better be answered, then I do not want to keep repeating the objection. It seems to me that cannot be helpful in any way.

Mr. Bates—I think it is very helpful on the question of good faith of these directors.

The Master—The question of the good faith of the—

Mr. Whipple—I do not see that the good faith of the directors is involved here.

Mr. Bates—As showing the importance of this question and the necessity of its settlement for the perpetuation of the cause and of The Mother Church and of its organs, it is fundamental.

Mr. Whipple—There isn't any question about the importance of the question.

Mr. Bates—Oh, yes, you alleged that we discharged—

The Master—I do not see how the witness' opinion about it is going to signify. This is cross-examination, and if you think it bears on somebody's good faith I think I ought to let you ask it.

[Question read.]

Q. Answer it, please.

The Witness—May I qualify that, Your Honor?

Mr. Bates—I should like for you to answer the question, and then you can qualify.

The Master—Answer it the best way you can.

The Witness—I should say they had no authority over the organs of the Church, but they had the privilege to use them to the utmost of their capacity.

Q. Subject to your approval? A. Yes.

Q. And therefore they could not put in anything, either by way of notice or otherwise, unless you approved it, under your theory? A. If you want to state it that way, yes, but we have never made that contention.

Q. If the directors were right, that the deed and the Manual made incumbent upon them certain duties of supervision of the Publishing Society and the publications, then the Board of Directors were fully justified in dismissing anybody on that board who disagreed with them, were they not? A. Well—

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment as to that.

The Master—That assumes.

Mr. Bates—I think perhaps that is argumentative.

The Master—That assumes their authority to dismiss.

Mr. Bates—I withdraw that question.

Q. You are a business man? A. Well—I have tried to be one.

Q. Interested in several lumber mills? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And railroads? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And development of vast properties? A. Well, that is a question, about whether they are vast or not.

Q. Relatively? A. Relatively large properties, yes, sir.

Q. And have some holding corporations in connection with your business—some sub-corporations if you please? A. We have; perhaps you would call them that.

Mr. Whipple—I am sorry but we can't hear.

The Witness—I suppose— I didn't just understand what Governor Bates meant. You meant holding—a parent company, something of that sort?

Q. Yes. A. I think perhaps they might be called that.

Q. You would think it was very important that your superintendent in any of those lines of business was one who recognized the authority of your board of management, would you not? A. That all depends upon what you consider board management.

Q. Oh, if you don't think it would be just say so. Wouldn't you consider it so? A. Well, I said if you thought—it depends on what the management is because management is changing very materially these days.

Q. Mr. Rowlands, you wouldn't care how honest your superintendent was in his belief that he owned the corporation; you would get rid of him just the same wouldn't you if he insisted he owned it when he didn't? A. That all depends upon what the condition was.

Q. It all depends, does it? A. Yes. That is a hypothetical question as to what I should do—

Q. Oh, yes. A. I never had that to face.

Q. I wanted to see whether or not— A. I have seen some corporations I would give to him.

Q. In accordance with Article XXXV, Section II, you keep the copy of the Manual in the publishing house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You recognize that Mrs. Eddy reserved in the deed the right to give directions to her trustees? A. Yes.

Q. And the right also to make changes? A. I don't understand that. Perhaps that is so. An irrevocable trust—I don't see how it could be changed.

Q. Do you remember the words in there in regard to making changes?

Mr. Whipple—Please point them out; wouldn't that be better?

Q. You remember that General Streeter made the statement that the words in clause 8, at the end: "Reserving the right to make such changes as I may think important," were inserted by him and in his handwriting at Mrs. Eddy's request? A. I took it that it meant perhaps that—

The Master—You remember the testimony about that—

The Witness—No, I do not.

The Master—That is the question.

Q. Well, if Mrs. Eddy did give any directions in regard to the management of the trust, you would consider them binding upon you? A. The trustees certainly would.

Q. And you would consider them binding just the same now that, as we term it, she has passed on, as you would when she was here and was visible to us? A. Anything that she gave to the trustees; yes, sir.

Q. Therefore, her passing on, as we call it, did not in any way interfere with the force of the directions that she had given? A. Not at all.

Q. And she did give certain directions in regard to that trust in the form of by-laws, did she not?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. How can that be of the slightest use? Your Honor will notice that what Governor Bates refers to here, "reserving the right to make such changes as I may think important," does not refer to the Trust Deed; it refers to the "direction and supervision of the publication of said Quarterly, and also of all pamphlets, tracts, and other literature pertaining to said business, using their best judgment as to the means of preparing and issuing the same, so as to promote the best interests of the Cause, reserving the right to make such changes as I may think important"—meaning, of course, the right to make such changes in the literature, tracts, pamphlets, etc., as they thought important. And then counsel seriously rip those words out of their connection and attempt to

SEVENTH DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room, Boston,
Massachusetts, July 2, 1919.

Lamont Rowlands, Resumed

Cross-Examination, Continued

The Master—Whenever you are ready you may proceed, Mr. Bates. You don't want to wait for General Streeter?

Mr. Thompson—I don't believe it is necessary, sir; I think he will be coming in in a minute.

Q. (By Mr. Bates) When did you first consult counsel in regard to your duties as a trustee? A. I can't just remember the date but it seems to me it is the latter part of 1918—not as a trustee, or any authority of the trustees that I take up the question, but I did speak to Mr. Strawn at one time when I was in Chicago about the Deed of Trust.

Q. And do you remember when that was? A. I do not.

Q. Was that under the authority of the Board of Trustees? A. Not at that time, no, sir.

Q. And Mr. Strawn was your personal counsel? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also the counsel of the Goodyear Yellow Pine Lumber Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which is your company? A. I am interested in it, yes, sir.

Q. Did the trustees know that you were going to consult Mr. Strawn at that time? A. Not at that time, I don't think they did.

Q. Can't you fix the time a little more definitely? A. Well, I couldn't without referring to—I suppose I could work it out by some of the trips that I took to Chicago and give you a definite idea a little later.

Q. Well, how came you to consult with Mr. Strawn if the Board of Trustees had not authorized you to do so? A. Why, I have done a great many things that the Board of Trustees have not authorized me to do.

Q. Did you show Mr. Strawn the Deed of Trust at that time? A. I did, I think.

Q. Did you show him the Church Manual? A. I think I did.

Q. And did you ask him for a written opinion? A. Not at that time.

Q. And did he give you an opinion at that time? A. Well, no, not at that particular time; he did later.

Q. Was that about the first of October, 1918? A. I think it was later than that.

Mr. Bates—I offer at this time an extract from the trustees' records, under date of Oct. 1, 1918.

Mr. Whipple—Just at the moment I do not see the materiality of the question at all as affirmative proof of anything.

The Master—I suppose we could only tell about that when we know what the record is. Perhaps if you are going to offer it it would be well to show it to counsel before you offer it.

Mr. Whipple—I assumed it had relation to the subject matter as to which counsel was interrogating, that is, with regard to the opinion of Mr. Strawn, and I do not readily see how it is material. (The record is shown to Mr. Whipple.) I withdraw my objection, not admitting that it is material, but it is the easiest way out of it.

Mr. Bates—I thought so.

Mr. Bates reads extract from the records of the trustees, under date of Oct. 1, 1918, as follows:

"It was moved and seconded that Mr. Rowlands, when in Chicago on Thursday, engage the services of Mr. Silas H. Strawn, attorney, to give the Board of Trustees a careful interpretation of the Deed of Trust, and the correlative sections of the Manual, which would definitely set forth the rights of the Board of Trustees from a legal standpoint."

Mr. Bates—I think I have stated that the date of the meeting was Oct. 1, 1918.

The Witness—Yes.

Q. Was it at your suggestion that that action was taken? A. I don't know. It might have been, yes, sir.

Q. The trustees had never met Mr. Strawn, had they? A. Well, I couldn't testify as to that.

Q. Don't you know? A. Why, no, I don't know.

Q. The other trustees? A. I am not sure. I think Mr. Ogden might have met Mr. Strawn at some time when he was in Boston.

Q. So far as you know they had no acquaintance with him? A. No, not so far as I know.

Q. And at that time you were seeking this legal advice so as to sustain the position which the trustees had taken?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. The resolution says what they ask.

Mr. Bates—Well, I am asking him if he was.

The Master—Make it a little more clear that you are asking him that.

Q. Were you seeking legal advice to sustain the position of the trustees at that time? A. I was seeking advice in connection with our duties under the Deed of Trust, as to what the law was.

Q. And this was done, so far as you recollect, on your initiative? A. I think so.

Q. And you do recall that you stated yesterday that you were very firm, in all of your conferences with the board, in your insistence on your views as to the Trust Deed? A. Not my views wholly.

Q. Well, whose views, then? A. The views of the trustees.

Q. You were very insistent on them? A. I shouldn't say very insistent. I simply—if I remember my testimony I said that I was firm in make them mean an utterly and entirely different thing, and cram the words down the throat of a helpless witness to assent to.

Mr. Bates—I entirely disagree with Mr. Whipple's interpretation, and I realize that the interpretation of that deed is something that is not expected from the witness. But he has testified that he considers, and the trustees, I assume, consider, that the directions given by Mrs. Eddy are binding upon them, and I am asking him in regard to those directions.

Mr. Whipple—What directions?

Mr. Bates—Well, I am so amazed at certain of your statements—

The Master—The particular clause to which you refer in paragraph 8 of the Deed of Trust seems to relate only to the direction and supervision of the publication of the Quarterly, etc., doesn't it?

Mr. Bates—It relates to the whole business, you will find that paragraph does, and also the third paragraph. You cannot construe it in any way except in terms that relate—I mean, the paragraphs themselves cover the whole business of the Publishing Society.

The Master—I am talking only about paragraph 8. I have not got to the third paragraph.

Mr. Bates—Well, the third paragraph is the one which specifically says—

The Master—There has been no reference in your examination so far to the third paragraph, but there has been to the eighth.

Mr. Bates—(To the stenographer)—Will you read that last question? I forget what it was.

[Question read.]

Mr. Whipple—Well, just a moment. I didn't understand His Honor to rule it in.

The Master—I think he may answer.

The Witness—(To the stenographer)—Just read that again, please.

[Question read: "And she did give certain instructions in regard to that trust in the form of by-laws, did she not?"]

A. Yes. May I qualify that answer?

The Master—Go on. Complete your answer, if there is anything more you desired to add.

The Witness—I feel that any direction that Mrs. Eddy gave in the Manual is for the individual to demonstrate, and he applies it in so far as he has an understanding to Christian Science, and we could not do anything in connection with the by-laws that conflicted with our Deed of Trust.

[At 4 p. m. the hearing is adjourned to 10 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, July 2, 1919.]

defending the trust whenever it came up for consideration.

Q. And you were following it up by taking legal advice? A. Yes.

Q. And were a little bit inclined to be contentious on the subject, I assume? A. When the directors said that the Deed of Trust was practically a scrap of paper and that Mrs. Eddy had no particular—

Q. Now, wait a minute. Did the directors ever say that? A. Yes, sir; they practically said that.

Q. No, I don't want that. A. Yes, they did, they said that absolutely.

Q. Mr. Rowlands, I want you to give the exact words that they stated. Did the Board of Directors or any one of them— A. The directors, yes, the Board of Directors, made that remark, practically that remark, and said that when Mrs. Eddy—

Q. One moment. A. —signed the Deed of Trust that she didn't any more think—think any more of it than signing a check.

Mr. Bates—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

The Master (to the witness)—You must wait until you have a definite question to answer.

The Witness—I know; but his questions are so vague—

The Master—Pause one moment. Don't say anything more now until you get the question, and then answer it, and then stop. Don't talk while counsel are talking.

The Witness—Well, then, he mustn't talk when I talk.

The Master—Wait one moment; pause one moment. (To Mr. Bates) Put your question.

Q. Did any member of the Board of Directors ever use the words with regard to the Deed of Trust that it was nothing but a scrap of paper? A. Practically those words, yes.

Q. I don't ask you practically. Did they use those words? A. Not those words. In substance.

Q. They did not use those words? A. In substance, yes.

Q. I ask you for the exact words. A. I said, in substance, yes.

Q. Did they use those words? A. Not those words, but in substance they did.

Q. Then you have put words into their mouths that they did not use? A. In substance, they used those words.

Q. Do you remember the exact language to which you refer that any director used? A. I think I can state it.

Q. Well, I don't want you to state it practically now, I want the exact language. A. In substance, I will state it.

The Master—No.

Q. No; I want you to state the exact language. A. I can state it in substance, as I have stated before.

Q. But you do say now that they did not use the words "a scrap of paper"? A. I said in substance they said that.

Q. No. They did not use the words? A. In substance they said that.

Mr. Bates—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

The Master—I think the witness is entirely wrong in putting in the words "in substance"—

The Witness—Well, I didn't—

The Master—under the present circumstances. You are asked now a definite question: Can you remember and state the exact words used? Now, it is no answer to that question to say what they were in substance. Can you state the exact words? Yes or No.

The Witness—No; I cannot state the exact words.

Q. Have you, Mr. Rowlands, made any efforts to get an editor to fill Mr. McCrackan's position? A. No, sir.

Q. And how long has his position been vacant? A. Since the day the trustees dismissed Mr. McCrackan. I can't give the exact date; it is in the records.

Q. It is a matter of several weeks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know what are the duties of the editors of your publications, or of the publications of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Why, I think so.

Q. Are they each supposed to write editorials? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a fact that the papers are now running one editorial short by reason of Mr. McCrackan not being on the board and his place not having been filled on the board of editors? A. Yes. I do not consider that any shortcoming of the periodical at all.

Q. That is, you do not consider that the additional editorial would be of any special advantage? A. It might be of advantage if the position were properly filled but I think without Mr. McCrackan it is better off.

Q. Is the reason you haven't filled it because you have not been able to obtain any proper person to fill it? A. Not at all.

Q. Then why haven't you filled it? A. Why, I do not—

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. I pray Your Honor's judgment as to that. This is a matter that has happened since the filing of the bill, and I think it is perfectly obvious that with a dispute or controversy between these boards as to the election, when the directors are under the injunction of this Court against taking any action in connection with it, and while the propriety of that injunction is being determined by the Court, it would seem perfectly proper that the trustees should not proceed. Now, why ask about that when it is a matter that has arisen during the pendency of the suit? It has nothing to do with the proper administration of the trust prior to the time the suit was brought; it is not a basis of the attempted removal of Mr. Rowlands at all.

Mr. Bates—What was the question? [The question is read by the stenographer.]

The Master—It all relates to something that has come up since the suit was brought. I think I will exclude inquiries about what they have done since the suit was brought.

Mr. Bates—Your Honor, it is not introduced for the purpose of showing something that they neglected to do since, as a matter of neglect. It is introduced for the purpose of showing that they cannot fill the vacancy because they are not proceeding in accordance with the Manual, and that a Christian Scientist who is loyal to the Church and the Manual will not accept the position.

The Master—I hardly think we ought to go into that. What they have done pending the suit does not seem to me to have a proper bearing upon the issues presented by the bill and answer in the suit.

Q. Mr. Dixon is editor of The Christian Science Monitor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. McKenzie is editor of the other periodicals? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mrs. Hoag is assistant or associate editor? A. Mrs. Hoag, yes.

Mr. Whipple—But not of The Monitor, as I understand.

Mr. Bates—No, the other periodicals.

Mr. Whipple—You mean the other periodicals, yes.

Q. And the position that Mr. McCrackan filled was that also of associate editor? A. Yes.

Q. And that is the position which has not been filled? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, there has been previously for all the papers a staff of four editors, and they are now with only three editors? A. At the present.

Q. Do you know how long they have had three editors up to the time of bringing this suit?

Mr. Whipple—That question has been answered, if Your Honor please. He says that since Mr. McCrackan was discharged, which is admittedly since the suit was brought, and that he cannot remember just when Mr. McCrackan was discharged. Now, why waste time asking that again?

Mr. Bates—You have mistaken the question.

Mr. Whipple—What is your question?

Mr. Bates—The question I asked was whether or not they had always had four editors for these papers prior to the time of Mr. McCrackan's dismissal.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me. (To the stenographer) Read the question; compare it with what Mr. Bates thinks it was.

[The question is read by the stenographer, as follows: "Do you know how long they have had three editors up to the time of bringing this suit?"]

Mr. Whipple—How long they have had three editors up to the time of bringing this suit.

Q. Did you understand the last question, Mr. Rowlands? A. Well, now you asked me about the number of editors. As far as I know, there might not have been that number throughout the history of the movement. I am not familiar enough with the number of editors to make a definite statement, but I do know that there are only three now.

Q. And at any rate, all the time that you have been trustee prior to Mr. McCrackan's dismissal there had been four? A. Yes, sir. Well, there was another associate editor, I think, in connection with the German periodicals at one time, but that office was abolished.

Q. That was because it was not an editor but a translator, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir, as I understand it.

Q. And your board asked the Board of Directors to assent to that party being considered a translator instead of an editor, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Board of Directors assented? A. Yes.

Q. And thereafter that party was called a translator and not an editor? A. I don't know that he was called that, but that is the practical activity of the office, as I understand it.

Q. Did you ever hear any of the directors threaten to make the publishing house an "empty shell"? A. In substance.

Q. I am not asking you for the substance. Did you ever hear them use those words? A. Not those words.

Q. And do you know why those words were put in quotations in your bill? A. Yes.

Q. Why? A. Because they made that statement to the manager of the Publishing Society.

Q. I understood you to say that you did not know of their ever making it.

The Witness—I didn't hear it said.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me. He said he didn't hear them say those words. He heard them say that in substance himself.

Q. Did you ever hear any of the directors use those words? A. No, sir.

Q. Not in all of your conversations or contentions with them—they never used those words? A. Not those exact words.

Q. Now, do I understand you to say that Mr. Watts informed you that they had used them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you who had used them? A. I can't just remember whether he told us the name of the director.

Q. Are you certain he used those words? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't think it of enough consequence to ask what director used them? A. Well, I may have at that time.

Q. Well, did you? A. I don't remember doing it.

Q. It was not of enough consequence to impress your memory as to the fact who it was, whether you asked or not? A. They said so many things that we didn't put any particular emphasis on that one point.

Q. As a matter of fact what would be the effect on the periodicals if they were not understood to be the organs of The Mother Church and published under the authority of The Mother Church?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

The Master—Can't we tell as much about that as he can?

Mr. Bates—I didn't know but what he might be able to help Your Honor in arriving at that suggestion. I think it is largely a question that is self-evident.

Mr. Whipple—We think it is, the other way. We think Mrs. Eddy constituted these the organs of The Mother Church and that the directors cannot take away what power Mrs. Eddy gave if they try to.

Mr. Bates—I assume that occasionally you will allow me to reply to the Court without being interrupted.

Mr. Whipple—It depends on how you reply. If you put on that smug attitude, as if the Court had replied in your favor—

The Master—I think we better get on with the examination.

Mr. Bates—I understand that Your Honor thinks that the question of the effect upon these publications is something we do not need to go into as a matter of evidence; that it is something that the Court would naturally take notice of—the effect of their being taken out from under the Manual, as the trustees propose and as they admit, and publishing them entirely apart from Mrs. Eddy's instructions as stated in the Manual.

The Master—I am not sure that I should put it in that way, but I don't think the witness' opinion as to what would happen in the future in a given contingency can assist us.

Mr. Bates—I submit, Your Honor, that if it is a question for expert testimony, the witness ought to be able to give it. I am not certain that it is. I think it is largely a question of argument. But on the other hand, if Your Honor does not think that that is something you could take into consideration without evidence, then I think Mr. Rowlands as a trustee and interested in these papers would be qualified to give his opinion in regard to it.

The Master—The question being objected to I shall be obliged to exclude it, I think.

Mr. Bates—And I ask Your Honor to save my exception in that matter. And in that connection, may it please the Court, in order that the record may be complete, we offer to prove by persons who are familiar with these publications and with the whole conditions under which they circulate, that the attitude of the trustees, if sustained, thereby taking all these publications out from under the authority of the Church and from under the authority of the Manual, would result most disastrously, and would practically wipe them out of existence.

Mr. Whipple—I cannot accept that offer of proof because it is not proof; it is a prediction founded upon error. The way in which these papers shall be published, the ownership of them, and the authority in connection with them, was stated by Mrs. Eddy herself, and these directors are attempting to subvert and destroy a sacred trust of Mrs. Eddy; and we do not assent that any action on the part of the trustees in supporting and defending that trust would have any such result as you indicate.

The Master—I think no ruling is called for at present on that offer of proof. I exclude the question asked this witness in cross-examination. If the evidence should be offered again I think that would be a better time to rule on it. The evidence which you refer to in the offer of proof may be offered hereafter.

Mr. Bates—Then I understand you do not exclude that line of evidence?

The Master—I don't think I am called upon either to exclude or admit it at present.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, you have averred in your bill in equity that the directors are attempting to carry out a plan, and that said plan involves a deliberate attempt by the directors to force the trustees out of their offices in order to place therein either three of the directors themselves or three persons who will be subservient to the directors and manage said trust and the affairs of the Publishing Society in subserviency to the defendants. What made you aver that the directors themselves were seeking to put themselves in those positions? A. That statement is qualified—"or some one to represent them."

Q. Well, do you believe that they wished to place themselves in those positions? A. Or some one to represent them.

Q. Do you believe that they wished to place themselves in those positions?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. It has been answered. He believes that they either intended to put themselves there or some one subservient.

Mr. Bates—I don't think he has the right to answer in the alternative. I want to know if he believes the first part of that allegation.

Mr. Whipple—Why not?

The Master—He hasn't made that allegation distinct and by itself. He has made it only in conjunction with the alternative. I hardly think that is warranted.

Mr. Bates—Well, I will ask Your Honor to save my exception.

Q. Mr. Rowlands, I understood you to say that you had been about a 60 per cent trustee—or that you had given about 60 per cent of your time to the business of the trusteeship.

Mr. Whipple—I move, if Your Honor please, that the first part of that question be stricken out. It has not been testified to at all.

The Master—I do not understand that Governor Bates insists upon it at all.

Mr. Whipple—All right. The latter part is a perfectly proper question.

The Master—Put the latter part of the question.

Q. You have given about 60 per cent of your time, you think, to the trusteeship? A. I did not say that I was a 60 per cent trustee. I said that, estimating it, I had given about 60 per cent of my time since accepting the trusteeship, and felt that I had fulfilled it and had always been subject to call at any time when I was needed.

Q. There are a great many matters that come before the Board of Trustees at their meetings? A. A number; yes, sir.

Q. And meetings are frequently held, I assume? A. Yes.

Q. And those matters are matters of sufficient importance to engage the trustees' attention? A. Yes.

Q. And sometimes they hold several meetings on a day, do they not?

Q. Well, rarely several meetings, but that has been the case, yes.

Q. And they find it necessary, in order to discharge the duties of their trust, or to carry on the business, to hold a great many meetings during the course of the month? A. That does not mean that absolutely all the trustees must be present at every meeting.

Q. I am not asking you what it means, but what they do. Might it not be necessary to hold the meetings very often? A. To facilitate business; yes.

Q. Do you know how many meetings have been held by the trustees since your appointment and up to the time of the bringing of this bill? A. I do not.

Q. Well, you wouldn't be surprised, would you, if I should ask you if it was not several hundred? A. No.

Q. And when I tell you that we have gone through your records and find that there were—I will not say that it is absolutely exactly the number, but it is as nearly exact as we could make it—that there have been 407 meetings of the trustees held from the time of your appointment down to the beginning of this suit—you would have no reason to doubt that statement, would you? A. No, sir.

Q. And I may say that you may verify it if you wish to, and if you find that it is incorrect you can show where the correction should be made. A. Very well.

Q. Now, if I should tell you that out of those meetings, according to the record, you were absent from 192 of them, would you have any reason, from your recollections, to doubt that statement? A. No, sir.

Q. So that probably, then, our computation is correct, that since you became trustee out of 407 meetings you have been absent 192? A. I don't think that has anything to do with my fulfilling the office of trustee, however.

Mr. Bates—I am just asking you about your absence from those meetings.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, you have said that you gave up some business in order to discharge your duties as trustee. Will you tell us what you gave up? A. You mean specifically?

Q. Specifically. A. I gave up the general managership of the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company of Delaware. I was vice-president and treasurer. I resigned from that activity.

Q. What company was that? A. The C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company of Delaware. That is a parent corporation.

Q. When did you resign from that? A. I can't tell you, but last year some time.

Q. About when? A. I think it was in the middle of the summer. Their regular meeting was in January, but it was deferred until—I can't tell you just the date.

Q. What was your position? A. I was vice-president, treasurer, and general manager.

Q. And it was the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company? A. Yes, of Delaware.

Q. What other position have you given up? A. I gave up the position of vice-president of the Goodyear Redwood Company.

Q. When did you give that up? A. Well, I can't remember. I gave that up when they had their annual meeting. I asked to be relieved of my duties.

Q. Well, can't you give us approximately the time? A. No, I can't.

Q. Was it within the last month? A. Oh, no, it was, I think, some time last year. It has not been this year.

Q. You were vice-president of that company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you given up any other positions? A. Well, I gave up—that is, I asked to be relieved as an officer, as a vice-president, as I remember it, of the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company. I can't just remember—I think I was the vice-president and treasurer of that company, and I asked to be relieved of all the offices, but they insisted upon me staying as treasurer, for reasons, a little longer, so I am treasurer yet.

Q. The treasurer, I assume, is the important position in the company—not the vice-president? A. Not actively, no. There are several matters in connection with the financing of the institution that I had in charge, and they wanted me to fulfill them.

Q. You are still treasurer of the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any other position you have given up? A. I think that is all. That is all.

Q. When did you first become vice-president of the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company? A. Well, let me see; on the incorporation of the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company; I can't tell you just the exact dates, but that was a great many years ago. I should say some eight or ten years ago. That is not exact.

Q. When did you become treasurer of it? A. Well, I think about that time.

Q. That I understand is merely a holding company. A. Well, it is an operating company and a holding company.

Q. And where does it operate? A. Well, at the present time it is practically a holding company, because I do not believe that we have any active saw mill plants open at the present time, but we did operate in Wisconsin up to a short time ago.

Q. Then it is not an operating company at the present time? A. Not an operating company from the standpoint of sawing lumber, but it really supervises other companies.

Q. Its subsidiary companies? A. Something like that.

Q. What are these subsidiary companies? A. We own the control of the Goodyear Redwood Company and considerable stock in the Goodyear Logging Company in Washington. We own, I think, some stock in the Moore Box Company, and have stock in the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company.

Q. Is the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company a subsidiary company? A. Well, I am not—I couldn't say that it is. We are interested in it. The Goodyear Lumber Company is interested in it.

Q. Is the Goodyear Redwood Company an operating company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where does it operate? A. At Greenwood, California. The post office is Elk, California.

Q. And the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company operates where? A. At Goodyear, Mississippi—it is a new town we are building there. The post office is Picayune City.

Q. And the Goodyear Logging Company operates where? A. At Clallam Bay, Washington.

Q. And the Moore Box Company? A. That operates at Jackson, Mississippi.

Q. Have the Goodyear Logging Company and the Moore company all been organized since the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company? A. No. The Goodyear Logging Company was organized—oh, I guess about five years ago.

Q. But the Moore Box Company has been organized— A. I think it was organized about that time—no, later than the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company.

Q. Are you in any partnership, Mr. Rowlands? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What partnership? A. I have a partnership with a man by the name of L. O. Crosby.

Q. How long have you been in that partnership? A. I can't give you the exact date, but it started late in 1916 or early in 1917.

Q. Are you connected with the Great Southern Lumber Company? A. Well, not at the present time.

Q. What was your connection with that company? A. Well, we owned—I say “we”—the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company owned considerable stock in the Great Southern Lumber Company, and at one time we were their sales agents in the northern territory.

Q. What was your position? A. Why, I had no particular position with that company, only in an advisory capacity. I helped them to get their organization under way, and a great many of my friends were interested in it also.

Q. Had that any relation to the Goodyear Lumber Company? A. The Goodyear Lumber Company of Delaware? Not at the present time, no sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, it is a rival company, is it not? A. Well, they are competitors.

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. Doing the same business? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are not connected, you say, with that company now? A. Not at the present time, no, sir.

Q. You were up to 1916? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Crosby is your partner? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is Lucius O. Crosby? A. Yes.

Q. And you know John W. Blodgett? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Mr. Blodgett own a large acreage in Mississippi? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Mr. Crosby obtain an option from him for that acreage? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was lumber land? A. Pardon me?

Q. Lumber land? A. Well, timber lands, yes.

Q. About 42,000 acres? A. Between 42,000 and 43,000 acres, yes, sir.

Q. And that is all located in Mississippi? A. Yes, sir; Pearl River County.

Q. And did you and Mr. Crosby enter into partnership so as to promote the development of that timber land? A. Yes, we bought it.

Q. And you bought it on Feb. 1, 1917? A. Well, I should judge about that time. The papers were passed.

Q. Just six months before you became a trustee? A. I think that is right.

Q. And did you also buy up another lumber company at about the same time that had about 3000 more acres of land down there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was the name of that company? A. Rosa Lumber Company.

Q. So that after you had bought those two, you and your partner, you had the control of 45,000 acres of lumber land? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you were proposing to develop? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me, was the 45,000 in this new Rosa Lumber Company?

Mr. Bates—No, there were only 3000.

Q. How much was there? A. I think your statement is right. I think there were about 45,000 acres all together. I think that the Rosa tract had about, when we bought it, not 3000, a little over 2000 acres.

Q. Now, under your contract with Mr. Blodgett you were obliged to pay a certain amount in cash? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the rest in a series of years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In all amounting to something over $3,000,000? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—The 42,000 acres cost over $3,000,000?

The Witness—I think the 42,000 acres cost $3,200,000.

Q. $3,385,000, was it not? A. Oh, I beg your pardon; $3,385,000.

Q. Wasn't that correct? A. I think you are right, yes.

Mr. Whipple—You want to get some of these gentlemen as your secretary so as to give you the figures.

The Witness—I have the book at home.

Q. Did you, after getting this option, make some arrangement with the International Harvester Company in regard to financing you in your development of it? A. Yes.

Q. And what arrangements did you make with them? A. Well, I would be glad to tell. If it is not necessary, I would not like to give all of the—

Q. Did they advance $500,000?

Mr. Whipple—Well, just a moment. Does Your Honor think this is material? So far as it bears upon its engaging Mr. Rowlands' activities and taking him away from the trusteeship, of course, it is all material. But, of course, Governor Bates knows that some people can do great things in short periods of time if they have the capacity to do it, while other people may work 24 hours a day and cannot accomplish the same results, and we may have the case here of a man of very large business ability that this trust ought to be thankful that it has to serve it.

Mr. Bates—Well, I am helping you to show that.

Mr. Whipple—In spite of the fact that he has had to borrow $500,000 on account of a $3,000,000 obligation. I mean the details of it, it does not seem to me, ought to be asked.

Mr. Bates—I think that is fairly open to argument, when he comes to argue; but as for showing the interests of this trustee and the necessity for his absence, and, therefore, his inattention, as we allege, to the business of the trusteeship, I think it is competent.

The Master—Without denying that that is open to you, we do not, of course, want any detailed inquiry into all his business arrangements.

Mr. Bates—Certainly not. Your Honor; but I do want them sufficiently to show the conditions under which he was working.

Q. Now, will you answer the question, Mr. Rowlands?

Mr. Whipple—This particular question I object to, as to what arrangements either he or his partner made with the Harvester Company to finance this obligation. It affects interests entirely outside of those of this Board of Directors.

The Master—I do not understand that Governor Bates is requiring him now to set forth all the arrangements in detail. Am I right?

Mr. Whipple (to the stenographer)—May I trouble you to read the question?

The Master—Am I right?

Mr. Bates—I do not want all the details. I only want those which have a direct bearing on the question of his ability under those circumstances to give his attention to the trusteeship.

The Master—You followed that with another question, if my memory is correct.

Mr. Whipple—May I have the question which has been put?

[Question read as follows: “Did they advance you $500,000?”]

Mr. Whipple—Does Your Honor think that that is material? How does that affect the time that he put into his trusteeship?

Mr. Bates—I think it will appear that it affects it.

Mr. Whipple—Let it appear so. Don't keep it so far back in the cloud of mystery. If you cannot see how that—

The Master—I am afraid that I am not quite prepared to say that it may not become material. I shall have to trust Governor Bates not to ask it unless he deems it material.

Mr. Whipple—Very well.

Mr. Bates—I will not abuse your confidence.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, did you? A. No, I did not borrow the $500,000 myself. Mr. Crosby borrowed it for the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company. The money was loaned to them, I think. I could give you the details if I had my contract book here.

Q. Was the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company organized by you and Mr. Crosby? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In order to help finance this proposition? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the capital of it was $1,500,000? A. Yes.

Q. Of which $500,000 was preferred stock? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And of that $500,000 preferred stock, $400,000 went to the Goodyear family? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And $100,000 to Mr. Crosby? A. Yes.

Q. And none to Mr. Rowlands? A. None to Mr. Rowlands.

Q. And Mr. Rowlands had a share of the common stock? A. Yes.

Q. And the common stock did not represent cash put into the property? A. I would not say that.

Q. Well, you received the common stock because of the time you were going to put into the property? A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any cash paid for it?

The Witness—Do I have to answer questions of that kind?

The Master—You have either to answer or to say that you prefer not to answer.

The Witness—I prefer not to answer.

Mr. Bates—I propose to show, Your Honor, that Mr. Rowlands received a large share of this common stock because he was going to devote his time to it.

The Witness—That is not so; absolutely untrue.

Q. Then why cannot you answer my questions? A. That statement is untrue absolutely, and you can't produce anything to show that is a fact.

The Master—One moment, one moment.

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment, Mr. Rowlands.

The Witness—Well, I know!

The Master—You have said that is not a correct statement. Now you have answered the question, I think.

Mr. Bates—No, that was not an answer to the question which I asked.

The Master—Let us see how near it comes to being an answer.

[The question is read as follows: "Was there any cash paid for it?"]

The Master—What do you say to that? The answer to that is that he prefers not to answer.

Q. Well, is that where you leave it—that you prefer not to answer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much of it did you receive?

Mr. Whipple—What was that question?

Q. How much of the common stock did you receive?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

The Master—If the inquiry is proper at all, it is proper, I think, to have him state how much common stock he received.

The Witness—Shall I answer? Half a million dollars.

Q. And did Mr. Crosby receive the other half million? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you two partners received the whole of the common stock? A. We have it in our possession at the present time.

Q. By the way, you married a daughter of Mr. Goodyear, did you not? A. Mr. C. A. Goodyear, yes, sir.

Q. After you had made the contract with Mr. Blodgett to take this property, and after you had organized the Goodyear Yellow Lumber Company— A. Goodyear Yellow Pine Company, not Lumber Company.

Q.—Goodyear Yellow Pine Company, to help finance and develop the property, you then made a contract with the International Harvester Company?

A. Yes, sir; those were all made about the same time.

Q. The parties to that contract with the International Harvester Company were yourself and Mr. Crosby? A. Yes.

Q. And the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you were all three partners to it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not only the corporation, but you and Mr. Crosby as individuals or as partners? A. Mr. Crosby and myself practically guaranteed the whole proposition.

Q. That is, you guaranteed, you and Mr. Crosby, that the contract with the International Harvester Company should be carried out? A. Practically.

Q. And that contract involved your supplying from that property, or from somewhere, 200,000,000 feet of yellow pine a year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was subsequently changed so that you were to supply them with 400,000,000 feet a year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been able to keep that part of the contract? A. Agreeable to the Harvester Company, yes, with some modifications.

Q. You have not been able to keep it, have you, entirely? A. With some modifications; we have not delivered the full amount.

Q. Did you go to the Harvester Company and say to them that in order to carry on that contract you would have to have a further advancement? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of a half a million dollars? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they finally let you have half a million dollars extra? A. They did.

Q. That was not called for in the contract, was it? A. No.

Q. And you found it necessary in order to carry out your contract? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would not have been able to have done it if the Harvester Company had not helped you out? A. Yes, sir, we would have.

Q. At any rate, you thought it was best to get it from them, I assume? A. Naturally, because they were the people most interested in our welfare and had never refused to give us assistance, but always asked us to come to them when we needed it. They were in honor bound to do it.

Q. Up to the present time have they advanced you anything except the $500,000 in addition to what the contract called for? A. I think they have. I am not sure.

Q. You think they have? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much more? A. I can't tell you, because I would have to refer to my book.

Q. It is a matter of several hundred thousand? A. Yes, sir. I will have to refer, Governor Bates, to my books, my accounts.

Q. Did you personally have anything to do with borrowing that money? A. Yes.

Q. You talked with the officers of the company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you assure them that you and Mr. Crosby were giving your time and attention to this business and that you would see that the contract was carried on? A. Well, not any more than any other activity.

Q. Wasn't there that conversation between you? A. Not that I should give time to it, no, sir.

Q. What were you to give to it? A. I would give to it my attention, see that these companies fulfilled their contract, the same as any other—

Q. Did the Harvester Company know that you had accepted this position as a trustee of the Publishing Society? A. Why, the men that I was dealing with did, yes, sir.

Q. And did the Harvester Company send some men down or some of their officers down to Mississippi to investigate and find out, and did you then assure them that you would give your time to it? A. No, sir, not all of my time. I never have made that statement.

Q. I didn't say all your time. Did you assure them that you would give the time to that proposition that was necessary to carry it through? A. I assured them that I would give it all the attention that it needed to carry it through.

Q. All the attention? A. All the attention that it needed, yes, sir.

Q. Now, in connection with that transaction you took over in that territory some lumber mills? A. As I stated before, yes.

Q. How many? A. Well, we have—You mean Crosby & Rowlands?

Q. Yes. A. I think we have four mills operating there at the present time. That is, the Goodyear Yellow Pine, the Rosa Lumber Company, and we have another mill cutting on contract, a lofting mill, and another one—let's see—well, another mill; I can't think of the town now.

Q. There are four operating at the present time? A. Yes.

Q. And how long have they been operating? A. Since—well, I can't give the dates that they started operating, but they have been operating more or less since we went down there, at the time we started operations and bought the Rosa plant.

Q. When did you start operations down there, having in mind that your contract with the Harvester was made Feb. 8, 1917? A. Well, 1917, Feb. 8—I think we took over the Rosa plant some time in May, 1917.

Q. And when did you go down there and begin operating? A. We were down there early in 1917 from February on, working out that problem.

Q. What was it necessary to do in order to get ready to work out that problem? A. Well, build another sawmill, a railroad—

Q. You did build another sawmill? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was its capacity? A. A year?

Q. Yes. A. Why, I think, conservatively speaking, running night and day, which we will run it later, between eighty and one hundred millions a year.

Q. And when was that completed?
A. I think about March, this year.

Q. About March of this year? A. Yes.

Q. Is there any other mill that you have built there since you took over the property? A. No, we doubled the size of the Rosa plant. The Rosa Lumber Company only had what we call a single band mill.

Q. A single what? A. A single band mill. That is, one mill, and when we bought it we doubled the capacity by putting in another band mill and what we call a re-saw. That ought to increase the capacity over 100 per cent of that mill.

Q. That was practically making a new mill, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any other mill that you have constructed down there? A. Well, no.

Q. When did you complete this addition or doubling the capacity of the Rosa Lumber Company Mill? A. Well, I can't remember just when that was completed.

Q. About when? A. It was in the summer of 1917, I think.

Q. Now, did it necessitate building any railroads? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how many railroads have you built there, or what length of railroad? A. There is another company, the Pearl River Valley Railroad Company is another corporation, owned by other people. We sold out everything to them, but before we did it we bought—we built—bought the Cybur & Gulf Railroad.

Q. You bought the Cybur & Gulf Railroad? A. Yes.

Q. Do you still own that? A. No; we sold it to the Pearl River Valley Company, as I remember.

Q. Well, did you build any railroads? A. Yes; we built—well, we are building railroads all the time in the woods, but we have no active interest now in this railroad that served our mill. We sold that out to other parties.

Q. You are building branch railroads for the purpose of getting the lumber out? A. Yes.

Q. And that is, you say, a case of constant building? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have perhaps a hundred miles or more of railroad built there? A. You mean the Pearl River Valley and other activities?

Q. No; I mean what you have done. A. No; I think we have probably in the woods laid down all the time—probably about, our own road, steel—I should judge maybe twenty-five or thirty miles.

Q. How long were the railroads which you sold to this company? A. Not very long. One was 12 miles long.

Q. When did you make the sale? A. Well, I can't tell you the detail of that.

Q. How recently? A. Well, it was early in the formation of the companies, as I remember it. I didn't attend to it.

Q. Can you fix it any more definitely? A. No, I didn't attend to the detail of that; I had nothing to do with it.

Q. Did you also have to construct a logging road down there something like 100 miles long? A. No.

Q. You don't remember anything about that? A. No. That information is wrong, I guess.

Mr. Whipple—He remembers right, and your informant don't remember that.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, this is one of the largest lumbering operations that has ever been undertaken in the South, is it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you and Mr. Crosby are personally responsible for carrying it through? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not only to Mr. Blodgett, to whom you have agreed to pay something over $3,000,000, but also to the International Harvester Company? A. Yes.

Q. Who have advanced you $1,000,000 more or less, and with whom you have a contract to supply large amounts? A. They have value received for that contract in loaning us some money.

Q. Do you consider that that is a contract or an undertaking that does not require a large portion of your time? A. I do, for the reasons that I have a very good organization there. I have men fully competent to carry the institution along as it should be carried along.

Q. When did you move to Picayune, Mississippi? A. I can't tell when we moved our furniture; we moved the home that we had in Wisconsin, my home there, moved it to Picayune.

Q. When was it? A. Well, I can't tell. It is about the time that I went to—our furniture went down about the time that I went down there, a little later. It was in the summer of 1917 some time. I didn't attend to the details, so I can't tell you.

The Master—About the summer of what year? I didn't get that.

The Witness—I think it was 1917.

The Master—1917?

The Witness—Yes.

Q. Is it possible, Mr. Rowlands, that you cannot remember when you moved down and took your official residence in Picayune, Mississippi? A. Well, the records will show.

Q. I understood you to say yesterday that it was along in 1918? A. Well, it might have been, I don't know. Immediately that I went into that operation I decided to make my residence in Picayune, and that was the understanding, and to build a home there, and I proceeded along those lines, but I never voted anywhere after that.

Q. And have you ever voted there? A. No.

Q. Is the reason that you have not voted there because you have not been there long enough to vote in the last election? A. That might have been so; I have not inquired.

Q. Can't we agree, then, that you did not move down there until 1918? A. No; I wouldn't say that because I had decided that that was my place of residence, as soon as I made that undertaking, because at the time I didn't know that I was coming to Boston.

Q. You had decided that that was to be your place of residence as soon as you entered into these big contracts in connection with this lumber business? A. Practically.

Q. Because you considered that your attention would be required down there for that purpose, I assume? A. Well, if you put it that way, yes.

Q. Were you giving up your home in Wisconsin for any other reason? A. Well, my brothers and part of my family lived there, and they all went south to help me in this undertaking—practically our whole organization—they lived in my home, and I just moved my home south.

Q. Not only the Goodyear family, but the Rowlands family then considered it of such great importance to carry on this business that they all moved down to Picayune, Mississippi? A. Yes.

Q. And you built a house there? A. Yes.

Q. And had your furnishings carried down there? A. Yes.

Q. And had it decorated by a Chicago decorator? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Why—

Q. And came prepared for permanent living in Mississippi? A. Pardon me?

Q. Prepared to live permanently in Mississippi? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—My only comment was that I wondered that he did not employ Boston decorators. I suppose that makes a difference in the issues of this Christian Science case.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, this proposition has been pretty near to failure several times, hasn't it? A. Never.

Q. Didn't you consider it so when you had to go to the International Harvester Company? A. No, sir.

Q. And ask them for help? A. No, sir.

Q. To the extent of a million dollars more or less? A. No, sir, and they never did.

Q. Have you borrowed any money in Boston to carry on this proposition? A. Haven't tried to.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, is it not a fact that you moved to Mississippi after you had been appointed a trustee?

Mr. Streeter—One moment. Any reason why he shouldn't? A. No.

Q. Did you not consult the trustees in regard to moving down there? A. No, not that I remember of.

Q. Can you find out the date when you did move there? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. He has said that when he decided to go into this enterprise he elected that as his domicile. What difference does it make when he moved his laundress down there? I suppose that is one of the determining factors as to a man's establishing his domicile—where he has his laundry done. What difference does it make when his household goods went down, or his servants, if he took any? Isn't it too trivial to be of very much consequence?

Mr. Bates—My brother knows that it is not trivial, and all the camouflage of his statements will not make it trivial. He knows Mr. Rowlands moved down there after having accepted this trusteeship because his main business was there, and he seeks to divert attention from it. Fortunately, this is not a jury case.

Mr. Whipple—I still think it is very trivial, and your resounding voice does not make it any different.

The Master—He appears to have changed his residence, in one sense, at one time, and to have made his actual move of himself and his belongings at another time. Do I understand you want the date?

Mr. Bates—I want the date.

The Master—Of all these different things?

Mr. Bates—The date when he actually moved there and took up his official residence there.

Mr. Whipple—Those are two different dates.

Q. Perhaps I can revive your recollection, Mr. Rowlands. It was after the declaration of war, was it not? A. That I decided?

Mr. Whipple—What was after the declaration of war?

Mr. Bates—That he moved to Mississippi.

Mr. Whipple—Now, what do you mean—moved his household goods and kitchen utensils down?

The Master—I think you will have to be more specific or we shall waste time.

Mr. Bates—There was a time when Mr. Rowlands took up his residence as a citizen in Picayune, Mississippi, built a home, and then moved into it. I want to know when that took place.

Mr. Whipple—Well, which?

The Master—It might well be pretty difficult to find out exactly when that date was.

Mr. Bates—And then he can give the dates when he went down there and considered that he had begun his residence.

Mr. Whipple—Well, he gave you that. He says that when he undertook the enterprise he did that.

The Master—I understood his statement as to that to be that it was during the summer of 1917.

The Witness—Yes.

The Master—Is that right?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Then Governor Bates asked the further question, Was it before the declaration of war?

Mr. Bates—I thought perhaps that might serve to help him.

The Master—By the declaration of war, you mean the declaration of war by the United States with Germany?

Mr. Bates—Declaration of war with Germany.

The Master—Perhaps you had better give him the date of that.

Q. Do you remember that date? A. No, I do not.

Mr. Bates—April 6, 1917.

Mr. Streeter—First-rate!

The Witness—As I remember, Governor Bates, I made an income tax return—I am a little hazy in my mind—for 1916—this may be wrong—from Chicago, and in 1917 from the south, but I am not sure about that, because that was taken care of by our office.

Q. The 1917 return was made of course in 1918. A. No. Well, I am not sure about that. That is the way it appeals to me, but I think I could verify all those things if you want them.

Q. Do you have an apartment in Boston? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you had that apartment? A. Well, as I remember it, we moved in in October, or November, somewhere about that time, in 1917.

Q. What year? A. 1917.

Q. And in November, 1917? A. I am not sure about that.

Q. Now, was it not after that that you moved down to Mississippi? A. No, I don't think so, not from the standpoint of my deciding to live there, to make that my residence.

Q. Well, I understand you that you decided to move down there because the interests were going to be so great as to demand your attention at the time you entered into these contracts, and in carrying that out you did move there, but the actual moving took place after you became a trustee? Is that correct? A. I couldn't testify to that—my household goods going. I can ascertain and let you know.

Q. Will you look it up and let us know? A. I will try to; yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—Get the freight bill, that will fix it; and then put a tracer on so as to show when they started and when they got there, because I suppose it is the time when they got there you would think was the time he established his residence, or after they had moved into the house.

Mr. Bates—I think if he will give us the facts we will be able to decide for ourselves when he moved.

Mr. Whipple—I am not so sure of that; you asked him for that.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, there is another allegation in the Bill in Equity to the effect that the directors intended to use their great and dominating influence which they carried by reason of their official position, and by their powers of discipline, to influence the action of churches, by refusal to grant licenses and appointments, so as to injure the Publishing Society. Do you remember that allegation in substance, in the bill? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did any director ever say anything of that kind to you? A. No.

Q. And did anyone ever tell you that any director had told him that that was to be done? A. I think, in substance, yes.

Q. What do you mean by "in substance"? A. Why—

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. Don't we all know what "in substance" means?

Mr. Bates—I want him to give the language if he recalls.

Mr. Whipple—He says he can't give the language.

Mr. Bates—Well, he hasn't said so yet.

Mr. Whipple—He says, "in substance, yes."

The Master—Why not let him give all that he can recollect about it? That will be the best way.

A. Why, in substance, the action of the Publication Committees in spreading propaganda, as I call it, and influencing the people to stand with the directors regardless of Principle, seemed to be—

Q. That is the only thing you have in mind? A. Well, that is a very large thing, it seems to me.

Q. Now, have you any evidence of any such propaganda? A. Why, yes.

Q. What is it? A. We had one letter from a man in the west, in which Judge Smith—

Q. Wait a minute. A. —tried to line him up with the Board of Directors.

Mr. Bates—One minute. Let us have the letter if you are basing any testimony on that.

Mr. Whipple—Do you want us also to get those communications with regard to meetings that were being held, and what was being done?

Mr. Bates—We will tell you. Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—If you will tell us a little in advance then you wouldn't have this delay while we are looking it up. It is only to save time. We could be looking it up while you are looking your notes over.

Mr. Bates—Thank you, brother Whipple, for your kind suggestion; I cannot adopt it.

Mr. Whipple—You evidently do not want to save time.

Mr. Whipple—There is quite a succession of this correspondence.

Mr. Bates—We are only asking for one letter which he referred to.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no.

Mr. Bates—That is all I have asked him for.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no. Well, it doesn't appear.

The Master—My recollection is that the witness said they had seen or received a letter from somebody in the south, and then he was asked—

Mr. Bates—West.

The Master—In the west? The west. Governor Bates then asked him if he would produce the letter.

Mr. Whipple—Then you will have to describe it a little better.

The Witness—It was a copy of the letter that Judge Smith wrote to Mr. Paine.

Mr. Whipple—The original of it, was it?

The Witness—Well, I thought it was a copy made from the original. It may have been the original.

Mr. Whipple—Now, I have that for you if you want it.

Mr. Bates—Let me see it.

Mr. Whipple—I hand you a letter—

Mr. Bates—No; wait a minute. Won't you let me see it?

Mr. Whipple—I am going to identify it.

Mr. Bates—I guess I have a right to identify it.

The Master—Wait a minute.

Mr. Bates—I object to the way in which Mr. Whipple proceeds.

The Master—The letter having been called for and the witness undertaking to produce it, ought he not to identify it first?

Mr. Whipple—I will have him do it. Is this the letter which you referred to?

The Witness—Yes. One of them.

Mr. Whipple—The witness says that is one of them. Is that the first in the series?

The Witness—Yes.

The Master—If there are others do you ask for them?

Mr. Bates—If there are others on which he bases his statements.

The Witness—Yes, there are.

Mr. Bates—All right.

The Master—Now, I will let him identify all that he desires to produce.

Mr. Whipple (after conference with associates)—This is correspondence between Judge Smith and somebody else that was sent to you?

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—That is what it was. Now, is this letter dated May 27, 1919—

Mr. Bates—Wait a minute. I object, if Your Honor please, to Mr. Whipple interfering in this way. He knows he has no right to do this.

Mr. Whipple—On the contrary—

The Master—Mr. Whipple, as I understand it, is now trying to have the witness identify the letters he desires to produce in answer to your inquiry.

Mr. Bates—I would not object to his asking the witness what letters he has reference to, but for him to take up a bundle of letters and ask him if those are the letters, or if that is the letter, reading it off, and suggesting the answer to him—that is entirely improper.

The Master—Suppose, Mr. Whipple, you just put the letters before the witness and let him pick out the ones he desires to produce in answer to Governor Bates' question.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, I understand that it is customary in handing over letters to identify them on the record so that the record will show once for all what letter it was that was handed over, giving the date, the person who purports to have written it, and the person to whom it is addressed.

The Master—Well, we will try to do that, but let the witness pick out the letters and get them together, and then we will see what we will do next.

Mr. Whipple—Is that the next one in order?

The Witness—I should judge so.

[Mr. Whipple confers with his associates.]

The Master—How many in number are there there?

Mr. Whipple—Four, if Your Honor please. Not all of them are originals. Judge Smith has the originals. I have four, if Your Honor please.

The Master—The witness identifies those as the ones he desires to produce, does he?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—And there is also here an affidavit of Mr. Paine.

The Master—Unless that is a part of the correspondence I do not understand that it is called for.

Mr. Whipple—Is that?

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Bates—I take an exception to the manner of Mr. Whipple presenting this matter.

The Master—Let us wait until we get through.

Mr. Bates—No; I take an exception to it now. He is asking him for an affidavit. Nobody has said a word about an affidavit. In other words, he is prompting the witness, and standing there for that purpose.

The Master—We are only trying now to get the correspondence together, and I have suggested that unless the affidavit was a part of the correspondence it was not called for by this question.

Mr. Bates—But he, notwithstanding that, persisted in asking Mr. Rowlands if it was.

Mr. Whipple—Now, he has asked, if Your Honor please—

The Master—I think we might cut this short.

Mr. Whipple—I will take Your Honor's direction.

The Master—Has the witness got through identifying the papers which he desires to produce in answer to the question?

Mr. Whipple—I understand not, because he has been subjected to so many interruptions by Governor Bates that he—

The Master—Now, let us get through.

Mr. Whipple—I am trying to, but every time I start to do it, Governor Bates makes an objection and takes an exception. Now, I will ask you to look at the five papers which I hand you, two original letters, two copies of letters, and an affidavit—

The Master—Before you state what they are, Mr. Whipple, let him see whether those are the papers which he desires to produce.

Mr. Whipple—I am asking if those are the—

The Witness—They are.

Mr. Whipple—The papers?

The Master—They are?

The Witness—Yes.

The Master—Governor Bates, now he has produced them, what do you desire to have done with them?

Mr. Bates—I would like to look at them.

Mr. Whipple—Now, I propose, if Your Honor please, to announce what they are as I hand them over to Mr. Bates, so that the record will show what I have handed him.

The Master—One moment. Is that course objected to?

Mr. Bates—It is—as being irregular.

Mr. Whipple—I submit that it is the only regular course, because it is the only way in which there can ever be any proof as to what I have handed to counsel.

The Master—Well, if Governor Bates insists upon it, we might have the witness put his initials on each one, or identify them in some way like that.

Mr. Whipple—I understand that the usual course is, in handing them over, to announce what they are, giving the date and other identification of the papers.

Mr. Bates—If you limit it to the date and the parties, I do not object.

Mr. Whipple—No; I shall state from whom the communications came and to whom they are addressed.

Mr. Bates—I said, if you would limit it to the date and the parties I do not object.

Mr. Whipple—That is all that I have ever suggested.

Mr. Streeter—If you are all agreed, why not go ahead?

Mr. Whipple—Well, it is not a matter of agreement; it is a matter of orderly procedure. I will hand you the affidavit of Gustavus S. Paine of Reno, Nevada, subscribed and sworn to on the 17th day of April, 1919; a letter purporting to be an original from Clifford P. Smith to Gustavus S. Paine, Reno, Nevada, on the 20th of May, 1919; a copy of a letter in reply, purporting to be from Mr. Paine to Mr. Smith, May 27, 1919; I hand you what purports to be an original letter from Clifford P. Smith to Gustavus S. Paine, dated June 5, 1919, and a copy of letter dated June 13, 1919, from Paine to Smith.

Mr. Bates—Now, I submit, Your Honor, that every one of these is dated long since this bill was brought, and therefore no one of them is responsive to my question or admissible in evidence.

Q. (By Mr. Bates) Now, Mr. Rowlands—

Mr. Whipple—Then will you hand them back, please?

Mr. Bates—With great pleasure (handing papers to Mr. Whipple).

Mr. Whipple—I am glad that there is something that gives you pleasure.

Mr. Bates—Oh, a great deal does here.

Mr. Whipple—You appear to have been in distress.

The Master—What is the next question?

Mr. Bates—Is that all?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, pardon me. Just pardon me for a moment. I have just had handed me a still earlier letter to Mr. Eustace from Mr. Paine, dated March 4, 1919. Let me ask if that was one that you referred to also?

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Now, I will hand you a letter from Gustavus S. Paine, Reno, Nevada, dated March 4, 1919. Now, do you want that?

Mr. Bates—Well, I will tell you after I have seen it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, no, if you take it and look at it I am going to put it in.

Mr. Bates—Oh, I shall not object to your putting it in.

Mr. Whipple—All right. I do not think you can.

Mr. Bates—When you get to it, if you think it is competent.

Mr. Whipple—Certainly not. I should not put it in if it was not competent.

Mr. Streeter—That is more cheerful.

Mr. Whipple—General, you always contribute cheerfulness to any assembly that you decorate by your presence.

Mr. Streeter—You might as well go along without getting all stirred up here. There is trouble enough without stirring up trouble unnecessarily.

Mr. Whipple—But you will agree with me that the Governor is an agitating factor.

Mr. Streeter—I do not want to characterize him.

Q. (Showing paper to witness) Mr. Rowlands, do I understand you to identify that letter as the one upon which you based your charge that the directors were going to use their authority?

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me; he has not said that he based the charge on that letter.

Mr. Bates—That is what I asked him to produce.

Mr. Whipple—No. He has already stated other things on which he based it, and he mentioned that he had received one letter. He did not state he had not received others, but he mentioned he received one. Now, I object to a misstatement—unintentional, of course—of what the evidence has been and what the witness' position is.

Mr. Bates—I will leave it to Your Honor's recollection.

The Master—My recollection is that the witness referred to one letter and after it appeared that there might be others, and a number were offered, it appeared that they were subsequent to the date of the suit, and you rejected them as not responsive to your question. I think they were not. Now, another letter is produced which appears, as I understand it, to be the one letter which he at first referred to.

Mr. Whipple—But not as the basis of his allegation altogether, because he has stated other bases.

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Bates—I did not say "altogether."

The Master—No; he talked about one letter. That is the letter.

Mr. Whipple—And all I was objecting to was the statement by the Governor that he had suggested that this one letter was the basis of his allegation. He has stated other facts which were the basis of his allegation and mentioned that they had received one letter.

The Master—I think that the utmost that can be gathered from the statement of the witness up to now is that that is the letter to which he referred before.

Mr. Whipple—That I agree to.

Q. Is that the letter you referred to? A. I meant to refer to the file with Mr. Paine. The file of letters—

Q. Well, this is not the letter you referred to? A. To the file of letters.

Q. Did you refer to that letter at all? A. Yes, and others.

Q. Is that one of the letters? A. Yes.

Q. Are there any others? A. I can refer you to other letters that would be called into account—the letter of Mr. Dittmore.

Q. I wish you would. A. I have the letter in my pocket, the letter that Mr. Dittmore wrote to Paul Harvey on Jan. 25.

Q. Is that the original? A. No; that is a copy.

Q. Where is the original? A. I think we have it.

Mr. Bates—Will you produce it?

Mr. Whipple—Suppose you use the copy temporarily, subject to verification.

Q. While he is looking for that, Mr. Rowlands, I want to ask you in regard to this letter of March 4 that your counsel has produced and that you identify as one upon which you based your opinion—as to whether or not there is anything in that letter that in any way justifies your claim that the directors were by propaganda seeking to discipline or to threaten, or to in anywise influence the Christian Scientists in their attitude? A. I should not say that this one letter carried out that—

Q. Then the only letter that you identify, apart from this one of Mr. Dittmore's that you are looking up, you now say does not justify that conclusion? A. I say that one letter does not.

Q. There is nothing in that letter about it, is there? A. Let me read it, and see. (Paper is handed witness.)

Mr. Streeter—Governor, what is the letter he is looking at? Is it Dittmore's letter or somebody else's letter?

Mr. Bates—It is a letter which he identified at Mr. Whipple's presentation as the one upon which he based his charge that the directors were going to use disciplinary methods for the purpose of—

Mr. Whipple—Let me correct you again, Governor. You have said again that that was the one on which he bases his charge, which I stated that is not the testimony.

Mr. Bates—I asked him to produce the one, and this is the only one that has been produced.

Mr. Whipple—He said there were other things upon which he based his charge, but referred to one letter among other things.

Mr. Bates—I trust you take consolation from your reiterated statement.

Mr. Whipple—It is never consoling to have to correct you. I would not get consolation from it, or even satisfaction.

Mr. Bates—Then don't do it, because it doesn't do me any good.

Mr. Whipple—I have another emotion in regard to it, Governor. It may be more sympathy than anything else.

Mr. Bates—Your sympathy is misplaced; you need it at home.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please: We are now taking an interest, Governor Bates. You brought out here and got into the record a letter of Mr. Dittmore's under date of Jan. 25. Now, having brought that out, I want to ask you if you are going to put that in or not?

Mr. Bates—I have asked him to produce it. I have not seen it yet.

The Witness (Returning letter to Mr. Bates)—I don't think that letter does.

Mr. Streeter—We certainly will produce it, and you having taken it we know that you will have to put it in.

Q. Mr. Rowlands, you have further examined this letter of Mr. Paine, and you now say that you do not think that that justifies the allegation in the bill? A. That particular letter, no; but the file of letters does.

Q. Will you produce the file that does? A. Why, it has been produced, and as far as I understand it, on account of being subsequent to the suit you did not wish it.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Rowlands, you do not mean to say that by any interpretation that you could put on it that you were influenced to make that charge in your bill that you filed in March, because of letters which were written long afterward? A. No, but that was the attitude of Judge Smith.

Q. I didn't ask you about the attitude. A. I know; but I have a right to say it.

Q. I asked you what influenced you to make that charge? A. And I think when we search his records we will find his attitude clearly set forth.

Q. It is not a question of his attitude we are asking for, I suppose, Mr. Rowlands.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that is subject to inquiry, certainly, Governor.

Mr. Bates—At the proper time, perhaps. Will Your Honor take a recess for a few minutes?

Mr. Whipple—Are you going to use that letter?

Mr. Bates—I was suggesting a recess. I thought it might save time if we could look over the letter during the recess.

Mr. Whipple—You mean, you want to look it over some more?

Mr. Bates—I have not seen it yet.

Mr. Whipple—I am talking about the Paine letter.

Mr. Bates—Oh, that Paine letter is absolutely inconsequential. If you want to lumber the record with it you are at perfect liberty to do it.

Mr. Whipple—Now, it is not inconsequential; it is very important, Governor. I am sorry that you lack discrimination. But whatever it may be, of trifling value or otherwise, I want it back.

Mr. Bates—You may have it.

Mr. Whipple—Thank you.

The Master—Has it been marked?

Mr. Whipple—Well, the Governor has not offered it, he spurns it. I am going to offer it a little later.

The Master—Shouldn't it be identified in some way?

Mr. Whipple—I am going to offer it a little later and put it in with a lot of other evidence which will show the basis upon which we made the charges which his clients will never deny when we get them on the stand.

The Master—Shouldn't it be now identified here?

Mr. Whipple—It has been identified as the letter of March 4, 1919, from Gustavus S. Paine to Mr. Eustace.

The Master—Oughtn't it to be marked?

Mr. Bates—Would you like it in, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—I am not communicating my wishes to you at all.

Mr. Bates—Well, if you would, I would just as soon put it in.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, do not bother yourself to accommodate me; I can conduct my own case.

Mr. Thompson—Governor Bates, I would like to communicate a wish to you. That you would return, sooner or later, a document that you took from one of us, called a copy of a letter from Mr. Dittimore.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Dane is reading it. Do you object?

Mr. Thompson—No, but I want to get it back.

The Master—My suggestion that it should be marked is in order to avoid any possible dispute hereafter as to whether it is the same letter or not. You have so many letters here that it seems to me it would be better to identify it in some way on the paper itself.

Mr. Whipple—Will you mark that as the next exhibit, for identification, because I want the honor of offering it, at least.

[Letter from Gustavus S. Paine to Mr. Eustace, dated March 4, 1919, is marked 86 for identification.]

The Master—Is Governor Bates' suggestion that we take a recess acceptable to counsel?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—We will stop for a few minutes, then.

[Recess.]

Mr. Bates—Have you that original letter?

Mr. Whipple—Which one?

Mr. Bates—Of Mr. Dittimore's?

Mr. Whipple—There are two letters that go together. One is a letter from Mr. Harvey to Mr. Watts, and the other from Mr. Dittimore to Mr. Harvey on the following day. Of course, the letters will have to be taken together to make much sense.

Mr. Bates—I want the one of which this is a copy which your witness has taken from his pocket and says is the one upon which he based his opinion.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me. Again I must correct you. He has not said that. He is giving you some little items at a time—

Mr. Bates—Will you accommodate me with the original of this?

Mr. Whipple—I will, if you will quit making that erroneous statement.

Mr. Bates—I know you do not like it, but it is a fact.

Mr. Whipple—I do not like your erroneous statements. Anything that you state intelligently and correctly I accept always.

Mr. Thompson—Just a minute. Inasmuch as Governor Bates has called upon us to produce that so-called copy and has taken it and examined it, we have a right in that copy irrespective of the trustees' rights. I do not think you can look over a document and then say it is not a copy.

Mr. Bates—I did not understand your trouble, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—I say, you called on us to produce that paper and we have produced it and you have examined it. That gives us, of course, the right of reading from it as an original if we desire. It does not affect Mr. Whipple's rights, but it does affect ours.

Mr. Bates—You mean the one—

Mr. Thompson—That General Streeter produced yesterday. General Streeter handed it to you and you have examined it.

Mr. Streeter—That is the original.

Mr. Thompson—No, that was the copy handed to you by Mr. Watts.

Mr. Bates—This is the copy I understood Mr. Strawn took out of his pocket. (Handing paper to witness.)

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Strawn? You are not examining Mr. Strawn.

Mr. Bates—I beg your pardon. We both feel complimented, so there is no trouble in that.

Mr. Whipple—Well, people may be complimented by errors, but they don't help to get the truth.

Q. Didn't you take that from your pocket, Mr. Rowlands? A. Yes.

Mr. Bates—This is Mr. Rowlands' copy and he took it from his pocket.

Mr. Thompson—If any letter purporting to have been written is going in by copy, we prefer to have the copy that we produced go in as the authenticated copy, not a copy that somebody else produced; that is all.

Mr. Bates—This is the copy upon which Mr. Rowlands acted.

Mr. Thompson—That does not make it evidence.

Mr. Bates—But, nevertheless, Mr. Whipple has produced the original and I assume there is no objection to putting it in.

Mr. Whipple—No, you will find, I guess, that that is a copy, too.

Mr. Thompson—When you get through with our copy let us have it back, that is all.

Mr. Bates—Is it a copy?

Mr. Whipple—I do not know.

Mr. Watts—That is the original.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Watts says that is the original. Are you satisfied with that?

Mr. Whipple—Certainly, because Mr. Watts is always correct.

[Letter, dated Jan. 25, 1919, from Mr. Dittimore to Mr. Paul Harvey is marked Exhibit 87, R. J. M.]

Mr. Thompson—Let us have the copy which you took from us, because we do not want our files depleted.

Mr. Bates—You are in error, Mr. Thompson; I took no copy from you.

Mr. Thompson (to Mr. Streeter)—Didn't you give him a copy?

Mr. Streeter—I certainly did.

Mr. Bates—This is the copy that came from Mr. Rowlands.

The Master—Let us put the original letter in. Have you got your copy back?

Mr. Thompson—No, I have not, sir. Mr. Streeter—We would like it.

Mr. Thompson—We would like it back.

The Master—Why not return his copy to him?

Mr. Bates—The original letter?

Mr. Thompson—No, we want our copy.

Mr. Bates—I beg Your Honor's pardon.

The Master—Why not return it to Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Bates—I don't know of any copy that Mr. Thompson had. This is Mr. Rowlands' copy and I can't take this from the witness.

Mr. Thompson—Just a minute, Mr. Bates. I saw General Streeter take the copy from Mr. Dittimore, and I saw you read it and I saw Mr. Dane reading it. I got it from you a few minutes ago and handed it back within three minutes.

Mr. Bates—You are entirely mistaken.

Mr. Thompson—I want it.

Mr. Bates—This is the copy that Mr. Rowlands had. I suppose that is the one you wanted.

Mr. Thompson—I don't care anything about the copy. I want that one you have. It belongs to me. It is all confusion. Let me have it, will you, please, Mr. Rowlands?

Mr. Bates—Wait a minute.

The Master—There have been two copies here.

Mr. Bates—I haven't seen but this one.

The Master—One belongs to Mr. Thompson. He wants it back.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Rowlands identified it.

The Witness—I can see that that is my copy.

Mr. Thompson—How can he tell whether it is?

Mr. Bates—Why not leave it until recess?

Mr. Thompson—Because when our files are depleted, we want it back again.

Mr. Bates—Pardon me; this isn't yours.

Mr. Thompson—Pardon me, it is. That belongs to me and I would like it back now.

Mr. Strawn—I suggest you take the copy, Mr. Rowlands. We will get another copy at lunch. It is not so sacred.

Mr. Thompson—Thank you very much. Go ahead with the original.

Mr. Bates—Are you through?

Mr. Thompson—I have got my papers, that is all.

Mr. Bates—This is marked Exhibit 87. It is on the letter paper of John V. Dittmore, C.S.B., 236 Huntington Avenue, Boston, U.S.A., a member of The Christian Science Board of Directors, and is dated Jan. 25, 1919, and is addressed to Mr. Paul Harvey, 21 East 40th Street, New York City.

[Mr. Bates reads the letter, as follows:]

[Exhibit 87]

"January 25, 1919.

"Mr. Paul Harvey,
"21 East 40th Street,
"New York City.

"My dear Mr. Harvey:

"I have before me a copy of your interesting letter of January 24th to Mr. John R. Watts, which was read to the members of The Christian Science Board of Directors and to Judge Smith yesterday afternoon. I must be the mysterious director who dined with two New York Christian Scientists and who is apparently being made responsible for all of the excitement in New York which your letter describes.

"About two months ago, when in New York, I accepted an invitation to dine one evening with two friends. During the time we were together there was a free discussion of the very obvious needs in connection with Monitor circulation, and also in connection with the business policy of The Christian Science Publishing Society as it relates especially to The Monitor. As I remember the conversation, little was said that is not a matter of common knowledge among those who have come in close touch with the situation. I listened with much interest to the very intelligent discussion of these gentlemen, especially on The Monitor circulation needs of New York City. I am very strongly convinced, from my past experience with newspapers and other publications of general circulation and also from my close study of The Monitor and its needs during the past few years, that the Christian Scientists of New York and The Christian Science Publishing Society in Boston would all have been much benefited if they had heard the views of these gentlemen.

"I have never instructed anyone to carry out any 'purpose' in connection with this matter, much less made an attack on the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society. I shall hope to learn promptly who is responsible for this statement. I know nothing of the private meetings your letter mentions. Neither do I remember having given but one piece of advice, and that was in reply to a letter asking what I thought would be the best way to get a new and practical Monitor circulation plan for New York considered. My advice, given in a letter sent on Dec. 28, was as follows:

"'You and the others have earnestly sought to develop something which will meet a need which is obvious to every one who analyzes the present situation. I believe that it would be well if you would carefully set forth the whole matter, both as regards the need and the proposed remedy, and send it over to the trustees of the Publishing Society. You could also quite properly propose to send to Boston an unofficial committee of one or more, to go into the subject in greater detail at such time as the trustees would suggest as appropriate for such an important conference.'

"I sincerely hoped for the good of the Cause that the initiative of the New York churches would not be throttled, but that step by step, through cooperation, without sentiment or tradition, and with a recognition of the facts, the great potential force for good represented by the New York Christian Scientists would be gradually put in motion on a broader and more far-reaching basis than ever before.

"It is true that The Monitor has lost over $1,000,000 of the funds of The Mother Church, a large part of which has been lost through failure to observe some of the simple rules of Christian Science and of good business.

"It is also true that the last annual statement rendered to the directors of The Mother Church showed a deficit of about $75,000, and a continuous loss averaging at that time $6000 per month.

"The circulation record of The Monitor is certainly as far from being a success as could well be imagined. Its last published circulation statement, published without qualification or explanation as 123,080 daily, is misleading. About 50,000 of these copies were at the time being given away to soldiers in camps. It is also estimated that the average number of copies used daily by local distribution committees throughout the world for samples and free distribution, is about 20,000. In other words, the actual bona fide circulation of The Monitor throughout the world, after over 10 years of effort, is about 50,000 among those who are sufficiently interested in it to pay for it themselves.

"Although the Monitor was provided primarily as a 'light to the Gentiles,' it is interesting to note that its circulation is only equal to 5 per cent of the estimated number of avowed Christian Scientists. The true circulation of the Monitor in Boston, including thirteen towns or municipal divisions, according to the last statement I have seen, was 2276. It is generally believed that the circulation in Boston is much larger than that of the Boston Transcript, and this statement was formerly made by Christian Scientists connected with the Publishing Society. At this same date the Monitor had 3092 subscriptions in Greater New York and 1990 other copies presumably for reading rooms and free distribution. Selling advertising space with circulation facts misunderstood by the advertiser, regardless of what arguments are used as to quality of circulation, constitutes a form of indirect misrepresentation which is entirely inconsistent with what should be the Monitor's ideals.

"An example of Monitor publicity policy can be found on the inside back cover of the current issue of The Christian Science Journal. Other copy in magazines of general circulation tending to emphasize religious viewpoints, has done much in the wrong direction.

"It will be interesting to learn why the board of Fifth Church, New York, became so 'incensed' by what it considered 'an open attempt to discredit the Board of Trustees' that it refused to ratify a resolution that the other churches had ratified. Somehow I feel that this church board is laboring under a misapprehension of some kind.

"I did not tell either of the New York gentlemen that the removal of one or more of the trustees was contemplated. While I do not feel that it is necessary to attempt to go into the details of the subject of publishing house conditions in this letter, it may be said that the evidence is more than abundant to show that a general renovation has already been much too long delayed.

"No one familiar with my views would say that I favor a policy of management based upon business efficiency independent of Christian Science demonstration. But arrogance, fanaticism, and a form of ecstasy of the senses misnamed demonstration, cannot be made to take the place of that calm, poised understanding of Principle which is also Love and which brings forth the fruits of confidence, justice, mutual respect, and a true efficiency based upon Science and not upon fear and aggressive self-will.

"I did not explain to the New York gentlemen the present effort to destroy the integrity of The Mother Church and of Mrs. Eddy's life work. I did not mention the juggling of the meaning of Mrs. Eddy's words and the various forms of mental gymnastics intended to explain away stubborn facts in connection with the present situation. Neither did I describe any of the arguments in use to justify the repudiation of such of Mrs. Eddy's by-laws as prove inconvenient to the accomplishment of the scheme which the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society are trying to force on the Christian Science movement through threatened legal action and otherwise. If you as a member of The Mother Church wish to be accurately informed on this subject, there are many persons in New York and Boston who are familiar with the current propaganda in connection with this effort, but who have investigated the matter for themselves and who are therefore in position to speak with some authority.

"The fact is that it is time that the few who are giving aid and comfort to the indefensible efforts of a small handful of misguided men should arouse themselves to the true situation and without equivocation 'do their bit' to stop the effort which would have for its ultimate result nothing less than the destruction of Mrs. Eddy's life work and the disintegration of the Christian Science Church. If the Christian Scientists of the world will countenance this scheme, now is the time for us to find it out. I strongly suspect, however, that when the facts are known there will be quite a healthy and much-needed purifying process set in motion in the Christian Science movement and a support given in no uncertain terms to those who with a firm hand have taken hold of this effort of reaction and disloyalty to Mrs. Eddy's established church government.

"I cannot refrain from speaking with all possible earnestness on this vital subject.

"With kind personal regards, I remain

"Very sincerely,

(Signed) "JOHN V. DITTEMORE."

"P. S. Before sending this letter I have read it to The Christian Science Board of Directors. I am also sending a copy of it to Mr. Watts, and copies, together with copies of your letter, to the two New York gentlemen concerned.

"I shall be glad to have you let Mr. Flory read it. "J. V. D."

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, is there any other letter or fact that you can testify to upon which you base your claim— A. There is one more that I would like to speak of. That is—

Q. Wait a minute; I haven't finished my question. A. Pardon me; I beg your pardon.

Q. —upon which you base your claim that the directors were intending to use their power to dominate and control members of The Mother Church by the powers of discipline which they hold to influence the action of other churches by refusals to grant licenses or appointments? A. Yes.

Q. What is it? A. A conversation that I had with Mr. Coonley of the Publication Committee in Washington.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. who?

The Witness—Coonley.

Q. Did Mr. Coonley state that they were attempting to do anything of that kind? A. He stated what Judge Smith had told him.

Q. Do you understand Judge Smith is a member of the Board of Directors? A. No. Well—

Mr. Whipple—Of course he is not; he is nothing but their counsel.

The Witness—He is their counsel and the Committee on Publication.

Q. I am asking you for anything from the Board of Directors that justifies your statements. Is there anything?

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment, as to that. When their counsel and their Committee on Publication make a statement, isn't it a fair inference that that is from the Board of Directors?

The Master—Governor Bates, I think, may exhaust the witness' knowledge first as to anything concerning the directors themselves, but that does not prevent you from going into what, if anything, was said by their counsel.

Q. Was there anything else, Mr. Rowlands, that came to your personal attention? A. That is all I think of at this time.

Mr. Whipple—You mean from the directors personally?

The Master—The directors individually.

Q. From the directors? A. Nothing that I remember of at this time.

Mr. Whipple—The directors individually. This came from the directors, and your records show it.

Mr. Bates—I think that is all.

Mr. Whipple—Do you mind my examining first.

Mr. Thompson—No.

Mr. Whipple—Thank you.

Redirect Examination

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Now, when you were asked about things that had been called to your attention, you referred to the Dittimore letter, but that letter says, "I have before me a copy of your interesting letter of January 24 to Mr. John R. Watts." Now, did you see the letter from Harvey to Mr. Watts, the business manager? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, didn't you take that into consideration— A. Yes.

Q. —among other things? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask whether there was more than one letter or more than one thing on which you based your statement of belief that the directors were using propaganda throughout the country, intending to make your position untenable? A. There was more than one.

Q. Is this the letter to Mr. Watts? I hand you one dated Jan. 24, of the present year. (Handing letter to witness.) A. Yes, that is the letter.

Mr. Whipple—That I offer. Do you want to look at it, Governor?

Mr. Bates—If you please.

Mr. Whipple—That is the letter to which the one you put in is the reply. This letter, if Your Honor please, is dated Jan. 24, 1919. It is addressed to John R. Watts, Business Manager, Christian Science Publishing Society, Falmouth and St. Paul Streets, Boston, Massachusetts. It is a letter from Paul Harvey, who is the gentleman to whom Mr. Dittimore sent his letter on the following day.

Q. Now is it a fact that as soon as you got the Harvey letter you called it to the attention of the Board of Directors? A. Yes sir.

Q. And then Mr. Dittimore's letter was sent after you had called the Harvey letter to the Board of Directors' attention?

A. As I remember it, yes.

Mr. Bates—Board of Directors?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Board of Directors.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Rowlands called it to their attention?

Mr. Whipple—I understand so, yes.

The Witness—No, the trustees called attention—I am not sure the Harvey letter. But I know the letter Mr. Dittimore wrote to New York.

Q. Yes. Didn't they call his attention to the Harvey letter, and therefore Mr. Dittimore wrote to Mr. Harvey a reply to the letter that Harvey had sent? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Of course he had it, because the letter shows that it was a reply.

The Witness—He did that through Mr. Watts.

Q. Then later did you ask the directors to repudiate the Dittimore letter? A. Yes.

Q. And did they ever do it? A. No, sir.

Q. Before your bill was brought? A. No, sir.

Q. That is when the Dittimore letter in reply to the Harvey letter was called to your attention? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—I think I have made that clear, Your Honor, have I not? Now, I will read this Harvey letter which started the proceedings. (Reading):

"Jan. 24, 1919.

"Mr. John R. Watts, Business Manager,

"The Christian Science Publishing Society,

"Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Mr. Watts:

"It appears an attempt has been made to openly discredit the Board of Trustees, and those who are making the attack say they are doing so at the request of 'one of the directors.'

"It is said that 'one of the directors' recently made a trip to New York, and invited those to dinner whom he instructed to carry out these purposes. Those with whom he talked are openly stating that there is a difference between the Board of Trustees and the Board of Directors as to the management of The Christian Science Monitor.

"Immediately following this visit a meeting was called of the boards of the churches of Greater New York, to ratify the action taken at a previous meeting to appropriate $1000 a month by the branch churches, to be applied to circulating The Monitor in New York. A member of one of these boards who was present at this meeting says that one of these men, who had dined with this director a few nights before, made the following statements before the meeting:

"That The Christian Science Monitor was a splendidly edited paper and had a remarkable news-gathering service, but that the Board of Trustees had no understanding of salesmanship and had made a failure of promoting the circulation of The Monitor. That when Mrs. Eddy wanted some carpenter work done, she sent for a carpenter, not a metaphysician, whereas the trustees were depending upon metaphysicians instead of employing men who had had experience in circulating other newspapers.

"This member of the board of one of the local churches reports that since this director's visit there have been five private meetings at a certain office in the interest of Monitor circulation, and that it is claimed that these meetings are held at the request of 'one of the directors,' and that they have employed one or two circulation men who it is understood were formerly connected with the Hearst papers, who are not Christian Scientists, but who are now somewhat interested and going to church.

"One of these men who claims to be acting under instructions from 'one of the directors,' had invited a number of persons in the field to join a 'little group,' who are meeting at his office and who had put up $500, to employ some experienced men who are soliciting subscriptions for The Monitor. When the question arose as to whether such an activity would not act as a counter to progress being made by the local churches toward providing means for establishing Monitor circulation in New York on a right basis, the statement was made that this 'little group' had been asked to undertake this plan by 'one of the directors.' This 'little group' has spread through the New York field the statement, which they say was made by one occupying a high position in The Christian Science Publishing Society, that the circulation of The Christian Science Monitor as given out by the Board of Trustees is 123,080 copies, that the accredited circulation is 93,000 copies, but that the 'honest to God' circulation is 63,000 copies. This remark has spread, not only throughout the movement, but through the business world, and has now reached the point where it is openly stated in the business world that The Monitor circulation is only 58,000, and that its 'honest to God' circulation in the city of Boston is 2200 copies.

"At the meeting of the representatives of the boards of trustees of the twenty branch churches of Greater New York, the resolution which had been drafted to send to the Board of Trustees, to say that the branch churches were ready to make a per capita tax upon their members which would aggregate about $1000 a month, was again considered. One of these men, who stated that he was acting under the instructions of 'one of the directors,' after openly announcing that there was a difference between the Board of Trustees and the Board of Directors as to the management of The Monitor, moved that the name of the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society be stricken from the resolution and that they substitute therefor 'Boston authorities,' and that the resolution be sent to the Board of Directors and not to the Board of Trustees. A copy of this resolution, marked 'Exhibit A,' is herewith inclosed.

"The board of one of the churches was so incensed at this open attempt to discredit the Board of Trustees that it refused to ratify the resolution, and substituted the inclosed resolution marked 'Exhibit B.'

"One of these men, who had dined with this director, when called upon by a local Christian Scientist, openly volunteered the following information: That the Board of Trustees was about to be removed by process of law. When asked why, he said that 'we' could not stand idly by and see The Christian Science Monitor impoverish the movement; that up to the present time The Monitor has cost 'us' over $1,000,000. When it was said to him that it was not surprising that to establish a daily newspaper as the Monitor had been established would require a large expenditure of money during the first years, but that now it was understood The Monitor was reaching, if it had not reached, a self-supporting basis, he claimed that this was due to the fact that 'we' had given them 40,000 subscriptions to be distributed for camp welfare work.

"As a trustee of one of the local churches has said: In our church there are 135 active members of the distributing committee. In each of the other New York churches there are large active distribution committees. We in New York have realized that the circulation of The Monitor in our field was properly the demonstration of our branch churches. We have realized that no thinking person would expect the Publishing Society to undertake the circulation of The Monitor in the thousands of cities which it serves; that this is the privilege of the branch churches and one of their greatest opportunities for growth.

"The method which this 'little group' is attempting toward Monitor circulation in New York was characterized as an attempt of 'business efficiency' to take the place of demonstration, which if put through would immediately result in the branch churches discontinuing any effort toward distribution and circulation, and so the loving, thoughtful interest of these hundreds of workers would be dropped. It is this interest which the Board of Trustees has so carefully nurtured and has always encouraged.

"Inasmuch as this talk about there being a difference between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees has become current in New York, and is circulating throughout the entire New York field, and the talk about removing the Board of Trustees is openly and freely discussed amongst Christian Scientists in New York, it seemed to me that you, as business manager, should know of the situation, so that you may, if you feel it right, present it to both boards, or do with the information whatever seems wise to you in that connection.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "PAUL HARVEY."

Q. Now, that was called to your attention? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the statement that the directors, or some of them, were openly stating a purpose to remove all the trustees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have that in mind when you testified as to the propaganda that you knew were being put out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And especially this statement from Mr. Harvey, that "The talk about removing the Board of Trustees is openly and freely discussed among Christian Scientists in New York"? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you find that the same talk was current in other sections? A. Yes.

Q. And had you heard from representatives in different fields of that thing—I mean of a similar state of affairs? A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, you said that you also had a talk with Mr. Coonley in Washington. Who is Mr. Coonley? A. Mr. Coonley is the Publication Committee in Washington. I didn't have the talk with him in Washington; I had the talk with him in Boston.

Q. When was that, or about when? A. That was prior to the filing of the suit.

Q. What was that conversation in substance? A. Mr. Coonley and I have always been very great friends. We worked together for a great many years. And he came here to Boston—I don't suppose especially to see me—but he asked to see me. I went to the Copley Plaza to see him, and he brought up the subject of the controversy between the trustees and the directors.

Q. Had you informed him of it? A. I had not.

Q. What did he say? A. Well, he immediately took the side of the directors and did not seem to want at that time to consider that I had any rights. He thought I was in open rebellion against the directors. And I asked him if he had read the Deed of Trust. He told me he had consulted with Judge Smith, and I asked him if he had read the Deed of Trust, and he said he hadn't.

Q. Then let me ask—Was he under Judge Smith? A. Yes.

Q. That is, Judge Smith is the superintendent of the circulation? A. He is the Committee on—

Q. Committee on Circulation?

Mr. Streeter—Publication.

Q. Publication. And this was one of his subordinates? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you anything about what was being done in the field with reference to you? A. No.

Q. Did you infer from the fact that one of Judge Smith's subordinates came to you in this way, what was being done? A. Yes, because I—

Q. I don't ask "because." You did infer what was being done in the field? A. Yes.

Q. That was one item in connection with it? A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, you have said, I think, that in your conversations with the directors Mr. Dickey said something—"I would not be in your shoes for a good deal," or something of that sort, "if you do this." A. Yes.

Q. How did you construe that?

Mr. Bates—I object.

The Master—We have got what was said. Isn't that the important thing?

Mr. Whipple—No, Your Honor. They are attempting to impeach the good faith of these trustees in the allegations of what they believed was the situation. And now among Christian Scientists that thing had a significance I do not think Your Honor would understand until it was explained. I mean what he construed that to mean.

Mr. Bates—I certainly object to his construction of what the words meant. They speak for themselves. There is no special Christian Science doctrine as to what those words mean.

Mr. Whipple—When a man's good faith is impeached he has a right to say what inferences he made from what things were said.

Q. Let me ask this: Who has the power, in the Christian Science Church, as you understand it, to turn people out of the church, to un-church them? A. Under the Manual the right is, I think, in the Board of Directors.

Q. Well, the Manual couldn't do it without somebody's acting. Is it the Board of Directors? A. Yes.

Q. Now, I will ask you if that suggestion of Mr. Dickey, carrying the power, as he did, to un-church these trustees,—his suggestion and his significant look at you made any impression on your mind with regard to what he meant about not wanting to be in your shoes.

Mr. Bates—I object.

The Master—I think I shall admit it subject to your exception.

Mr. Bates—Save my exception.

A. Well, we gained the impression that the directors would probably try to un-church us.

Q. And without any hearing? A. Yes.

Q. I mean—you hadn't any notice of any hearing? A. Yes.

Q. The habit seems to be—

The Master—I don't quite see how he could have gone so far as that upon impression merely.

Mr. Whipple—Well, it shows, if he had that impression, that it was justified by their immediately subsequent action, because they didn't give him any hearing, when they attempted to remove him—or Mr. Dittmore, did they?

Mr. Thompson—About three minutes I think.

Mr. Whipple—Well, they didn't give us that. I guess that is because Mr. Dittmore actually was present.

Q. Now, then, had you heard Mr. Eustace refer to some California manifestation out there? Do you remember whether you had heard of that before the bill was filed? A. I can't say that I do.

Q. You heard of it subsequently, anyway? A. Yes.

Q. The Strickler matter? A. Yes.

Q. Did you learn of movements in different sections, as to what the churches were doing? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Without remembering exactly the source of your information? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—I neglected to read in this letter, if Your Honor please, what I will now read—the Exhibit A and the Exhibit B—the resolution which was passed at a conference of the trustees of all the churches and societies of Greater New York was this (reading):

[Exhibit A]

"Resolutions passed at conference of trustees of all churches and societies in Greater New York and environs supporting The Christian Science Monitor Circulation Committee work.

"Resolved: after much friendly and constructive discussion: That it is the sense of this conference, that the question of the promotion of the circulation of The Christian Science Monitor in this field should be put up to the Boston authorities, and that they should be requested to formulate plans, and to appoint, direct, and maintain a Christian Science Monitor circulation manager for Greater New York and vicinity, and if the Boston authorities accept this plan, that the Christian Science churches and societies of Greater New York are herewith asked to pledge themselves to a per capita tax sufficient to raise, if necessary, such a part of $12,000 per year or more for two years, for the carrying on of this work by Boston. This tax to become binding when churches comprising a membership of a majority of the members in Greater New York have ratified it.

"Resolved: That as fast as the preceding resolution is ratified by the Christian Science churches and societies of Greater New York and environs, they are requested to notify Second Church of Christ, Scientist, of New York City, and when the churches comprising a majority of the membership have so ratified, Second Church is requested to notify the Board of Directors in Boston."

Exhibit B is:

"It is the sense of the Board of Trustees of Fifth Church of Christ, Scientist, New York City, that if the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society should deem it wise to establish in New York a Christian Science Monitor Circulation Manager for this field, that the Christian Science churches and societies of Greater New York would guarantee the support of such an office financially and metaphysically.

"And that the above statement should be sent to the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society in substitution for the resolution accepted by the Conference of Trustees of All Churches and Societies in Greater New York, held at First Church of Christ, Manhattan, Jan. 2, 1919."

[The foregoing letter is marked Exhibit 88, R. J. M.]

Mr. Whipple—The first of those, I understand, was passed at a meeting of all the churches, and this particular church revolted and communicated with the Board of Trustees with regard to the matter under their trust.

Mr. Bates—What is this—evidence that you are putting in yourself?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, I am engaged in putting in evidence; that is our function.

Mr. Bates—Are you testifying?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no, that is a different question, not at all.

Mr. Bates—Then I object to it.

Mr. Whipple—I am putting in evidence that makes you very touchy.

Mr. Bates—Not at all. I think it would be better for you to ask the witness questions rather than testify for him.

Mr. Whipple—Do you want me to have him read the letters?

The Master—The letters have been read. I suppose that is all we have got in the way of testimony.

Mr. Bates—It was Mr. Whipple's statement in regard to what he understood was done with it that was not proper.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no, I was referring to the gossip.

The Master—There is no danger, Governor Bates, that I shall take that as evidence.

Mr. Bates—No, I don't think you will

The Master—It will appear on the record fully what it is.

Mr. Whipple—Then I understand that your remark was omitted without any fear of any danger. It must have been for the sake of making it.

Mr. Bates—No, I have no fear of any danger so far as the cause is concerned, but I object to your putting so much in this record that is being published in your papers every day that is not proper.

Mr. Whipple—I thought you thought they were your papers. Thank you, they are ours.

Mr. Bates—They are our papers, too. They have been temporarily confiscated.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I am glad you recognize the confiscation at least. I now offer the paper marked Exhibit 86 for identification. This was handed to Governor Bates and by him returned. (Reading):

"2 Herz Building,
"Reno, Nevada,
"March 4, 1919.

"Dear Mr. Eustace:

"Of course I understand all that you said about class instruction and applicants. I just have a feeling that, when one comes to talk with me who has talked with you or wants to talk with you, I want you to know it. My work is not a competition with anyone else but rather a broadening of the unfoldment of metaphysical work.

"Yesterday Mr. Graham lectured here."

Q. Who is Mr. Graham? A. He is one of the lecturers of The Mother Church.

Q. Appointed by one of the directors? A. By the Board of Directors.

Q. By the Board of Directors, I mean. A. Yes, sir.

Q. And therefore under them? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple (reading)—

"In the morning I went to the hotel to see him, as I was to introduce him in the evening. He asked me how the work was going here, and I said very well indeed. Then he asked me if the thought was disturbed by the difficulty in Boston between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees. I said that nobody here knew anything about any such thing. Then he went on to say that the Board of Directors had asked for the resignations of the trustees, that the trustees had refused and had engaged counsel including Charles E. Hughes and Sherman Whipple. He said that as he went around the country he found the feeling to be that the Board of Directors should be supported.

"Now, of course, the Board of Directors has to be supported but so does every activity that Mrs. Eddy's vision saw rightly unfolding. Divine Principle is my Board of Directors and my Board of Trustees. I am constantly grateful for the copy of the Deed of Trust. Through this in connection with the Manual we can see more of what really democratic government is for our church.

"I was interested in the recent announcement in the Sentinel. Of course the Board of Directors can pass on the cards but the Board of Trustees has the final word in that case. The Church and the Publishing Society are distinct but interdependent.

"It is just that men do not see clearly that consciousness is all there is that tries to blind them to the joyous unfoldment going on in spite of any seeming.

"With kindest regards to Mrs. Eustace,

"Sincerely yours,

"GUSTAVUS S. PAINE."

Q. Now that came in from Nevada. Had the Board of Trustees communicated to anyone anything about this difficulty? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. I mean any one in the field—in that sense. Mr. Paine apparently states here that Mr. Graham, who was under the Board of Directors, was the first to mention it there. A. Yes.

Q. Did you note this part of it—that Mr. Graham claimed "that as he went around the country he found the feeling to be that the Board of Directors should be supported"? Did you regard that as propaganda? A. I did.

Q. That was being put out by this Board of Directors through their lecturers throughout the country?

Mr. Bates—I object to that question.

Mr. Whipple—Isn't that exactly what we have a right to show? If a man's good faith is impeached he has a right to show that he regarded that as evidence of propaganda that was being put out by the Board of Directors through their lecturers throughout the country. What could be more insidious than to go everywhere throughout the country and say, "I have been traveling around; here is a trouble between the Board of Trustees and the directors; I find the sentiment is all in favor of the directors." Nothing more insidious as propaganda than that, as we say; at least we so regard it.

Mr. Bates—I object to the question as being in its every word absolutely leading and improper to be put on examination.

Mr. Whipple—I don't think it is leading. I think it is a direct question calculated to bring out a direct answer.

The Master—Under the circumstances and for the purpose stated before, I think I shall allow it to be answered. (Question read.)

A. We did.

Q. Did you subsequently, and before the suit—(pausing).

Mr. Bates—Let me see the affidavit of Mr. Paine.

Q. You subsequently got an affidavit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Asked Mr. Paine to make an affidavit? (Paper handed to Mr. Whipple.)

Mr. Bates—I think there is nothing in the affidavit that the letter does not contain.

Q. Now I want to call attention to Mr. Dittmore's letter to Mr. Harvey which has been read by Governor Bates. In one of his closing sentences Mr. Dittmore says—No. I want to call your attention to the last paragraph of the letter—the last full paragraph:

"The fact is that it is time that the few who are giving aid and comfort to the indefensible efforts of a small handful of misguided men should arouse themselves to the true situation and without equivocation 'do their bit' to stop the effort which would have for its ultimate result nothing less than the destruction of Mrs. Eddy's life work and the disintegration of the Christian Science Church. If the Christian Scientists of the world will countenance this scheme, now is the time for us to find it out. I strongly suspect, however, that when the facts are known, there will be quite a healthy and much-needed purifying process set in motion in the Christian Science movement and a support given in no uncertain terms to those who with a firm hand have taken hold of this effort of reaction and disloyalty to Mrs. Eddy's established church government."

You read that, also, in January? A. I did.

Q. And was it that that you asked the other directors to discountenance? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And disavow; and they did not do it? A. They did not.

Q. What did you infer from Mr. Dittmore's statement "that when the facts are known" certain things would happen with reference to what the directors were doing and were proposing to do about making what they called the facts known? A. The only inference would be that they were going to spread propaganda.

The Master—I understand this is subject to your objection.

Mr. Bates—I didn't catch the question; will you be kind enough to repeat that question?

Mr. Whipple (To the stenographer)—Will you read it?

[Question read.]

Mr. Bates—I object to the question being answered.

The Master—The same ruling, subject to objection. (To the witness) Answer it.

A. I took it that they intended to spread propaganda throughout the field.

Q. And what did you infer as to whether they were doing it? A. Inferred that they were doing it as a fact, from Mr. Dittmore's letter.

Q. That is, that it was common talk in New York— A. Yes.

Q. —all the New York churches. I assume that you did not agree with Mr. Dittmore's suggestion that what you were doing for the protection of your trust was "an indefensible effort of a small handful of misguided men"?

A. I did not agree to that.

Q. Or that anything you were doing in an attempt to maintain and support a trust which Mrs. Eddy herself signed and gave to you was in any way disloyalty to Mrs. Eddy? A. We did not feel so.

Q. Now will you be good enough to let me read to you a little of the financial information as to your lumber business. I understand you to say that the enterprise upon which you had just entered just before you were asked to be a trustee of this church was one of the greatest lumber enterprises, or the greatest that had ever been entered upon in the south? A. Not the greatest, but one of the largest activities.

Q. One of the largest? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you and your partner, Mr. Crosby, were undertaking it together? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was perhaps the largest business enterprise that you had undertaken in your life time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was the climax of the increasing magnitude of enterprises that you had dealt with? A. I felt that way, yes, sir.

Q. You were at that time vice president when you were invited to be a trustee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. A vice president, treasurer, and general manager of the Goodyear Lumber Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did those positions, or any of them, carry a salary? A. They did.

Q. How much? A. The Goodyear Lumber Company—

Q. I am now talking about the position of vice president, treasurer and general manager of the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company. A. $15,000 a year.

Q. And you were in receipt of that income? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that made known to this Board of Directors when you were summoned on here to Boston to accept this $6000 position as trustee? A. It was not.

Q. You did not state that at all? A. I did not.

Q. But you knew that the acceptance of this position involved the giving up of those positions and the emoluments from those positions? A. I did.

Q. $15,000, yes. Did they know that you were a man accustomed to deal with affairs in the business world of magnitude? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that you had created and built up an organization to do it? A. I felt that they did.

Q. I do not suppose you bragged about it, but you tried to make known something of your obligations in finance and to the financial world? A. In a general way.

Q. Did they say why—these directors, in the talk you had with them—why they wanted you? A. Well, they did not express any particular reasons.

Q. Didn't they? Didn't they speak as to what it would mean to the Board of Trustees if a man of your dignity and standing in the business world, accustomed to deal with large affairs, would come to them to discharge these duties?

Mr. Bates—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

Mr. Whipple—What is it?

Mr. Bates—He said that they did not. Now Mr. Whipple is putting a leading question in which he is putting certain statements into his mouth.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, I do not think that is a fair comment.

The Master—That is objected to. I do not suppose it is hardly admissible, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Very well.

Q. Now, when did you resign those positions with the Goodyear Company? A. Just as soon as I could do so without embarrassing any of the activities.

Q. Yes. Do you remember—was it a matter of a month or two, or more? A. Oh, it was some considerable time afterwards; the next regular meetings that they had.

Q. Did you make known to the trustees that it would be necessary—that you held these positions and it would be necessary for you to effect your retirement gradually? A. I did.

Q. Did you make known to the trustees the financial sacrifice that you were making to accept this position? A. I did not.

Q. Were you influenced in accepting the position by financial considerations or ambition to get this salary? A. Not at all.

Q. Or anything other than to discharge your duty as trustee as a duty to the great Cause? A. Yes; to serve God and serve the Cause.

Q. It was a devotion to what you regarded as a divine mission? A. I felt absolutely that way.

Q. And a surrender of your material welfare?

Mr. Bates—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bates—These are very nice statements that are being made by Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Well, aren't they nice? Aren't they nice?

Mr. Bates—Yes, very nice.

Mr. Whipple—And I should think you would be ashamed of being in the position of discrediting or attempting to discredit a man who has done such a thing.

Mr. Bates—I wish you were on the stand.

Mr. Whipple—I wish I was, because this man is more of a business man than he is a talker and you have the advantage, because you are more of a talker than you are a business man; but if I was on the stand I would answer your questions so it would make you tingle for having attempted to discredit this man whom you sought to get here under such circumstances.

Mr. Bates—I would like to ask if my brother is through?

The Master—I think it would be better, Mr. Whipple, to avoid that method of examining the witness.

Mr. Whipple—I would, if Your Honor please—

The Master—For the sake of saving time if for no other purpose.

Mr. Whipple—Very well. Yes, I quite agree with that; but I am having my tribulations with the Governor. I feel a little as if he was sacrificing the dignity of his profession to the exigencies of his case.

Q. Now, the Goodyear Redwood Company; you were vice-president of that. Did that carry a salary? A. It did not.

Q. And you resigned that, as I understand? A. I did.

Q. And then the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company; that was a corporation you organized? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had recently organized it for caring for this great financial enterprise? A. I had.

Q. And have you resigned from that yet? A. I have resigned as vice-president. I am still treasurer.

Q. You are still the treasurer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make known to the trustees that it was necessary for you to carry out these pledges to your financial associates? A. I did and they told me I should take all the time I needed in order to carry out these activities, not to feel limited in any way in working it out, to give them all the time I could consistently give them, but not to neglect my other activities.

Q. You have mentioned some other organizations with which you were concerned. Did you have for your personal services compensation from any other than this $15,000 salary? A. I did not.

Q. So that the financial sacrifice, except that sacrifice that was involved in not attending to these great business operations—the financial sacrifice was the difference between your salary of $15,000 and the $6000 which was offered here? A. Yes. I might say that Crosby & Rowlands have an account in which they receive partnership funds which are divided on their books; but I cannot give you any definite information in regard to that because—but that is my private income.

Q. Well, that would be a matter of adjustment between yourself and your partner with reference to your giving time to some outside enterprise? A. Well, his talk about it when I came down here was that he would not in any way ask to have a division, because he felt that it was working out the good, the welfare of humanity, and he would take the brunt of the activity there.

Q. In other words, he wouldn't ask you to diminish your proportionate income? A. No.

Q. Because that would be his contribution to the Cause to which you had dedicated yourself? A. That is what he said.

Q. Have you since you came with the board taken any vacation, either from your business or your work as trustee? A. Oh, probably a week-end, that is all.

Q. But nothing except the rest of a week-end? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you devoted any of your evenings to the work of your business or the work of the Board of Trustees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what extent? A. Why, I have spent a great many nights, all night long, at the publishing house; and when they were making the change in the paper I stayed there, I guess, an average of 20 hours almost out of the day for a number of days. I go there very frequently in the evening and stay until 12 or 1 o'clock.

The Master—You may pause when you get to a convenient point.

Mr. Whipple—We shall ask no further questions of this witness.

The Master—We shall stop here until 2 o'clock, then.

Afternoon Session

Cross-Examination on Behalf of Defendant Dittmore

Q. (By Mr. Thompson.) Mr. Rowlands, you have known Mr. Dittmore for a great many years, haven't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give us any estimate how many; ten years, or more? A. Let me see—

Q. Accuracy is not required. A. I think I have known Mr. Dittmore about eight years; eight or ten.

Q. You knew him in Chicago, didn't you, when you were out there? A. Yes.

Q. And you have come to be on personally friendly terms with him, haven't you, in all these years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you heard the testimony of Mr. Eustace on all these differences of opinion in detail between the trustees and the directors, so far as Mr. Dittmore represented them. I think there were about 28 different topics on which some differences of opinion had developed from time to time, aside from this underlying difference. I won't go all over that again with you, but in general you would say the same thing, wouldn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have found Mr. Dittmore to be a man sincere, in the first place, haven't you; a sincere advocate of his own opinions? A. A very sincere advocate of his own opinions, yes, sir.

Q. You have not ever, in your relations with him, or in your discussions with him, detected him in any double dealing or hypocrisy, have you? A. No, sir.

Q. He has been in the habit of stating frankly and earnestly his position, whether it differed from yours or not, and expecting the same treatment from you, hasn't he? A. Will you state that again?

Q. I mean, his habit of dealing with his fellow men, so far as observed by you, has been to state earnestly and frankly and forcibly his own views, and expect other people to do the same thing? A. Well, I don't know what he expects other people to do, but he states his ideas very forcibly, yes, sir.

Q. He does so without personal rancor or vindictiveness, doesn't he? What I mean is introducing into the discussion on matters like this an element of personal rancor, or personal hatred or dislike? A. Well, I think he is not immune from that, any more than any one else.

Q. In your discussions with him, have you noticed the element of personal abuse? Has his language been abusive with you in the discussion of these questions, or has it been that of a gentleman? A. Well, I would have to say Mr. Dittmore has always been a gentleman in his attitude toward everything that I know of.

Q. Exactly. That is, it has never got to the point where your differences of opinion degenerated into such relations that you could not have any further dealings with him, personal relations? A. No, I have always considered Mr. Dittmore a man that I could get along with.

Q. You have known him well enough to know what his attitude in regard to being a sincere believer in the doctrines of Christian Science is, haven't you? A. Please state that again.

Q. You have known him well enough to become aware of whether or not he is a sincere believer in Christian Science, haven't you? A. I think he is, yes, sir.

Q. And you have never observed in him any willful departure from the doctrines that make up Christian Science, have you? A. Well, I don't agree with his attitude on lots of points.

Q. That may be on theoretical matters, but I mean in the character of his personal life and conduct? A. I have no criticism of his personal character.

Q. None whatever. You had an office next door to Mr. Dittmore, didn't you, for a long time up there? A. I still have one.

Q. You still have one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you have been in a way of seeing him quite frequently? A. Quite frequently.

Q. Have you and he argued these questions out among yourselves quite often, these fundamental differences? A. Not of late.

Q. Well, at any time in the past? A. Well, at times we have talked. In the early days we used to have lots of talks.

Q. You found him a man willing to listen to his opponent, and open to conviction if he were convinced, didn't you? A. Well, I have found him a man willing to listen, but I don't know as he was always open to conviction.

Q. He didn't shut his ears to what you had to say to him? A. Well, I don't know about that. I couldn't testify to that.

Q. Now, do you recollect, I think it was in the month of June, 1918, that you had a friendly little talk with Mr. Dittmore as to the situation as it then existed between the two boards? I won't ask what was said; I merely want the fact that there was such a conversation. Perhaps you can answer that yes or no. A. Well, I had—I don't know—I know that I saw him a number of times in 1918 in June, undoubtedly, if I were here.

Q. I will identify the conversation a little more particularly, so that perhaps it will come to your mind more readily. The conversation to which I refer was the conversation in which something was said in regard to the attitude of his fellow directors toward him. Now, do you remember such a conversation? Yes or no. I don't ask what was said at this stage. A. Will you please state that again; I am sorry.

Q. Do you recollect a conversation sometime before this suit was brought; I think it was nearly a year ago, but it may not have been quite so long ago as that, in which the subject talked about was the attitude or purposes of his fellow directors toward him? Please answer that yes or no if you can; merely the fact, if you remember such conversation. A. I remember something of a conversation that I had with Mr. Dittmore, yes, sir.

Q. On those general subjects? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was a friendly conversation, was it not, between you and him? A. Very.

Q. And it was a conversation in which you felt inclined and did try to give him some help or warning in relation to what was likely to come, didn't you? Perhaps you could answer that, if you can, yes or no. A. Well, I cannot—I was with Mr. Dittmore a number of times during that, and I talked with him generally about Christian Science affairs, but I don't know as I could say anything special.

Q. I want to direct your attention to one particular conversation. Perhaps I will come at it a little more definitely. Didn't you have a talk with him about a year ago (the exact time is unimportant) in which you expressed to him the opinion in substance that his fellow directors, perhaps especially Mr. Dickey, were likely to take some steps against him unless he changed or altered his attitude in some respects? Yes, or no, in substance, that is all. A. Why, I will have to say yes.

Q. I thought so, because we have been advised that that actually occurred, but didn't it go a little farther than that? Didn't you feel moved to advise him, and did you not in fact advise him that, without his knowledge, unknown to him, preparations were likely to be made, or were perhaps already being made to separate him from the Board of Directors, in substance? Yes or no. A. It is hard for me to answer such questions, unless I could qualify it.

Q. I know it is hard, Mr. Rowlands, but perhaps you will realize this is rather a serious situation. A. Yes.

Q. And that personal feelings are not to be taken into account here, in view of the necessities of justice. Isn't that the real truth, Mr. Rowlands? A. Well, in substance, yes.

Q. So that the fact is that as long as a year ago you were in a position to advise Mr. Dittmore, and did in fact advise him, as a friend, however you may have differed with him in opinion, that his fellow directors, under the lead of Mr. Dickey, were getting ready without his knowledge a scheme to eject him from that board? That is the honest, solid truth, isn't it, Mr. Rowlands? A. I cannot answer that question the way you put it. Mr. Dickey didn't say anything to me about it.

Q. I have not asked you that. If you will just notice, I have carefully avoided committing you to who told you about it. I knew you would not want to say that. I have tried to avoid it. I have tried to drive right at the substantial point without involving particular persons. I ask you if that question does not substantially express the real truth of this situation? A. May I have that question read?

Q. Certainly. Please note what is omitted, as well as what is stated in that question.

[The question is read by the stenographer.]

Q. Yes or no. A. I should say in substance, yes.

Q. I wonder, to change the subject, whether you ever made any investigation at the office of the treasurer of the Christian Science Church? A. I have not.

Q. You don't know what the conditions may be there? A. Nothing at all.

Q. In answer to one of Mr. Bates' questions, I understood you to give all the directors a personal indorsement; that is, you said you were on friendly terms with all. If it were necessary, you might be obliged to discriminate between the directors in reference to your regard for them, might you not? A. Well, I would hate to say that, but I have known some of them longer than others, but I would not want to make any discrimination.

Q. Now, it is a fact, isn't it, Mr. Rowlands, that ever since Jan. 1 of this year, and even after this lawsuit began, although the attitude of the trustees in this matter had been perfectly well known and unaltered, Mr. Neal has been coming to the trustees right along with various propositions for a proposed accommodation. Isn't that true?

Mr. Bates—Proposed what?

Mr. Thompson—Accommodation or compromise of this matter.

Q. Trying to get the trustees to listen to propositions of compromise on the part of the directors. That is true, isn't it? The records show it, don't they? A. I wouldn't say right along; we have had some talk with Mr. Neal.

Q. The point of my question was that the approaches had been made, not by you or the trustees to the directors, but by the directors, generally acting through Mr. Neal, to the trustees. That is a fact, isn't it? A. No, they have not acted generally through Mr. Neal.

Q. Well, through him or somebody else; some one of their number? A. We have had a number of conferences, yes, sir.

Q. And the initiative has come from the directors, has it not? A. Well, I couldn't say that it has come from the directors, but the people we have talked to intimated that they knew something of how the directors felt about the situation.

Q. Is it true that since the attempted compromise of Feb. 3 broke down the trustees have themselves taken the initiative and gone to the directors, proposing some modification of their views? A. They have not.

Q. So that any propositions of compromise that have come and been taken up since that time have come from the directors to the trustees, haven't they? A. If any, yes.

Q. That is what I was coming at. Do you recollect; can you summarize, state briefly and clearly, the successive concessions that Mr. Neal has suggested the directors would make, as he found that you wouldn't change your attitude? Can you give us a hint or a statement of what the successive contentions were that he made in his efforts to reach a compromise? How many of the powers of the directors that they had previously claimed was he willing to give up for the purpose of compromise? A. There was never anything definite stated in their talk.

Q. I dare say. Wasn't a suggestion made by him, in substance, that in view of the difficulties that the directors had got themselves into here by expelling Mr. Dittmore, who was the one person that maintained that position consistently, who understood the case, and got all the evidence together, and whom they had expelled without cause—in view of the difficulties they had got into by that course of conduct, they would be ready to concede almost the entire position of the trustees, provided only that the concession was not disclosed to the field? Isn't that the real truth, Mr. Rowlands, yes or no? Isn't that the honest truth, sir? A. Well, I couldn't say.

Q. You wouldn't want to deny it? A. Well, I mean that is not stated. I had some very friendly conferences with Mr. Neal, but not—

Q. I want to know; I have put the question generally, so as to avoid entangling you in any particular specification. I have put the general idea to you, and I ask you, honestly, whether that is a fair statement of the attitude of Mr. Neal? A. No, it is not.

Q. I would be glad if you would give me the answer, yes or no. A. It is not.

Q. It is not? A. No, sir.

Q. In what respect, if at all, isn't it the fact? A. I will have to ask that the question be read again.

Q. Well, I will tell you. Instead of taking the trouble to do that, I can always rephrase a question, and that is always the quicker way. Hasn't something—I don't care what—but hasn't something been said by Mr. Neal in these conferences that he has talked with the trustees, to the effect that the expulsion of Mr. Dittmore by the directors at the particular that they did expel him and under the particular circumstances under which they expelled him had caused embarrassment to these directors, yes or no? A. Intimated that, yes.

Q. Hasn't that fact been used by him in argument, or as a reason why the directors might not be willing to go farther in meeting the views of the trustees than they would have been willing, if they hadn't expelled Mr. Dittmore? Isn't that the real truth? A. No, it is not.

Q. Haven't you got that impression?

Mr. Bates—May I ask for information? I have not objected to any of these questions, and they have all been answered satisfactorily to us.

Mr. Thompson—I am very glad to hear that.

Mr. Bates—But I want to suggest that Mr. Thompson, under the guise of the cross-examination, is really putting this witness on in his own case, and I appreciated that this complication might arise when the two cases were tried together. I want to ask Your Honor's judgment as to whether or not he should be allowed to put leading questions to a witness who is his own, merely because he happens to have been put on in the other's case by Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Thompson—Now, Your Honor has suggested to me that it is inadvisable, when meeting statements of counsel, to make any unnecessarily protracted remarks, but I hope Your Honor will bear with me when I denounce with all the force at my command the statement that Mr. Rowlands is my witness, or that there is anything improper in what I have done, or what is not in exact accordance with what is recorded in the minutes of the first meeting here. Governor Bates went into this with his eyes wide open, and nothing has occurred in the slightest degree different from what counsel deliberately agreed upon on that occasion. Mr. Rowlands is not my witness; my client has opposed him, as shown by that letter, from top to bottom, and my client proposes to fight fair in this case and not strike under the belt, but I can't say as much for your clients.

The Master—Do you think, Governor Bates, that it is likely much harm will be done here by leading questions, merely because they are leading?

Mr. Bates—Well, I assume that when he leads the witness in the way in which he is endeavoring to lead him—I rose merely for information; I call Your Honor's attention to that—I assume that if he does that, when similar circumstances may arise in connection with witnesses hereafter, we will have a similar privilege in regard to the Dittmore case.

Mr. Thompson—I will make no concession. I do not propose to allow you to have any concession from me at all. You will have what the law allows you, and not one hair's breadth beyond.

Mr. Bates—Then I understand you do not propose to allow us a similar privilege to what you are now claiming?

Mr. Thompson—I am not here to allow or disallow anything. I am here as counsel, to exercise my legal rights.

The Master—We shall have to be guided by the circumstances as they arise. If there is going to be any trouble or dispute about it, I am going to ask Mr. Thompson to avoid leading questions, so far as possible. They lead to dispute, and there is no use in putting them. You can examine your witness perfectly well without asking them.

Mr. Thompson—Pardon me; he is not my witness, sir.

The Master—I should have said, you can cross-examine this witness perfectly well.

Mr. Thompson—This witness is not inclined to give me any more evidence than he honestly has to. If I put him on myself, by this time I should be in a position to ask Your Honor's permission to cross-examine him, to ask him leading questions. He is perfectly honest, but he is not there to help me, and he didn't go there for that purpose, and he does not want to do anything more than he can to help.

The Master—It seems to me, even though you are cross-examining, and even though this may not be your witness in a strict sense, that the circumstances are such as to justify me in asking you to avoid leading questions as far as possible.

Mr. Thompson—Very well. Anything Your Honor suggests I will try to follow. I can't avoid them entirely, sir. I will do the best I can.

Q. Was anything said by Mr. Neal in any of these conferences with you, Mr. Rowlands, on the subject of its being undesirable to disclose to the field the fact that a compromise was being suggested—yes or no. I have not said, what was said; but was anything said on that subject? A. No.

Q. Was anything said by any of the directors or their representatives in conversation with the trustees, to your knowledge, about its not being desirable to have it admitted or known to the field that these efforts were being made by them to compromise the case? Yes or no. A. It was not discussed, I think.

Q. Beg pardon? A. I do not remember of a discussion of that kind.

Q. You don't remember it? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recollect that just before March 17 Mr. Dickey developed a plan of compromise and had the typewriting done in the trustees' office on it? A. Yes.

Q. And do you recollect the reason he gave why he wanted that typewriting to be done by the trustees and not by his own numerous corps of stenographers? A. Well, I can't tell the reason, but I remember he did—

Q. Let me see, then, if, with His Honor's permission, I cannot slightly assist you by a leading question: Wasn't it in order that Mr. Dittmore, who was still then a director, might not become aware of the fact that these propositions were being made? Isn't that the truth, sir? A. I could not testify as to that.

Q. You would not want to say it was not, would you? You would not want to deny that, would you? A. I could not affirm or deny it. I don't know.

Q. Isn't it true that he asked that only four copies of that should be sent to him? A. I can't remember. I know we sent him some copies to his house.

Q. And didn't you send them to his house and not to his office? A. Yes.

Q. Now, won't you try to think for a moment and refresh your mind, if you can, and see if it is not true that he made a complaint that he did not want five copies and only did want four copies of that plan made? A. I don't remember anything about it at all.

Q. You don't remember? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recollect a conversation you had with Mr. Dickey after Mr. Dittmore, and you too—they had attempted to dismiss you and had attempted to dismiss Mr. Dittmore on March 17—on the subject of a contract between the trustees of the Publishing Society and the Trustees under Mrs. Eddy's Will? A. State that again, will you, please?

Q. Do you remember any conversation between Mr. Dickey and yourself, or at which you were present, occurring after March 17, 1919, on the subject of a contract between the Publishing Society trustees and the Trustees under Mrs. Eddy's Will? I have not asked what was said, but merely do you remember such a conversation? A. Well, I remember that there was some conversation, but I am not sure that I was present.

Q. You are not sure? A. There was some discussion of the contract.

Q. You knew, at any rate, that that subject was taken up by Mr. Dickey? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson—Now, do you happen to have here, any of you gentlemen, the trustees' records for March 6, 1919?

Mr. Withington—Governor Bates, I think, has them.

Mr. Thompson—Will you let me have those trustees' records for March 6, 1919?

Mr. Bates—The trustees'?

Mr. Thompson—The trustees' records. (Volume is handed Mr. Thompson.)

Q. Will it be too much trouble, Mr. Rowlands, for you to turn to the records of March 5 and 6 in this book, if you can find them? A. That is, 1919?

Q. 1919. This last March. A. March—

Q. March 5 is the first one. Now, won't you be kind enough to read to yourself first, not aloud, the records of that meeting, so as to refresh your mind so as to answer one or two questions I desire to put. A. Yes (referring to volume).

Q. Now, have you read the records of March 5? A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you have the facts there recorded in mind I would like to ask you whether or not on that day Mr. Dickey did not attend at his own request, a meeting of the trustees—yes or no. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't he state that he came on his own responsibility? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long a conversation was had with him at that time? A. Nearly two hours.

Q. What was the subject of that conversation? A. Relative to the situation concerning the two boards. The whole conference was one looking to a solution of the problem which concerns the Board of Directors, the Publishing House and the field at large through demonstrations.

Q. And the way to put that, from the standpoint of what is called mortal mind, would be that it was looking toward a compromise—in plain English? A. Well, I wouldn't say that.

Mr. Bates—Doesn't the record speak for itself, Your Honor? I object to the characterizations.

Mr. Thompson—I think it does. It speaks rather unnecessarily profusely. The Witness—It would not necessarily be a compromise.

Q. Call it a solution. A. A demonstration.

Q. But a demonstration would result in a solution, wouldn't it? A. Well, it would result in harmoniously adjusting any differences that might come up.

Q. And inasmuch as the trustees made it a matter of principle not to surrender the rights or the duties imposed upon them by the Trust Deed of Mrs. Eddy, such a solution would necessarily involve a surrender by the directors of some part of their contention, wouldn't it—to come right down to it? A. I would not care to testify to that.

Q. Very well. Now, will you kindly glance over the records of March 6 for the same purpose—first, to get them into your mind so that I can examine you about the facts therein recorded. A. I have read them.

Q. Now, on that occasion also—namely, March 6, 1919—Mr. Dickey came to one of your meetings at his own request for the purpose of discussing, and did discuss, some plan for a solution of these difficulties, didn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any idea how long that discussion occupied? A. It doesn't say here, but I—

Q. Have you any memory of it outside of what is said? Two or three hours was it? A. Well, perhaps two hours.

Q. And he had a paper with him that time, didn't he? A. Yes.

Q. And that paper was the memorandum originally written by Mr. Dittmore, wasn't it, concerning the proper relations of these two boards? A. I think it was. I couldn't testify—

Q. Isn't that recorded right in there, that it was Mr. Dittmore's memorandum? A. Well, it says the directors' memorandum. I should judge that that was the—

Q. That is the one? A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he then ask you as trustees to state what modifications would be acceptable to you in that memorandum? A. In substance, yes.

Q. And the trustees thereupon acceded to his request and did take this memorandum and express such modifications as would be acceptable to them, didn't they? A. They did.

Q. And then four copies of that modified memorandum were made by the trustees at Mr. Dickey's request through their stenographer, weren't they?

Mr. Bates—You mean the trustees' stenographer?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, that is what I mean.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those four copies were sent to Mr. Dickey's house, weren't they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was by agreement with Mr. Dickey, wasn't it? A. Well, it says it was an understanding—that we offered to do that for him.

Q. Well, the making of only four copies and the sending of those four copies to Mr. Dickey's house was at his request? A. Well, I should judge so.

Q. You would have no interest in making any such request, would you? A. No, sir.

Q. You had no interest in concealing from Mr. Dittmore what was going on, had you? A. Why, no.

Q. Of course not. That is in the record of March 6, 1919. That is the date of this meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was 11 days before the expulsion of Mr. Dittmore. Now, will you turn to the record of March 17, of that same year. That is the day when the votes were passed attempting to dismiss you and to dismiss Mr. Dittmore? A. I have finished the records.

Q. Now on that occasion there was a meeting of the trustees, was there not, on March 17? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was attended by Mr. Dixon, was it not? A. Yes.

Q. He is the editor-in-chief, isn't he? A. He is the editor of the Monitor.

Q. And he came there at the request of the directors, did he not? A. May I read this?

Mr. Thompson—Read it to yourself. It is not technically quite right at this stage, perhaps, to read that in. Perhaps later, if there is no objection, we can read it all in.

Mr. Streeter—What is the objection, Mr. Thompson, to reading that record right in?

Mr. Thompson—There isn't any later, but at this stage I would prefer not to, if you don't mind.

The Witness—What is the question? Q. Mr. Dixon attended that meeting? A. He did.

Q. At the request of the directors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he attended it for the purpose of trying again to see if some compromise could not be made? A. So it states here; yes, sir.

Q. Beg pardon? A. It states in the minutes.

Mr. Bates—Will you give me the date of that again?

Mr. Thompson—That is March 17, 1919.

Mr. Streeter—Does that appear to be in the afternoon after they had expelled these two men?

Q. That was in the afternoon after you and Mr. Dittmore had been—I won't say expelled, because we don't admit any expulsion, but after this attempt had been made to expel both of you? A. Yes, sir; 4:30 in the afternoon, this meeting was.

Q. You were right there, and after your expulsion, or attempted expulsion, Dickey came around, or sent around, to talk to you just as before you were expelled? A. I wouldn't say talk. There is nothing here—

Q. This time it happened to be Dixon, but there were other times when Dickey came around and discussed it with you, weren't there? A. Before that time, yes, sir.

Q. He wasn't worried about your having been expelled, was he?

Mr. Bates—He says it was before that time.

Mr. Thompson—Afterwards, too, he said.

Mr. Bates — I didn't understand him so.

Q. After March 17 Dickey came around to some of your meetings of trustees, didn't he? A. I can't remember. He might have.

Q. We will go right through and find out. Neal did, didn't he? The record is right here down to May, when Neal has been here. A. If they are in the record, yes.

The Master—Wouldn't it be better to get all there is about March 17 first?

Mr. Thompson—I think it would, decidedly; yes, sir.

Q. Did the trustees explain on March 17, taking up that memorandum of Mr. Dittmore, what changes they thought ought to be made in it before they could consider a compromise? A. Yes.

Q. They sent him back with that message, whatever it was, didn't they? A. Whatever it was, yes, sir.

Q. Now, take March 18, the next day. Mr. Dixon came again that day from the directors, didn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was further discussion about it?

The Master—I didn't hear that. Who was there March 18?

Mr. Thompson—Dixon, the editor, came again representing the directors. Mr. Bates—One moment.

Mr. Thompson—That is the question. Is it objected to?

Mr. Bates—If you put the question whether or not he did represent the directors, all right. I don't like your assumption.

Mr. Thompson—The assumption is stated right here in the records.

Mr. Bates—Well, read the records.

Mr. Thompson—No, I will not.

Q. I will ask you whether or not Mr. Dixon came again representing the directors—yes or no.

Mr. Bates—I object.

The Master—If he knows whether he represented the directors or not.

Mr. Bates—If he will ask him that question all right.

Mr. Thompson—That is the very question—no other question. I haven't asked a word Dixon said—simply did he come there that day to that meeting representing the directors—yes or no. The record will show you what the answer is.

The Witness—I will have to say he represented them for that purpose in that part of the meeting.

Mr. Thompson—That is all I have asked.

Q. The answer is, yes, then, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And there was further talk about this subject of compromise, wasn't there? I don't care what it was. A. Yes.

Q. Now, it has been questioned here whether, after March 17, any director or representative of the directors ever came to see the trustees, and I would like to take that matter up next. Now look at the record of April 2, will you, please? A. April 2?

Q. Yes. If you don't mind glancing that over to yourself, I will put a few questions to you. Under a date at 11 o'clock at night this is—11 o'clock in the evening. A. Do you want me just to read that part?

Q. Just get it into your mind. A. Do you want me to read the whole record of that day or just that part?

Mr. Thompson—Just that 11 p. m.

What takes place just before midnight is often important.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Thompson, did this 11 p. m. have a day of the month?

Mr. Thompson—It seems to have April 2. It may have been April 1, but it is put down here April 2.

Mr. Streeter—The paragraph before that is dated at 4:30, Governor Bates, and then under this same date the next proceeding is 11 p. m.

The Witness—Yes, I have read that.

Q. Well, at 11 o'clock in the evening Mr. Dixon came again, this time representing Mr. Neal, didn't he? A. I will have to ask the instruction of the Court as to that. Mr. Dixon came from a conference—said he had had a conference with Mr. Neal—but I couldn't say that he represented him.

Q. Let me ask you to read at this point beginning with the words "eleven p. m."—read the record, will you? A. (The Witness reading from the record): "Mr. Dixon said he had told Mr. Neal earlier in the evening of the recent entrance of General Streeter into the case as Mr. Dittmore's chief counsel. This led Mr. Neal to ask Mr. Dixon if he thought the two boards could get together for a conference to possibly avoid further legal proceedings. He said he would be willing to talk with the trustees this evening on his own responsibility if such a step was thought possible. The trustees told Mr. Dixon that while they appreciated his interest and help as well as the motive which prompted Mr. Neal's inquiry, the whole question was now in the hands of counsel and they felt no action could be taken in trying to get together except through their counsel. It was stipulated that Judge Smith must be eliminated from any conference because of his failure to observe the agreement of counsel made at their conference Feb. 1, which failure was considered unethical. Mr. Dixon said he would be glad to communicate this to Mr. Neal and left immediately for his home to do so."

Q. Was this the same Judge Smith who has been spoken of as having been counsel for the directors for so long a time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is the man who was counsel of record in the contempt proceedings, wasn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he is in court here now and has been through these proceedings? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson—I would like to have him stand up and be identified. Judge Smith. I want everybody to see him. Is he here?

Mr. Bates—There is no occasion for him to stand up.

Mr. Thompson—I would like to have him seen.

Mr. Bates—You are examining the witness.

The Master—I don't see any occasion for that procedure, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—Very well. There will be occasion for it later.

Q. Now, then, I would like you to turn to May 6. A. April 6 or May 6?

Q. May 6, if you please. A. Would you tell me what part to read?

Q. I would like to have you read the part about the letter from Mr. Dixon embodying the plan of reconciliation between the two boards. A. Shall I read those?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, you might just read that part of the record, please.

The Master—We have now got to a date subsequent to the filing of the bill, I think.

Mr. Thompson—Yes. I was challenged by Governor Bates to produce any evidence that there had been any approaches subsequent to the filing of the bill. I am now doing it.

Mr. Bates—What is the date of the record?

Mr. Thompson—May 6, 1919.

Mr. Bates—And where is the challenge?

Mr. Thompson—You said a little while ago that they never came after a certain date, which is much earlier than this. I am showing that they did.

Mr. Bates—I don't know what my brother refers to, but I object to his putting in evidence of anything subsequent to the filing of the bill.

Mr. Thompson—The difficulty is I do know what I refer to and you don't remember it.

The Master—I think we have thus far excluded what took place subsequent to the filing of the bill.

Mr. Thompson—Very well, I won't press it. I would like to call your attention to the entry of May 9, however, for a different reason. What is the date of the filing of our bill?

Mr. Bates—April 29th.

Mr. Thompson—Then this is all before the date of the filing of our bill.

Mr. Whipple—The April date was—

Mr. Thompson—April 29th our bill was filed.

Mr. Streeter—That lets in the May 6th date.

Mr. Thompson—No, not on that ground. It is admissible on another ground, but is not important. But May 9th is important.

Q. I should like to have you read the first paragraph in that entry of May 9th.

Mr. Bates—I object.

Mr. Thompson—And I offer it. I would like to have this heard and then His Honor can pass on it. I offer it on various grounds. I offer it on the ground of good faith. And I do not see how Your Honor can determine its admissibility without hearing what it is, and I doubt if it will do any harm for you to hear it. There is no jury here. The entry as I have it, and I believe as the witness has it quoted, is as follows:

Mr. Bates—I object to it, Your Honor.

Mr. Thompson—Don't you dare to have the Court hear it even to pass on it?

Mr. Bates—Why, it is not admissible under the rules of evidence. I have no knowledge what it is, but it occurred after you filed your bill.

Mr. Thompson—How do you know it isn't admissible if you haven't seen it?

Mr. Bates—Because you have admitted that it isn't.

Mr. Thompson—I haven't admitted any such thing. It is one of those facts the time of which has nothing to do with its admissibility.

The Master—I don't see how we can tell till we hear it.

Mr. Thompson—You can't tell till you hear it.

Mr. Bates—We haven't even had the opportunity to look at it, Your Honor.

Mr. Thompson—You have had these records right along.

The Master—Well, I think you ought to show Governor Bates the entry first.

Mr. Thompson—There it is (showing entry to Mr. Bates).

Mr. Bates (after examining entry)—I object to it as being immaterial and having no reference to the case.

Mr. Thompson—I will read it, if Your Honor please:

"Mr. Watts reported that Mr. Dickey had telephoned him today and sent a message by him to Mr. Eustace, saying that, while he felt there should be some changes made in the contract between the publishing house and the Trustees under the Will for the printing of Mrs. Eddy's works, he believed it inadvisable, on account of Mr. Dittmore's presence on the board, to meet collectively, and he would advise that Mr. Eustace confer with Mr. Fernald instead. As decided yesterday, no further action will be taken in the matter before opportunity is had to confer with Mr. Whipple."

I may say for the purpose of elucidation that Mr. Dittmore at that time was and still is one of the trustees under Mrs. Eddy's will.

Mr. Streeter—Chairman.

Mr. Thompson—He is the chairman of that board, and when it is alleged as it is here in the answer in Dittmore v. Dickey that Mr. Dittmore was a man whom it was impossible to get along with, and who was arrogant, arbitrary, unreasonable, unfair, I want to show that the general plan and the scheme, starting way back in June, 1918, as testified to by Mr. Rowlands, of these men, was for themselves, by secret, underhand, grossly improper methods, deceptive to the last degree, to keep him, first, in ignorance of the business going on in the directors, and, secondly, as a trustee under that will, and finally, to expel him, undermine him and discredit him. And this bears directly on the general scheme of conspiracy of which this man Dickey is the head and front, to discredit my client as well as to do various collateral damage wherever he can get a chance.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Thompson, you do not include either this witness or any of the trustees in that?

Mr. Thompson—Certainly not.

Mr. Whipple—I merely wanted that clear on the record.

Mr. Thompson—Certainly not. While they were conducting what they thought an open controversy with these directors, they were being victimized in the same way my client was. Not that I think their views are sound, for I do not; but they are entitled to fair treatment just the same.

Mr. Streeter—If you will pardon me, there is another view which Mr. Thompson is not so familiar as I am, with reference to this particular subject. When Mrs. Eddy's will, after a contest, was established by the New Hampshire Supreme Court, and it was held that The First Church of Christ, Scientist, here in Boston, could not hold the residuary estate as trustee, but that that estate should be held in New Hampshire under the jurisdiction of New Hampshire courts, and that the fund, which amounted to the sum of nearly $3,000,000—and that fund remains intact at the present time in the New Hampshire trust—should be preserved in New Hampshire, and that a New Hampshire trustee should be appointed who would represent the court in New Hampshire, particularly represent the court, with an order that the corpus of that property—of that trust property—should be held in New Hampshire under the jurisdiction of that court. The court appointed Mr. Josiah E. Fernald as one of the trustees, and also at our very earnest solicitation, appointed the five directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, down here, as the other trustees, they all receiving their appointment from the New Hampshire court, the trust being a New Hampshire trust and the corpus of the property being kept within that jurisdiction. The men first appointed were Mr. McLellan, Mr. Stewart, Mr. Neal, Mr. Dittmore, and Mr. Dickey, as they were the directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, here. Upon the death or deaths of these directors here and the appointment of their successor the court appointed the same man successor in New Hampshire—successor of the New Hampshire trust. So that, as that trust now stands there is a principal sum of somewhat more than $2,500,000, with a very large income, and the New Hampshire trustees are Mr. Dittmore, chairman of the board, Mr. Dickey, Mr. Merritt, Mr. Neal, Mr. Rathvon, and Mr. Fernald. So that, as the matter stands now under the New Hampshire trust, Mr. Dittmore, being the chairman of that board and being responsible as the chairman, has a very high duty to perform.

Now there is another fact that has got to be stated a little later and might as well be stated now—

The Master—There is nothing in the pleadings about this that you have been stating. There are a few references, if I remember right, to Mrs. Eddy's will, as if it was something that everybody knew all about, but none of these facts that you have been telling us now are set forth in the pleadings.

Mr. Streeter—No, they are not in specific terms. There are some general statements in the bill under which these facts can be introduced so far as they are necessary.

Now with reference to that trust. In October, 1917, an arrangement was gotten up whereby the trustees of the Mrs. Eddy trust, who up to that time had had absolute control of the publishing of all of Mrs. Eddy's works—those works belonged to the residuary estate and the publication was in their hands, and up to that time the trustees retained possession of those works and published them themselves through their own publisher.

The Master—The Trustees under the Will?

Mr. Streeter—The Trustees under the Will, the residuary trustees. They were the books, Mrs. Eddy's books, as distinguished from the periodicals, all the books that Mrs. Eddy had written, and the publication of those books was a source of very large profit to the residuary trust. Now, without going into it at great length, I think the thing will probably have to be developed; but, giving Your Honor just an outline, in October, 1917, Your Honor will remember that the five directors of the church over here were five of those trustees under the New Hampshire trust. Mr. Fernald was the other one. They arranged a contract between the Eddy trustees and the trustees of the Publishing Society, whereby the Eddy trust gave up and turned over to the Christian Science trustees here the publication of Mrs. Eddy's works for 27 years; and they did that at a meeting when Mr. Dittmore was not present, not when it was arranged—

Mr. Bates—But he was there when it was done.

Mr. Streeter—Yes; he was there when it was signed. That contract will cut a very important figure here before this matter is over, and not only here but elsewhere. It was signed on the promise of the trustees of the Publishing Society that it should not cost the Eddy trustees any more than it had cost them theretofore. It turned out that that was entirely a misrepresentation, and that the Eddy estate has been mulcted under that contract of a very, very large sum of money.

On January 15th last Mr. Dittmore, as soon as he found out what the effect of that was, and that the estate was being mulcted for the benefit of the Society, filed a letter with the trustees in which he pointed out all of the pernicious results which grew out of that contract. He stated himself very plainly, that in order to protect the Eddy estate, the trust estate, that that contract must be broken; it must be given up. It is very likely—while Your Honor cannot pass on that question—it is almost certain that the courts of New Hampshire will investigate that, it being a New Hampshire trust, and proceedings will be had.

Now, why do I make all this statement with reference to this piece of testimony? I will call your attention to it. This trouble about the contract which they procured absolutely improperly, we believe—

The Master—When you say "they"—

Mr. Streeter—I mean The Christian Science Publishing Society, my friend Whipple's clients—with the aid of the four directors of the Christian Science Church, both of them together. I can understand why the Publishing Society trustees should want it, because they are making an almighty lot of money out of it. I cannot understand why the Christian Science directors should have desired to enter into that contract. But that is a matter that will be investigated. Now, the reason I am—

Mr. Bates—Your New Hampshire trustee, Mr. Fernald—why should he have been desirous of entering into the contract?

Mr. Streeter—What?

Mr. Bates—Why should he desire to enter into it?

Mr. Streeter—Because he was cheated, and he says he was cheated.

Mr. Bates—And he is your client?

Mr. Streeter—He is not my client. He says—if you ask the question—he says he was cheated; that when they asked him, when he agreed to execute that contract, that it was done upon the representation and the promise that the Eddy trust should not be hurt by it, and he finds that they are being hurt from $25,000 to $30,000 a year, and he is on the anxious seat just now with reference to that matter.

Now, to go back to the point where we started—

Mr. Whipple—I told you, General, we should want the officers when you once got into action.

Mr. Streeter—Well, I tell you, brother Whipple, we will be good-natured about it, anyway; we won't scold each other.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, we are.

Mr. Streeter—Of course. To get back here, this is, we think, rather important, as showing how Mr. Dickey and the others were dealing with Mr. Dittmore with reference to a very important controversy here between them. Mr. Watts reported that Mr. Dickey had telephoned him, and sent a message by him to Mr. Eustace, saying that while he felt there should be some changes made in the contract between the Publishing House and the trustees—that is the one I am referring to—for the printing of Mrs. Eddy's works, he believed it inadvisable, on account of Mr. Dittmore's presence on the board, to meet collectively, and he would advise that Mr. Eustace confer with Mr. Fernald instead. In other words, Mr. Dittmore was chairman of that board—

The Master—All this is on the 6th of May?

Mr. Streeter—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—After this litigation had begun?

Mr. Streeter—After this litigation had begun. But it seems to us that it is entirely competent as showing what they were trying to do and how they were trying to do it. It seems to me that as bearing on the whole general question of the good faith of these directors' in expelling Mr. Dittmore that all this is competent.

Now, I will call Your Honor's attention directly to the issue as between Mr. Dittmore, in the Dittmore bill and the majority of these directors, who on St. Patrick's Day last began to exercise power by first kicking one man off of one board and then kicking another man out of another board.

Mr. Whipple—Or trying to.

Mr. Streeter—Well, they tried to. They kicked him, anyhow; and I am informed that the resolution provides, and that they put on their record a resolution, that they would not kick him off of the New Hampshire trust, as chairman of the New Hampshire trust, but they would defer that to a more opportune time; and I give them notice that they cannot put him off the New Hampshire trust without getting the approval of the courts of New Hampshire.

Mr. Bates—Do I understand you to say there is a record of that?

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Thompson says so.

Mr. Thompson—We are so advised, that there is a record of it, and that a motion was made to defer action against Mr. Dittmore until a more opportune time.

Mr. Streeter—Well, we are going to see your records, we will find out.

Mr. Bates—We won't object to any testimony you can put in, but it seems a little unusual for counsel to be making a statement in regard to a case which he says or threatens he is going to bring in New Hampshire some time because of a contract by which he claims the Publishing Society is making $25,000 a year more out of than what they ought, and overlooks the fact that the beneficiary under both instruments is The Mother Church, and if the Publishing Society were making the money they will get it.

Mr. Streeter—That reminds me that under paragraph 6 of your answer you deny that the members of The Mother Church are the beneficiaries.

Mr. Bates—And I have not said that the members were now. I said The Mother Church was.

Mr. Streeter—While we are about this we might as well have Your Honor understand just the provisions of the bill on which we are relying. It is Section 34 of our bill.

Mr. Bates—Are you opening your case now?

Mr. Streeter—No; but I am telling the Judge why I think that this piece of evidence that Mr. Thompson started on is competent.

"34. The defendants, Neal, Dickey, Merritt, and Rathvon, on the other hand, in their conduct toward the plaintiff, and particularly in their attempted dismissal of the plaintiff from said Board of Directors, and in their attempt to obtain from the plaintiff the said documentary evidence in his possession, have acted irregularly and in violation of the essential formalities of due notice and hearing required by said by-laws, by natural justice, and by the law of this Commonwealth, and for causes not sufficient either in law or fact to warrant his dismissal, and alleged in bad faith; and they have not acted in good faith and in the exercise of sound reason, but capriciously and arbitrarily, and have been actuated simply by a desire to get rid of the plaintiff as an inconvenient obstacle to the carrying out of certain plans and purposes entertained by them, the said Dickey, Neal, Merritt, and Rathvon, inconsistent with the tenets and by-laws of said church," etc.

Now, in their answer, the directors' answer, they put that in issue in about the simplest possible language:

"34. Said defendants deny the allegations contained in the thirty-fourth paragraph of the Bill of Complaint."

So that the question, the fundamental question, in Mr. Dittmore's case, is whether these defendants, headed by Mr. Dickey—I ought to say three, because there were only three who participated, Dickey, Merritt and Rathvon, for Mr. Neal was sick, he was not there—the question is whether they acted in good faith or capriciously and irrationally and without sound reason; and as your court, the Massachusetts court, says, whether they acted in good faith or capriciously or otherwise.

Now, Judge Dodge, I am perhaps led to take too long a time here, but this has been on my system for some time, and I wanted you, as the Court here, to see what the foundation was on which Mr. Dittmore's case rested, and to see that this—I would like to use a perfectly inoffensive adjective, but none occurs to me here at the moment—this attempt on their part in connection with the Eddy trust, of which he was chairman, to not have a meeting when he was present, is simply a strong piece of evidence bearing upon one of the vital issues in this case.

Mr. Thompson—That is to go in in connection with our offer to show by their records as directors in this case that the records show something—

The Master—I did not quite hear what you said, Mr. Thompson; speak a little more slowly.

Mr. Thompson—The General's offer must be taken particularly, I suppose, in connection with the further offer to show from the directors' own records with reference to the purpose concerning the expulsion of Mr. Dittmore from the Board of Trustees under Mrs. Eddy's will; and the evidence is offered, as General Streeter says, on the general issue of bad faith; and further to show—

The Master—Let us see what we are talking about, just what evidence is offered.

Mr. Thompson—The evidence offered is that on one occasion, in dealing with him as a member of another trust—

The Master—The evidence you refer to is this record of a trustees' meeting, is it?

Mr. Streeter—Which I read here, yes.

Mr. Thompson—The record, I understand, it has been agreed to here, having been called for and produced and examined, goes in any way, and the relevancy—

Mr. Bates—That is not our understanding.

Mr. Thompson—We understand it so, if relevant to any issue in the case. The point to which it is relevant we say is this: We have alleged here that these men in the particular act which we question in our bill, namely, expelling us without any notice or hearing or any warning from their own board, did not do it sincerely, honestly, from a desire to benefit the trust.

The Master—Your claim is that they did not do it in good faith? Isn't that enough to say about it?

Mr. Thompson—Didn't do it in good faith. We say that that act was the part of a general plan and scheme, knit together, or parts of one plan, first, to deceive him, keep back from him, and to get rid of him, not merely in this trust but in another trust, so as to eliminate him from both trusts and from the entire Christian Science movement. It was part of a general plan and scheme, only one act of a general plan and scheme, to discredit and destroy Mr. Dittmore. Another part of it was to do the same thing to Mr. Rowlands.

The Master—It would seem from what you say that this record of the trustees' meeting had got to go in at some time, in some connection.

Mr. Bates—No, Your Honor, I think not.

Mr. Thompson—I should think it had.

Mr. Bates—If I may be allowed to make my statement. This is a record, as I understand it, of May 6, after this Bill in Equity was filed. It is a record of what purports to be a statement of Mr. Dickey's, made by the trustees. Such a record certainly cannot be introduced as against the directors. If Mr. Dickey made any such statement it is possible to put in the evidence of it in the proper way. The proper way is not through a record made by the plaintiffs in this suit after suit had begun. So far as its being admissible at any time, it seems to me it may bear on this supposititious case that General Streeter has in view in New Hampshire, but it certainly does not bear on this case because it could not have been anything that actuated Mr. Dittmore in bringing his bill; anything that occurred on May 6 could not have been the basis of any of his claims in his bill, and therefore it certainly could not be considered relevant to any of those issues which he raised. I may say that the statement made by General Streeter is a part, I assume, of a statement which he might have made in connection with an opening. It is a statement that gives the facts, I have no doubt, as he thinks they are, but the facts in many instances are stated not in accordance with our understanding of them, and I do not wish his statement to pass, therefore, as one which we accept or agree to.

Mr. Streeter—I am sorry you misunderstand the facts.

Mr. Bates—Quite on the contrary. We differ from him essentially in regard to them all.

Mr. Streeter—Your Honor, just one word more, if I may. Talking about the fact that this evidence turns up after the bill has been brought, I submit, Your Honor, that that is absolutely unsound. Suppose we discovered an admission by Dickey and the others made in June, of just what he has undertaken to do in March.

The Master—Oh, yes. I think we shall all agree there that, generally speaking, transactions between the parties litigant subsequent to the date of the bill are inadmissible. There may, however, conceivably be certain statements and transactions which would be admissible. The question is whether this is one of them.

Mr. Thompson—Now I should like to renew the call for the directors' records which have to do with the proposed action against Mr. Dittmore under the New Hampshire trust. I should rather get it from the directors than from any other source, but if they refuse it I think I can get it elsewhere.

Mr. Bates—I assume Your Honor wants to settle one question at a time.

The Master—Certainly.

Mr. Streeter—This is one of the things which may assist Your Honor in settling this question.

The Master—I want to settle at this time the question whether I ought to admit this extract from the trustees' record at present.

Mr. Streeter—Yes, Your Honor. But suppose that the record which Mr. Thompson calls for, the directors' records, shows exactly what he says; that they have brought this up and voted to postpone it to a more convenient time. It would be a piece of evidence that would aid Your Honor, I submit.

The Master—I think if counsel have got through saying what they have to say that I shall exclude the evidence at present. It seems to me that the foundation which I have for it now is only a statement of counsel, and not the foundation which I should have for admitting it now, showing it to be a piece of evidence which, although of events subsequent to the date of the bill, is yet for special reasons admissible in this case.

Mr. Thompson—We accept that. Now I will call—

The Master—One moment. The ruling, however, is without prejudice to the evidence being offered under other circumstances and in a different connection; when you come to put in your case, perhaps, or possibly at some other stage, we may see reasons for a different course of action. For the present I exclude it.

Mr. Thompson—I should like now to make a formal call for the records of the directors bearing on this same subject.

The Master—Well, they will be subject to the same ruling at present.

Mr. Thompson—I should like to have them marked for identification.

The Master—We don't want to go into that part of it now.

Mr. Thompson—Can't they hand them to me? It won't take them but a moment; they must know the passage I mean. I would like to have the passage identified and marked.

Mr. Bates—Personally I have no knowledge of any such record, and inasmuch as His Honor has said that it is ruled out in his present ruling, I do not see any occasion for it.

The Master—Well, haven't you agreed that the records should be mutually produced when called for?

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Dane, I think, knows where the record is.

Mr. Dane—If Your Honor please, I have no knowledge of any such record and I understand there is no such record in the directors' books. If Mr. Thompson has any idea where it is, if he will let us know what date that record was supposed to be made we shall produce it.

The Master—I think it would be better, if you are going to call for an extract from the directors' records, for you to call for it specifically.

Mr. Thompson—It would be if I knew where it was.

The Master—I thought counsel had spent an evening on it.

Mr. Thompson—Personally I have not. I have been advised by a person who has seen the records that there is such a record.

Mr. Streeter—I am advised by my Boston associate that I used too strong a word when I used the word "cheating" in connection with what was said to Mr. Fernald. I think that is probably a little ungentlemanly. All I mean to say—and I say it to these gentlemen here—is that the language which they used was not understood by Mr. Fernald or turned out to mean something different from what Mr. Fernald, our New Hampshire trustee, understood it meant at the time the statements were made.

Mr. Bates—Understood who made?

Mr. Streeter—The parties who negotiated this transfer of the publication of all of Mrs. Eddy's works from the different trustees to The Christian Science Publishing Society. And I withdraw the word "cheating," and if anybody's sensibilities are offended I apologize.

Q. Now that leads me to ask you to turn to the entries of May 27, Mr. Rowlands, if you will, please. A. I have it.

Q. On that day did you get a request from Mr. Neal for a conference on the subject of compromise? Yes or no.

Mr. Bates—Does Your Honor think this material?

Mr. Thompson—I am not asking what the conference was. I have alleged in my bill something about an attempt to compromise.

Mr. Bates—But you characterize—

The Master—Let Mr. Thompson finish. I have difficulty in hearing what he says.

Mr. Thompson—One of the allegations in the bill is that Mr. Dittmore has felt obliged to bring this bill to prevent what he calls in his bill a collusive compromise. A collusive compromise would be one in which both parties surrender more than they know they ought. Now the evidence at present shows that one of these parties has been in an attitude entirely uncompromising—standing on direct, fixed principles—namely, the trustees. My allegation must therefore be construed to mean—and would be more disastrous to the directors as meaning—that they were prepared to yield what Mr. Dittmore has always consistently maintained, and what they at this time and during this hearing have been maintaining, were principles essential to the existence of the Christian Science Church. And I am offering to show now that Mr. Dittmore's fear—apprehension was the word used, which is a word looking in futuro—that that apprehension came pretty near being justified on May 27th by a proposition made by Mr. Neal.

Mr. Bates—I object. It is a matter of a record which has been made since the bringing of the bill and in regard to a matter that has occurred since the bringing of the bill.

The Master—I would like to refer, Mr. Thompson, to the allegation of your bill that you mention. I don't carry it all in my mind. Where do we find it? Page 25, is it?

Mr. Thompson—It is along there somewhere.

The Master—Yes, the middle of page 25 I think must be what you refer to. (Summarizing from the Bill of Complaint.)

"And he apprehends that if he fails to assert his legal rights and certain defendants are thereby enabled to get possession of certain papers, such a collusive settlement will at once be effected."

Mr. Thompson—It all looks in futuro. There is another place somewhere also where he speaks of his fears for the future.

The Master—Yes, right above: "fears that negotiations will soon be taken up."

Mr. Thompson—All that looks in futuro. And it turns out that his fears are happening in a worse sense than he anticipated.

The Master—Before we have got any evidence that he had such fears isn't it rather putting the cart before the horse to show that there was ground for the fears?

Mr. Thompson—It would be only that is a matter of order of proof, and I am cross-examining when I have to, when the witness goes on. I can't show what fears he had until he goes on, which may not be until the end of the case under the arrangement we have made. And if I am limited in cross-examination in connection with that to the end of the case it would exclude a large part of the cross-examination. I must continually put the cart before the horse because the horse is Mr. Dittmore for these purposes, and he will not go on until the very end of the case, to pull the thing out of the slough.

Mr. Bates—I assume if he goes on at the end he will back it out.

Mr. Thompson—I think he will be more likely to pull it out than your clients will.

The Master—I have a good deal of doubt about it, but I think I will allow it to be put in subject to exception. Once we get it in we shall not have to spend time putting it in again.

Mr. Bates—Now may I look at the records, please.

Mr. Thompson—I haven't asked for the record yet.

[The last question is read by the reporter as follows:

“Q. On that day did you get a request from Mr. Neal for a conference on the subject of compromise? Yes or No?”]

Mr. Thompson—You see I only asked him a preliminary question.

Mr. Bates—If you asked if he got a request for a conference I should not object.

The Master—You may answer it.

Mr. Thompson—On the subject of compromise.

The Witness—I do not get that. On the subject of compromise?

Mr. Thompson—On the subject of compromise between the two boards.

The Witness—That was not the request, no.

Q. What was the request?

The Master—What is the answer, no?

The Witness—Yes.

Q. What was the request? A. To meet with the board, or to meet with one of the boards.

Mr. Thompson—Perhaps you had better read that again to yourself, because in this confusion you may forget the details. To save time will you please read that record right in.

Mr. Bates—May I see it first?

Mr. Thompson—All right (showing the record to Mr. Bates). And the next one also, Governor, May 28—I shall offer that also, the same subject.

Mr. Bates—We do not object to those two records.

Q. Now if you will read those two records, please? A. (The witness reading):

“Mr. Dixon came to the meeting and said that he had just come from Mr. Neal's office where he had gone at Mr. Neal's telephone request, and that Mr. Neal would like to meet the Board of Trustees privately on his own behalf if this could be arranged. After considering the question it was decided that it would be best to have Mr. Rowlands individually meet Mr. Neal in Mr. Rowlands' private office rather than to have Mr. Neal meet with the full board. Accordingly, Mr. Rowlands made an appoint to meet Mr. Neal at 4:15.”

The Master—What date is that?

The Witness—May 27.

Mr. Thompson—Now May 28.

The Witness (reading):

“Mr. Rowlands reported that he had had two conferences with Mr. Neal and that Mr.—”

I have a personal reason that I would like to explain: these conferences that I had with Mr. Neal, we had an understanding that they were purely personal and not to be used in any way in connection with this case.

Mr. Thompson—All that is being used is the formal records of the trustees.

The Witness—I don't want to betray a confidence.

Mr. Thompson—I don't ask a word outside of the records of the trustees. That is not a private conference. The formal record of the trustees becomes part of the record.

Mr. Streeter—Won't you begin that over?

The Witness—(Reading):

“Mr. Rowlands reported that he had had two conferences with Mr. Neal and that Mr. Neal was very earnestly desirous of finding some basis on which the controversy between the two boards could be settled before the time of the annual meeting. Mr. Rowlands was to see him again early in the afternoon, and the trustees adjourned to meet at Mr. Whipple's office at 4:00 p. m.”

Do you want the rest of it?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, go ahead, please. “Later.”

The Witness—(Reading):

“The trustees and the business manager were with Mr. Whipple until 6:30. Later they met at the publishing house at 11:30 p. m. to talk over with Mr. Rowlands regarding his conferences with Mr. Neal. Mr. Neal had not yet had an opportunity to discuss any definite plans with his colleagues and he was to do this tomorrow and then see Mr. Rowlands again. Mr. Rowlands had emphasized to Mr. Neal that if anything was to be done it must be done quickly as no stay could be made in any of the operations now in preparation on the part of the trustees.”

Mr. Thompson—That is all I intend to ask you from your records, and there are only one or two questions on another topic.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, I won't bother you any more about the records at all. I want to ask you one or two questions about this Harvey business. Mr. Harvey came up from New York, didn't he, and reported personally to the trustees first about these conversations that have been said to have taken place in New York? A. As I remember it, yes.

Q. And after he had told his story, and said what he had to say, he was asked by the trustees to sit down and put it in writing, wasn't he? A. I couldn't testify as to that.

Q. That letter was written by him in Boston, wasn't it, in the trustees' rooms? A. No.

Q. It didn't come through the mail from New York, did it? A. I think it did.

Q. Are you pretty sure of that? A. No, I am not absolutely sure, but I always accepted it as a letter written by Mr. Harvey from his New York office.

Q. Isn't it a fact that he did come to Boston and was asked by somebody, very properly, after he had given all this oral statement, gossip, and so on—asked to sit down and dictate that to a stenographer, and didn't she write it in Boston? Isn't that true? A. It is very likely that she did that, but I couldn't testify.

Q. Very likely true. You don't know anything to the contrary, do you? A. No.

Mr. Whipple—I think that is the fact.

Mr. Thompson—We may assume that is the fact.

Mr. Whipple—But I think Mr. Eustace is the only one that knows.

Mr. Thompson—Very well; it is immaterial.

Q. That idea we can assume to be the fact? A. Yes.

Q. And then Mr. Watts—

The Master—Well, who is going to assume it? Pardon me, Mr. Thompson; have you ground for the assumption by the Court of that fact?

Mr. Thompson—No, sir; simply Mr. Rowlands is prepared, having been advised by persons who have personal knowledge of it, to assume the responsibility for saying that it is true. I don't think—I haven't heard anyone dispute it.

The Master—All right.

Mr. Bates—That is, that it was written out in the trustees' office?

Mr. Thompson—Yes.

Mr. Bates—At the trustees' request?

Mr. Thompson—At the trustees' request, to crystallize in writing—

Mr. Bates—That is our understanding.

Mr. Thompson—Everybody agrees to it sir—to get in definite shape this gossip that Mr. Harvey had been bringing on from New York.

Q. Now, Mr. Watts took that letter over to the directors, didn't he? A. Yes.

Q. And read it to the directors? A. I couldn't say.

Q. You don't remember? A. I think he read it to the directors.

Q. Yes. A. I know he presented it to them.

Q. Now, you heard Mr. Dittmore's reply to that—to the letter—not reply, but you heard Mr. Dittmore's letter to Mr. Harvey in which he took up the points made by Mr. Harvey in that letter, didn't you? A. Yes.

The Master—That is the one that has been read?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Harvey made the statement, and afterwards incorporated it into his letter, that he understood that this interview in New York by the mysterious director had been requested by him or that he had gone down there requesting it; you understood that from Mr. Harvey, didn't you, that the director had gone to New York to stir things up? A. Yes.

Q. But you found out afterward that that wasn't so, but it had happened just as Mr. Dittmore said, didn't you—that he went there for other reasons and was spoken to by these two men? A. Mr. Dittmore's statement is all I had.

Q. You never had anything contrary to Mr. Dittmore's statement on that, did you?

Mr. Whipple—Except Mr. —

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Watts' hearsay?

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Harvey's.

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Harvey's hearsay?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Q. Those two men that Mr. Harvey refers to are Mr. Gilmore and Mr. McLellan, weren't they? A. Mr. Gilmore was one; I am not sure of McLellan. That isn't the name; McCullough.

Q. McCullough? A. Yes.

Q. You were satisfied afterward that Mr. Dittmore's trip there was not part of any scheme or plan, were you not, on his part? A. No, I couldn't say that.

Q. You don't believe that it was, do you? A. Well, I—I don't know about his trip, but from his letter that he wrote it seemed to me that he set forth all of the—

Q. That is, you accept his letter as he wrote it? A. No, I don't accept it because I don't think the statements made are right.

Q. I mean the statements of fact, not the opinions; the statements of fact in regard to his trip to New York? A. As to what he did there?

Q. Yes. A. I know nothing now to the contrary.

Q. Exactly. That is all I am trying to get at. Do you know where Mr. Bates got hold of that information which he detailed to you at such great length this morning about your lumbering operations and contracts? A. I do not.

Q. Have you any idea where he has been to get that—who has been furnishing him with all the information?

Mr. Bates—Does Your Honor think that is material?

Mr. Thompson—I think it is.

Mr. Bates—Well, I object to it.

Mr. Thompson—And I press the question on the ground that it is a fair illustration of the methods of these directors in getting at testimony about people.

The Witness—Well, I regret they had to go that far.

The Master—For the moment. If they did get that information, is that anything to their discredit?

Mr. Thompson—No, sir, but how they got it may be. I won't press it if they are going to object to it.

Mr. Bates—No, your client objected to it; you shouldn't press it.

Mr. Thompson—My client hasn't objected to it.

Q. You know a man named Hess in Chicago? A. Slightly, yes, sir.

Q. He is the counsel for one of the companies, isn't he—the Harvester Company? A. Well, I think he is an associate counsel, yes, sir.

Q. Associate counsel. He is a Christian Scientist, isn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked at one time to be a director of the First National Bank of Chicago, weren't you?

The Master—I am sorry, I didn't hear that.

Mr. Thompson—He was asked at one time to be a director of the First National Bank of Chicago.

The Witness—No, I don't remember of being asked.

Q. You don't? A. No.

Q. I understood that you had been. A. No.

Q. I will put this question to you in common fairness; it may be objected to, but I am going to put it on behalf of Mr. Dittmore. It is a fact, isn't it, that before you took this position of trustee under this Publishing Society, these directors—not your fellow trustees, but these directors, every man of them—knew fully the businesses that you were connected with, the fact that a certain amount of your time would be required in those businesses, and said to you in substance that they were glad to get you on those terms, a man of your business experience? Isn't that the solid truth?

Mr. Bates—I object to the question.

Q. That is a fact, isn't it?

The Master—I think he may answer that.

A. Well, I would have to answer it in this way: that they knew all of my business activities—I think the majority of the directors—but in connection with my trusteeship I never asked them to express any—

Q. You continually answer something I don't quite ask. A. Yes.

Q. I haven't asked what you asked them. I put it in very general terms. It has been suggested here this morning that the trustees and the directors discovered that you were spending some of your time on your own business—an attitude of surprise. I wish to dissociate publicly Mr. Dittmore from any such intimation or suggestion as that by this question to you. Isn't it a fact, no matter how much he differs with you—and he does on your views on these trusts and declarations—isn't it a fact that Mr. Dittmore, Mr. Dickey, Mr. Neal, Mr. Rathvon, and Mr. Merritt, every one of them, not only knew when you took that position as trustee, that you had got to devote a considerable amount of time to your business affairs, but expressed great gratification that they could get a man on that board who had business affairs of that magnitude to attend to and the capacity to attend to them? A. Yes, they did; yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson—That is all.

Mr. Whipple—You may step aside, Mr. Rowlands, if you please.

Mr. Bates—Well, just a moment.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, pardon me. (To the witness.) You need not step aside.

Mr. Bates—Don't be in such haste.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, he is not in any haste at all. He is growing every minute!

Q. (By Mr. Bates) Mr. Rowlands, you gave up a salary of $15,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was paying you that salary? A. C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company.

Q. And for what? A. For managing their affairs.

Q. And what affairs? A. Why, the affairs of the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company.

Q. When did you give it up? A. I gave it up when I resigned my position.

Q. When was that? A. Well, I can't tell you, as I said this morning.

Q. How long had you been receiving it? A. Oh, I should judge ten years.

Q. Did you not give it up in connection with your work with the Yellow Pine Company? A. No, I did not.

Q. Then, the fact that you had entered into a partnership for the development or promotion of the development for 45,000 acres of land, with all the lumber interests involved, and the contracts with the Harvester Company amounting to 400,000,000 feet of lumber a year, wasn't any reason why you gave up your position with the parent company? A. That was not my reason, no, sir.

Q. Could you have run the C. A. Goodyear Lumber Company and the Yellow Pine Lumber Company and your partnership business at the same time? A. I could if called upon to do so, yes.

Q. Well, would they have expected to pay you a salary of $15,000 in the C. A. Goodyear Company when you were devoting yourself as a partner with Crosby to making millions or possible millions out of this lumber company development? A. They would if I delivered the services that they required.

Q. But, as a matter of fact, you are still treasurer of that company?

A. Of the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company, yes, sir.

Q. But not of the other company?
A. No, I resigned; I am a director.

Q. You didn't give up any salary in connection with the Goodyear Yellow Pine Company? A. No, I didn't have one with that company.

Q. You owned a half of the common stock— A. Well, I held a half of the common stock; I don't claim to own it.

Q. Who was put in your place in the C. A. Goodyear Company? A. Let's see; (pausing) I think Mr. Lightner—H. A. Lightner—was elected the treasurer, made treasurer, and Miles A. Goodyear took my position as the manager.

Q. Now how long does your contract run with the Harvester Company? A. Eight years; that is—

Q. Eight years? A. Or until the contract is completed.

Q. Well, what will make a completion of the contract? A. Well, the delivery of the amount of lumber that is required under the contract.

Q. Well, I understood that was 400,000,000 feet a year? A. No; 400,000,000 feet in all; 50,000,000 feet a year. Eight years would be 400,000,000 feet.

Q. Then it will be about eight years, as you figure, before your contract will be completed? A. I should think so, yes, sir.

Q. And have you since you have been trustee been out to California on account of interests which you have out there? A. I made one trip, yes, sir.

Q. How long were you gone? A. I can't say. It generally takes me about a month to take a trip of that kind.

Q. And have you been out to the State of Washington also on business? A. No, I didn't go there.

Q. Did you ever have any difference with Mr. Dittemore because of suggestions which he had made to you in regard to things that you should do which you regarded as being disloyal to your co-trustees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that? A. Well, I don't—I can't tell the dates, because I don't remember dates.

Q. That caused considerable breach between you and Mr. Dittemore? A. Why, I don't think it was a breach. It was—he asked me for some information which I thought ought to come through the trustees, and I told him so, rather than anybody else.

Q. Did you tell him so rather emphatically? A. Well, yes.

Q. And did you ever ask Mr. Dickey as to why the board did not get rid of Mr. Dittemore? A. I don't know as I ever did.

Q. Did you, in effect, or in substance ask that question? A. I can't remember of asking him that.

Q. Didn't you make complaint to Mr. Dickey in regard to Mr. Dittemore's action? A. I think so.

Q. But you don't recall that you asked him why the board did not dismiss him? A. I don't believe I do or know.

Q. Will you say that you did not do it? A. No, I will not.

Q. Now, in the record of March 5th—have you that record of March 5th? A. Do you mean our records?

Q. Yes. A. (Witness shows entry in trustees' records to Mr. Bates.)

Q. Will you point out the parts that you read? A. (Witness indicates.)

Mr. Bates—This record was referred to by brother Thompson, but was not read into the record. It is brief, and I will read it. (Reading):

"Mr. Dickey came to the meeting by appointment at his request, and stated that he came on his own responsibility. He made inquiry whether Miss Wright would be available for employment by The Mother Church, in the event they needed her for their new department. The trustees told him that they desired to retain Miss Wright for the advertising department here, but would be glad to spare her for as much time as was necessary to instruct someone to take charge of their new department."

Q. What new department was referred to? A. It is the Journal cards that were transferred to the Board of Directors. They took that over.

Mr. Whipple—Just a little louder, if you please. It gets a little confidential.

Q. Won't you repeat your answer louder so that the Court can hear it? A. It was the Journal cards department—I think that is what they call it. It was transferred under the agreement of Feb. 3 from the trustees to the directors of the church.

Q. Well, that paragraph had nothing to do with any collusive settlement between the trustees and the directors, did it? A. I think not.

Mr. Bates—Now the next paragraph is this. (Reading):

"General conversation was had with Mr. Dickey for nearly two hours relative to the situation concerning the two boards. The whole conference was one looking to a solution of the problem which concerns the Board of Directors, the publishing house, and the field at large, through demonstration."

The Witness—Yes.

Q. And that is all that the record says in regard to anything that took place or in regard to any conversation with Mr. Dickey? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there is nothing in that that, to your mind, indicates any collusive arrangement between—

Mr. Thompson—Just a moment, I pray Your Honor's judgment. In the first place, here is what he thinks was collusive. His judgment on that is not material.

In the second place—

Mr. Bates—I will not discuss it; to save time, I will withdraw the question.

Mr. Thompson— —I now contend and have contended that it is not collusive but a distinct surrender by you of what you have been calling vital rights here.

Q. Now you turn to the record of March 6. (Witness indicates.)

Mr. Bates—And the entry of March 6, which my brother has expatiated on without reading, is as follows—

Mr. Thompson—Will you read it, please, slowly, so that we can get it?

Mr. Bates—(Reading):

"Mr. Dickey came to the meeting at 3:40 to further discuss the question of the relationship of the two boards, and some plan for working out unity of action."

"After more or less discussion, Mr. Dickey read section by section the draft of the directors' memorandum which has been under consideration a number of times during recent years, and asked the trustees to express such modifications as they felt would be acceptable to them, in order that he might present these to his colleagues. The question was tentatively discussed and a number of changes made, and it was agreed that the publishing house should make copies of the corrected memorandum and send four of these to Mr. Dickey, and keep copies for themselves, in order that it might be given earnest and thoughtful consideration before making any decision. Miss Farr was asked to make these copies, and later in the evening, Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Ogden compared them with the original and sent the four copies to Mr. Dickey's residence."

That is all there is in that meeting in regard to any alleged compromise.

Q. As a matter of fact, do you know whether or not the original was also sent back with those four copies? A. I do not.

Q. And you did not have charge of sending the copies? You know nothing about that except what you see in the record? A. Not that I remember, the detail of that.

Q. Mr. Dickey did bring to that meeting a memorandum, and as he read it section by section he minuted on there such suggestions as the trustees made? A. Penciled them.

Q. Yes, and left that memorandum with your board for copies to be made? A. I think he did.

Q. And the meeting extended until about 6 o'clock that night, did it not? A. Rather late.

Q. And he then left it with you at your request? A. Yes.

Q. In order that you might make copies of the suggestions as they had been made by your board at the meeting? A. He did.

Q. And you offered to make the copies and to send them to him? A. I—

Q. By you, I mean the trustees. A. Either he requested it or we offered to accommodate him.

Q. Now, referring to the record of March 17, if you please, will you show me that? (Witness does so) The re—

Mr. Bates—The record to which my brother referred to is this:

"Mr. Dixon came to the meeting about 4:30, and reported that he had been two hours with the directors discussing the action of this morning, and that they had requested him to confer with the trustees with a view to ascertaining if some agreement could not be reached regarding the situation between the boards. They stated to him that they were willing to agree to the memorandum last submitted by them. The trustees explained to Mr. Dixon, paragraph by paragraph, why they felt it was necessary to make changes in the directors' memorandum as submitted by the trustees to the directors at their meeting last week. Mr. Dixon took both copies for consideration, with a view to discussing the question fully with the directors tomorrow."

Q. Mr. Dixon was editor of The Monitor? A. Yes.

Q. And had come here from England to take that position? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Some years before; and was regarded as a most able editor, I assume? A. Yes, sir, we regarded him so.

Q. And was greatly troubled by reason of this controversy which had arisen between the two boards? A. I believe so.

Q. And for a long time had been endeavoring to bring about some adjustment of the difficulty— A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had he not, on his own initiative? A. I would say that he had been trying to bring about a settlement.

Q. Because of his own interest in the case? A. Yes.

Mr. Bates—Does Your Honor wish to stop here?

Mr. Whipple—How much longer are you going to take?

Mr. Bates—Oh, not much longer.

Mr. Whipple—Would Your Honor mind finishing with this witness?

The Master—I am perfectly willing to if counsel are ready to go along.

Mr. Thompson—I would like to go on.

Mr. Whipple—I would like him to clean up the job if he could.

Q. Now, did Mr. Dixon come back the next day? (Handing trustees' record to witness.)

[No answer.]

Mr. Bates—And that record reads as follows (reading):

"Mr. Dixon came to the meeting"—

Mr. Thompson—What record are you reading now?

Mr. Bates—This is the record of March 8, 1919. (Reading):

"Mr. Dixon came to the meeting at 3 p. m., also the business manager, and reported that he had been in conference with the Board of Directors, and that the directors had refused to accept the draft of the agreement which he had taken from the trustees yesterday. They gave him the following as the only basis upon which they would agree:

"Final authority as to the editorial policy of the official organs of The Mother Church and the general supervision of the general affairs of The Christian Science Publishing Society as set forth in the Manual of The Mother Church."

"The trustees considered this memorandum, but felt that under no circumstances could they accept it, because this would be an absolute violation of the Deed of Trust."

Q. So that as a result of these conferences with Mr. Dixon both parties stood on what they considered the principle involved, did they?

Mr. Thompson—One moment. That is a very unfair question. You know he has read the records way down into May, where the men kept returning to the topic, offering to take back one thing and another. That was not the final result of it by a good deal.

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Rowlands, if there was any giving up of any principle, or any suggestion of giving up any fundamental principle in controversy by either board?

Mr. Thompson—One moment. How does he know what the other board regarded as fundamental? Nobody knows that. You have fluctuated all over the lot.

The Master—He may state as far as he knows.

Q. You may answer the question.

The Witness—Will you read it?

[The last question is read.]

A. Not as far as we were concerned, but I cannot testify as to the Board of Directors.

Q. Do you recall that they offered to give up any fundamental principle involved in the matter?

Mr. Thompson—I pray Your Honor's judgment. That requires him to pass judgment upon what the directors, at least all except Mr. Dittmore, regarded as fundamental. He is incompetent, and every other man is except the directors themselves, to say what they regarded as fundamental, because they regarded, according to the chairman, half a dozen different things at one time as fundamental and at another time not.

The Master—Of course, his testimony can be only so far as indicated to him. No one would take it in any other sense. (To the witness) Answer it.

The Witness—Well, from the Board of Directors, no, as a board.

Mr. Thompson—I would like him to explain that a little further. You mean individually?

Q. There was none came from the Board of Directors, you say? A. Not that I remember.

Q. As a matter of fact, it was regarded by every one who was interested in the cause of Christian Science that this dispute which had arisen between the two boards ought to be adjusted if it could be, was it not?

Mr. Thompson—How can he tell that? How can he tell that?

A. I couldn't say everybody, but I should think all would be interested in seeing a harmonious—

Q. You would say yourself that it was an eminently desirable thing, wouldn't you? A. If it was settled satisfactorily.

Q. And you would think that the Board of Trustees and the Board of Directors ought in every way to try to bring about a satisfactory adjustment before proceeding to the Court?

Mr. Thompson—One moment. Satisfactory to whom?

The Witness—Satisfactory to the Court.

Q. You would think they ought to endeavor in every way to bring about an adjustment before going to the courts, would you, if it was possible to do so without waiving any principle? A. I don't want to speak for them, but I think they should do so.

Mr. Thompson—Think what?

Q. I was asking you to speak for yourself then. A. Pardon me.

Q. And Mr. Dittmore always assumed the attitude that no settlement or adjustment could be made, did he?

Mr. Thompson—Well, now, one moment.

A. I can't testify to that.

Mr. Bates—Well, I thought perhaps Mr. Thompson would admit that.

Mr. Thompson—Do you think I would admit that? Mr. Dittmore is the only one who maintained a perfectly definite, although perhaps erroneous, and perhaps not erroneous view. He is the only one that has not wavered, and in that sense he regarded his views just as sacred as Mr. Rowlands regarded his. The only difference between him and your clients is that he was consistent, self-respecting, and not insulting.

Mr. Bates—I object to the counsel's statement. It is entirely irrelevant and improper, and I ask that it be stricken from the records.

Mr. Thompson—I ask it to stay. He did not vote to expel anybody.

Mr. Bates—I ask that it be stricken from the records.

Mr. Whipple—I am in favor of it staying, if I am permitted to vote.

Mr. Bates—Naturally! I submit that that statement is not justified when made in regard to the directors, and that it ought to be stricken from the record.

The Master—Well, without undertaking to pass on the question of whether it is justified or not, with which I have nothing at present to do, I think I shall order it stricken out, because I do not think it assists the progress of the case at all.

Mr. Bates—There are two or three questions I may want to ask Mr. Rowlands in regard to those records that were put in subsequent, but I do not think I ought to take the time to do it now. I prefer to do it in the morning.

Mr. Thompson—Are you willing that I should put one or two questions to him before we adjourn?

Mr. Bates—I prefer you to wait until we get through cross-examination.

Mr. Whipple—I am willing.

Mr. Thompson—I want to put one question to this witness before we adjourn.

Mr. Bates—I think you can do it in the morning just as well.

Mr. Thompson—You would rather have the impression go out just as it is? All right.

Mr. Bates—Do you object to the impression?

Mr. Thompson—You did not allow him to explain one answer that he started to explain. I ask him to finish that answer.

Mr. Bates—I object to the asking of the question.

The Master—If the witness was interrupted and not allowed to finish something he wanted to say, he may have an opportunity.

Mr. Bates—The witness has not asked any such opportunity.

Mr. Thompson—I know he has not, because he did not know his rights. The question I had in mind was this: You asked him if the board, as a Board of Directors, ever changed its position. He said as a board, no. Then he was going on to say, "But as individuals," and you stopped him, and cut him right off.

Mr. Bates—No—

The Master (to the witness)—What were you going to say about individuals?

The Witness—Well, I felt in talking to some of the individuals—

Mr. Bates—No, I object.

Mr. Thompson—You object to what he felt?

Mr. Bates—Certainly, I object to his feelings. I am willing he should state what was said, but I don't want his feelings.

Mr. Thompson—Very well. Well, I said what he thought about individual members. You asked him for his opinion.

Mr. Bates—No.

Mr. Thompson—Yes, you did. "Did the board as a board ever change its opinion?" Of course, knowing that they had never voted to change it and adopt any one of these 20 or 30 propositions, he had to say no. Then he went on to tell the truth, which relates to the public attitude of the members before they could take a vote, and you stopped him, and you stop him now.

Mr. Bates—I did not think that he answered Your Honor's question.

The Master—If he wants to add anything further about what individuals did or indicated to him, he may answer it.

The Witness—Well, there was indication that some of them would make concessions in order to settle it.

Mr. Thompson—Exactly.

Mr. Bates—Does Your Honor think that is a proper statement made in answer to your question?

The Master—I can't see why not, Governor.

Mr. Bates—Well, then I want to ask—

Mr. Thompson—We will wait until tomorrow now.

Mr. Bates—No. I want to ask Mr. Rowlands upon what he bases the statement he has just made, upon what conversation and with whom.

The Witness—Well, the conversation—

Mr. Thompson—He has already stated half a dozen times.

Mr. Bates—No, I don't want you to tell it, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—Very well.

The Master—No, I think, Mr. Thompson, you will have to be quiet a moment or two—

Mr. Thompson—Very well.

The Master— — and let Governor Bates get the answer to the question.

Mr. Thompson—The situation is very satisfactory to me. A. The conversation I had with Mr. Neal, for one.

Q. And when? A. I can't tell you just when.

The Master—He has already stated it.

Mr. Bates— I didn't understand him to say when.

The Master—All right. Go ahead.

Q. Can you give the date? A. Why, I can look it up in the records.

Q. Can you tell us about when it was? Do you refer to one of these conversations that was mentioned in the recent records? A. Yes.

Q. Of the board? A. Yes.

Q. And what was Mr. Neal's statement to you? A. Well, I can't recall just his statement.

Q. Well, give us the substance of it. A. The substance of his attitude was that they would be willing to make some concessions if necessary to bring about an understanding; that that would be his attitude.

Q. And that had been his attitude all the way along, hadn't it—so far as he could he would make concessions in order to bring about an adjustment of this dispute? A. Yes, I think that is Mr. Neal's attitude.

Q. But he never suggested to you that you would make any improper concessions, did he?

Mr. Thompson—Oh, pardon me, pardon me. Of course not.

Q. Did he, Mr. Rowlands? A. No, never.

Mr. Bates—That is all.

[Adjourned at 4:15 p. m. to 10 a. m. July 3, 1919.]

July 3, 1919

EIGHTH DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room, Boston, Massachusetts, July 3, 1919

Mr. Thompson—If Your Honor please, I would like at this stage to introduce the passages from the records of the directors to which I referred yesterday, it having been denied by two of the counsel, as I recollect it, that there was anything in these records supporting my assertion. The first is a record of March 19, 1919, which Your Honor will recollect was two days after the expulsion or attempted expulsion of Mr. Dittmore and Mr. Rowlands. It reads as follows, page 315 of their records:

"The directors had an interview with Judge Clifford P. Smith, who was requested to confer with Attorneys John L. Bates and Leon M. Abbott, with reference to the possible retirement of Mr. Dittmore as Trustee under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy."

Then the next entry on the next day, March 20, concerning the matter:

"The directors had an interview with Judge Clifford P. Smith, who reported an interview with Attorneys Bates and Abbott, who saw no reason why a vacancy should not be declared in the directorate of the Benevolent Association in case Mr. Dittmore should refuse to resign—"

The Benevolent Association is another subordinate body of this Church:

"—but they advised waiting a while before taking any action to affect a change of his trusteeship under the will of Mary Baker Eddy, so as not to have too many contests on hand at the same time. Counsel advised that when the time comes to make the request, it had better come from his co-trustees instead of from this board."

I further understand that there are other subsequent references to these two matters in these records and I reserve the right, if I may, upon discovering such entries to introduce them in evidence in the case. I submit that my statement of yesterday is entirely supported by the records of these gentlemen.

Mr. Bates—My brother is a trifle irregular in making his statement; I assume, therefore, that he won't object to my making a statement. At this same time he was endeavoring to make some arrangement with us as counsel for the board whereby Mr. Dittmore might retain those very positions.

Mr. Thompson—Now, as long as you have seen fit to go outside of anything introduced in evidence in this case, I will make a statement which is to the effect that I told you, not once but three times, that you had made a serious blunder, that you had impaired your chance of maintaining the rights of the Christian Science Church in this Board of Directors by expelling the only man who had sincerely maintained them, and knew the evidence, and that you ought to consider seriously whether you would not retrace your steps before it was too late and you had got plunged into this litigation, revoke your vote, put Mr. Dittmore back on that board, and try to conduct your affairs with common sense as well as with zeal. That is the proposition I made to you.

Mr. Bates—I admit you were very anxious to make some arrangement by which Mr. Dittmore could be put back on the board, but your efforts were not successful.

Mr. Thompson—And your efforts now to maintain your case are not successful for the very reason that you have expelled the only man who knows enough to do it.

Mr. Bates — Fortunately, counsel does not have the decision of the case.

Lamont Rowlands, Resumed

Re-Cross-Examination, Continued

Q. (By Mr. Bates.) Now, Mr. Rowlands, I understood you to say yesterday that you had spent many nights at the publishing house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you spend the nights at the publishing house? A. Well, I was there during the time that The Monitor was changed over to a morning paper. I stayed there all night long several nights, until early in the morning.

Q. And when was that? A. Well, I can't remember the date.

Q. Was there any other time when you stayed there all night long? A. Well, I have stayed there a number of times till the early hours of the morning.

Q. Are there sleeping accommodations there? A. None that I know of.

Q. What do you mean by saying you stayed there all night long? Do you mean that literally? A. Yes; I worked in the mailing room until the paper was off a great many times, helping down there.

Q. What do you mean by a great many times? A. Well, I was there at one time practically every night for a week.

Q. This was at the time when the paper was changed from an evening edition to a morning edition? A. Yes.

Q. And that involved some extra labor, did it? A. Yes.

Q. But you don't remember when it was? A. Well, I can't tell the date. The records will show if it is important.

Q. Was there any other time that you remember?

The Master—Now, I suppose you want to know that date, Mr. Bates; there is no dispute about it. Wouldn't it be useful to have it now if his evidence is useful?

Mr. Whipple—We shall show by the next witness when he did it.

The Master—There cannot be any dispute about it.

Mr. Whipple—It was along in November, 1918—August to November, was it? The latter part of August, 1918. (To the witness.) Does that accord with your memory?

The Witness—As I remember it, yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other occasion except when this paper was changed over that you recall staying there late at night? A. Why, whenever I am in town I go there in the evening very often and stay until the paper comes off, until 12:30 to 1 o'clock. I go home, leave there, between twelve and one.

Q. What time do you go down there? A. Why, I go down anywhere from 8 to 9 o'clock.

Q. In the evening? A. Yes.

Q. Then your duties on these days when you stayed all night were from 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening, were they? A. No; I always attended the conferences in the afternoon and occasionally went there in the morning to the publishing house.

Q. Occasionally? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But as a matter of fact, these evening times that you speak of were times when you went in at 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening and stayed until the paper came off the press? A. Yes.

Q. Which was about 12 o'clock? A. Goes to press at 12:30, as a rule.

Q. What was the necessity of your being there to watch that paper come off the press? A. Why, as a trustee I felt that I have an interest in the work; I don't know as there is an absolute necessity, because the organization is such that it could have been done very well without me, but I have a very keen interest in the paper, and I enjoyed attending the editorial conferences, which I have done many times.

Q. Yes; but those are not held between eight o'clock and midnight, are they? A. Yes; at 8:30 the editorial conference is held, the news editorial, at 8:30 every evening.

Q. Is that a conference with the trustees? A. No, it is a conference of the editors.

Q. Do the trustees as a rule meet with them? A. Well, occasionally we do.

Q. Just occasionally? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall anything special that you did on any of these night sessions that it was necessary for you to do? A. At one time we had considerable trouble in our mailing room, because we completely changed or quite changed our system in the mailing room, and from the standpoint of bringing out harmonious action it was felt that some one ought to be in the mailing room to help from a mental standpoint as well as physical, so I volunteered to go into the mailing room and stay there until that was worked out.

Q. And what did you do? A. Well, I did the best I could from a mental standpoint, working from the standpoint of Christian Science; and I also helped to wrap up papers, count them, and do the same labor that anyone else did.

Q. Was it necessary for you to wrap the papers? A. Not at all.

Q. Did you consider that your engagements as trustee were so that you could go in and wrap papers and make out the mailing list? A. Well, I never considered that a trustee was any more important than any other part of the institution, that it depended upon every man to live up to his highest ideals of what was right.

Q. Didn't you consider—

Mr. Whipple—Finish your answer.

A. Well, I feel every man in the institution, from the standpoint of Science, has as important a position as a trustee in working out the salvation of man and the good of the cause.

Q. You consider, you say, that every man has as important a position as the trustees? A. I think so, from the standpoint of Christian Science, yes, sir.

Q. But when you come to fix the salaries you don't consider that, do you? A. No; we—

Mr. Whipple—He doesn't seem to be so much on the salary question as some people are.

Q. How many people in the publishing house receive a salary of $6000 or over? A. Well, I couldn't tell you that.

Q. Well, you don't know, as a trustee? A. I couldn't tell you how many.

Q. You can't tell, as a trustee of the Publishing Society, how many employees you have that have a salary of $6000 or more? A. I wouldn't attempt to say exactly; I could give you an estimate.

Q. No. If all you have is an estimate, after spending nights at the publishing house, I don't think we want the estimate. As a matter of fact, you were away not only 192 meetings during the 18 months before these proceedings were brought, but you were away at times as much as a month at a time, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. And because of your business engagements in the south and elsewhere? A. Not always.

Q. Well, sometimes you were away as much as a month or more on that account? A. Yes.

Q. And as a matter of fact in September and August, very soon after this change of the paper from a night edition to a morning edition, you were away over four weeks, were you not? A. I think so.

The Master—September, 1918?

Mr. Bates—1918.

The Witness—Yes, I felt I had a right to be, too.

Q. Yes? A. Yes.

Q. I am not saying anything about that, but you were away? A. Yes.

Q. About that time, over four weeks at a time? A. I was entitled, according to the trustees, to four months of vacation in two years and I have never taken that; I have never asked for a vacation.

Q. Can you tell anything else that you did in the publishing house on those nights except to mentally help out and to fold some of the papers—wrap them up? A. Why, I don't place any particular emphasis on wrapping the papers. I only tried to show by—

Q. Can you think of anything else you did? A. — to show that I could do that as well as anything else and be of assistance wherever there seemed to be need of it.

Q. Well, you had people employed for that special purpose, did you not?

A. Why, yes, we did, and they did, the work very well, but I do not consider it beneath the dignity of a trustee to do anything that is needed to be done.

Q. If you were away, over four weeks at a time as late as August and September of last year, or as late as September of last year, that was more than a year after you had accepted your position, wasn't it, as trustee?

A. I think so.

Q. And you do not deny that you were away on account of business, do you—other business, I mean, than a trustee? A. No.

Q. That is, you were not away on a vacation? A. No, I was not.

Q. It was because of interests outside the publishing house? A. No, not altogether; because when I went to Chicago, many times they asked me to look after different matters in connection with the Christian Science cause, which I did. We opened new offices there, engaged new offices. We consulted people in Chicago. I made trips to New York in connection with closing contracts for paper. I was away a great many times on behalf of the Publishing Society.

Q. And there were times when you went to Chicago on your personal business and never went into the office at all? A. Yes, a number of times.

Q. Of the Publishing Society? A. Yes, sir; a number of times, yes, sir.

Q. And, as a matter of fact, while there were times when you might have stepped into the publishing office in Chicago, or consulted Mr. Strawn in regard to your legal rights, in Chicago, you were nevertheless away primarily on your own business, were you not? A. Why, yes, I will say that.

Q. And there is no publishing office down in Picayune, Mississippi? A. Not of The Christian Science Publishing Society, no. They publish a paper there.

Q. Do you remember sending a telegram to the trustees in September of 1918, that your business would require you to stay in the south for at least four weeks more? A. I might have sent a telegram; I don't remember just the words of it.

Mr. Bates—Do you wish to see this record before I read it?

Mr. Whipple—What is it? I have no objection to your reading any record of the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Bates—This is a record from the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Whipple—Subject to our objection if it does not seem to be material, but we have no records which we desire to have concealed.

Mr. Streeter—You did not offer to show it to Mr. Dittmore's counsel, Governor Bates.

Mr. Bates—I was addressing you all.

Mr. Streeter—Oh, were you? Well, we have no objection.

Mr. Bates—Yes, sir.

Mr. Streeter—And we believe that all the records of all the parties here should be put into this case; we have no objection to anything in the way of official records.

Mr. Thompson—Provided it is fully put in.

Mr. Bates—This is a record of Sept. 3, 1918, of the Board of Trustees:

"A telegram from Mr. Rowlands was repeated by Mrs. Rowlands to the trustees, in which he stated that the demands of his business would probably necessitate his remaining in the south for at least four weeks more, and asking whether this arrangement would be agreeable to the trustees. The trustees wired Mr. Rowlands that they believed he should take such time as he deemed necessary for the adjustment of his affairs; that this would be satisfactory to them. They asked, however, inasmuch as he expected to be in Chicago next Saturday, whether it would be practicable for him to come to Boston for a meeting Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning, as there were a number of important questions to be disposed of."

Q. Did you send such a wire as the record states? A. Well, I must have, yes, sir.

Q. And did you come on to Boston for a day or two? A. Well, I can't remember, but I am sure I did if they asked me to come.

Q. And do you know how long you had been in the south when you sent the wire that you would have to stay there four weeks more on account of your business demands? A. I do not.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, because of these pressing matters they did send for you and you came back to Boston and were there on Oct. 1, were you not?

Mr. Whipple—There on the 26th, I guess, of September, if you will look it up, Governor.

A. Yes, I think so; the records will show.

Q. Now, on Oct. 1, having come back to Boston for these important matters which were needing attention, you again left for Chicago and the south, did you not? A. Well, I have led such an active life that I can't remember dates, but if you will let me refer—

Q. That is, you have been going so much you can't remember? A. No, not at all; I didn't say that, Governor.

Q. Well, I do not wish to put anything into your mouth that you do not intend. A. I hope you won't.

Q. But I understood you had been living an active life and going a great deal. Is that right? A. Yes, I hope that I have. I did not come down here to go to sleep.

Q. And no man could be looking after, no matter how able he was, all the interests that you were looking after, and not be a pretty active man, could he? A. He ought to be, if he lived up to his job.

Q. It would require a great deal of activity, wouldn't it? A. Yes. I don't think any more than I possess, however.

Q. Well, I am assuming that.

Mr. Whipple—No, you are trying to assume the other thing.

Mr. Bates—No; I am assuming that it does not take any more than what he thinks he possesses.

Q. Now, Mr. Rowlands, let me refresh your memory by reading this record of Oct. 1, 1918, which was a year and two months after your employment as trustee. A. Yes. Well, I accepted the position—

Q. This is the record of the trustees of Oct. 1, 1918:

"Mr. Rowlands left on the night train for Chicago via New York, and after conferring with Mr. Strawn in Chicago will continue to Picayune, where his individual business affairs will require his attention for several weeks. Under the circumstances this absence was heartily granted and approved of by the Board of Trustees."

A. Yes.

Q. These important matters that you came back for included the sending of the memorandum or statement, I assume, that the trustees sent to the Board of Directors on Sept. 30? A. Yes.

Q. Now, are you a practitioner of Christian Science? A. Why, I try to be; yes, sir. I try to practice the principles of Christian Science.

Q. If I am wrong, set me right, but doesn't that term have a certain definite meaning to Christian Scientists? A. Yes.

Q. And what does it mean? A. Why, a Christian Science practitioner is one who gives his time to Christian Science practice.

Q. And what is the Christian Science practice; what do you mean by that? Healing and treating cases? A. Yes.

Q. And you do that, do you? A. Yes.

Q. And no person except those who are healers or practitioners are allowed to have their cards in the Journal? A. I should say, yes.

Q. And you have your card in the Journal? A. Yes.

Q. And how long has it been in the Journal? A. Oh, I think about—I am not sure; I should judge eight months.

Q. Eight months? You mean— A. I am not sure.

Q. You mean the past eight months? A. Yes.

Q. And how much of the time have you given to your occupation or business as a practitioner or healer during those eight months? How many cases have you treated? A. Well, I could not tell you how many I have treated.

Q. Well, do you have regular office hours for the treatment of cases? A. No; by appointment.

Q. By appointment? A. Yes.

Q. And by appointment where? A. In Boston at 236 Huntington Avenue I have an office which I pay for myself, without any assistance from The Christian Science Publishing Society or The Mother Church.

Q. And how much time do you spend at that office? A. Well, I have spent very little since this litigation has come up, or the misunderstandings.

Q. Well, how much did you spend there before? A. Well, I used to go there, when in town, every morning—tried to be there every morning.

Q. And for how long a time? A. Well, I had no special time.

Q. Had no special time? A. No.

Q. No special office hours? A. No.

Q. And you do not remember how many cases you have treated? A. Had very few there.

Q. And could you say how many times you have been in your office—that office I refer to—as a practitioner during the last eight months, say? A. Whenever I was in the office I felt that I was there as a practitioner, if anyone called on me for help.

Q. How many times have you been in the office, then? A. I can't tell you that. I believe you can tell better than I can, you have been keeping such close track of me.

Q. Are you willing to take my testimony? A. I am willing to assume you are an honest man, but I do not take your methods as honest the way you have been operating.

Q. Were you asked that question? A. No.

Mr. Bates—Then I ask it be stricken from the record.

The Master—I think we may leave it out.

Mr. Whipple—Well, if Your Honor please, the beginning of the colloquy, which was by the Governor himself, ought to go out too.

The Master—Well, very likely it was, but I do not think it has given us very much information—additional information regarding the case.

Mr. Whipple—Quite so. But if the interchange goes out, the whole interchange should, and I quite agree that if the method of putting questions and getting answers is followed it will be an advantage to all of us.

Q. Are you familiar with Section 9 of Article XXV of the Manual, which provides as follows— A. What page is that?

Q. Page 82. A. Yes.

Q. "Members of this Church who practice other professions or pursue other vocations, shall not advertise as healers, excepting those members who are officially engaged in the work of Christian Science, and they must devote ample time for faithful practice."

A. Yes.

Q. You are familiar with that, are you? A. Yes.

Q. Then you had not only your business duties and responsibilities to attend to relating to the lumber business and these various partnerships and corporations, but you have also had the business of a healer, which the Manual requires you to give ample time to, to take up your time in addition to your duties as trustee? A. Yes.

Q. By the way, Mr. Rowlands, that copy of the letter that you pulled out of your pocket yesterday on the stand, of Mr. Dittimore's letter—how did you happen to have that copy of that letter in your pocket? A. How do you mean, Governor?

Q. Where did you get it? A. Why, I got it from Miss Farr.

Q. From whom? A. Miss Farr.

Q. Miss Farr? A. Yes. Our secretary.

Q. And when did you get it? A. The night before.

Q. And was it Judge Thompson's copy? A. Well, I didn't think it was Judge Thompson's—

Q. You did not understand why he appropriated it, then? A. Pardon me?

Q. He took it, then—you let him have it?

Mr. Thompson—Just a moment. I am flattered by the designation "Judge," but it is as erroneous as the other. I did not take this witness' copy; I took one which you took from me which I got from Mr. Dittimore.

Mr. Bates—I thought no one would speak with such assertion as you have around here unless he was a judge.

The Master—Can that be important?

Mr. Bates—No; I am willing to withdraw that, Your Honor.

Q. There was just one more question. The letter of Sept. 30, which was sent by the Board of Trustees to the Board of Directors, stated the position of the trustees in regard to what they considered the relationships of the two boards, did it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you agreed to it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one reason why you came back from Mississippi was in order that they might have your agreement to what they stated in that letter? A. Well, the substance of that letter, and the understanding of it—we had talked it over long before Sept. 30.

Q. Well, you agreed to all that was in the letter? A. Yes, sir; heartily agreed to it.

Q. And you agree to this statement that is in the letter:

"The Board of Directors elect the editor and associate editors of our weekly and monthly periodicals, the editor of our daily newspaper, and the business manager; but the trustees employ the officers and determine their salary."

Is that a correct statement? A. A correct statement in this way: we extend the courtesy to them to take that action, but when it comes to final responsibility of employing and inducting the employees into our establishment, that is our province.

Q. Then when you were construing, as you were in this paragraph, the Manual, in Section 14 of Article VIII, in regard to the duties of the two boards, and particularly in regard to the provision therein made that the editors and business manager shall be elected by the directors, you mean to say now that you put in an assent to that statement merely as a matter of courtesy and not because the Manual so provides? A. I will not say that, because at that time we had not consulted or had an opinion from our attorneys.

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment.

Mr. Bates—I think there is nothing else.

The Master—What is that, Governor Bates?

Mr. Bates—That is all.

Mr. Whipple—Is that a proper question, if Your Honor please?

The Master—I think there might be, perhaps, some doubt about it, but the witness says no, he does not accept that interpretation of the letter.

Mr. Whipple—I move that the answer be stricken out. I tried to object seasonably, because I do not think it is helpful, and I do not think we ought to have in the record—

The Master—If I strike out everything that I did not consider helpful, I might have to do a great deal of striking out.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I think Your Honor feels you must do that sometime; it is only a question of when.

The Master—It may be partly a question of interpretation.

Mr. Whipple—Very well.

The Master—Governor Bates suggested to the witness a certain interpretation which he declined to accept. I think that that might properly enough remain on the record.

Mr. Whipple—Very well. My chief objection to the question was that he was assuming something the witness had not said. The witness did not say that they extended it as a matter of courtesy.

The Master—No, he did not say so.

Mr. Whipple—It was the interpretation—

The Master—Placed upon his words, yes.

Mr. Whipple—That the election by the Board of Directors was not an election in the sense of the term that involves an installation of the person so selected in any office or position; it was more in the sense of a nomination, and that that was his construction of the Manual and the provision of the Manual when construed in connection with the Trust Deed. If it stands in that way I have no objection to the episode resting in the record as the Governor saw fit to make it. That is all, Mr. Rowlands.

Mr. Thompson—Just a moment.

Mr. Whipple—I beg your pardon.

Re-Cross-Examination on Behalf of the Defendant Dittimore

Q. (By Mr. Thompson.) Mr. Rowlands, there are one or two records which I have discovered since last night of the trustees which I want to refer to briefly. The first is April 10 and 11, 1918; also the record of May 27, 1918.

The Master—Haven't you had those in once?

Mr. Thompson—No, sir, they are not, I think.

Q. Pages 393 and 394. Just that part, Mr. Rowlands, relating to The Monitor circulation as reported to the trustees themselves. I want to get those four sets of figures in. A. April 11, 1918, the circulation?

Q. Yes, The Monitor—

Mr. Streeter—Have him read the record.

Mr. Thompson—That is what I am going to have him do, General.

Q. "Monitor circulation reported April 11 to be"—Now, if you will, just read those four sets of figures "International"? A. (Reading):

"The following report of the circulation of The Monitor according to editions was submitted and it was decided to let this arrangement continue until further notice: International, everywhere except New England, 83,000. City—New England except Boston Postal District, 6600. Last—I suppose that is the last edition—

"All adjacent towns, 3200. Star edition—that is the very last edition—"Boston, 2900." Making a total of 95,700.

Q. Now, will you turn to the records of May 27, page 444? A. Yes.

Q. Will you read that, beginning: "Met directors as arranged at trustees' request." That is May 27, 1918. A. Meeting with the directors May 27?

Q. That is it, yes. A. (Reading): "At 12 o'clock on Monday, May 27, 1918, the Board of Trustees met with The Christian Science Board of Directors as arranged at the request of the trustees, to consider a letter from the directors dated May 21, 1918, referring to Section E of Paragraph 7 of a memorandum considered jointly by the directors and trustees in February, 1916. The trustees wished to talk this subject over with the Board of Directors rather than to reply by letter, as they felt there should be a thorough understanding between the two boards relative to their relations to the work of the Christian Science movement." Farther?

Q. Yes, will you please? A. (Reading):

"The trustees stated that there never had been any record in the trustees' files in regard to the memorandum referred to, and that in considering this memorandum it was the unanimous conclusion that there was nothing in this recorded memorandum that was not already in the By-Laws of The Mother Church and in the Deed of Trust, and that it would not be right to attempt to supplement that by recorded interpretation; that the Manual was provided by Mrs. Eddy as being sufficient, and that the provisions contained therein would continue to unfold through further demonstration. The trustees assured the directors of their most hearty cooperation and support, and this was reciprocated on the part of the directors. It was finally decided that the memorandum should be destroyed."

Q. And that was Mr. Dittimore's original memorandum of February, 1916? A. Yes, sir.

Q. May 27, 1918. A. May 27.

Q. Governor Bates put to you the question yesterday about an alleged desire on the part of yourself and perhaps some of the other trustees to get rid of Mr. Dittimore from the Board of Directors. I understood you to say that you couldn't recollect ever having expressed any such desire yourself? A. I said I couldn't testify to the fact of getting rid of him.

Q. Getting him in some way separated from his position, to put it in the mildest possible form. A. Yes, I criticized him.

Q. Yes, I am not speaking of that. I want to direct your attention strictly to the question of getting him out of the Board of Directors. Now, my question is, do you know whether any of your colleagues on the Board of Trustees ever expressed to Mr. Dickey or to any other director, the idea, in substance, no matter what form of words was used, that it would be a desirable thing to separate Mr. Dittimore from the Board of Directors? A. I couldn't testify as to that.

Q. Have you any recollection of it? Isn't it very likely the fact that occasionally the trustees may have suggested to Mr. Dickey that it would be a good thing to separate Mr. Dittimore from the board?

Mr. Bates—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

Mr. Thompson—You yourself just asked the question—

Mr. Bates—No; he has already stated that he can't testify as to that.

Mr. Thompson—Well, it is very singular that I can't—

Mr. Bates—You asked him what may very likely have been the fact; you are not asking him as to his knowledge.

Mr. Thompson—It seems very singular, when you pressed him on the same thing yesterday, that you should now object to my asking him that question.

Mr. Bates—I object to the form of the question.

Mr. Thompson—I put the question simply for this reason: I am not interested in obtaining a partial view of the facts here. If it is a fact that in the course of these controversies, Mr. Eustace, or Mr. Ogden, or even Mr. Rowlands, expressed to Mr. Dickey the idea that it would be a good thing to get Mr. Dittimore out of the board, that does not carry with it the implication that it would be a good thing to do it in a tricky or unfair or deceptive way. They had the right to their opinions. But it would have a marked bearing on the attitude of Mr. Dickey later if that was the fact, if these gentlemen thought that it would be a good thing to get Mr. Dittimore out of the board; and if that is the fact I would like to hear him say so.

Mr. Bates—Will Your Honor have the question read?

The Master—Yes. Read the question.

[The question is read by the reporter.]

I think that he may state whether there were or not, to his knowledge, any such expressions by his co-trustees to Mr. Dickey.

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir.

The Master—State it. Were there or not?

Mr. Bates—I do not object to that.

A. I couldn't testify to that. We might have held opinions, but whether we expressed them one way or the other I couldn't testify.

Q. Now, Governor Bates asked you whether you didn't at one time decline to give Mr. Dittimore certain information that he asked for. I want to ask whether the information that he asked for was not certain facts about the circulation of the Christian Science publications? A. Yes, and other information, I think, general information.

Q. Relating to the business affairs of the Publishing Society? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And didn't he state in substance that he thought that it was his duty as a director, whatever you might have thought, to get that information? A. Yes.

Q. You didn't agree with him? A. I didn't agree that I should give it to him, from that standpoint, but I told him that if he asked for it from the standpoint of the Board of Directors, it would be forthcoming; but I thought that the boards should work together harmoniously rather than that individuals should pass information from one to the other, because I was afraid, that, sooner or later, it would lead to misunderstanding.

Q. Didn't he explain to you at that time that he had tried to get it through his board, but had failed to do so? Isn't that the fact? A. Well, I can't remember just that. I know he made some remarks about not being able to get information, but I can't remember whether he said it was from the board or from the trustees.

Q. Well, at any rate, he conveyed to you the idea that he was coming to you as a last resort, because he failed elsewhere, to get the information—isn't that the substance of it? A. No; I didn't understand it that way.

Q. He did convey to you the idea that he had tried, before he came to you, to get it from other sources, and that he had failed? A. As I understand it, he seemed to think that it was hard to get information, but I didn't understand it fully.

Q. I won't press you further on that. Now, there is one other subject that has been called to my attention that I should have questioned you about before. You have spoken of the time when the trustees found it necessary to formulate definitely their position in regard to this Trust Deed and the relation between these two boards. Did these trustees, before taking a definite stand on that, and putting it in writing, as they did, consult with any other Christian Scientists not connected with the Board of Directors, not members of the Board of Trustees or of the Board of Directors? I won't ask you who they were, but just the fact. A. Will you state your question again, please?

Q. Did the trustees, before putting their position in definite form, as it has been put in one of these letters that have been put in, concerning the relations of these two boards—the position that has been maintained throughout this case by the witnesses and by Mr. Whipple—did they, before taking that definite position, take any advice from other Christian Scientists outside of these two boards, confer with them, to see whether they would justify that position, or see what they would say about the matter? A. Why, we might as individuals have said something to, probably, our wives, or some very intimate friends; but very little was said to anyone.

Q. Wasn't Mr. Dixon consulted about it before you took the definite and final stand that you did take? A. I couldn't testify as to that, because we tried to keep Mr. Dixon out of this as much as possible in every way.

Q. He seemed to have got into it pretty prominently later as a representative of these directors in this contention, didn't he? A. I couldn't say.

Q. About Mr. McKenzie, didn't you take the matter up with Mr. McKenzie and get his views on the subject? A. Mr. McKenzie was a former—

The Master—Supposing you answer that question, Mr. Witness? Did you or did you not consult with Mr. McKenzie?

The Witness—Not from the standpoint of consulting. I wouldn't say that we consulted with him; but he knew something of the conditions.

Q. I won't stand on mere words, but didn't you take the pains to ascertain his views? A. Yes.

Q. And the same way with Mr. Watts; naturally, his views were ascertained on this matter? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Dixon and Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Watts agreed with the position taken by the trustees, did they not? A. We didn't ask them for their approval.

Q. I know you didn't. A. And no agreement of any kind—no, sir.

Q. That was an unfortunate word that I used. As a matter of fact, their views coincided with the views of the trustees? A. No, I am not sure of that. They never gave me that understanding.

Q. Did you consult with Mr. Thomas W. Hatten? A. We asked Mr. Hatten, I think, to make a statement of his position as he understood it.

Q. And it coincided with yours? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Bicknell Young also? A. As trustees, no. I think that Mr. Eustace talked with him at one time.

Q. And his views coincided with yours? A. No; I couldn't say as to that.

Q. I am asked, Mr. Rowlands, to trouble you a little further about this. It seems that on all these matters there are records, and I am sorry to take the time to go into them, but perhaps it will not take very much time. In the records of the Board of Trustees, the record of Sept. 30, 1918, page 609, I think it refers to Mr. Dixon, Mr. McKenzie, and Mr. Watts. Perhaps that may refresh your recollection (passing the volume of records to the witness). Doesn't that say something about consulting these men? Perhaps the quickest way, Mr. Rowlands, will be for me to ask you to read this paragraph from the record of Sept. 30, 1918. A. Very good.

"Sept. 30, 1918.

"The meeting of the Board of Trustees convened Monday, Sept. 30, 1918, at 10 a. m., with Messrs. Eustace, Rowlands, and Ogden present.

"The meeting opened with the usual prayer.

"The trustees spent the morning session considering the draft of a letter to The Christian Science Board of Directors, reaffirming and amplifying the statements made to the directors relative to the Deed of Trust at the time of their conference Sept. 11.

"After drawing up the first copies of this letter, it was given to Mr. McKenzie, the editor of the Journal and Sentinel, who was one of our Leader's original appointees on the Board of Trustees and who served for 19 years on that board. A copy was also given to Mr. Dixon, the editor of The Monitor, and to Mr. Watts, the business manager, so that each of these officers were fully conversant with the text of the letter. Each assented to and approved of the contents."

Q. Now, on page 616, there is a little paragraph there. Will you read the paragraph that I am now pointing out from the record of the meeting of Oct. 2, 1918? A. "The trustees consider the statement made by Mr. McKenzie, one of the original publishing committee appointed by Mrs. Eddy, a former first member and a member of the Board of Trustees from the time of the institution of the Deed of Trust for 19 years following, to be of great value for historic purposes, and they expressed their gratitude and appreciation to Mr. McKenzie for telling us these incidents, that they might be made a part of the trustees' record."

Q. Does that refer to this attitude that was taken? A. It must have.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Thompson, there is something more in the records that you have not got yet.

Mr. Thompson—This is the page, General, that I have been referred to.

Q. That information that Mr. McKenzie furnished, referred to in the paragraph of the record of Oct. 2, 1918, that you have just read, was information tending to support the position taken by you with the directors, was it not? A. As I remember it, yes, sir.

Q. Now, the next is page 643, the record of Oct. 24. Perhaps I can look it through and pick out what I want. In the record of Oct. 24, 1918, page 643, will you kindly read the paragraph marked with a check-mark there, beginning with "Mr. Watts came to the meeting"? A. "Mr. Watts came to the meeting and the trustees discussed with him a private letter written by Mr. Eustace to Mr. Rowlands regarding the Deed of Trust. Later Mr. Dixon came to the meeting and the letter was discussed with him. It was agreed by all that it covered the points well."

Q. That was a letter affirming the position that is now maintained by the trustees, was it not? A. I think it was.

Q. Yes. Now will you turn to page 665, a meeting of Nov. 14? Perhaps if you will let me take the records half a minute I can find what I want read (taking the records). Will you just read the single sentence at the bottom, under the heading "Judge Hughes"? This is the meeting of Nov. 14, 1918. A. "The trustees told Mr. Dixon of their conference with Judge Hughes."

Q. Now will you turn to page 673, Nov. 22? A. Yes.

Q. Will you be kind enough to read the paragraph opposite the words "Mr. Hatten," beginning, "Mr. Hatten came to the meeting"? A. "Mr. Hatten came to the meeting to pay his respects, and conversation was had with him relative to the Deed of Trust, and inasmuch as Mr. Hatten had served long and faithfully on the Board of Trustees, the recent stand of the trustees, expressed in their letter of Sept. 30 to the Board of Directors, was read to him and he emphasized his gratification and approval."

Q. Now, page 719, if you please. Will you be kind enough to read—this is the meeting of Jan. 6, 1919—the paragraph opposite the name of Mr. Young? A. The whole paragraph?

Q. Yes.

A. "Mr. Eustace reported a conference that he had had with Mr. Young at Mr. Young's request, last evening, at Mr. Young's home, at which time he thoroughly reviewed to Mr. Young the whole situation relative to the Deed of Trust and the Board of Directors. At the conclusion of their visit, at 3:30 a. m., Mr. Young expressed himself as heartily approving the course which had been taken by the Board of Trustees."

Mr. Whipple—Three-thirty a. m.?

The Witness—Yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson—Most of this was done in the early hours of the morning. Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Q. Page 723 next. Now, if you will be kind enough to read the paragraph opposite the name of Mr. McKenzie, beginning with "In response."

A. "In response to an inquiry, Mr. McKenzie admitted that he had received a letter from the Board of Directors, evidently similar to that received by the business manager. He stated that he did not wish to discuss it, and that he was working the question out and had made no reply. The trustees then talked with Mr. McKenzie and told him of the recent developments in connection with the Deed of Trust, and he was wholly in accord with the position taken by the trustees."

Q. And now the last one, page 786. Now, will you read this memorandum marked with a cross there, opposite the words "Mr. McKenzie"?

A. "Mr. McKenzie came to the meeting and general questions relative to the editorial work were discussed. In the course of conversation Mr. McKenzie brought up the question of his desire to enter a protest against an action taken by the Board of Directors of The Mother Church three years ago in recording the directors' memorandum which was under consideration and had been rejected. Mr. McKenzie stated that in one of his recent conferences with the Board of Directors they had read to him the minutes of a meeting held in 1916 in which the Board of Directors had included the contents of a memorandum which had been presented to the trustees, and which, as Mr. McKenzie stated, had been rejected by the trustees, and it had been agreed by Mr. Dickey, Mr. Dittmore, and Mr. Neal, as the members of the Board of Directors present, and Mr. McKenzie, Mr. Hatten, and Mr. Eustace as members of the Board of Trustees of the Publishing Society, that everything in connection with the memorandum should be in substance wiped out, and that we would all work together as Christian Scientists under the spirit of the Manual and the Deed of Trust. This was unanimously agreed to by the six present, and as Mr. McKenzie said, it was an absolute breach of confidence, to say nothing of its being untrue, to have the memorandum recorded in the minutes of the Board of Directors when it had in substance been settled to consider it torn up."

Q. Now, you afterwards learned that so far as Mr. Dittmore was concerned Mr. McKenzie was in error there reporting that Mr. Dittmore had ever agreed to have this memorandum wiped out, didn't you? A. Well, from this statement.

Q. That statement is that Mr. Dittmore joined with Mr. Dickey in agreeing to have this memorandum wiped out. You afterwards learned that Mr. Dittmore was insisting on that memorandum and that Mr. McKenzie was in error in reporting to you that Mr. Dittmore had joined with Mr. Dickey in agreeing to have his own memorandum wiped out? A. My understanding was that at that time they all agreed to have it wiped out.

Q. That understanding came wholly from Mr. McKenzie, didn't it, in that report? A. All I know is tradition and history, and I have always been told that at that meeting—

Q. Excuse me; never mind what you have been told. But your understanding was founded upon that original report made by Mr. McKenzie, wasn't it?

Mr. Bates—It is not his memorandum.

The Witness—That is before my time; I cannot testify.

Q. Very good. At any rate, you became thoroughly satisfied when your own knowledge of Mr. Dittmore's attitude began here after your election to the Board of Trustees, that Mr. Dittmore was consistently maintaining the position taken in his original memorandum of 1916, did you not? I think you have so testified. A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson—That is all.

Redirect Examination

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) I will just put a single question for fear you might feel slighted. In your administration of the trust have you had anything to do with the purchase of supplies and the conduct of this very large business? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson—I do not quite hear.

Mr. Whipple—He says he has had to do with the purchasing of supplies for the conduct of this very large business.

Q. And have you been consulted and given your opinion and aid in the matter of business transactions? A. Yes.

Q. Of major importance? A. Yes.

Q. That is, by the business manager? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever failed—

Mr. Bates—These are questions you forgot, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—No, I don't think I forgot them except so far as my memory was stimulated by your cross-examination.

Mr. Bates—If you forgot them—

Mr. Whipple—I thought there were these two or three small points in our interest that your cross-examination had failed to develop and I wanted therefore to develop it myself. You didn't overlook much in our favor.

Mr. Bates—If you forgot it I am willing you should put it in, although it is irregular.

Mr. Whipple—No, I couldn't say that I had forgotten it, I think it is a matter of redirect properly.

Q. Did you ever fail to give your advice and helpful services when called upon in those business matters? A. Never.

Q. And they were business matters of major importance? A. Some of them, yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—That is all.

Mr. Bates—No questions.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Watts—

Mr. Dane—Mr. Whipple, will you pardon me one moment? I want to bring to the attention of the Court an important matter, and it is this. Counsel for Mr. Dittmore have requested us to arrange so that they might take the deposition of John W. Doorly, who is now the president of The Mother Church, because they wanted his testimony in the case of Dittmore v. Dickey. Mr. Doorly has engaged his passage to England, where he resides, and is scheduled to sail—at least I mean to leave Boston—on Monday. In view of the fact that it is likely that the hearings will be adjourned today until Monday, it seems desirable, if counsel for Mr. Dittmore desire to use Mr. Doorly, that they should do it at this time, and I ask Mr. Whipple to extend to Mr. Doorly the courtesy of allowing his testimony to go in in this irregular way, so that he may not be kept here and lose his passage that he has engaged to England, which is of first importance to him.

Mr. Whipple—I should be very glad, if Your Honor please, to extend every courtesy to Mr. Doorly, but we all of us have our duties to the administration of justice in this cause. Mr. Doorly is not a witness in our case at all. We have not thought of calling him and it would very much interrupt the proper procedure, as I think, in our case, to have it suspended for the purpose of taking his evidence as a deposition, and it is practically that. I should be very sorry to interrupt any further the procedure of our case. Your Honor will remember that it was—

The Master—One moment, Mr. Whipple. I don't quite understand your proposition. When do you want to take his deposition?

Mr. Dane—He is here in court, Your Honor; we will take his testimony.

The Master—All right. Then your suggestion is that you want to call him now and examine him as a witness here?

Mr. Dane—I understand Mr. Dittmore's counsel want to use him, and if they want his testimony I thought that this would be the only opportunity they would have to get it, if Mr. Whipple would be willing.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I am very, very sorry—

Mr. Dane—I don't think it is very long.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I of course know nothing about it, but I cannot have Mr. Doorly's testimony injected into our case. I feel very strongly about it.

The Master—If his testimony is to be taken in the other case it will I suppose at some time or other get into the record.

Mr. Whipple—But not of our case, if your Honor please.

The Master—It won't appear that you have examined him as a witness. That will be clear on the record.

Mr. Whipple—Yes; but—

The Master—At some time or other we have got to take it.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, your Honor.

The Master—Now, if the man is anxious to sail for England on Monday it would seem that we ought to do all we can properly to accommodate him.

Mr. Whipple—But my point is this, if Your Honor please. We have no interest in that, and we understand that we have the right to go on and finish our case, and then counsel for the trustees will not be obliged to sit by and hear the evidence in the other case. We are not parties to it. We are not interested in it at all. If we can get our own case heard, then the evidence which has been taken in this case that bears upon the other will fit into it, but we may be dismissed from further attendance.

Mr. Streeter. I think I can relieve you, Mr. Whipple, on that question.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, good!

Mr. Streeter—I want to ask you, Mr. Dane, if you propose to put John Doorly on the stand yourself?

Mr. Dane—Mr. Doorly is here at your suggestion.

Mr. Streeter—That is not the question I am asking you. Do you propose to put John Doorly on the stand yourself?

Mr. Dane—I think Mr. Doorly has testimony that we will want in the case of Dittmore v. Dickey.

Mr. Streeter—Do you propose to put him on the stand?

Mr. Dane—If you do not take his testimony we shall.

Mr. Streeter—Well, then, that will dispose of the whole situation.

Mr. Dane—It will if Mr. Whipple will consent to it.

Mr. Streeter—It will dispose of the whole situation. I will explain that to you. In going over this preparation we found letters, there were laid before me letters, from John W. Doorly, the recently elected president or appointed president by the directors, most severely criticizing in a specific way the action of these directors and also of the trustees. Now, when I saw them I said we wanted Mr. Doorly's testimony; and, knowing that he was going away, or going to sail, I sat down in Concord and wrote a letter to my friend Whipple and my friend Governor Bates, and I was perhaps incautious enough, or too innocent, to refrain from telling them just what I wanted. I quoted in the letter to them from Mr. Doorly's letters, where he pounded away at the directors, who had just appointed him, and also at the trustees. My friends, Mr. Whipple and Governor Bates, have that, and they knew that we wanted the testimony of the president of The Christian Science Church, who had put himself in writing so vigorously against the directors and the trustees. I asked them if they would arrange to take his deposition. Mr. Dittmore wrote to Mr. Doorly, who was west, telling him just what we wanted him for, we wanted the facts in those letters, and telling him that we wanted to take his deposition. A copy of that letter I sent to Governor Bates and Mr. Whipple, so they knew all about what he wanted. We had a telegram from Mr.

Doorly saying that he would be here in Boston for two or three days, I believe, and we supposed that the president of this Christian Science Church, recently appointed by the directors, would come and see us.

After we got his telegram we saw him in court here yesterday—I think it was yesterday—and he informed us, or informed Mr. Dittmore, that anything that he did would be done through Mr. Abbott, his counsel. I am perfectly free to say that we do not propose to put on the stand your witness, and as you say you are going to put him on we will wait and cross-examine the gentleman. So I do not see that you need to be troubled, Mr. Whipple; they are going to put him on and they can arrange with you when.

Mr. Dane—Of course all I ask is a courtesy from Mr. Whipple. I realize that he has a right to proceed with his case. This is unusual and irregular; it rests in Your Honor's discretion as to whether the accommodation shall be extended to Mr. Doorly or not. I had assumed, and I assume from what General Streeter has just said, that he would desire to use Mr. Doorly as his witness, but if he does not, I offer to call him now.

Mr. Streeter—Now, you know better than that, Mr. Dane.

The Master—Well, it is settled now that he does not.

Mr. Dane—I desire to offer him, to put him on the stand, and get his testimony at this time, and I ask Mr. Whipple to waive his objection.

The Master—I do not see how I can interrupt the order of the case to do that against objection. I think it might be properly enough done by consent of counsel, but I should not feel justified in making that order against objection.

Mr. Dane—Do I understand that Mr. Whipple now objects to our putting Mr. Doorly on the stand and taking his testimony at this time, in view of the representations that have been made as to Mr. Doorly's necessity for sailing on Monday?

Mr. Streeter—I ought to say, in reply to that, that I understood Mr. Doorly to have represented that he should not sail for two or three weeks, although he had arranged to sail, I think, on the 8th.

Mr. Dane—I think he is sailing on the 8th, but under certain regulations he must be in New York a certain number of days before sailing. You realize, of course, in these days it is very difficult to get passage, and many obstacles are thrown in the way that ordinarily are not encountered.

Mr. Whipple—Has he tried to get a later passage?

Mr. Dane—I do not know.

Mr. Streeter—So far as we are concerned, we are entirely indifferent so long as you put Mr. Doorly on the stand as your witness.

Mr. Dane—That is what I offer to do now. Of course we cannot agree to hold Mr. Doorly. He is here now, and we want to get his testimony. It seems to us, Your Honor, that, the cases being tried together, the situation is somewhat different.

Mr. Whipple—You will pardon me a moment, I desire to put on a short witness, and we shall then close our case. I would like to do it today. Then if you want to call Mr. Doorly as your first witness you will be at liberty to do it; you can do that before you make your opening. The next witness I can examine in 15 minutes, I think, or 20 at the outside.

Mr. Dane—So that there is a reasonable assurance that you will close your case in time for Mr. Doorly's testimony to go in today?

Mr. Whipple—Unless we should be betrayed into an extraordinarily long examination.

Mr. Dane—I understand that you agree that his testimony may be put in advance of the opening?

Mr. Whipple—Oh, yes.

Mr. Dane—I think that is satisfactory.

John R. Watts Sworn

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Mr. Watts, will you state your full name? A. John R. Watts.

Q. Where do you live? A. 339 Clark Road, Brookline.

Q. What is your occupation or profession? A. I am at present business manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. How long have you held that position? A. Since Aug. 1, 1917.

Q. You came in then as business manager at just about the time that two of the trustees were elected to that position? A. At the same time.

Q. Had you been connected with the Christian Science organizations, or any of them, before that? A. I had been connected with the Publishing Society.

Q. In what position? A. As assistant to the business manager.

Q. For how long? A. I have been there six years this month.

Q. You are a lawyer by education and profession? A. I am, sir.

Q. And a member of this bar, of Massachusetts? A. I am.

Q. When were you admitted to the bar? A. In 1897.

Q. Where were you educated for your admission to the bar? A. At Louisville, Kentucky.

Q. Did you graduate at any institution or just study and get your admission? A. I graduated at one of the colleges, the Louisville Law School.

Q. Did you practice outside of Massachusetts before you came here? A. I practiced in New York City.

Q. And then you removed to Boston? A. Then I came to Boston.

Q. And were admitted to the bar here? A. Yes.

Q. Did you practice at the bar here before being affiliated with Christian Science work? A. No.

Q. You have then been a resident of Boston for about— A. Six years.

Q. Six years. A. Yes.

Q. What are your duties as business manager? A. As the title implies, to manage the business.

Q. That is, of The Christian Science Publishing Society? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think that has perhaps been sufficiently explained, but, in general, it is the publication of a daily newspaper and various periodicals and the publication of the works of Mrs. Eddy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that cover the thing in a general way? A. I think it does.

Q. Are you a loyal believer in Christian Science? A. I am.

Q. Are you a practitioner? A. I am.

Q. And have been for how many years? A. I have been a practitioner for, I should say, five or six years, but I have only been in the Journal as a practitioner a shorter period of time.

Q. You are a member of The Mother Church? A. I am.

Q. Were you a member of branch churches or a branch church before that? A. I was a member of First Church of Christ, Scientist, at Brooklyn.

Q. Has your administration of your office as business manager brought you into contact with the directors from time to time? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know them all as individuals? A. I do.

Q. And of course you were employed by and are under the Board of Trustees? A. I am.

Q. Let me ask you first, and perhaps as a preliminary question, whether Mr. Rowlands has participated at all in the administration of the business of the Publishing Society? A. Very actively, yes.

Q. Can you state anything if there is anything, notable in what he has done, to His Honor, as a specific instance or instances of what he has done? A. I think his larger viewpoint and his larger experience have been very helpful to us in some of our larger transactions.

Mr. Thompson—If you could speak a little louder. It is pretty difficult to hear from here.

The Witness—I will try to, Mr. Thompson.

Q. Have you anything particularly notable that you have in mind? A. One of the things that stands out to me is the assistance that he gave us in connection with our paper contract.

Q. Will you tell His Honor about that? A. We were disturbed somewhat over the shortage during the so-called white paper or print paper famine, as to whether we could get paper to print our Monitor. We at times were quite low on that paper; and when the time came to make a new contract for the coming year, the purchasing department was unable to get any bid or help from the International or the other companies. I took up the situation, as business manager, with the trustees, and particularly with Mr. Rowlands, and through his assistance we not only secured a contract, but a contract which, when we were finally ready to close it, instead of being an advance that we had thought we should have to pay, it netted us a saving of practically $41,000 for that year.

Q. Did you attribute to his assistance that financial result? A. It was all due to Mr. Rowlands' assistance.

Q. I take it from what you say he took the leadership in the negotiation as soon as it was put up to him? A. He took almost the entire responsibility.

Q. I will ask you whether that is illustrative of other assistance which he has rendered to you—

Mr. Bates—I object.

Q.—especially in financial administration, but with less important financial results?

Mr. Bates—I object to the question.

The Master—Will you read me the question? I lost the question.

[The question is read by the stenographer.]

The Master—I am afraid if it is objected to you will have to ask directly as to other instances.

Q. Well, I will ask whether there are other similar instances? A. Not that stand out as clearly as that.

Q. But has he rendered assistance in other matters? A. In a great many instances. For instance, as he stated on the stand, with relation to the mailing room. Mr. Rowlands was able to take up the question of the mailing room, the mailing machines, and he took the responsibility for cleaning up the mailing room and putting it in shape, such a condition as the mailing room has never been in in the experience of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

Q. And was that question an important one in the administration of the work? A. It was very important.

Q. He spoke of his assistance mentally. Was it a situation where the straightening out of the mental condition of the people who were employed was important? A. There was in the mailing room a great deal of confusion due to the change of mailing machines. The old style of machine would not permit of our catching trains with a morning edition of the paper, and in the introduction of the new machines, with the confusion due to green and new help brought about by the war conditions, the state of mind of the mailing room was one of very great confusion, and many times the employees would get out of temper and indicate it in many ways; and Mr. Rowlands was there, and I think he had about 16 hours' sleep out of that week; he was there day and night keeping the conditions right, and when a man was operating a machine and the papers would go through and all go wrong, he would give the man a word of encouragement, and in order to do that he put on an apron so as not to attract special attention to himself, and worked about the room.

Q. And worked with the men? A. Worked with the men.

Q. Showing them an example of leadership? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember other instances in which he has exercised a similar helpfulness? A. He was very helpful to us in getting the mailing machines. He was very helpful to us when we had a question between the Associated Press and the United Press, and we could not get the Associated Press service, in order to handle the morning paper; and it was through Mr. Rowlands' instrumentality that in a day we secured not only the United Press arrangement, but we had the wires all in, the machines in, the operators there, and the service in operation that night.

Q. Was that an acquisition of importance to your daily paper? A. It was, one might say, of almost vital importance.

Q. What have you observed with regard to his administrative and executive capacity in dealing with matters of large affairs, whether he is a slow-minded or active, quick mind? A. He is active.

Q. Does he deal with large affairs easily or with difficulty? A. Very easily.

Q. Do you notice a difference in men in the way in which they deal with large problems? A. I have, indeed.

Q. Both in the manner in which and in the capacity they have to deal with them? A. Yes.

Q. Is he a man who has capacity, within your observation, to deal with administrative questions of major importance? A. Yes.

Q. In a man dealing with large affairs, and in that way, is the question of the time that he spends at it, so far as you can observe, of very much consequence?

Mr. Bates—I object.

Mr. Whipple—You do object to that?

Mr. Bates—Isn't that for the Court?

Mr. Whipple—Why, I thought you would get a sort of fundamental education by the reply.

Mr. Bates—Well, don't bother to educate me, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I have been hopeful before—

Mr. Bates—Give it up.

Mr. Whipple—But if you get in that state of mind I don't believe I can do a thing and I give up hope. I will waive the question. I guess you are impossible, and I am sorry, because you know I think so much of you, I thought I would give you a conception of big affairs.

Mr. Bates—Yes, I know you do; I appreciate those kind words.

Mr. Whipple—I thought the way to deal with big things would be really helpful to you, but I won't press it.

Q. Have you had interviews with the directors, or some of them, since these matters of controversy have arisen, with reference to the matters involved? A. Yes.

Q. Now, take for illustration this Harvey letter. You received that from Mr. Harvey? A. Yes.

Q. It is a letter addressed to you? Mr. Bates—Mr. Whipple, I can't quite hear you.

Mr. Whipple—The Harvey letter.

Q. I won't read the exhibit, but you bear it in mind? A. I do.

Q. That was addressed to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why? A. Mr. Harvey was the representative of The Christian Science Publishing Society in charge of the New York office, under the business manager.

Q. Then he was under you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And therefore it would naturally come to you? A. Come to me.

Q. As his administrative superior. What did you do with that letter after it had been transcribed and signed? A. I asked the Board of Trustees for a meeting, and I presented that letter to them, and asked them if I might have the privilege of taking it over to the Board of Directors, and, from the standpoint of business manager, as well as from their standpoint as trustees, asking the Board of Directors to repudiate that letter—the information that had been given as indicated in that letter.

Q. Did you do it? A. I did.

Q. Thereafter did they, or any of them, at any time repudiate the letter? A. No, sir.

Q. In any form. You received a copy of a letter—which Mr. Dittmore had sent, which is in evidence? A. Yes, sir. I went through the letter, Mr. Whipple, reading it to them, calling their attention to its untrue statements.

Mr. Thompson—What is that, please? Mr. Whipple—To the untrue statements.

Mr. Thompson—In whose letter?

Q. This is in the letter which you received? A. Mr. Harvey handed to me.

Q. Yes, the Harvey letter. It wasn't untruths that had been stated by Mr. Harvey? A. No; untruths that were reported to have been spread in New York.

Q. That is, the want of foundation in the statements that had been made in New York, and you pointed those out? A. I did, sir.

Q. And did you later have conferences with the directors or a conference, as the situation grew more acute, with reference to what intentions or purposes the Board of Directors had with regard to the Publishing Society? That is, the trustees did not submit to the proposals of the directors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us what was said on that occasion? A. They asked me to come over, Jan. 27, to attend a meeting. Mr. Merritt said to me that the Board of Directors wished to know where the business manager stood on this controversy between the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Whipple—Can Your Honor hear?

The Master—I will let you know—I think I can.

Mr. Whipple—I notice the stand is a little back too far; I think it would be a little easier, perhaps, for His Honor to hear if you would sit nearer.

[The position of the witness stand is changed.]

Q. Which one of the directors asked you where you stood? A. Mr. Merritt.

The Master—What was the name?

The Witness—Mr. Merritt.

Q. Now, will you give the conversation that followed, as you remember it? A. I said to Mr. Merritt that I stood, to the best of my understanding with Principle, and that I could not express myself as standing either with the Board of Trustees or the Board of Directors. And Mr. Merritt said, "Well, we hear that you are with the Board of Trustees—that you are in consultation with them." And he said, "Are you the attorney for the Board of Trustees?" And I said, "No, Mr. Merritt, they have better counsel than I am." And he said, "Well, we should like to know where you stand." He said, "We have had Mr. McKenzie over here and he has given us a letter showing that he stands with the Board of Directors, and Mr. Young has written us a letter to the same effect." He said, "I would like to read you Mr. McKenzie's letter." And he said, "Now we would like to have a letter from you, Mr. Watts." And I said, "I am not much of a hand at letter writing, and I would rather not write a letter. I think you understand that I have expressed all that I can express when I say that I am standing squarely with Principle." And some of them said, "Well, Mr. Watts, if we should send an order over to the Board of Trustees declaring a vacancy, and give you such a notice, would you obey our order?" And I said, "I should have to first ask you on what basis the vacancy had been declared." Mr. Dittmore said, "What right, Mr. Watts, have you to question any order from this board?" And I said, "Simply the right of a thinking man." Mr. Dittmore said, "Mr. Watts, if the trustees persist, don't you know that the movement"—no—"where do you think the movement will stand on this thing?" And I said to them, "On the go-off I assume the entire movement will be with the Board of Directors." I think Mr. Dickey said, "Mr. Watts, don't you know we own that building over there and can put those gentlemen out?" I said, "I understand you own the building." Mr. Dittmore said, "Mr. Watts, the movement will not stand by the trustees even if they win their suit, and the Church will start its own publications, and we shall make an empty shell of that place if they persist." I said, "Mr. Dittmore, if, through pride of power and human will, the time ever comes that that splendid business is made an empty shell of and the movement awakens to a realization of the fact that the Publishing Society, which was founded by our Leader, and the periodicals which were founded by our Leader, are destroyed, they will rise up and destroy you." Mr. Rathvon said, "Well, Mr. Watts, what can we do?" I said, "Stop writing peremptory orders and letters to the Board of Trustees." I said, "Is there anything wrong with the business?"—and they indicated—I don't know that any word was said, yes or no, but they indicated that nothing was wrong with the business. I said: "May I be so bold as to read to you gentlemen my idea of this situation? May I read the Bible to you?" And they said, "Yes," and I turned to the twelfth chapter of First Corinthians and read the entire chapter, and several verses in the thirteenth chapter.

The Master—What book is that?

The Witness—The Bible—First Corinthians, twelfth chapter.

Mr. Whipple—And part of the thirteenth chapter.

The Witness—And as I finished that, Mr. Rathvon said, "Well, Mr. Watts, but supposing the eye should try to take over the duties and responsibilities of the ear—what would happen?" And I said, "Inasmuch as it is not the province of the eye to hear, it not only would not hear, but it probably would lose its sense of sight in the transaction." And as far as I recall, that was practically all. I said, "Well, we are all friends and God reigns," and I excused myself. Oh, yes, Mr. Merritt said, "Well, will you write us a letter?" And I said, "Yes, I will write a letter." And I wrote them a letter on Jan. 28.

Mr. Whipple (to Mr. Bates)—Have you that letter of Jan. 28?

The Witness—I have it.

Mr. Whipple—You have a copy?

The Witness—A copy only.

Mr. Whipple—I take it you have the original, Governor?

[A letter is produced by Mr. Bates.]

The Witness—I have a copy of the letter, sir.

Mr. Whipple—The letter, if Your Honor please, which I will now offer, is dated Jan. 28, 1919. It is stamped, "Read, Jan. 28, 1919, C. S. Board of Directors." It is from the office of the business manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

[Copy of Exhibit 89]

"Jan. 28, 1919.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Falmouth and St. Paul Streets,

"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"At the meeting of your board yesterday, which I was requested to attend, the differences between your board and the Board of Trustees were referred to, and I was requested by your board to state definitely whether I was 'with the Board of Directors or with the Board of Trustees,' and, in the event of an order issuing from your board to me advising me that you had declared a vacancy in the Board of Trustees, whether I would comply with orders from your board relative to such declaration of vacancy.

"Being somewhat advised as to the questions at issue between the two boards, and deploring the situation because of its effect on the business of the Publishing Society, I can but urge, in view of the absolute honesty of purpose expressed by both boards in their loyalty to the Manual and The Mother Church, what I believe would be the prayer of every loyal Christian Scientist—that such a controversy be kept out of the courts, and be settled by both boards from the standpoint of demonstration as Christian Science practitioners and teachers, and as loyal members of The Mother Church.

"In the event the two boards are unable to make this demonstration, I should feel it my duty to the office of business manager to refuse to pledge in advance my loyalty to either board. This, as you know, I have consistently refused to do. I recognize that the Board of Directors is charged with the responsibility of government in full charge of the affairs of The Mother Church, but I recognize, also, that the Board of Trustees has its responsibilities under the Manual and the Deed of Trust, both of which must be used to a proper ascertainment of the responsibilities of both boards, and neither of which can be ignored. I refuse to believe that the two instruments given by our Leader are irreconcilable.

"The office which I hold makes it my duty to protect the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and inasmuch as the differences between the two boards necessarily affect this business, possibly to its injury, I feel it my duty to decline to state in advance what, if anything, I should do in the event your board should declare a vacancy.

"With cordial good wishes,

"Very sincerely yours,

(Signed) "JOHN R. WATTS,
"Business Manager."

[An original letter, dated Jan. 28, 1919, signed "John R. Watts, Business Manager," addressed to The Christian Science Board of Directors, is marked Exhibit 89.]

Q. Mr. Watts, you have used the term, or you have used the expression, in quoting your conversation with the directors, that you stood by Principle or stood upon Principle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understand that that term in Christian Science is used somewhat differently from the ordinary current meaning of the word? A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain to His Honor

what is meant by "Principle" used as you used it, and perhaps used as Mrs. Eddy used it? A. I shall endeavor to do it. The word "Principle," as used by a Christian Scientist, is synonymous with God.

Q. And that practically is the definition of it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You used the term in this letter "demonstration" in this connection—"and be settled by both boards from the standpoint of demonstration as Christian Science practitioners and teachers, and as loyal members of The Mother Church." That term has been used in the testimony but I do not think that an explicit statement has been made of just what it means among Christian Science followers and believers. Will you state that? A. Why, demonstration—one hesitates to make a statement in connection with that.

Mr. Streeter—I can't quite hear you.

The Witness—I say one naturally hesitates to make any statement in connection with words in Christian Science because our Leader has so aptly and well covered everything of that nature in her works, but "demonstration" with Christian Scientists is one of the most important phases of Christian Science in that we take the position that words are of no avail unless your words are subject to demonstration or proof of what you are doing. In other words, a demonstration in connection with a healing is the man getting well.

Q. In a certain measure, judging by the results and by the fruits? A. By the fruits.

Q. And when you speak there of its being settled by demonstration it means that they should get together and do it? A. It means not only to get together and do it but not to depend upon material means and measures any more than you would in a sick case depend upon material medicines or remedies or things of that sort.

Mr. Whipple—Of course the Court takes judicial notice of the contents of the Bible?

The Master—We have agreed to that, I think.

Mr. Whipple—And I therefore do not need to make it a part of the record unless some one asks to have it read.

The Master—You might hand it to me if you have got it there.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor. Chapter xii.

The Master—These verses that I see marked here are the ones that the witness says he read, are they?

The Witness—No, I read the entire chapter.

Mr. Whipple—He read the entire Chapter xii and the first part of Chapter xiii. Those marks were put on, evidently, by the owner of the copy which Your Honor has for some other purpose—for emphasis of those particular phrases.

The Master—All right. All of Chapter xii and certain verses of Chapter xiii?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, the first verses of Chapter xiii.

Mr. Bates—How many verses?

The Witness—I think it was six, sir.

Mr. Whipple—He thinks the first six verses of Chapter xiii.

Q. You said you asked if there was any complaint of the business administration of the affairs of the trust, and while you could not say the words in which the assent was given, there was an assent that there was no complaint? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let me ask you whether up to that time any one of the directors since you had been the business manager of the trust had complained with regard to its administration to you? A. Never a single time.

Q. Had you heard of any complaint being made which was brought to you from any other source? I mean any complaint by the directors? A. Yes, once.

Q. What? A. I was told at one time that Mr. Dittmore was complaining, and I went over and I called at Mr. Dittmore's office and spoke to him about it, and I said to him that I had heard something of that nature and that I wanted to come over and look at him and have him look at me as man to man, and if there was anything that was not entirely right in connection with the publishing house I ought to be gladder and more alert to learn it than anybody else—and if there was something I would be awfully glad to hear it. Mr. Dittmore said to me, "Mr. Watts, I have never said a word about you or against the management of the Publishing Society. I have at some times thought maybe you were introducing a lot of efficiency in the publishing house without a proper degree of demonstration and practice of Christian Science, but," he said, "I have not expressed that to anybody and I have nothing to criticize you for, or the management of the Publishing Society for."

Mr. Thompson—Will you give me the date of that?

Q. What was the date of that? A. I don't know. Mr. Dittmore may be able to recall.

Q. Can you give me approximately the date? A. Anything I should say would be a guess on that.

Q. All right, guess. You are the best guesser there is on that subject. A. I should say about November.

Mr. Thompson—What year?

The Witness—Of 1918.

Q. Of 1918? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you heard any other criticisms than that, either directly or indirectly? A. Not one word, so far as I know.

Q. Now, in point of fact, what had been the results of the business while you were administrator, administering it, from year to year? Have you the figures that will show what the profits were? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were they? Just state them in either six-months or annual periods. All I want you to give is just the result in figures. That looks pretty menacing (referring to a black portfolio produced by the witness). A. No, sir; I promise not to occupy many moments. Our profits for the year of 1913 were $94,916.33.

Mr. Bates—I could not hear the answer.

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. A little louder and a little clearer.

The Witness—I beg pardon. Let me correct those figures. Strike that out. The profits for the year ending Dec. 31, 1913, were $164,000. I am going to leave the cents off. Is that all right?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Bates—What year was that?

The Master—I understood that to be 1913.

The Witness—1913.

Mr. Whipple—Yes. Now 1914.

The Witness—1914, they were $135,000. I am going to leave off the cents.

Q. Yes. 1915? A. $224,700.

Q. 1916? A. $258,900.

Q. 1917? A. For the year 1917 we did not take an inventory until March 30th, so as to throw it past the holidays. That was by agreement with both boards. And for the period of 15 months our net profits were $513,869. That is for the year of 1917 and for the first three months of 1918.

Q. That covered about— A. Fifteen months.

Q. About nine months of your administration as business manager? A. Yes. I should say, rather—

Q. And six months as assistant business manager. And that is the first nine months of the administration of the present Board of Trustees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. 1918. A. 1918, $518,999, for the period of 12 months.

Q. For the period of 12 months. So far as your figures for a year later than that are concerned, of course you have only entered upon it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell us about The Monitor, whether it has been improving in prosperity or otherwise? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Without going into specific figures, you may—

A. The Monitor went on—

Q. —give us the principal figures that are indicative of that— A. I will try to.

Q. —to you as a business manager. A. The figures yesterday, as I remember it, were approximately correct relative to The Monitor and—

Q. Let me ask whether The Monitor is now, as you view it, on a paying basis? A. It is on a paying basis.

Q. How long has it been so? A. Since February, 1918. The month of March, 1918, we had a profit from the Monitor.

Q. Is it increasingly so? A. Well, the conduct of a newspaper is not a proposition of "increasingly." One month you will be above, and another month you will be below. You have to take it on a yearly average to get a true basis for a newspaper.

Q. Let me ask you if there is any such paper as The Monitor published in the United States, other than The Monitor? A. I am sure there is not, sir.

Q. Its chief feature is what? A. In its publication of—in its international aspect.

Q. Well, that is what I wanted to get at—in its international aspect. A. Yes.

Q. That is, international news, from every part of the world? A. It is international in its circulation; it is international in the news it gathers; and it is the only paper in the world that is international in the treatment of the news which it publishes. In other words, news that might be very interesting to Boston people would not be interesting to New York people, necessarily. The treatment of the news must be so that the thing that occurs in Boston must be of interest to the entire world to make it international in its scope.

Q. The ultimate object of the paper, besides becoming a great newspaper internationally, is to promote the Christian Science movement? A. I think that Mrs. Eddy's statement of that, that it is to spread the science which operates unspent and to injure no man, but to bless all mankind, is my best statement of the purpose of The Monitor.

Q. And that is printed as the watchword of The Monitor, is it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That saying of Mrs. Eddy, which all Christian Scientists believe to have been inspired? A. That is in her works, and was the first editorial in the first edition of The Monitor by Mrs. Eddy.

Q. Something has been said about a withdrawal of money from the accounts in the banks, and putting it in a safety deposit vault. Do you know about that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was an administrative matter, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell His Honor all about it? A. As the business manager, when I found this controversy becoming somewhat acute, I requested the chief accountant to withdraw from our bank, the First National Bank, or any of the others where the accounts justified it, amounts in lots of $10,000 or $15,000. She accumulated previous to Feb. 1 $60,000, all of which I think she drew from the First National Bank. That was all put in a safety deposit box.

Q. In cash, or certified checks? A. Cash.

Q. Cash? A. The purpose of that was, in the event of an injunction by either of the boards, or any interference in any way by anybody, the business manager would be able to take care of the pay roll of the employees, our pay roll being about between $13,000 and $14,000 a week. On Feb. 1 I was notified by the Board of Trustees, and following the attorneys' conference, that the whole thing was disposed of, and that both boards had agreed to settle their differences. Whereupon I instructed the chief accountant to deposit that money immediately in the bank, which she did. Later on, with the reopening of the controversy, I didn't know where it might lead to, and I again asked the chief accountant to accumulate some funds, and she then accumulated $80,000, which she carried in a safety deposit box. When the injunction was granted by this court, preventing any interference with the business, within a day or so afterwards the money was all redeposited back in the First National Bank. None of it was borrowed, however. It was our own money.

Q. You had access to the box yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And perhaps you were the only one? A. No; the chief accountant and myself.

Q. It was an administrative measure to prevent the interruption of your business? A. Yes.

Q. The advertising in The Monitor, has that been increasing? A. Constantly, both in—

Q. A steady increase? A. Yes, a very happy increase.

Q. Some suggestion has been made, perhaps, rather, a query has been suggested, as to whether your representations of circulation on which you asked for advertising are absolutely correct. What do you say to that? A. We never have, so far as I know, received knowingly, and certainly never have solicited, a dollar's worth of advertising on the basis of circulation. We have consistently refused to do it. But the figures of our circulation as published are as nearly true as it is possible for us to ascertain that fact with our accounting department.

Mr. Whipple—You may inquire.

Mr. Bates—Does Your Honor wish to take an intermission here?

The Master—We will pause here for a few minutes.

[Recess from 12:02 p. m. to 12:15 p. m.]

The Master—Mr. Whipple, you are through with your examination?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor; we are waiting for Governor Bates to go forward.

Mr. Bates—May I state to the Court the reason for the delay? General Streeter would like to be away this afternoon, but he wants to be here when Mr. Doorly testifies. We would like very much to accommodate him, but Mr. Doorly, if he stays, has got to stay here in Boston until Monday morning, giving up several days that he would like to spend in New York. Therefore we do not feel that we have any right to agree, in case he could be reached this afternoon, that he should not be put on at this time, although we would like to accommodate General Streeter. The only way we could accommodate him would be to agree that he might be put on now, if

Mr. Whipple would consent to it, and then General Streeter could get away this afternoon if he wanted to.

Mr. Whipple—Let us go right ahead and take our chances; you may be able to finish him this afternoon.

Mr. Bates—Yes; but that does not allow General Streeter to get away this afternoon, that is the trouble.

Mr. Whipple—The General is more interested in the orderly progress of the case than in getting away.

Mr. Streeter—I understand, Governor Bates, that if this arrangement is made that Mr. Whipple will agree we may put Mr. Doorly on Monday morning.

Mr. Bates—Yes; but you ask us to keep Mr. Doorly here until Monday morning in order that you may get away this afternoon.

Mr. Streeter—Well, all right, I will stay here. The result will be that you won't get at Mr. Doorly this afternoon.

Mr. Bates—If you feel confident of that why don't you just go away?

Mr. Streeter—Well, I don't know what you would do if I went away; I am not wholly onto you.

Mr. Bates—Well, I will protect you as far as possible, General.

Cross-Examination

Q. (By Mr. Bates) Mr. Watts, you may have answered one or two of these questions that I will ask you in connection with Mr. Whipple's preliminary examination, but there was a good deal of noise outside and I could not hear all of your answers. You were educated for a lawyer? A. Yes.

Q. And are a member of the bar? A. Yes.

Q. What bar? A. The bar at Louisville, Kentucky, the bar at New York City, and at Boston. I have been admitted to all three of them, and am a member in each of those states, yes.

Q. You are a member of the Suffolk bar? A. Yes; and also of the United States—several of the Circuit Courts and Courts of Appeal, and of the United States Supreme Court.

Q. And when were you admitted to the practice of law first? A. I think, sir, it was in 1897.

Q. And have you ever practiced law? A. All my life until I came here, sir.

Q. All your life until you became connected with the Publishing Society? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you at times acted as counselor and adviser of the Board of Trustees? A. Never once, sir, in this particular controversy.

Q. Well, have you in other things? A. Once or twice, where we had a question of a patent, a claim of infringement by some wood machinery corporation, or something of that sort, on the machine that we bought from the Goss printing plant. I took quite an active interest in that, in trying to protect the Publishing Society, with other counsel of course.

Q. Well, in general, I assume as you have consulted with the trustees, being a lawyer by education, you have given them such advice as you could when they asked for it? A. No, I don't take it as advice. I have consulted with them and we have talked over things generally from the standpoint of the trustees and the business manager.

Q. Have you advised them in regard to what you thought should or should not be done? A. I suppose I have. I thought you meant as a lawyer. I have tried to keep away from that since I have been business manager.

Q. Was it necessary when you became a Christian Scientist for you to forget all that you had learned as a lawyer? A. No. I said since I had become business manager.

Q. Well, was it necessary, in order to discharge your duties as business manager, to forget all that you had learned as a lawyer? A. No.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. Isn't it a futile waste of time to put such questions? They seem to be satirical, but they are not even that.

Q. Mr. Watts, you were consulted in regard to this controversy, were you not? A. As business manager, of course, I was consulted.

Q. And did you think that, as business manager, rather than as a lawyer, you could put your interpretation upon the Deed of Trust and the effect of the Manual? A. Oh, no. I, of course, used my whole experience as a lawyer.

Mr. Streeter—I don't quite hear you, Mr. Watts. A. I, of course, used my whole experience as a lawyer and what I knew as to the law in connection with my attitude on the Deed of Trust.

Q. Then you were consulted in regard to it? A. No, I don't think they consulted me as a lawyer, if that is what you mean.

Q. Well, they knew you had been a lawyer, did they not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they consulted you in regard to the matter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And their records show that you were consulted in regard to this letter which they sent on Sept. 30, 1918? A. No, sir.

Mr. Whipple—That I object to.

The Witness—No, sir; they do not.

Mr. Whipple—The records do not show any such thing.

Q. Doesn't the record show it was read to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you approved of it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't call that a consultation? A. Why, they simply read the letter, handed us the letter, and said that the editors and business manager should be acquainted with the position that had been taken by the Board of Trustees; and we all of us read the letter, and, so far as I was concerned, I approved of it heartily.

Q. Did you approve of the contents of the letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it expressed your views? A. I don't know that I did that.

Q. Well, I said, the letter expressed your views then? A. I should not say definitely that it did.

Q. Well, what did your approval, then, amount to? A. That I approved of the position that they were taking and approved their sending that letter as an expression of their views.

Q. But not as an expression of your views? A. I think they were my views but I did not approve it on that basis.

Q. Didn't they understand that it agreed with your views? A. I don't know.

Q. Wasn't that what they asked you in regard to it? A. No, sir; I don't think it was.

Q. You didn't think they asked your permission to send it out as an expression of their views, did you? A. No.

Q. What did you think they asked you for, then? A. I thought they submitted it to me as business manager, so that those occupying the important position of editors and business manager should know of the controversy and the stand in this matter taken by the trustees.

Q. Well, if it was merely to give you information they wouldn't have asked for your approval, would they? A. I don't know that they asked for my approval.

Q. Doesn't the record state that you approved it? A. I assume that it does, but I don't remember—

Q. Didn't you hear the record read this morning? A. Yes, sir; but I do not know that they asked for it.

Mr. Bates—Can't we agree that the record so states?

Mr. Whipple—The record does not state that they asked for his approval. The record says that they approved it, but it does not say that the trustees asked for their approval. You ask one question and then slide on to another as if you asked a different question.

Mr. Bates—It is immaterial to me.

Q. If the record says that they approved it, is it a fact or isn't it? A. Surely.

Q. Then it is a fact. Then at the time that you met with the directors, about which you have told, when they sent for you and asked if there was not some way which you could suggest by which this could be arranged, you told them you were going to assume a neutral attitude, didn't you? A. No.

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. You have not quoted at all what he said the directors said to him.

Mr. Bates—Will you give me the letter which I let you have and which you put in as an exhibit?

Mr. Whipple—Certainly. But there is not any such testimony as to what the directors asked him. He said the directors asked him how he stood on the matter.

Mr. Bates—You put in that letter, the substance—

Mr. Whipple—Not that they wanted to arrange something.

Q. You put in the letter the substance of your statement to the directors, did you not? A. No. That letter is not the substance of my statement to the directors. That is a part of it, but it is not my first statement to the directors.

Q. Did you not testify that you made the statement that you would not declare in advance what your position was going to be? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment. The record is open here.

Mr. Bates—I have a right to ask him if there is any question about it.

Mr. Whipple—You have within a certain limit, but when it is simply occupying time—

Mr. Bates—You are occupying time, Mr. Whipple, and I will ask you to kindly refrain from it. You said you would take 15 minutes, and it is nearly 50.

Q. Now, Mr. Watts, I ask you if you did not state, in substance, that you said to the directors that you were not going to commit yourself on either side of the controversy, that as business manager you did not think you ought to? A. I said I was going to stand with Principle.

Q. Didn't you testify substantially to what I have said? A. I thought I could not take a position—

Q. You are not answering my question. Didn't you testify substantially what I have stated? A. If you bring into the statement that I said—

The Master—No, Mr. Witness—

A. (Continued) No, I did not state, in substance.

Q. Tell me what you did say, because I certainly understood you to so state. A. I said to the Board of Directors that I could not take a stand on either board and that I should have to stand with Principle.

Q. And at the time that you made that statement to them you had already committed yourself by approving the letter of the trustees on Sept. 30, hadn't you? A. Not at all.

Q. Well, the record seems to indicate it.

Mr. Whipple—I move that remark be stricken out.

The Witness—May I explain, sir?

Mr. Whipple—The record indicates no such thing.

The Master—What the record indicates is a matter of argument later. I do not think we need to have it stated now. We will strike it out.

Mr. Bates—It may be struck out.

Q. Did you tell the Board of Directors that you had been called in and that that letter had been read to you and that you had approved it on Sept. 30, as the attitude of the trustees? A. No. That is—

Q. That is all; you have answered my question. A. May I add to that—

The Master—I think you have answered it.

Mr. Whipple—He desires to make an explanation or qualification.

A. (continued) I had theretofore, on Jan. 2, told the Board of Directors exactly where I stood on this proposition.

Q. Well, then, your statement that was made on Jan. 27 was inconsistent with the statement that you had made previously to the board? A. Not in the slightest.

Q. Well, I wish you would explain to me, Mr. Watts, how you approved of the letter stating the trustees' position on Sept. 30, and then stated to the Board of Directors on some date in January you approved of the trustees' position, and then on Jan. 27 stated that you had not taken and was not taking either side and did not propose to?

Mr. Whipple—I object, if Your Honor please, because he has stated no such thing as Governor Bates has now narrated. And of course he can't explain Governor Bates' misconception. All he could explain would be his own testimony.

Q. I find your testimony irreconcilable as I hear it, Mr. Watts. A. I shall be glad to explain my view of it if—

The Master—Suppose you let him try.

A. (continued) Mr. Bates, there is a vast difference between a position called neutral and the position called "standing with Principle." One can well stand with Principle and agree with right viewpoints of one board and right viewpoints of another, but not expressing to either board approval or disapproval of one thing or the other. I never approved—I have never stood with the Board of Trustees, and the Board of Trustees have consistently said to me, "We do not want anybody to stand with us; stand with Principle, with the highest that you know of right, and to the extent we are standing with Principle we will find ourselves together; but do not stand with us," and they have said exactly the same thing to the entire Publishing House. I do not know how better to explain it.

Q. When you say you are standing with Principle, under your definition you are, of course, standing with God?

A. My highest concept of right, of justice, and honesty, and intelligence.

Q. Then the statement in the record that you approved the letter has no significance? A. Not for the purposes of this statement—I should not think so.

Q. It has no significance as indicating that you approved the views therein stated? A. I did approve the views therein stated.

Q. Well, you did approve them? A. Yes.

Q. And you told the trustees you did? A. No, not that I remember. I may have said I approved the letter, but it was not on the basis, Mr. Bates, of approving—I wonder if I can differentiate there clearly. A letter written by the Board of Trustees was their own demonstration, and they had their right to take their own position and send the letter. What I was doing, and I believe the two editors were doing, was approving the position taken by the Board of Trustees for themselves—not for us at all.

Q. Then all your approval meant was that you saw no objection, if that was their view, to their sending the letter? A. No; it also—when I said I approved the thing, that indicated that I believed the statements they were giving were true.

Q. That is what I had supposed. Then when you had your conference with the directors on Jan. 27 you were in the position of the man who had approved of the position taken by the trustees? A. I had so told them on Jan. 2.

Mr. Whipple—Told the directors?

The Witness—Yes, sir.

Q. You did not tell them so on the 27th? A. No; because I had gone into the thing quite fully by illustration on Jan. 2. I did not repeat it.

Q. Was it the fact that you believed the two instruments given by Mrs. Eddy are reconcilable? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you still believe them to be? A. I do, sir.

Mr. Whipple—Do you want to define what you mean by the "two instruments given by Mrs. Eddy"? What you referred to?

Mr. Bates—I refer to this statement in the letter, "I refuse to believe that the two instruments given by our Leader are irreconcilable."

Q. You understand what two instruments I refer to? A. Yes, sir. The Manual and the Deed of Trust.

Mr. Whipple—What is that?

The Witness—The Manual and the Deed of Trust.

Mr. Whipple—That is right. That is what I wanted to get clear on the record. You mean the Manual and the Deed of Trust?

The Witness—Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what was your first connection with the Publishing Society? A. I was employed in the credit department.

Q. And when? A. 1913. June 20, I think it was.

Q. In what capacity? A. In charge of the Credit Department.

Q. And how long did you continue in that department? A. Well, I had more or less supervision of the department clear up to the time that I accepted the office of business manager.

Q. Is there an assistant business manager? A. There was—no, not carrying that title.

Q. Were you ever assistant business manager? A. No, sir.

Q. Then when Mr. Whipple asked you if a part of these approvals were made while you were business manager and the rest while you were assistant business manager, he was ill advised, I assume.

A. No. I was in effect assistant business manager, but the title was "assistant to business manager."

Q. Oh, you make a distinction? A. I did not; the trustees have made the distinction.

Q. Between an assistant business manager and the assistant to business manager? How long were you assistant to business manager? A. Oh, I should guess about three years. Two or three years.

Q. Then you were promoted to business manager? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you made business manager? A. Aug. 1, 1917.

Q. That is when you began your duties? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bates—I offer a letter from Mr. Watts under date of July 28, 1917.

Mr. Whipple—I won't stop to read it, because I shall hear it when you read it. I have no objection to it.

Mr. Bates—The letter is signed by Mr. Watts, dated Brookline, July 28, 1917, to The Christian Science Board of Directors, Boston, Massachusetts. (Reading):

[Copy of Exhibit 90.]

"Brookline, Mass., July 28, 1917.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors,
"Boston, Massachusetts.
"Gentlemen:

"Your letter of July 24, stating the action of your board in electing me to serve as business manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, beginning Aug. 1, 1917, was received. This position I accept gratefully, and thank you for your confidence in giving me this important work.

"The past four years' association with this office impresses upon me its responsibility. My constant effort shall be to keep so close to God that my footsteps shall be in accord with His teachings and those of our Leader, and that I may always 'follow and rejoice.' It is my Father's business 'and the government shall be upon His shoulders' (Isalah 9:6.)

"Sincerely,

(Signed) "JOHN R. WATTS"

Q. And you were elected by the directors as business manager of the Publishing Society? A. I was notified by them of my election.

Q. You were elected by the directors as business manager—

Mr. Whipple—I pray Your Honor's judgment.

A. They notified me they had elected me.

Q. They notified you they had elected you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you sent them this letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you began your duties about the 1st of August?

Q. And you were elected by the directors also in 1918,—reelected? A. They notified me that they had reelected me.

Q. And the elections have always been annually, have they not, so far as your knowledge goes?

Mr. Whipple—You mean, the notice of elections?

Mr. Bates—The elections.

Mr. Whipple—That I object to. He knows nothing about your records except by hearsay. The notices have come.

Q. Do you know, Mr. Watts, whether or not the directors have reelected you annually up to the present year when the controversy was on?

A. There was only the original election and the reelections, as you term them, once, because it was August, 1917, and then the following July, 1918, and I have had no notification since then.

Q. Well, you were reelected in June, 1918? A. Mr. Bates, you want me to use the word I was "elected." I am saying to you frankly that I was notified that I had been elected, and I have no doubt that I was. But I do not know it of my own knowledge.

Q. Notified that you had been elected by the Board of Directors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what was your salary when you first became business manager? A. I think it was $7200.

Q. And was that the same as your predecessor had had? A. I am not quite clear on that. I think it was.

Q. And has it been increased since? A. Yes, sir, to $10,000.

Q. Has there been more than one increase? A. I think not.

Q. And when was the increase made to $10,000? A. May I answer in just a moment? I can give it to you accurately then.

The Master—Is there any question pending?

Mr. Bates—He is looking up the information for the answer.

The Master—Don't you all know when it was? Can't we shorten it?

Mr. Bates—I know, and if they will accept my statement—

The Master—Is there any dispute about it?

Mr. Whipple—I don't know the first thing about it, if Your Honor please. There is not any dispute about—

The Witness—Oct. 1, Governor Bates, 1918.

Q. Now, I read from the record of Sept. 30, 1918—

Mr. Streeter—Is that the directors' records, Governor Bates?

Mr. Bates—The trustees' records.

Q. I am reading from the record of the Board of Trustees, under date of Sept. 30, 1918. The first three paragraphs have no bearing. The next paragraph, the fourth paragraph, reads as follows: "After drawing up the first copies of this letter (which refers to the memorandum that the trustees sent under date of Sept. 30 to the directors, stating their position, which has already been referred to) it was given to Mr. McKenzie, the editor of the Journal and Sentinel, who was one of our Leader's original appointees on the Board of Trustees and who served for nineteen years on that board. A copy was also given to Mr. Dixon, editor of The Monitor, and to Mr. Watts, the business manager, so that each of these officers were fully conversant with the text of the letter. Each assented to and approved of the contents." There follow three or four paragraphs, and then this is written: "On motion duly seconded, a change of rate was made in the salary of the business manager, beginning from the first of October, to $10,000 a year."

The Master—The first of October, 1918, that would make it?

Mr. Bates—That is the date.

The Master—I guess we have got that date fixed.

Q. The trustees have a salary of $6000 each, as has been stated? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what salary Mr. Dixon gets as editor of The Monitor? A. I think he receives $15,000 a year.

Q. $15,000?

Mr. Streeter—What was that?

Mr. Bates—The salary of Mr. Dixon as editor of The Monitor.

Q. And how long has he received a salary of $15,000 a year? A. I can tell you in a moment. January, 1918.

Q. And what was his salary prior to that time? A. $12,000.

Q. And what is Mr. McKenzie's salary as editor of the other publications?

Mr. Strawn—Perhaps this would facilitate the movement if I gave you that list (passing a paper to the witness).

The Witness—I thought that there was something that would facilitate it. Mr. McKenzie's salary is $9,000 a year.

Q. And how long has it been $9,000? A. Since Feb. 1, 1917.

Q. And whether or not, if you know, the Board of Trustees voted to increase his salary?

Mr. Strawn—That was in 1918, was it not, instead of 1917?

The Witness—It must be 1918. Yes, it is 1918. I beg your pardon, Governor Bates. What was that question?

Q. How did you leave the date, Mr. Watts? A. 1918, Feb. 1, 1918.

Mr. Bates—Will you read the question?

[The question is read as follows: "And whether or not, if you know, the Board of Trustees voted to increase his salary?"]

The Witness—Read the whole, will you, read what comes ahead of that?

[The reporter reads as follows: "Q. And how long has it been $9,000? A. Since Feb. 1, 1917. Q. And whether or not, if you know, the Board of Trustees voted to increase his salary?"]

A. Yes, it wouldn't have been done except upon their vote.

Q. I don't refer to the increase to $9,000; I refer to a vote that has been passed since. Do you know whether or not they have voted to increase his salary since? A. Oh, no, they have not, so far as I know.

Q. You are not aware of any letter that he sent declining an increase since this controversy began? A. No, sir.

Q. What was this contract for paper that you have referred to that Mr. Rowlands helped you on? A. A contract with the—I have forgotten the name of the company at this moment—we call it at the office the Lawrence Company, but I don't know the name—oh, it is the Canadian Export Company.

Q. And when was it made? A. In the latter part of 1917, as I remember it.

Q. And was the difficulty that had arisen one because of the war conditions? A. Well, it was what was called the print paper shortage, famine. All the newspapers were having all that they could do to get along.

Q. All the newspapers were finding difficulty in getting their paper? A. Yes.

Q. And I assume that it was your duty, as well as the duty of all the trustees, to make the best contract possible? A. Indeed it was.

Q. And Mr. Rowlands did help you to get a good contract for paper? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There has been some reference made to the Harvey letter. Mr. Harvey was an employee under you? A. Well, we don't define it as an employee under me, but he was an employee of the Publishing Society—yes, you could call it under me.

Q. Well, don't all employees of the Publishing Society come under the business manager? A. Well, we don't use the term "come under," but I suppose that in the ordinary acceptance of the words they do, yes.

Q. Well, you know we have to use words in the sense of their ordinary acceptance sometimes. A. I know you do, and I should remember that. I beg your pardon.

Q. And his office was in Washington? A. In New York.

Q. In New York. And did he come on to Boston at your request? A. I think not.

Q. Well, at any rate, the letter which has been offered in evidence was written in your office? A. Yes, sir; he had stated—

Q. And at your request? A. Yes.

Q. And after he had written it you took it to the trustees? A. Well, I wanted to be able to show the trustees and the directors—

Q. I am not asking you that. A. Oh, I beg your pardon. What is your question?

Q. After he had written it in your office you took it to the trustees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And later on you took it over to the directors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whom you had thanked for your position, in the letter which has been read? A. Yes, sir.

The Master—Your answer is yes?

The Witness—Yes, sir.

Q. And do I understand you that you asked them to repudiate Mr. Harvey's letter? A. No; I asked them to repudiate the statements that were credited to one of the members of the Board of Directors. I didn't believe those statements had been made.

Q. What member of the Board of Directors? A. At that time we didn't know, but, Mr. Dittmore's letter called out the fact that he must have been the man to whom the letter referred.

Q. And did you use the word "repudiation" in that interview? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you asked the directors to repudiate the statements made in that letter? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was it that it was reported had spread untruths in New York?

Mr. Thompson—Reported by whom?

Mr. Bates—I am quoting him in his statement.

A. I assumed that it was Mr. Dittmore.

Mr. Thompson—You mean that Mr. Harvey reported that Mr. Dittmore had told untruths in New York?

The Witness—No, no. Is that the question that was asked? I may have misunderstood it.

Mr. Bates—No, that was not the question. Mr. Thompson will have a chance to clear it up later on.

The Witness—I don't mean that.

Mr. Thompson—You don't mean that?

The Witness—May I get that question and answer, so that it will be clear?

[The question is read as follows: "Who was it that it was reported had spread untruths in New York?"]

The report was that one of the directors had made these statements which I characterized to the Board of Directors as untrue in certain phases of it.

Q. Well, you made the statement before that you supposed it was Mr. Dittmore? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you have any reason for that supposition? A. Only from Mr. Dittmore's letter, as I remember it, saying—

Q. That is, his reply? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson—Just a minute. Do you expect this evidence to go in as against Mr. Dittmore?

Mr. Bates—I don't know, I am sure.

Mr. Thompson—Then I think that I will find out. It is double-distilled hearsay. Some one reported to Harvey that some one had said that some one of the directors had made certain statements in New York. Now, if that is to go in as any evidence that Mr. Dittmore in fact made any of those statements, which it is said were erroneous, I object to it. Mr. Dittmore's own letter, written subsequently, absolutely clears that matter up. It turns out that he did not make the statements, and what he did state appears. I do not want it to appear in indirect fashion that Mr. Dittmore went to New York and engaged in scandalous gossip.

The Master—The last inquiry was, who did you understand had spread the statements in New York.

Mr. Thompson. I beg pardon?

The Master—The last inquiry of the witness was, who did you understand had spread the statement in New York.

Mr. Thompson—I do not want even his understanding of it to go in as any evidence that Mr. Dittmore did in fact make these statements. I think if Governor Bates would ask him further whether the two men with whom Mr. Dittmore talked did not repudiate the statement—

The Master—I quite agree that it is very small evidence that Mr. Dittmore did in fact make the statements.

Mr. Thompson—I think it is, but still I want to avoid having anything get in in that way.

Q. What were the statements that you in fact characterized as untrue? Those in reference to the circulation of The Monitor? A. I should have to look at the letter, Governor Bates, in order to answer that.

Mr. Bates—Well, then, perhaps we had better stop here, if Your Honor please.

The Master—We will stop until 2 o'clock now.

[Recess until 2 o'clock p. m.]

Afternoon Session.

The Master—You may go on when you are ready, Governor Bates.

Q. (By Mr. Bates.) Have you found the statements in the letter that you characterized as untrue? A. I had not known I was to look for them. May I have the letter? Somebody has the exhibit.

[The letter is handed to witness.] Shall I read those statements? This is read from Mr. Harvey's letter.

Mr. Whipple—The number of the exhibit is what, so as to identify it?

The Witness—Exhibit 88.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

A. (Reading):

"That the Board of Trustees have no understanding of salesmanship, and have made a failure of promoting the circulation of The Monitor." That is one of them.

Q. Yes. What other one? A. I will give you the other one.

"This 'little group' expressed to the New York field the statement, which they say was made by one occupying a high position in The Christian Science Publishing Society, that the circulation of The Christian Science Monitor as given out by the Board of Trustees is 123,030 copies, that the accredited circulation is 93,000 copies, but that the 'honest to God' circulation is 63,000 copies. This remark has spread not only throughout the movement, but through the business world, and has now reached the point where it is openly stated in the business world that The Monitor's circulation is only 58,000 copies and that its 'honest to God' circulation in the city of Boston is 2200 copies."

Mr. Thompson—I understand this is not to be treated as any evidence against Mr. Dittmore, because if it is, I should object to it, he never having made that statement, but it having come from a man named Gleason, as I understand it.

Mr. Whipple—Now I understand you are merely pointing out the statements of fact in the letter.

Mr. Thompson—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Statements of fact by others in New York, which are untrue.

The Master—As I understand it, he has called certain statements in that letter untrue, and he is now asked to specify which ones.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—He has mentioned two. Are there any more?

The Witness—Yes, sir.

The Master—Please go on, as quickly as you can.

The Witness (reading)—

"That the Board of Trustees was about to be removed by process of law. When asked why, he said that 'we' could not stand idly by and see The Christian Science Monitor impoverish the movement; that up to the present time The Monitor has cost 'us' over a million dollars. When it was said to him that it was not surprising that to establish a daily paper as The Monitor had been established would require a large expenditure of money during the first years, but that now it was understood The Monitor was reaching, if it had not reached, a self-supporting basis, he claimed that this was due to the fact that 'we' had given them 40,000 subscriptions to be distributed for camp welfare work." That is all, sir.

Q. The statements which you characterized as untrue as to facts are statements which Mr. Harvey put into the letter which he wrote in your office and directed to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they are statements of what was being talked in New York City? A. Yes.

Q. Since the alleged visit of one director there? A. Yes.

Q. Therefore they are a statement of rumors which he had heard in New York City, expressed by various persons? A. The letter speaks for itself on that, Governor.

Q. The circulation of The Monitor has not been entirely satisfactory, has it? A. It was constantly increasing, but it never would be satisfactory to one interested in Christian Science even if it had been a half a million.

Q. It had been a disappointment, had it not? A. No, sir.

Q. And I suppose that is really a question of opinion? A. Surely.

Q. And the question as to whether or not your Board of Trustees had an understanding of salesmanship is a question of opinion? A. Certainly.

Q. Therefore, if somebody in New York did say that your board had no understanding of salesmanship, it was their opinion, I assume? A. Wasn't there some other phrase there besides "salesmanship"? I am not sure.

Q. "Had no understanding of salesmanship, and had made a failure of promoting the circulation of The Monitor." A. Yes, sir.

Q. They had made a failure of it from the standpoint of its success financially, had they not? A. Why, they had made a splendid success of it financially.

Q. From the standpoint of its showing any profit? A. I am talking about these trustees, yes.

Q. Well, I am talking about The Monitor itself, and the Board of Trustees, and throughout the history of The Monitor. A. Now, what was your question?

Q. I am asking you as to whether or not it had not been a failure from the standpoint of paying its expenses? A. Why, it cost a million dollars to establish it.

The Master—Can't you answer his question directly?

A. No, it had not been a failure.

Q. Is it not a fact in every year except one your books show there was a deficit? A. Except the last two, I should say.

Q. Except the last two? A. Isn't that right?

Q. Will you look at your books for the year ending March 31, 1918, and see if it did not show a deficit? I am perfectly willing, Mr. Watts, that you should have your assistant help you find the place, if you wish to. A. Thank you. March, 1919, it showed a profit of $70,699.88.

Q. What year was that? A. That was last year.

Q. That is not the year I asked you for. A. Well, that is the one I am giving you. The others—

Q. Just hold that a minute; I may want that. A. Yes, 1918 shows a loss of $89,000.

Q. A loss of $89,000? A. That The Monitor went on—

Q. Wait a minute; I am only asking you as to whether or not your books do not show a loss of $89,000 for the year ending March 1, 1918? A. Governor, I beg your pardon; it is for 15 months, ending that time.

Q. For the 15 months, it shows a deficit of about $89,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is there any year prior to that time when it shows a profit? A. No, sir.

Q. Then your whole statement in regard to its being a success from the standpoint of net profits in cash is based on what it did in the past year ending March 31, 1919? A. Before that time.

Q. The year ending March 31, 1919. A. Your statement is practically correct, I believe, Governor.

Q. Now, what do you show as a profit during the year ending March 31, 1919? A. $70,699.66.

Q. Were there any unusual sources of income for The Monitor during that year? A. None that I know of, sir.

Q. What is the Camp Welfare work in which the movement has been engaged? A. That is an activity sending to the camps at home and abroad Christian Science literature, largely.

Q. And whom has it been sent by? A. The Camp Welfare Committee.

Q. Who has paid for it? A. The Mother Church.

Q. Through the action of the Board of Directors? A. Through the treasurer; I assume the Board of Directors.

Q. That was war work, was it not, in connection with the war? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what extent did that figure in that year, the receipts from the papers that were sent to the camps by the purchase of The Mother Church? A. Why, that was an expense to the Publishing Society.

Q. I assume so; but to what extent does it show that you have charged, or that you received from that work money? A. There is nothing here to indicate that.

Q. Well, don't you know? A. No.

Q. Doesn't your statement show? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you stated that this little group—or, rather, you say this statement was untrue, which says, "This little group has circulated"—well, the substance of it was, as I have put it down here—this little group has circulated the story as to the circulation of The Monitor; The Monitor's circulation is only certain figures. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you do not know who is meant by "this little group," do you? A. No, except as indicated—

Q. But it was some little group in New York? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—Well, was it some little group in New York as he stated?

The Witness—Yes, sir.

Q. It was a little group in New York, was it not? A. I think so.

Mr. Bates—The letter states so.

Mr. Thompson—Just a minute. I do not want him to be allowed to testify that he knows it was a little group in New York that ever started a single story. He knows nothing about it, and for all we know it may be a matter of his imagination.

Mr. Bates—Well, what I am trying to show is that it is an indefinite group nobody knows anything about.

Mr. Thompson—We do not know even that much.

Mr. Bates—That somebody is trying to blame your client and our clients for.

The Master—I do not take his evidence in any such sense, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—Very well, sir.

The Master—We are talking about what was said in a certain letter.

Mr. Thompson—I think he went a little beyond that.

The Master—Let us see if we have. The letter says, a certain group in New York circulated a certain statement.

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir. And he says, "Now, it is true, isn't it, that it was a little group in New York," and the witness says "yes," following along after this question, whereas he can't possibly have knowledge of the statement.

Mr. Bates—You misunderstood my question.

Mr. Thompson—I think you misstated it inadvertently and asked him what you didn't mean to ask.

The Master—If you mean anything other than that, Governor Bates—

Q. I had reference, and I think my questions so indicated, to the fact that this charge which you say was false was made, you allege, by some unknown group in New York. That is all there is to it. A. All I know is what the letter indicates.

The Master—Who alleges it was made by some group in New York?

Mr. Bates—Mr. Harvey's letter, which was written—

The Master—If I follow it correctly, that does not make the witness say it was.

Mr. Bates—I do not understand so, no. It is only to show that he was apparently asking us to deny statements that we knew nothing about, made by some unknown parties in New York.

Q. Now, Mr. Watts, the statement with regard to The Monitor having cost over a million dollars was true, was it not? A. Yes.

Q. So that you withdraw your statement that that was false, whoever made it? A. Was that the only statement there?

Q. Well, that is what you repeat. A. Well, there is something more, possibly, in the letter I have forgotten.

The Master—That statement was made in connection with something else. I don't know how far you can separate them.

Mr. Bates—When asked why, he said he couldn't stand idly by and see The Christian Science Monitor impoverish the movement; that up to the present time The Monitor had cost us over a million dollars.

The Witness—The impoverishing the movement is the objectionable—

Q. Well, that is an expression of opinion, too, isn't it, as to whether a million dollars would impoverish the movement? A. Why, no, it hadn't cost the movement anything.

Q. Well, it had cost somebody a million dollars, hadn't it? A. It had cost the Publishing Society a million dollars.

Q. It came out of the profits of the Publishing Society? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And profits which otherwise would have been net profits and devoted to The Mother Church under the Deed of Trust? A. Yes.

Q. That is correct? A. Yes. Governor, I can give you an answer on that Camp Welfare. The total sales of literature for the year ending March 31, 1919, was $229,762.

Q. That was for the Camp Welfare literature? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was paid for by The Mother Church? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And out of its treasury? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in addition to that, during that year the directors were sending out notices to all the churches and asking them on their own responsibility to buy the periodicals in bulk, and particularly The Monitor, and send them to the camps, was it not? A. I thought just to the contrary.

Q. You don't know that? A. Certainly not.

Q. How much was that amount you read? A. $229,762.

Q. Now, if you had not received that $229,000 from the treasury of The Mother Church for special work, which applied only to war times, your balance sheet would have been entirely different, would it not? A. No, sir. Yes, it would, but it would have been in our favor.

Q. That is, as you figure it? A. No; it is not a question of figures. The Monitor costs—every subscription costs us $13, and we sell it to the Camp Welfare or to anybody else at $9.

Q. Did you not receive 3 cents a copy, less 10 per cent, for all The Christian Science Monitors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you maintain that you were running the publishing house in such a way that it cost you more than 3 cents a copy? A. No, sir.

Q. Less the 10 per cent discount, to get out those extra papers? A. No, sir. Advertising at a certain point—you understand, I believe, that every newspaper sells its paper to the reader at a cost less than its cost to produce, but they make up the deficit on advertising. Now, at a certain point, as I explained to the Board of Directors, the advertising balances exactly with the circulation, and the figures go rightly. If the circulation exceeds that sum, then your balance is on the wrong side of the ledger. In other words, our advertising was not increased. We did not get a dollar more for advertising during that time, and yet every paper that we sent forth for Camp Welfare cost us about $13 apiece per year, whereas we received from the church $9 per year.

Q. What do you receive from your regular subscribers? A. $9 a year.

Q. So that the church paid the same as the regular subscribers, less 10 per cent? A. Less 10 per cent.

Q. And you do not expect to get any more from your advertising because of an increase in your circulation to the amount of $279,000 worth of copies? A. We had shortly theretofore increased our rates, and of course when that came about we did not think to increase them further.

Q. You had shortly before increased your rates, I understand, for advertising? A. Yes.

Q. And you do assume that the larger your circulation the more you can recover or obtain for your advertising? A. I do not believe we put it on that basis, Governor.

Q. Well, but that would be the natural average expectation in business? A. That would be the average newspaper expectation.

Q. And they sell their advertising on the basis of their circulation, not on the basis of what they do not circulate? A. We never have.

Q. Well, ordinarily newspapers do, don't they? A. Yes.

Q. And the business man naturally buys on the information which he has in regard to the circulation? A. They are learning not to do that today, Governor.

Mr. Streeter—What is that last answer?

The Witness—I say, the business man is learning not to buy his advertising on the basis of circulation alone.

Q. I did not say anything about "alone," Mr. Watts. I asked you if that was not one of the things, or if it was not something that they base the value of the advertising on? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The more the circulation the more valuable the advertising? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I understood you that when you went to the board meeting on the 27th of January you went because you were asked to come over, because the board, as some one stated, wished to know where you stood as the business manager? A. Yes.

Q. In the controversy? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you did not tell them that you had told them where you stood on the 22nd, did you? A. On the 2nd.

Q. On the 2nd of January. A. No. I did not repeat it. They knew where I stood.

Q. But you did put your position in writing? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, may I ask— A. May I qualify that? I have never changed my position from the beginning, and it was exactly as quoted in my letter there of the 23th.

Q. You stated that they asked you what you thought the effect would be on the movement if the contention of the trustees was allowed.

Mr. Whipple—I do not think there is any such statement.

Q. Well, I will ask you what your statement was in regard to the effect on the movement. What did you say? A. I was asked if I did not know that when the movement learned of the position taken by the trustees—I was asked where I thought the movement would stand on that question, and I said I thought the movement would be against the trustees.

Q. As I have you quoted here—"I assume the entire movement would be with the Board of Directors." A. On the go-off, I said.

Q. By "the movement" you meant the field or the Christian Scientists throughout the world.

Mr. Whipple—He said on the "go-off."

Q. Now, Mr. Watts, after the trustees filed their Bill in Equity did you send out a copy of that Bill in Equity? A. Yes.

Q. A printed copy? A. Yes.

Q. And to whom did you send it? A. To the subscribers on our records —to the Quarterly, Journal, and Sentinel, as I remember it.

Q. To the subscribers of all your periodicals except The Monitor? A. I think so.

Q. And the subscribers of those periodicals are all assumed to be Christian Scientists, are they not? A. Yes.

Q. And in that copy you put on the last page a partial copy of the injunction? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That had been issued ex parte? A. I don't know how it was issued. I assume it was.

Q. Issued without a hearing? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You understood that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the copies that you sent out were the same as the ones which His Honor has in his hands at the present time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you sent those out at the request of the Board of Trustees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And immediately, as soon as the bill was filed? A. No. It was filed in the morning, my recollection is, of March 25, and we did not send them out—I wonder what day that was. Might I inquire if anybody knows what the day was?

Mr. Bates—No. I want your testimony.

The Witness—All right. We sent them out beginning on the Friday following the day the bill was filed. It was two or three days afterward.

Q. That is the best information you can give? A. I know that was correct.

Q. Were they in press at the time that the bill was filed? A. On the morning before or after the bill was filed?

Q. On that date? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you certain that you had not furnished copies to your counsel or to the counsel of the trustees, to be furnished to the newspapers on the very day and at the time it was filed? A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. You are sure about that? A. Yes, sir, because they were furnished the following day in the evening.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Whipple, I don't want to ask you for anything you don't want to answer, but isn't the witness mistaken as to that?

Mr. Whipple—No, he is absolutely right. You are mistaken. I furnished you with a copy later in connection with our negotiations, to see whether the bill would have to go through. There was nothing printed at that time.

Q. Was the Bill in Equity in type at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what the date was, Mr. Watts?

Mr. Whipple—I am speaking from my own memory.

Mr. Bates—Will you look at the bill and give us the date?

The Witness—Don't your bill show it was filed March 25?

Q. I mean the date when you printed it. A. I will furnish you the records to show when it was done, Governor, later.

Q. Have you the records here? A. No. I have nothing to indicate here.

Q. There is nothing on your books that we asked you to produce which shows? A. No, sir.

Q. Nothing on your account books which shows? A. No, sir.

Mr. Bates—The bill, I understand, was filed March 25.

Mr. Whipple—It was, but no publication occurred until one, two, or three days later.

Q. Now, Mr. Watts, how many copies of that Bill in Equity did you send out—printed copies? A. Approximately 140,000. I think the correct number was 138,000.

Q. 138,000 copies? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that included all the subscribers to your periodicals except The Monitor? A. I think it did.

Q. Now, did you at some time send out telegrams? A. We did, the night of the 26th.

Q. The night of the 26th? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you a copy of that telegram here?

Mr. Whipple—I would like to suggest, if Your Honor please, that a criticism of what was done by the trustees, and a very bitter one, was made before Mr. Justice Braley in the contempt proceedings. It was a part of his statement in delivering his judgment in those proceedings that there was nothing that could be criticized in that respect with reference to the conduct of the trustees—that they did what they were entitled to do—namely, to issue, for the purposes of accuracy, the printed copy of this bill, and send it to every one that they wanted to have know about it. Now, that having been adjudicated by a justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, aren't you satisfied with that? Do you think you want to try it again?

Mr. Bates—I am not satisfied with your statement of it.

Mr. Whipple—Didn't Justice Braley state that there was nothing that was said or done by the trustees or their counsel in promulgating this bill that could be criticised? If there is any doubt about that I would like to read what Justice Braley said. Do you object to it?

Mr. Bates—I object to it. You have asked me whether I agree with your statement. I don't agree with it.

Mr. Whipple—I asked whether it was any use searching any longer in a last year's bird's nest to find something.

The Master—I take it you can hardly ask me to find as to the contrary on anything that Judge Braley has distinctly passed upon.

Mr. Bates—I am not going to. All that Judge Braley decided was, on our motion to change the injunction on the ground that they had violated the spirit of it, that inasmuch as they had only sent out the Bill in Equity without making any comments, they were within their rights. But that is not the purpose for which I am offering it.

Mr. Whipple—May I read what Judge Braley said? I have a printed copy here.

Mr. Bates—No, I object to your reading it.

The Master—I don't think I would read it, Mr. Whipple, if it is objected to.

Mr. Whipple—Now, how is Your Honor going to determine whether this has been decided or not?

The Master—I am not clear that I shall ever have to determine, and I will wait until I see that I must before I do.

Mr. Whipple—I thought that there was an issue between us as to what Judge Braley said.

Mr. Bates—There is not properly. You made your statement. All I am asking is a question which has nothing to do with this.

Mr. Whipple—I didn't know that you had abandoned that quest. Perhaps you have.

Mr. Bates—No. I am asking the question.

Mr. Whipple—Let me hear it.

Mr. Bates—I thought you had forgotten.

Mr. Whipple—I hadn't forgotten. I was engaged in following down your last error and therefore hadn't gotten to your new one. What is the last question?

[The last question is read as follows:

“Q. And have you a copy of that telegram here?”]

Mr. Whipple—Now, I will raise the question—how is it important what that telegram is?

The Master—I am entirely unable to see how it is important at present. I am relying on Governor Bates to do something to make it important.

Q. Have you a copy of the telegram? A. I have not, sir. It ought to be here but I don't know where it is. Can you furnish me with a copy, Governor?

Mr. Whipple—It is in the record of the contempt proceedings.

Q. Well, you did send out a telegram? A. Yes.

Q. To all the Associated Press? A. Oh, no.

Q. Well, to four or five hundred newspapers? A. Yes.

Q. In this country? A. Yes.

Q. And in Canada? A. Yes, I think there were a few in Canada.

Mr. Bates—The telegram we will produce later.

Q. Now, as a result, or if not as a result, at least very soon after you had sent out your Bill in Equity, you began to receive letters from the field, did you not, in regard to it? A. Yes.

Q. And resolutions of Christian Science churches? A. Yes.

Q. And were they in general condemnatory of the position which the trustees had taken?

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. How is that of any consequence—especially in view of the fact that we allege in this bill that these directors had instituted a propaganda which evidently after the injunction they took no pains to stop. And here they come in and ask, in substance, for the results of the virus that they had been putting out.

Mr. Bates—Propaganda of which you have introduced no evidence. This is your last witness, you say.

Mr. Whipple—We have introduced evidence of the propaganda, clear evidence of it. We will have more when we get your friends on the witness stand and ask them some questions.

Mr. Bates—Then wait until you have introduced it, if you are depending on my clients.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no, that is going to be more. We have got enough for the present.

The Master—What is the inquiry you want to make now, exactly?

[The last question is read.]

The Master—I am unable to see what good it can do in this case to inquire into the question of whether they were generally condemnatory or not. It might require the examination of a great many telegrams, might it not, to find out whether there were more condemnatory or more approving?

Mr. Bates—I think, Your Honor, that they might run into the thousands, and therefore I will withdraw that question for the present.

Mr. Whipple—Has your committee on publications sent as many as thousands of them, to get them ready?

Mr. Bates—Do you want me to answer your question?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, if you don't mind.

Mr. Bates—I will state that we are informed, by reason of resolutions which have come to us without any solicitation from us, direct or indirect, or any suggestion, direct or indirect, from the directors, that we have had from over a thousand churches resolutions condemning the action of the trustees, and those resolutions began to come immediately after the sending out of the Bill in Equity.

Mr. Whipple—Now, will you explain how they happened to be all just alike, or practically alike, if they were not inspired and drawn up by one source here in Boston? Perhaps you will answer that.

Mr. Bates—You have assumed that they were alike, or practically alike. If you wish to show it, put it in evidence.

Mr. Whipple—No; I am asking you; you are a volunteer witness.

Mr. Bates—Our information is that they were not alike, or practically alike, except as against your clients. If you wish to prove it, you can put them in.

Mr. Whipple—You had better be getting your directors ready for an examination on them.

Mr. Thompson—I think that it is only appropriate that a similar question should be put to us as to how many condemned the conduct of Mr. Dittmore; and if such a question were put I should like to make a statement on that subject.

Mr. Whipple—There would be a difference in the tone of those telegrams if they knew the facts, as they will know them when this case is through.

Mr. Bates—I shall not object to your putting them in.

Mr. Strawn—We have them here, plenty of them.

Mr. Bates—I know you have.

The Master—I hope that you will not put them in in view of the fact that they are all subsequent to the bringing of the Bill in Equity.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor. This is after the litigation was begun.

Mr. Streeter—Doesn't Your Honor think that these colloquies between Governor Bates and Mr. Whipple are interesting, even if they are not judicious?

Mr. Bates—Well, I regret them; but Mr. Whipple, if he does not see a point, always feels it, and it starts him up.

Q. Now, Mr. Watts, Mr. Rowlands was not able to tell us how many employees in the Publishing Society had a salary of $6000 or over. A. I can tell you, sir.

Q. Can you tell me? A. You say $6000 or over. Mr. Watts, Mr. Dixon, Mr. McKenzie, Mrs. Hoag, and the three trustees.

Q. That is all? That is, the editors, the business manager and the trustees? A. That is all I see.

Q. I understand you to say that at this meeting that you had with the directors, Mr. Dittmore was the one who used the words "empty shell"?

Mr. Thompson—Pardon me. I did not understand him to have said that definitely, but I understood him to say that he thought so. Is that the fact?

Mr. Bates—Well, I want to find out. Q. Is it a fact? Did Mr. Dittmore make that statement? A. Mr. Dittmore made that statement.

Q. Did he use those words? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You found in your conferences with both boards that they were serious, and honestly desirous of coming to an adjustment, an honorable adjustment of all their difficulties, didn't you?

The Witness—Let me hear that question again.

[The question is read to the witness.]

A. Yes.

Q. It was recognized as a very serious question in its effect upon the movement? A. Yes. May I just add to those salaries that Mr. Seeley, in the editorial department, also receives a salary of $6000?

Mr. Whipple—Doesn't Mr. Lesan of New York also?

The Witness—Not now. Yes, he does also; Mr. Lesan of New York does now, too. I thought that that had been changed.

Q. And who is Mr. Lesan? A. Our advertising counselor.

Q. In New York City? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, after these rumors which came to you in Mr. Harvey's letter, you did send some one to New York City to represent The Monitor, did you not? A. No.

Q. A circulation man? Didn't you appoint one in New York to represent The Monitor? A. No.

Mr. Bates—Have you the records of June 8, 1914, of the trustees?

[Mr. Withington passes a book of records to Mr. Bates, who proceeds to examine the same.]

Have you the records for July 23, 1917?

Mr. Withington—It is there.

Mr. Bates—I read from the record of the meeting of the Board of Trustees of July 23, 1917:

"At 2:10 the Board of Directors asked Mr. McKenzie to go over to their meeting, and at 2:45 Mr. Eustace was also asked to go over. The announcement was then made that the Board of Directors had invited Mr. McKenzie to become editor of the Journal, Sentinel, and Herald. Mr. Eustace was asked whether this would be agreeable to the Board of Trustees, and the action of the Board of Directors was heartily approved."

Now I read from the record of the meeting of the Board of Trustees of July 25, 1917—

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. I pray Your Honor's judgment. What has this to do with the cross-examination of Mr. Watts?

Mr. Bates—Well, I assume that we can put in your records at this time if we wish to.

Mr. Whipple—Why, I do not understand so, unless they are a basis of some question. Mr. Watts does not keep the records or know anything about them. Why not finish the cross-examination? Those records you can put in at any time.

Mr. Bates—We will not stop to do it now if you object, because we would rather go on than take the time by listening to your objections.

Mr. Whipple—I think that it is not very good procedure. Then, you know, we are trying to hurry up for Mr. Doorly, don't you know!

Mr. Bates—In view of what has been said I think I will take your record on page 74 and read a portion of that.

Mr. Whipple—Well, poor Mr. Doorly will miss his boat while you are reading trustees' records, which you could read two weeks from now, if you want to.

Mr. Bates—This is from the record of the meeting of the Board of Trustees of July 25, 1917, on page 74:

"The Board of Trustees was informed that Mr. John R. Watts, at present general assistant to the business manager, being acceptable to the Board of Directors and to the Board of Trustees, had been elected business manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society on the resignation of Mr. David B. Ogden."

Q. Have you your account books here, Mr. Watts? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or the account books of the society for the last three years? A. I don't know about that. Yes.

Q. Have you had them audited? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often do you have them audited? A. Once a year.

Q. And whom is that done by? A. Harvey, Chase & Company.

Q. The public accountants? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do they make an annual report to you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you their reports here for the last three years? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you let me take them, please?

[Certain documents are passed by the witness to Mr. Bates.]

Mr. Whipple—Now, let us put on the record what you have, won't you, Governor Bates? Just enumerate them, please.

Mr. Bates—I have what purports on its face to be a document from Harvey S. Chase & Co., entitled, Christian Science Publishing Society, March 31, 1917. June 15, 1917.

Also a document from Harvey S. Chase & Co., entitled, Christian Science Publishing Society, Report Upon Balance Sheets. Audit as of March 31, 1918.

Also, from Harvey S. Chase & Co., a report entitled, Report Upon an Examination of the Books and Accounts of The Christian Science Publishing Society for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1919. June 26, 1919.

Will Your Honor pardon me just a moment so that I may look at these?

The Master—If Governor Bates has never seen them before, it would seem that it would be necessary to take a good deal of time to examine them. Can't you arrange so that that might be done—

Mr. Whipple—I understand that copies have been sent to the directors, have they not?

Mr. Rowlands—No.

Q. Have copies of these reports been sent to the directors? A. I don't think that copies of the auditors' reports have.

Mr. Whipple—Have your own reports been sent?

The Witness—The sheets have been.

Mr. Whipple—The sheets from which they have been made up?

The Witness—Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—But they have always been accessible to the directors and their counsel, just as all the papers have that we have, and as all the records that we have are, and have been.

Mr. Bates—I offer these documents as exhibits.

Mr. Whipple—We shall be very glad to have them marked.

The Witness—Wait a minute.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, have you copies of them?

The Witness—I do not feel that we ought to part with those as exhibits.

Mr. Whipple—I think that you must do it if you haven't copies of them.

Let them be marked and then restored to our possession, because we may need them.

[The documents described by Mr. Bates are marked respectively, Exhibit 91, R. H. J., Exhibit 92, R. H. J., and Exhibit 93, R. H. J.]

Q. What were the net profits of the Publishing Society for the year ending March 31, 1919? A. March 31, 1919, $513,999.69.

Q. And how much of those net profits have been paid to The Mother Church? A. $387,103.11.

Q. And how much is still to come to them on account of that year? A. $131,896.

Q. And those are profits that had accrued up to the first of April, that have not yet been turned over to The Mother Church? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has it not been customary to turn those profits over more promptly? A. Possibly so. I hadn't known it if it had been.

Q. Do you know of any reason why they have not been turned over? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, this is all after the bill was filed, and in this connection I want to give notice.

Mr. Bates—The net profits in this society for the year that ended on March 31, and it was all, therefore, before one of the bills was filed, and it was all before Mr. Whipple's bill was filed, with the exception of 5 or 6 days.

Mr. Whipple—The payments regarding which you are inquiring have all been since. You must know, if you have any familiarity with it, that it is a perfectly legitimate thing. But I want to make this suggestion: I have been asked to agree that this witness may be suspended, if there is only a little to do, for Monday morning, to accommodate your London gentleman and the president of your church. I want now to give notice that I shall withdraw that assent if the time is wasted in an examination which has nothing to do with Mr. Watts, and which is on the books on bookkeeping matters, which can be put in at any time.

Mr. Bates—We understand that your assent is withdrawn.

Mr. Whipple—It is. I withdraw it.

Mr. Bates—It comes too late to be of any service to us. The gentleman has already arranged to stay here until Monday morning.

Mr. Whipple—Well, the arrangement that I had made was to suspend on Monday, and I shall not do that. I shall insist, if I am within my rights, that you finish with this witness: if you want to put these bookkeeping questions, you have got to put them before Mr. Doorly goes on.

Mr. Bates—I do not understand my brother's position, but it looks as though, if I am going to examine him in regard to the business of the Publishing Society, then he is going to make Mr. Doorly miss his boat and stay in America a longer time. That is his position, why—

Mr. Whipple—That is not my position. You have stated it as uncorrectly and unfairly as you have made several statements. I thought before that it was because you did not understand what was said to you, and I hope to continue to think so.

Mr. Bates—My attention is called by associate counsel to what is confirmed by my recollection—that when I started to ask Mr. Eustace these questions when he was on the stand, that my brother objected on the ground that Mr. Watts was more familiar with them, and that he was going to put him on, and therefore we waived asking Mr. Eustace the questions.

Mr. Whipple—You have all the papers, you have all the accounts, you might put these questions and argue about them at any time, but you are simply wasting time here on bookkeeping questions and asking me to suspend our case to accommodate Mr. Doorly. That is not the way to conduct a cross-examination, putting in a lot of things that have nothing to do with this witness. You have all our books and papers and they are accessible at any time.

Mr. Bates—This man is business manager and I wish to ask him a few questions about these books and the way they have been kept.

Mr. Whipple—Well, go ahead and ask them.

Mr. Bates—Well, that is what I am trying to do.

Mr. Whipple—No, you were not; you were pausing and taking more time to look over accounts, bookkeeping accounts, than was necessary, and His Honor noticed it and called your attention to it.

Mr. Streeter—I thought he was pausing to have a quarrel with you.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, I don't think he could have been, because I don't see why he should want to have one.

The Master—If you desire to ask him questions in regard to the way those books are kept wouldn't it be possible to get at it a little more directly?

Q. You have stated, Mr. Watts, that the profits, the net profits of the business, in 1916, were $258,900? A. Yes, if that is what I stated.

Q. And you have stated that the net profits for the 15 months ending March 30, 1917, were $513,869? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any explanation, apart from your efficiency as business manager, of the rapid increase in the net profits during that time? A. I don't pretend in any way that my own efficiency had anything to do with it.

Q. Well, will you answer my question, then? What did have anything to do with it? A. I think the natural growth of the business, the increase in the subscriptions and the increase in our advertising rates, together with the general efficiency of the whole publishing house, is what accounts for that.

Q. Was it not during that time that you took over the publication of Mrs. Eddy's works under the contract with the Trustees under the Will? A. We took them over in November, 1917.

Q. So that from November, 1917, to March 30, a period of five months, you were receiving, in addition to the profits from the regular publications of the business, the profits from the publication of Mrs. Eddy's works, which you had not previously received? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was a considerable and large amount, was it not? A. Well, I shouldn't call it a large amount; it was considerable.

Q. Well, can you tell us how much it was? A. Yes, I think I can.

Mr. Streeter—Is that for the five months, Governor Bates—the first five months?

Mr. Bates—The first five months.

Mr. Streeter—From November, 1917, to March, 1918. A. The commissions for November, December, January, February, and March, of 1917 and 1918, were as follows: November, $8413; December, $11,488; January, $6995; February, $5521; March, $7026.

Q. About $40,000 in the aggregate?

Mr. Whipple—But those are not profits, those were merely commissions.

Q. Were you giving me the profits from that business? A. They were the commissions.

Q. Well, they are profits, are they not? A. No, they are not profits. $36,000 or $37,000.

Q. What were the profits from that business? A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Doesn't your bookkeeping show? A. It is an estimate of profits. I don't know, sir.

Q. Aren't your books kept in such a way that you can show the profits from the publication of Mrs. Eddy's works? A. Yes.

Q. Well, what were the profits, then, during that period? A. As nearly as the thing can be stated, part of our computation being estimates, the net profits for those months were: November, $4900; December, $7500; January, $1500; February, $1900; March, $3300.

Mr. Whipple—A total of what?

The Witness—A total of, I assume, about $18,000.

Mr. Whipple—Out of more than half a million profits.

Q. You say those are estimates? A. $19,355, for the period of time.

Q. Mr. Watts, I understand those are estimates? A. No; they are as nearly as we can arrive at it, excepting that we have got to charge to some extent—

Q. Are they estimates that appear on your books?

Mr. Whipple—Just a minute. Let him finish his answer.

Mr. Bates—I want to shorten this.

Q. Are they the estimates as they appear on your books? A. Yes, sir.

Q. During that same period, 1917, the period when there was such a large increase, you did increase the price of The Monitor, did you not—the subscription price? A. July 1, 1917, was the increase in subscription.

Q. And it was increased from $5 to $9 a subscription? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you also increased the price of the Journal, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how much was that increased? A. To $3. It was $2.

Q. And you also increased the price of the Quarterly? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how much was that increased? A. From 50 cents to $1.

Q. And how many copies of that are circulated? A. About 450,000.

Q. So that your income from that alone would be about $450,000? A. Gross income. Not quite that. There is a discount of 10 per cent and so on.

Q. And if you increased the price of 450,000 copies from 50 cents to $1 that would account for $225,000 increase, would it not? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—Increase of what?

Mr. Bates—In his receipts.

Mr. Whipple—I thought you were talking about profits. You seem to forget there was any increase of cost.

Mr. Bates—I am helping you to find out how these profits were increased so much.

Mr. Whipple—Well, you are bigger on eloquence than you are on finance, it seems to me.

Mr. Bates—It seems to trouble you.

Mr. Whipple—Not in the slightest; it amuses me.

Mr. Bates—Then try and be calm.

Mr. Whipple—It amuses me.

Mr. Streeter—It amuses everybody.

Q. Now, Mr. Watts, you not only increased the prices of these magazines, but you also increased the price of the Sentinel, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much was that increased? A. A dollar a year.

Q. From what? A. Two dollars to $3.

Q. From $2 to $3 a year. And you also at the same time increased the advertising rates, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. A percentage? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much? A. I don't know the percentage, but the increase was on display from 30 to 50 cents, and on classified from 20 to 30 cents.

Q. Well, it was an increase of 33 to 50 per cent? A. Pretty nearly.

Q. And you admit, I assume, that all those increases had something to do with the increased profits in that year? A. Why, certainly, they would enter in; but, Governor, I would like to explain one question; that is, that none of those increases went into effect instantly. We had subscriptions on our books running for a year, and the new rates didn't go into effect until the old subscriptions—

Q. They all began to operate as soon as the subscriptions ran out?

A. Yes, sir. The same thing on advertising. We had many, many contracts. There was hardly a dollar of immediate income, because all of our advertising contracts ran up to the period of its terminating, before the increase went into effect.

Q. Now, when you are figuring up the profits which you are turning over to the Church, you do not make any allowance on account of receiving the rent of the Publishing Society building free, do you? A. No, sir.

Q. And you don't pay anything as rent for those buildings? A. Not for the immediate publishing house.

Q. You not only increased the rates for the advertising, but you increased the rates for putting the cards in the Journal? A. Yes.

Q. And how many cards are there published in the Journal, roughly speaking? A. Well, I have known—I should say about 8000.

Q. 8000. And how much did you increase those rates? A. I believe I have forgotten. Just this moment I don't remember just what that increase was, Governor.

Q. Can't your assistant give you that information? A. No. I will be glad to ascertain and advise you.

Q. But they were substantial increases? A. Yes.

Q. What had they been previously, do you remember? A. They were increased on simply the churches and societies, as I remember it, but not on the practitioners; and the practitioner is, of course, 6800 as against 1800.

Q. Is it not a fact that you doubled the rates on those cards? A. On the churches I think we did, sir. From $3 to $5, that was the increase.

Q. And, in addition to all of these reasons for the increase, it is the fact that the Christian Science movement is constantly progressing and enlarging and the number of Scientists is increasing throughout the world? A. Indeed it is.

Mr. Whipple—As a result of the periodicals.

Q. Now, will you explain, Mr. Watts, about that borrowing of $200,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us how that occurred? When was it? A. Part of it is hearsay. In my recollection, it was in November, but I will give you the information in just a moment.

Q. November of last year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the amount was $200,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long did you keep it? A. At just this moment I do not know, but I think it was until some time in January; but we paid back $50,000 within a few days, and in a few days longer another $50,000, and in a little while longer another $50,000, and in January, I think it was, another $50,000.

Q. Whom did you borrow the $200,000 of? A. The First National Bank.

Q. And for what purpose did you borrow it? A. To pay the Church the balance of the payment that was due to it.

Q. Then of the $337,000, if that figure is right, that you paid the Church out of the net profits of the last fiscal year of the society, $200,000 of it you had to borrow in order to make the payment? A. We borrowed $200,000.

Q. Where do you keep your bank accounts, of the Publishing Society? A. The First National Bank, the Dorchester Trust Company, the State Street Trust Company, principally. We have a small account with Mr. Fernald's bank up in New Hampshire.

Q. Do I understand you to say you have an account with the Dorchester Trust Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is located out in Dorchester? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attempt to borrow this $200,000 of the Shawmut National Bank? A. Yes.

Q. And were you keeping an account there at the time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did the bank refuse to loan you the money? A. Yes.

Q. And on the ground that it was in violation of your Trust Deed to borrow money? A. No, sir.

Q. Did they not state to you that you had no legal right to borrow money under that Trust Deed? A. No, sir; they said that they were not satisfied that we did have that right, but not that we didn't have the right.

Q. And you took your account away and went to the First National? A. No, sir. We borrowed the money from the First National. They gave it to us instantly, upon submitting our Deed of Trust to counsel, and then, of course, we went to the First National.

Q. And you took your account away from the Shawmut? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whom did you talk with at the First National? A. Mr. Wing, the president.

Q. And did you do the talking personally? A. I think I called on Mr. Wing and asked him if I could arrange for an interview for the trustees, and he made the arrangement.

Q. Did you submit to him your document also? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Trust Deed. And you had submitted it to the Shawmut Bank also? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Mr. Wing give you an immediate answer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you, in substance, that he questioned your right, but you were good fellows and he guessed he would let you have it? A. No, sir; he did not. He said—

Q. What did he say? A. May I state what he did say?

Q. Yes. A. He said, "On a showing like that, with such assets as you have got there, millions against practically little or no liability, I assure you in advance you can have the money, but I will submit it to counsel and ascertain from our counsel whether we are correct in making you that statement."

Q. Whom did you talk with at the Shawmut Bank? A. I don't know his name, sir.

Q. You don't know his name? A. Not at this moment, sir.

Q. Was it the president of the bank? A. You said Shawmut, didn't you, Governor?

Q. Yes. A. Did you ask me his name?

Q. Yes. I asked the name of the officer whom you talked with at the Shawmut National Bank. A. At this moment it has passed from my memory.

Q. Do you know what office he held? A. Why, I thought he was a cashier.

Q. Was it Mr. Murdock? A. I think not.

Q. Was it Mr. Gaston? A. No.

Q. Was it Mr. Adams? A. Yes—the credit man, as I understand it, of the bank.

Q. Do you know how much interest you paid on account of that loan before it was finally adjusted? A. I think approximately $2600.

Q. And in what safety deposit box did you deposit the currency that you drew out of the bank? A. Massachusetts Trust Company.

Q. You deposited there $60,000 at one time, of currency? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And $30,000 at another? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understood you to state that you requested your chief accountant to withdraw the cash from the banks and to make the deposits in the safety deposit vaults? A. They send their automobiles to our office every day—the banks do.

Q. Who does? A. The First National Bank. And we just ask them to leave that money. They often leave us like sums to take care of our pay rolls, and so forth.

Q. Did you yourself deposit the money in the safety box? A. No, sir.

Q. Who did that? A. Miss Mary Bartlett, the chief accountant.

Q. Do you know how she got the money? A. The bank brought it to her. That is all I know, sir.

Q. You never saw it? A. Yes, I saw it.

Q. Well, you didn't deposit it in the box? A. No, sir.

Mr. Bates—I wish to direct Your Honor's attention at this point to Section 4 of the Trust Deed, which says: "Said trustees shall keep accurate books of account of all the business done by them, and shall deposit in a responsible and reliable bank or trust company all bonds, mortgages, deeds, and other documents or writings obligatory of every kind and nature for safe keeping; also all surplus funds over and above the sum necessary to defray the running expenses of the business, until the same shall be paid over to the church treasurer, as herein provided. No papers or monies shall be taken from said bank or trust company excepting by and in the presence of a majority of said trustees."

Also to a further provision in the same paragraph:

"No authority is intended to be conferred upon the trustees to expend the money of the trust for property not necessary for the immediate successful prosecution of the business, or to invest the same for purpose of speculation, or to incur liabilities beyond their ability to liquidate promptly from the current income of the business."

The Witness—Might I explain to the Governor why we borrowed?

Mr. Whipple—No. I shall examine you in a moment. And besides, I don't think there is anything to explain. It is perfectly obvious to anybody. Mr. Bates is now reading our bill.

Mr. Bates—Mr. Watts, your counsel prefers that you should not and it is immaterial to me.

The Witness—Thank you.

Mr. Bates—I haven't had the opportunity, Your Honor, to examine this statement to see how it compares with the statement that was furnished the directors. I notice some things which appear to me to be discrepancies or certainly differences, but I won't ask for an explanation of them until I have had more time to examine them. I do wish, however, to read into the record from Exhibit 93, which is the report of Harvey S. Chase & Co., certified public accountants, 84 State Street, Boston, to The Christian Science Publishing Society for the fiscal year ending March 1, 1919, of their examination of the books and accounts of the society.

Mr. Whipple—That I object to, if Your Honor please. There is no reason why exhibits should be read into the record, as far as I can see.

The Master—Why is it necessary? If the exhibit is here why is it necessary to put that into the record?

Mr. Bates—Well, then, I wish to direct Your Honor's attention to it, and I will submit that it ought to go into the record when Your Honor has heard it.

The Master—That title page doesn't need to go into the record.

Mr. Bates—That is for the purposes of identification.

The Master—You can identify it by the exhibit number, can't you?

Mr. Bates—Well, I will strike out the title page, if Your Honor thinks—

The Master—Oh, well, go on.

Mr. Streeter—Your Honor, is there any objection to this short letter going in? It would be a great deal more convenient for us if it were in the record where we could see it.

The Master—I don't know what it is.

Mr. Whipple—It doesn't have to be read in order to get into the record. If you all want to go to the expense of having it typewritten in the record we have no objection.

The Master—Why take time to read it?

Mr. Bates—I think, Your Honor, it is very important. It is as important as any evidence that has as yet been introduced into the case.

The Master—It is there.

Mr. Streeter — Your Honor, we would like very much to hear it now.

Mr. Bates—I am not going to read it all, Your Honor—just sections of it.

The Master—Go on—read it.

Mr. Whipple—No. If it is going to be read it should all be read. What in the world is the use here, when you have got a man who wants to sail for Europe and you have got an exhibit here, to read that in?

Mr. Bates—Don't be disturbed about it.

Mr. Whipple—I am not disturbed about it. You are the man who was disturbed about your man wanting to go to Europe. Now we know how much danger there is about it.

The Master—Two of the counsel want it read. I think we will have to have it read. As far as I can see it might just as well stay where it is, an exhibit to be referred to hereafter in arguments, but if counsel desire, it may be read.

Mr. Bates—I read from the first page:

"Some years ago we installed for the trustees a system of costs and a system of double-entry accounts with suitable 'plant and furniture' depreciation, reserve accounts, etc. Regular and reasonable rates of depreciation have been allowed upon the books annually since that time and we have audited these accounts with care annually.

"This year, however, there has been a marked departure from the methods installed by us and in vogue heretofore, and it is evidently our duty as your auditors to point out what the result must necessarily be if these changed methods are continued.

"While depreciation allowances have been charged to 'expense,' your bookkeepers, under the trustees' instructions, have also charged off to 'expense' this year all expenditures for additions to plant and furniture accounts. This means that 'expense' has borne a double charge this year and the statement of profits reduced accordingly, and likewise the total of plant assets.

"As certified public accountants, we cannot agree that such accounting is correct, and, therefore, our balance-sheet differs considerably from the balance-sheet taken directly from the society's books as they now stand.

"We advise strongly that proper journal entries be made now in the books so that the present balances may be corrected and the books brought into agreement with the exhibits submitted herewith.

"We have also prepared a revised income-and-outgo statement in which the same corrections are made as upon the balance-sheet, though of course upon the reverse side of the accounts. The changes which we have introduced are explained in the 'Comments' following exhibits."

"These items"—I will read the items just above. "This increase"—of $121,- 045.93 — "consists of the following items."

Mr. Whipple—Increase in what?

Mr. Bates—Plant accounts.

"Additions to plant and furniture .....	$109,898.67
Stencil system installation.	7,562.38
Construction, Norway Street building and garage ....	3,584.88
	$121,045.93

"These items in the books had been charged off to 'expense,' and in addition to this total, $50,000 more had been charged off to 'expense' in lieu of depreciation and $47,324.18 had been charged off against inventories of 'stock and stores.' In this way a total $218,370.11 had been charged off for depreciation and correspondingly reduced profits.

"While it is true that some proper charge should be allowed annually for depreciation at regularly established percentages depending upon the estimated life of each class of assets, the total arbitrarily charged as above is a wholly unreasonable one in our opinion, especially as $193,106.31 had already been set aside as a reserve for depreciation during prior years, leaving only $171,102.64 to represent the book value of all the plant and furniture at the beginning of the year. A charge of $50,000 against this in the first six months is wholly disproportionate and unreasonable in our opinion. A similar charge of $50,000 for the second six months was ignored by the bookkeepers, although we saw written instructions from your board that such a charge be made. A total charge of $100,000 per annum as depreciation on plant assets of $171,102.64 is preposterous from an accountant's viewpoint.

"It is true, of course, that your board has had the advantage for many years of using the cash 'subscriptions outstanding,' and 'card contracts outstanding'—amounting this year to about $670,000—as 'working capital' to carry on the business; otherwise it would have been impossible for you to have financed your transactions without resort to loans at the bank, or to special capital furnished by The First Church or to the Trustees under the Will, or otherwise. Indeed, this year we find for the first time that a loan of $200,000 was negotiated at the First National Bank, Boston, on which interest of $2,623.61 was charged and paid.

"19. Reserves: These items explain themselves, except that we should mention that on the books there is a reserve against inventories of stock and stores amounting to $47,324.18, which we have not allowed in our statements for the reason that if such an allowance be made at the end of the year a similar allowance should likewise be made at the beginning of the year, and as the inventories at both periods were about the same figures, there would be no effective result. To set up a reserve on the books of $47,324.18 at the end of the year only, would reduce the book profits by that amount with nothing to offset it and be, once more 'preposterous' from a correct accounting standpoint.

"Your trustees should bear in mind that all of these matters of reserves, and of depreciation, of 'invested capital,' etc., have been recently thoroughly threshed over by the United States Government in connection with the income and war profits tax returns, and that Treasury rulings have been promulgated concerning what is true and what is false accounting in relation thereto. It would, therefore, be not only bad judgment but might be highly dangerous, particularly in the present state of affairs, for your trustees to depart arbitrarily from accepted canons of good accounting as has been, perhaps thoughtlessly, done during the past year in your books.

"If you desire, we shall be pleased to prepare proper journal entries whereby these incorrect balances may be made correct."

I find under the statement the following items for this year—that is, ending March the 31st:

"Loss, exclusive of 'Camp Welfare' sales, $209,954.98"—in red ink. Adding Camp Welfare sales makes a net gain for The Monitor of $19,807.19.

Q. Did the Publishing Society, the trustees, or the manager, consult with the directors in regard to these changes in accounting, that are referred to in this report? A. No.

Mr. Whipple—There are no changes of accounting.

Mr. Bates—The report says there are. That is all.

[Redirect Examination.]

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Mr. Watts, do you as a business man or an accountant agree with these criticisms? A. Not in any way.

Q. That is, here is a certified accountant who criticizes the amount you have put on for depreciation—the amount that you have taken off, at least, for depreciation? A. Yes.

Q. Now, he calls attention to the rulings of the Treasury Department in that connection, as to what is proper depreciation. You are not subject to those at all, I understand? A. No, sir.

Q. That is, you pay no income tax? A. No, sir.

Q. Being the kind of organization that you are? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the question involved between this accountant and your own accounting system is merely how much shall be charged for depreciation? A. Another question that the chief accountant called my attention to,—he has deducted the entire $472,000, as I understand it, from the gross income on The Monitor and failed to take from the outgo the expenses of the production of the Camp Welfare. I would like to explain that. May I?

Mr. Whipple—I wish you would, yes. Go ahead and do it.

The Witness—The difficulty with the accountant there and our viewpoint is to me quite clear. He is dealing as an accountant with businesses generally and fixed rules. He overlooks entirely the fact that The Christian Science Publishing Society runs without capital, and that every dollar of our profits is to be accounted for to The Mother Church, which, if it happened on a day set, would leave the Publishing Society without a dollar in its treasury, saving and excepting the money that has been paid to us for unearned subscriptions. Now, running a business of this nature, some two years ago it was found absolutely necessary, because of the confusion with church accounts, to extend credit to the churches, so that they could buy ad libitum during the month, and at the end of the month we would send them a statement for the amount they were owing us on that day. These churches receive these statements and they have to go through the routine of being submitted to their Boards of Directors or Trustees, and finally approved, and the money sent back to us. It means a delay on the average of from 60 to 90 days. It is absolutely good business and the best accounts in the world, but they are from 60 to 90 days in coming to us. Therefore until that money comes to us of course we find ourselves with a great amount of accounts receivable and, with the ordinary course of business, of accounts payable, we must keep some cash on hand. Therefore, when, for instance, the day we sent them the $100,000—or today, for instance, we have got from $150,000 to $175,000 in bank—we have got approximately $320,000 in accounts owing to us. That is made up of such accounts as $11,000 from The Mother Church, $3500 from the Trustees under the Will, $171,000 from the banks, etc. The moneys owing to us are temporarily tied up until The Mother Church and Trustees under the Will and these branch churches send it in to us. In the interim, although we had in our hands possibly, as we have today, from $150,000 to $175,000, we did not remit. We owe them today $131,000. And we have got $150,000 to $175,000 in bank. But we carry that money to keep up our current expenses, and as the trustee deed requires, and as the money comes in from the branch churches and The Mother Church and the Camp Welfare, etc., we accumulate it and pay it over to The Mother Church. We have done that for two years, and it is perfectly good banking, but it leaves us in that state where we have those unearned subscriptions, as appears here, $620,000. We have that money, but we couldn't buy plant. At one time when The Mother Church needed money we treated our plant as an asset and credited it against the liability on the unearned subscription. We found that was not proper business, because we have no right to treat a dead asset like a plant and hold that against the unearned subscription.

Q. That is, in banking, it is only your net assets that are of any consequence? A. Well, it is our quick assets.

Q. I mean your quick assets. A. Yes, our quick assets, that are of any consequence. So that this year, instead of doing as we might ordinarily have done, charging off $50,000 to plant account, we simply made it a rule that we would not carry plant any longer, because of its being a dead asset. Those things that are in there, like repairs, garage, fixing up a lunch room, things of that sort—instead of treating them as an asset against the unearned subscription, we charged them off, because those things were all absolutely necessary under the Deed of Trust to conduct the business.

Q. And you regard it as perfectly good bookkeeping? A. Absolutely good bookkeeping.

Q. But the dispute is only about a question of bookkeeping? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And not about the real soundness of the situation? A. The dollars and cents are exactly the same as I have furnished them here in these auditors' reports.

Q. If you didn't charge off as much as you have charged off, your profits would show more? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is a question merely of estimating the depreciation on the plant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a reorganization of your system of charging off? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you spoke of borrowing $200,000 and keeping it for a season. How much was due to you from the branch churches and The Mother Church, perhaps, at that time when you borrowed $200,000? A. Oh, I should say approximately from $300,000 to $350,000.

Q. That is, you had due to the Publishing Society from the branch churches, who took 60 to 90 days to pay their bills, some $300,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any question but what it would be paid? A. None whatsoever.

Q. And then instead of keeping The Mother Church waiting for the profits which were really in the hands of the treasurers of the branch churches, you went to the bank and borrowed money enough to pay them, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Against the $300,000 that the branch churches owed you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you understand is the thing that the directors are criticizing because you have borrowed the money and paid them the profits before you otherwise could have done? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that it? A. Yes, sir. I have overstated to some extent that amount. I said three hundred to three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. There was owing at that time from the branch churches $162,000; from The Mother Church, $27,000; from the Trustees under the Will of Mrs. Eddy, $18,000.

Q. How much from The Mother Church? A. $27,000.

Q. $27,000 that they owed you that they hadn't paid? A. $200,000 instead of $300,000.

Q. Then you borrowed about the amount that was outstanding with these churches? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understand that when you talked with Mr. Wing, he said that with the showing of assets that you had, he would not hesitate to advance the money at all. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, if you hadn't borrowed that money, would it have meant anything more than that The Mother Church would have been postponed in getting their $200,000? A. Possibly 60 days.

Q. Possibly 30 to 60 days, while The Mother Church was paying her bill to you—she would have to pay—some $27,000, or something like that, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And until the others, the branch churches had paid their bills? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Something has been said about this money that you took out so that it wouldn't be tied up in this litigation. Was that anything more than in your judgment was needed for the running expenses? A. Well, of course it was for the immediate running expenses then, but it would all have been needed for the period—as I figure it—the period of 30 days, while the injunction was being determined one way or the other.

Q. That is, for the running expenses during the period when your finances might be interrupted by the litigation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you increase the prices on the periodicals and the newspaper? Have you heard of anybody else's increasing prices along during these times? A. I think that all the publishers have done the same thing, as a rule.

Q. Publishers, grocery men and others, as well as laborers? A. I don't know of anything that has not increased, hardly.

Q. Then you keep up with the fashion? A. No, it was not that basis. The cost of white paper—could I give you some of those figures?

Q. I don't care to go into that. A. The cost of white paper, labor and everything increased altogether in proportion to our increase on the subscriptions.

Q. Well, then, I will ask whether the increases were reasonable, in the exercise of your business judgment, as compared with the increased cost? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were they in your judgment more than reasonable, in view of the increased cost of the commodities which you had to buy? A. No, sir.

Q. And were they made in the ordinary course of business? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wonder if the directors knew that you had increased these prices or was it a surprise when Governor Bates brought it out today? A. My recollection is that the figures were all gone over very carefully with the directors, and that at their conferences between the trustees and the directors they all agreed that something should be done to meet the conditions.

Q. That is, it was all discussed with the directors? A. I think it was.

Q. Now, if you hadn't increased your prices, would you have had any profits to pay over to The Mother Church at all? A. No, sir. They were increased because we saw that we would be publishing at a loss.

Q. Now, let me ask you whether out of this increase of prices these trustees themselves got any increase in salary? A. No, sir.

Q. Do they themselves have any personal interest in the increase? A. No, sir, none whatsoever.

Q. That is, if the increase of prices is unreasonable, and gives you more than a reasonable profit, who gets the benefit of it? A. The Mother Church.

Q. That is, these directors who are now criticizing you get the benefit of it? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bates—No, we have not criticized them at all.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, haven't you? I thought you were criticizing.

Mr. Bates—No; you don't understand.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, didn't you? We thought you did.

Mr. Bates—You understand altogether too well.

Mr. Whipple—Well, few do understand you, except that you are a very agreeable gentleman, but you don't make your questions altogether clear.

Mr. Bates—I think you understand all right.

Mr. Whipple—Well, sometimes I think I do understand you, and then again you mystify me.

Mr. Streeter—I should hate to have this meeting adjourned for a week, or to next Monday, without having two or three more passages between Governor Bates and Brother Whipple.

Mr. Bates—That is all, Mr. Watts. Cross-Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. (By Mr. Thompson.) Do you remember saying to somebody here that in November, 1918, Mr. Dittmore said to you that he hadn't a word of criticism to make? Haven't you got that at least a year too late, and wasn't it more likely to have been November, 1917, or even 1916? If you can't answer that right away, perhaps I can refresh your recollection so as to enable you to answer it. Do you recognize yourself as having made a mistake of at least a year in that date? A. I don't believe I remember the date clearly enough to state what year it was.

Q. All we are talking about now is this: You didn't mean to inform His Honor that that was in the year 1918, and have that taken as a fact? A. I believe I shouldn't want it taken as a fact just at this moment until I am clear on it.

Q. Perhaps I can make it even clearer to you. Now, you heard the testimony of Mr. Eustace and Mr. Rowlands, didn't you, and especially the testimony of Mr. Eustace, as to the various subjects of controversy between Mr. Dittmore and the trustees, as known to him—you heard those 28 or more topics mentioned? A. Yes.

Q. And you heard him say that those questions were under discussion from the time when the controversy became more or less acute between the directors and the trustees? A. Yes.

Q. Now, that controversy became more or less acute, or rather it became very prominent, away back in 1917, didn't it? A. Yes, I think it did.

Q. Yes. So that it couldn't be true, could it, that after Mr. Dittmore had been raising at least 28 different topics of discussion with Mr. Eustace and Mr. Rowlands, several of which, as stated here, related to the Publishing Society affairs—you wouldn't want to say that while all that was going on between him and Mr. Eustace and Mr. Rowlands, he said to you that he hadn't the slightest criticism to make—there is evidently a mistake as to time, isn't there? A. I don't know. I don't follow you entirely, because I don't understand that in those 28 items that you mention there was any criticism.

Mr. Streeter—Why don't you talk louder? Can't you speak a little louder?

The Witness—I think that I am talking loud. Possibly there are some here that can't hear me. Excuse me.

Q. Then you have forgotten what they were. Let me refresh your mind. A. I shall be glad to have you do so.

Q. Well, one of the subjects which both your employers, if I may so call them, the trustees, stated was under discussion between Mr. Dittmore and themselves, related to doctrines, the publishing of certain doctrines in the periodicals, that he did not think correctly expounded— A. That is not a business matter.

Q. That is not business. Another one was that the expenses of The Monitor were too great. Do you recollect that? A. Oh, I didn't remember that.

Q. It comes back to you now, doesn't it? A. I never knew there was any criticism on the expenses of The Monitor. They have never been made to me.

Q. I know; but when you say—I don't think you quite get the question yet—you undertook to tell the Court definitely that in November, 1918, long after Mr. Eustace and Mr. Rowlands state and truly state that Mr. Dittmore was disputing with them about these matters, Mr. Dittmore told you that he hadn't any criticism to make.

Now my question is, doesn't that fact show you that you put that date a year too late, and that Mr. Dittmore told you that, not in November, 1918, but probably in November, 1917, or even earlier? That is all there is to it. A. That is probably correct. It may possibly have been 1917.

Mr. Thompson—Now, I think I would rather let the rest of this go until Monday morning. There are a few more questions, perhaps, and perhaps I shall not have anything more to ask, but I would rather like to look over my papers a little bit and see.

Mr. Whipple—I can use the two minutes remaining before 4 o'clock by putting in a little more evidence.

Mr. Thompson—You will have him back again?

Mr. Whipple—Yes. (To the witness) You may step aside. You will be in here Monday morning so that questions may be put to you if there are any to be put to you.

Now I would like to take two minutes in reading from the minutes of the meeting of the directors on Jan. 13, 1919 (the present year), page 226 of the records:

"At a regular meeting of The Christian Science Board of Directors held at 9:30 a. m. on above date (Jan. 13, 1919), in the directors' room of The Mother Church, there were present Messrs. Dittmore, Neal, Merritt, and Rathvon. . . .

"Letters were read from Director Adam H. Dickey, dated Savannah, Georgia, Jan. 10, urging the directors to request that all advertisements on inside covers of the Christian Science periodicals be submitted to the directors before printing; and dated Jan. 11, recommending that we proceed slowly in the situation now existing between the directors and the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, and recommending that one trustee be dismissed rather than ask for the resignation of all of the trustees."

Will you be good enough to have that letter here in the morning, Monday morning, the letter of Jan. 11 from Director Adam H. Dickey, who was apparently away, on business, undoubtedly, in Savannah, Georgia?

There is one other record that I can read bearing upon the records. Where is that record where they consulted Mr. Smith as to what to put in the records?

Mr. Withington—Page 121.

Mr. Whipple—Then it is in another book; it cannot be in this one.

Mr. Withington—No; it goes this way.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, then it goes backwards. Will you find it?

Mr. Withington—There it is, on page 121.

Mr. Whipple—On page 121, at a meeting held on Tuesday, Oct. 1, 1918, this is the record:

"At a regular meeting of The Christian Science Board of Directors held at 9:30 a. m., on above date (Oct. 1, 1918) in the directors' room of The Mother Church, there were present Messrs. Dittmore, Dickey, Neal, Merritt, and Rathvon."

Then this record was made:

"The minutes of the directors' meeting of Sept. 11, relating to a conference with the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society on that date, were again taken up for consideration. To be referred to Judge Clifford P. Smith for an opinion as to what it would be best to include in the minutes and an opinion on the position of the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society as outlined in their letter of Sept. 30, Judge Smith to be furnished all information on the subject which will be helpful to him."

Mr. Thompson—Now, does that show—

Mr. Whipple—Now, if you will pardon me a minute.

Mr. Thompson—Excuse me.

Mr. Whipple—In connection with that record we will ask to have produced on Monday morning the real records of that meeting of Sept. 11, all the material and data which were given to Judge Smith for his opinion as to what it would be best to include in the record of that meeting.

Mr. Thompson—And also, will you be good enough to include in that call the several letters of protest written to the directors by Mr. Dittmore against this improper and misleading method of keeping the directors' records? You will find that they ought to have those protests included in the records themselves, but I don't believe that you will find them there. If they are there, they will be in the form of letters.

Mr. Bates—I object, Your Honor, to Mr. Thompson's statement characterizing this as an improper method. If Mr. Thompson does not know, everyone else knows, that all bodies have their records read at subsequent meetings, for the purpose of determining whether or not they are correct, and whether or not they shall stand without correction. If there are no objections, then they are approved. If there are corrections to be made, then they are made. And the question of how much is to be put in of a conference with the trustees is certainly nothing which authorizes you to say that it is an improper method, and I ask to have that stricken out.

Mr. Thompson—One moment. I will connect with that a call—

The Master—I understood that Mr. Thompson wanted certain letters of Mr. Dittmore, in which Mr. Dittmore expressed the view that that was an improper way of keeping the records.

Mr. Thompson—And also I will ask that now—

The Master—That, I think, is as far as his statement went.

Mr. Bates—He characterized the records themselves as being improper.

Mr. Thompson—No; pardon me.

Mr. Bates—And that is what I wish to have stricken out.

Mr. Thompson—I will ask my call now—

Mr. Bates—Just a minute.

Mr. Thompson—You will find that I never made any such statement; you will not be able to find it in the record.

Mr. Bates—Then that is satisfactory.

Mr. Thompson—I offer to show later that that statement is in the letter.

Now, I add to my call for Mr. Dittmore's letters, unless they are recorded in those records as they should be, a report made by Judge Smith himself to the effect that the methods by which these records had been kept was an improper method. You either have got it on your records or you have it in your independent papers. We have it in our diary here, and we have evidence of it.

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, in that connection, having read the record, and having listened to Governor Bates' suggestion as to what is well known as to the method of keeping these records, that they are read at the next meeting and approved, I want to call attention, in emphasizing the call, to the fact that the excerpt which I read is from the record of Oct. 1, 1918, which refers to the minutes of the directors' meeting of Sept. 11, which I take it preceded the other. That meeting was not the one immediately before, but it is the meeting which in the ordinary course we would expect would have already been recorded, and its minutes approved, because that appearing on page 97, it appears that on Sept. 12 there was another meeting of which we have a record, one on Sept. 16, and one on Sept. 17.

Mr. Bates—I would suggest, Your Honor, that there is no question which allows Mr. Whipple at this time to make an argument.

Mr. Whipple—One on—

Mr. Bates—I am objecting to your statement, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—It must impress you!

Mr. Bates—I object to your statement. If there is anything in the records that you wish to read in, we are satisfied to have you do it, but we object to your statement.

The Master—Well, it comes to this, Mr. Whipple—you want him to produce the original minutes of that meeting of Sept. 11?

Mr. Whipple—More than that, if Your Honor please. I want, having refuted the possible suggestion of the learned counsel that this might be, possibly, merely a question of approval—I want to show the original minutes and all the memoranda which were given to Judge Smith from which to make his selection as to what he would put in the records.

Mr. Bates—I so understood you to state before.

Mr. Whipple—And also his "opinion as to what it would be best to include in the minutes," because that was a written opinion, and if he gave a written opinion as to what should be included, it would doubtless involve also an opinion as to what should be rejected. That will help us to see how this record is made up.

Mr. Thompson—And the records of the intervening meetings, containing requests by Mr. Dittmore that the record of the meeting of Sept. 11 should be accurately entered, and a postponement of a compliance with that request until Judge Smith made his report.

The Master—Are we to hear anything further this afternoon?

Mr. Whipple—No, Your Honor. (To Mr. Watts) I understand that you will not be questioned further unless Mr. Thompson desires to ask you some questions Monday morning.

[Adjourned to 10 o'clock a. m., Monday, July 7, 1919.]

July 7, 1919

NINTH DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room, Boston, Massachusetts, July 7, 1919.

The Master—Are you ready to go on?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—Are you through with Mr. Watts?

Mr. Whipple—There is a single question that I want to put to Mr. Watts which I omitted, and I understand from counsel for Mr. Dittmore that they desire to use Mr. Watts' knowledge to identify certain signatures. However, I will put the question that I have in mind, if I may. That is all I find that I have omitted.

John R. Watts, Resumed

Re-Direct Examination, Continued

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Mr. Watts, what was the overturn last year in the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society, or, in other words, the amount of business that you did? A. The gross business was $4,173,429.

Q. Was that the largest business that you have done in any single year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What had it been in previous years? A. It had been something a little in excess of $2,000,000 the previous year.

Q. The previous year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And had it averaged about $2,000,000 for some little time or had it been less? A. No, sir; it was less, it had been increasing constantly.

Mr. Whipple—Those are the only questions which I desire to put. (To Mr. Thompson) Do you now wish to identify the letters?

Mr. Thompson—Possibly we should like to, but perhaps in view of the fact that Mr. Doorly is going to leave it might be well to suspend the cross-examination of Mr. Watts for a little while, so as to allow Governor Bates a chance to put on Mr. Doorly and others to cross-examine him who desire to do so.

Mr. Bates—I understand, Your Honor, that Mr. Doorly has canceled his sailing arrangements and is going to stay, so that he can be put on in regular order.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that is very gratifying. I have finished with Mr. Watts.

Mr. Thompson—There are a few minor questions that I desire to put to Mr. Watts; and then, if Your Honor please, you will find in paragraph 25 of our bill the allegation that there are a number of letters in our possession which the directors have been anxious to get, and we seek an injunction against their disturbing our possession of those letters. They are alleged to be letters of great importance, throwing light on the issues in Eustace v. Dickey.

Mr. Bates—Who made the allegations?

Mr. Thompson—We have made the allegation.

Mr. Bates—That is all right.

Mr. Thompson—And it has got to be proved; having been made, it must be proved. It happens that among those letters are a certain number the signatures of which Mr. Watts is familiar with and can identify. I should like during his cross-examination to introduce those letters through him, identifying them, not as evidence against the trustees, because I am well aware that they are not legally admissible against the trustees, being mere hearsay so far as they are concerned; but in the case of Dittemore v. Dickey it seems to us that that is the fairest thing to do, because if the directors sincerely desire to avail themselves of this evidence it gives them an ample opportunity to summon the writers of the letters. If they do not, that fact also will appear. If they do, it also gives the trustees a reasonable chance to see the nature of the evidence that is going to be introduced. So I think from every standpoint it is desirable that those letters should go in at this stage, but before introducing them I should like to put a few preliminary questions to Mr. Watts.

Re-Cross-Examination

Q. (By Mr. Thompson.) So far as you had any personal dealings with Mr. Dittemore during these years of controversy you found him personally courteous although firm in his views, did you not? A. Always.

Q. Now, speaking of the "empty shell" conversation, you remember that conversation that you testified about? A. Yes.

Q. When was that, by the way? A. Jan. 27.

Q. As I understood it, Mr. Dittemore, being present with the other directors, called your attention, or, rather, asked you what you supposed would be the result of the attitude taken by the trustees in regard to subscriptions to these various periodicals? Did he not put that question in substance? A. No.

Q. Didn't he suggest to you that one result might be and very likely would be a falling off in support by the field? A. No; he said the movement would not support the trustees.

Q. Well, that is another way, isn't it, of saying the same thing; the movement not supporting the trustees would mean the way they would show their lack of support according to his views, among other ways, would be a failure to support the periodicals published by the trustees? Isn't that the natural significance of that statement? A. That would be natural to suppose, that that would be one of the ways of looking at it.

Q. One of the consequences. And you realized at the time that that was one of the ideas that he was intending to convey—that a result, one result, of this controversy would very likely be, and in fact in his opinion certainly would be, that the field would show its disapprobation, at least at the outset, of the trustees, by refusing to take the periodicals any more? Isn't that one of the ideas he conveyed to you? A. No, it was not.

Q. Well, Mr. Watts, isn't it very— A. The idea that I had from their conversation was that the Church would start publishing its own periodicals.

Q. I beg pardon? The Church would what? A. Would start publishing periodicals.

Q. Just a minute. Will you be kind enough to get your attention a little more clearly on the question I put. A. I beg your pardon.

Q. He was trying to convey to you the idea that in some way or other one result of that controversy would be that the field would withdraw, in whole or in part, its support from the trustees? Yes or no. A. Yes.

Q. And in that idea you understood him to include the notion that the field would carry out that determination by dropping off in their support of the periodicals? I would like that, if you can answer it— A. Yes.

Q. And you understood, did you not, that the result if the field should stop supporting the periodicals, stop subscribing for them—that such a result might metaphorically be described as reducing the trustees to an "empty shell," isn't that true? That is what would happen, wouldn't it? If the field stopped subscribing, the Publishing Society would be what might be metaphorically described as an "empty shell"? A. No; I don't believe that would naturally follow.

Q. Don't you think so? You think even if the field should refuse to subscribe any more to any of these periodicals the condition of the Publishing Society would not be such as would popularly be called an "empty shell"? A. Not in any sense. May I state why?

Q. No, pardon me just a moment. They would keep right on publishing whether they sold or not? A. Yes.

Q. Or whether they were read or not? A. I didn't catch that.

Q. Whether the field read the periodicals or not, still the trustees would keep publishing them? A. The present subscribers, if I may state—

Q. Well— A. All right.

Q. I am going to give you an ample opportunity after I get through. A. Oh, I beg pardon.

Q. My impression is the better way to get at a fact is to stick to the question and then afterward make the explanation. A. Will you read the question again?

Q. I will repeat it; it isn't worth while to read it. Strike it out, Mr. Stenographer. I am asking you to make a supposition. Suppose that Mr. Dittemore's prediction had turned out to be true—I don't know whether it has or not—but suppose it had; suppose that the subscriptions from the field to the periodicals had dropped off, we will say, 90 per cent, so that 90 per cent of the Christian Scientists who were formerly paying for those periodicals stopped paying and ordered them discontinued. Now, wouldn't that situation be fairly described as reducing the Publishing Society to an "empty shell"? Isn't that a fair description of it, if it occurred? A. Yes.

Q. That is all I want. A. I want to explain that answer, though.

Q. Very well. Now, then, you may explain it. A. Mrs. Eddy having established these periodicals for the purposes for which she established them, and established the Publishing Society for the purposes for which it was established, if the entire present subscribers, the entire list of subscribers, canceled their periodicals, I haven't any feeling at all that that would stop the publication of those periodicals, because I believe their value to the world and to mankind would be recognized by as many other subscribers, and that other channels would be found through which those periodicals would continue to circulate throughout the world.

Q. So that your idea is that even if all the Christian Scientists in the world who are supposed to be primarily interested in these periodicals, should stop reading them, another assemblage of people would rise up, hitherto not Christian Scientists, and become such, in order that they might take the periodicals and support the Publishing Society? A. Because I believe that this work that is established by Mrs. Eddy can never be destroyed.

Q. That was the idea you received? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—But perhaps the central idea is that the work and the project established by Mrs. Eddy could never be defeated.

Mr. Thompson—I haven't any doubt of that.

Mr. Whipple—That is the implicit faith of the Christian Scientist.

Mr. Thompson—But I was speaking merely of this concrete proposition about these particular periodicals.

Q. Now, if it should happen that all the Christian Scientists in the world, being dissatisfied with the attitude of the trustees, should cancel their subscriptions, then it would be natural, and the next idea that would naturally occur to the authorities of the Church would be, to publish them under different auspices, wouldn't it, so as to perpetuate the names and the periodicals, and to have them circulate among those who desire to read them? A. Yes; but that was not the purport of his statement to me.

Q. Very well. Perhaps it may not have been the purport as you understood it, but I am only trying to bring out the natural import of the words. A. Yes, sir.

Q. As they might have been understood by another bystander? A. (No answer.)

Mr. Thompson—Now, I do not know whether this letter has gone into the case yet or not. It is a letter of Mr. Watts to the trustees, dated Feb. 17, 1919, and a copy was sent to the directors. Mr. Dittmore has marked his copy with his stamp.

Q. Do you remember any such letter?

Mr. Strawn—I don't think it has gone in, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—There it is. It is a contemporaneous statement.

Mr. Whipple—That has not gone in.

Mr. Thompson—It has not gone in. Would you like to see this, Governor Bates? (Handing letter to Mr. Bates.)

Mr. Bates—If you please.

Q. You recognize this, don't you, Mr. Watts, as a letter that you wrote upon request to the trustees, and a copy of which was sent to the directors? (Handing letter to witness.) Perhaps you have got your own copy to compare it with. A. No, I have not.

Q. That came through the regular official channel? A. I do not seem to recognize the letter at all.

Q. Will you look up your letter book or your copy and see if you haven't a copy of your letter of Feb. 17, 1919, addressed by you to the Board of Trustees, about these matters?

Mr. Thompson—Perhaps the easiest way is to ask Governor Bates. Governor Bates, have you a letter addressed by the corresponding secretary of The Christian Science Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees, dated Jan. 28, 1919, asking them to furnish the directors with the present actual paid circulation figures of each of the publications, and an original letter from Mr. Watts—a copy of a letter from Mr. Watts to the trustees—containing the information, with a letter from the trustees to the directors forwarding a copy of Mr. Watts' letter?

Mr. Bates—I assume the trustees' letters are in the possession of the trustees.

Mr. Thompson—But you must have the letter here addressed to the directors.

Mr. Bates—I mean the letters addressed to the trustees.

Q. Do you recognize that letter, Mr. Watts? It is hardly worth while spending much time on it. I have no doubt it is, it came through the official channels. A. No, I do not, sir.

Mr. Thompson—Then I will have to ask you to look up your part of the correspondence.

Mr. Whipple—We will look it up.

The Witness—I shall be glad to look it up; I do not remember it.

Mr. Thompson—See if you have, Governor, the letter of the trustees to the directors containing Mr. Watts' information? That will settle the matter if you have it. It is dated Feb. 17, 1919.

Mr. Bates—I will see if I can find it.

Mr. Thompson—I wish you would; I would like to get that in.

The Witness—The accounting department calls my attention to the fact that they have a copy of that letter.

Q. Can you authenticate it enough for me to get it in now? That is all I want. A. Yes.

[Copy of letter, John R. Watts, business manager, to Board of Trustees, dated Feb. 17, 1919, is marked Exhibit 94.]

Mr. Thompson—From Mr. Watts to the trustees, sent by the trustees to the directors in response to the letter of Jan. 28, asking for the information therein contained. And the letter of Jan. 28 is annexed to it as part of the exhibit.

Mr. Streeter—Is the letter of Jan. 28 in?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, that is part of the exhibit.

Mr. Whipple—That should be "a," then, shouldn't it?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, you might mark this as Exhibit 94a.

[Copy of letter from corresponding secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors to Board of Trustees, dated Jan. 28, 1919, attached to Exhibit 94, is marked Exhibit 94a.]

Mr. Bates—Mr. Thompson, we have found the original, if you desire it.

Mr. Thompson—If you will hold it there a minute, in case Mr. Watts' recollection should get dim at any stage, we could refresh it by the original. The original letter of Jan. 28 I will read.

[Mr. Thompson reads the latter dated Jan. 28, 1919, copy of which was marked Exhibit 94a, as follows]

Q. Those figures were accurate, were they, Mr. Watts? A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson—Now, I would like to introduce this column of comparative circulation of The Christian Science Monitor since they began to publish circulation figures. This appears to have been furnished November, 1918.

Q. Perhaps you recognize the origin of that set of figures and can throw some light upon it. I think you identified it when I had it in my hand before, in the examination of Mr. Eustace. It may have gone in before; I do not think so; it is not marked. A. I think it is all correct.

Q. Is there any reason why that should not go in as a fairly accurate summary of some of the facts that we want here? A. You mean, the card?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, I am going to ask you about the marginal comment later. I am only speaking of the card now. There is a marginal comment there by somebody. Have you any objection to this, Governor Bates? It is a column of figures from 1912 to 1918, showing comparative circulation of The Christian Science Monitor since they began to publish the circulation figures.

Mr. Bates—No objection.

[Card containing comparative circulation figures of The Christian Science Monitor from 1912 to 1918, with memorandum attached dated November, 1918, is marked Exhibit 95.]

Mr. Thompson—It seems to me this may be useful sometime as a summary.

Q. Now, I will ask you about this comment here. Do you know in whose handwriting that is under date of November, 1918? Perhaps you will read it to yourself and familiarize yourself with the facts stated in it. A. No, I can't identify the writing.

Q. Well, is it a fact that in November, 1918, you were wrapping and mailing about 50,000 to 55,000 individual Monitors daily? A. I could not state without going to our records.

Q. Does that strike you as about right? A. I do not know.

Q. Were about 50,000 going to camps at that time, in the United States and abroad? A. No, I thought not so many. About 40,000, I think.

Q. There were a good many gift subscriptions, weren't there, at that time? A. What do you mean by "gift subscriptions"?

Q. Why, people giving other people copies, subscribing for the benefit of other people? A. No more so than throughout our experience with the Publishing Society.

Q. Well, there are such things? A. A few.

Q. It is an important factor, isn't it?

A. It is a factor, but it is not an important factor.

Q. Isn't it true, as stated here, that the estimate given at your office was that at that time the net paid subscription was about 50,000 per day in all countries? A. Certainly not; not so.

Q. It is not so? You count as paid everything that is paid to you, whether the payment is by a church for a thousand copies to give away, or a thousand individual subscriptions? A. Yes.

Q. It makes no difference to you? A. No.

Q. Now, about cable tolls. There was a good deal of criticism from time to time from various sources about the amount that The Monitor was spending in cable tolls from London, wasn't there? I am not asking whether it was justifiable or not, but that subject was under discussion, wasn't it? A. Not until this trouble became acute.

Q. Well, I haven't asked when. At one time that was a subject of criticism, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And how many people did you have in your London Bureau at that time? You must have the names there. I have them somewhere. A. I have a record in—

Q. Wasn't the number 17, Mr. Watts? Here it is; I have it here (producing paper). Wasn't the number 17, Mr. Watts? A. I think it was 12; it may have been 17.

Q. It may have been 17? Now, isn't it a fact that very frequently during the war those people took the London morning papers and re-wrote condensed articles for cable from the London papers, and sent them over by cable? A. Mr. Thompson, the business office is not in touch with, nor in charge of the editorial or news end of the business.

Q. Who would know? Who would be able to answer that question definitely? A. The editor, Mr. Dixon.

Q. And nobody but the editor? A. Nobody but the editor, I think.

Q. All right, then; we won't bother you about it any more. Now, here is a paper furnished from some source—"Cable Tolls." See if you can identify that paper and the information in it as accurate (handing paper to witness). A. I could not without going to the records; but if you wish me to I will—

Q. You are in possession of information which would enable you to verify that in some way? A. Yes.

Q. You can't offhand? A. Offhand I can't.

Q. Will you sometime do that? A. Yes. May I keep it temporarily?

Q. Yes; I will take off this stuff. I don't know what it is. A. I may do it in a few minutes.

Q. All right; leave that on. If you will return it to me later. A. Yes.

Q. Now, here is a statement of "The Monitor local circulation," apparently emanating from your office—comparative statement of March, 1917, and March, 1918, very much in detail. Can you identify the source of that and verify it? A. Just this one sheet?

Q. Yes. A. No; I have never seen it before. I do not know its source.

Q. You do not know? A. No, sir.

Q. You could furnish the information therein stated if asked for? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the next paper is "Monitor average expense for year 1917," figured as an average for a period of 15 months, January, 1917, to March, 1918, inclusive. Does that arouse any answering ray of memory, either in its source or the information therein contained? A. No, not the slightest.

Q. Can't you recollect that these papers were furnished by you, or by your office, in response to various requests for information? A. If you mean those papers there, I know they were not, because they are not our typewriting in any way.

Q. They are not? A. No.

Q. How much were you paying for editorial writing a week on The Monitor at this period in 1918? A. I do not carry those figures.

Q. Would it be $2116.71 a week? A. I do not know. The editor can give you those figures.

Q. The editor can give me those? The European Bureau—do you know who were employed there, the amount of weekly salaries? A. I can ascertain if that is correct.

Q. You can verify it? You do not know it now? A. No, sir.

Q. I won't trouble you about it. Now, will you take those papers, if it is not too much trouble, and find out whether they are true, and be responsible for returning them to me sometime? A. Indeed, I shall.

Mr. Whipple—Would you like to have them marked provisionally with exhibit numbers?

Mr. Thompson—Yes; we might have them marked for identification, although I have not any doubt we shall get them back all right.

Mr. Whipple—Then we will have on the record just what we have become responsible for. That will be Exhibits 96 and 97 for identification?

Mr. Thompson—Mark them for identification, Exhibits 96 and 97.

[Statement of "Cable tolls" is marked 96 for identification; "Monitor local circulation, March, 1917, and March, 1918," is marked 97 for identification.]

Q. You said in your examination by somebody that you kept some money in the Concord Bank? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give me any idea, roughly, how much that is? A. Oh, a thousand dollars or two, I think, balance.

Q. A small amount? A. We have had a larger balance at times.

Mr. Streeter—I can't quite hear you.

The Witness—A thousand or two dollars, General.

Mr. Streeter—I know; but the last?

The Witness—At one time it was a little larger than that; I think as high as $10,000.

Q. Now, referring to the paragraph No. 11 of our bill in Dittemore v. Dickey, before coming to the question of the letters, I think perhaps you can throw some light on some of the issues there. To what extent has there been, in fact, an accounting by the trustees to the directors for the two years ending Oct. 1, 1918, showing that the directors have got the amount of profits they are entitled to under the deed and under the by-laws? A. Only the reports of the auditors.

Q. Have you ever furnished to the directors the reports of Chase, for instance?

The Master—Furnished what?

Mr. Thompson—The reports of Harvey Chase & Co., the public accountants that they have had.

Mr. Streeter—You mean the auditors' report?

Mr. Thompson—Yes.

A. No, not that I know of. They have never inquired for them.

Q. I haven't asked you that; merely the question whether you have ever furnished them. Now, what is this audit that you speak of with which you have furnished them? A. The statement from our books. The statement we have made, having been verified by the auditors.

Q. Who are the auditors? A. Harvey Chase & Co.

Q. That is, you have condensed or abbreviated or abstracted Harvey Chase & Co.'s reports and furnished your digest to the directors? A. No, sir; we have made our own statements and Harvey Chase & Co. have verified our figures.

Q. But have you sent to the directors Harvey Chase & Co.'s—over their own signature any verification by them? A. None that I know of.

Q. Have the accounts of the trustees been examined, audited and verified by public accountants at the end of six months' periods ending March 31, 1918, and Sept. 30, 1918, as well as for such periods in other years? Can you answer that yes or no? A. Yes.

Q. Have the accounts or audits, or whatever statement of accounts you have furnished with the check to the directors—have those statements been given to the directors at about the time of the semi-annual remittance of net profits? A. Yes.

Q. Were the net profits, as stated by the trustees for the two years ending Sept. 30, 1918, more than $760,566.20? A. I will answer you on that in just a few minutes; I can't tell you.

Q. It merely says "more than"; it does not say the exact amount, so that I presume you could answer that? A. Oh, yes—"More than $760,000."

Q. You do not know what the gross income of The Mother Church was? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, passing to paragraph No. 16 of our bill.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Thompson, may

I, with the permission of everybody, ask a single question?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir, by all means.

Mr. Streeter—Mr. Watts, is there any published account of the gross income and expenses of The Mother Church, so far as you know?

The Witness—Never heard of that.

Q. Now, speaking of the trustees, the member who has been longest on the board is Mr. Eustace. Is that not so? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he naturally has had much more experience in the history and management of the society than either of his associates, has he not? A. No more than Mr. Ogden. Mr. Ogden was there before Mr. Eustace came.

Q. But Mr. Eustace has been for the longest single term? A. A trustee, yes.

Q. He also has literary qualifications and is a writer of some distinction in your denomination, isn't he? A. I haven't known it.

Q. Doesn't he write himself occasionally? A. I don't know of that of my own knowledge.

Q. He has had a course at the Metaphysical College, hasn't he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he is a man of rather large reading and great acuteness in the doctrines of Christian Science, isn't he? A. He is a man of very splendid understanding as a Christian Scientist.

Q. And powers of expression also? A. Yes, sir, he expresses himself intelligently.

Q. Able to argue and enforce his views by argument with great ability, isn't he? A. I should not say "enforce" them.

Q. I do not mean "enforce" in any invidious sense; but able to present his views forcibly and clearly in argument or exposition? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would say that in those respects, perhaps in point of capacity for exposition and forcible exposition, not coercive exposition but forcible exposition of his views, he perhaps would be in that respect superior to his two associates? A. No, I should not.

Q. You would not say so? Is there any one of those people more than another of those three trustees that you would think had a larger influence than another on the Board of Trustees? A. No, sir.

Q. You think they are exactly equivalent? A. That has been my experience.

Q. You have never detected the slightest difference in their superiority in business affairs or literary affairs or any other aspect of ability among those three men? A. They are as nearly matched in those qualities as any three men you could find.

Q. Do you think Mr. Eustace is the equal of Mr. Rowlands in business ability, and that Mr. Rowlands is the equal of Mr. Eustace in literary ability and power of exposition? A. If there is a difference it is not appreciable to me.

Q. Now I will come to taking up paragraph 25 of our bill, and there are some letters here that I want you to identify the signatures to, and I think you will be able to do it without any trouble. The first letter I desire to call your attention to is dated March 15, 1919, signed by Miss C. Louise Richardson. You know her writing, don't you, and her signature (passing a paper to the witness)? A. No, I don't know her writing.

Q. She was one of your employees, wasn't she? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You can't tell whether that is her signature or not? A. No.

Q. She was discharged at one time, was she not? Yes or no on that, please. A. She was dismissed.

Q. Dismissed. Well—

The Master—Let me see if I understand what you are doing now, Mr. Thompson. If I have followed you correctly, these are some of the letters to which you refer in paragraph 25 of your bill?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir.

The Master—That means that they are letters contained in Mr. Dittemore's files?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir.

The Master—And his files are now in the possession of the directors.

Mr. Thompson—No, sir; he has still retained them under the injunction. The bill was brought partly in order to prevent him from losing control of these letters. There were two purposes in his bill. One was to prevent him from being ejected from his office; the other was to prevent his papers from being taken away from him.

The Master—These are the files which the directors requested him to surrender?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir, and he has made certain allegations about these letters. He has said—

The Master—You are now trying to show by this witness what?

Mr. Thompson—That certain of the letters—not all, but some of these letters—produced by me, and therefore, naturally, coming from Mr. Dittemore's possession, are letters of the kind described in that bill, namely, letters having an important bearing in the controversy in Eustace v. Dickey, letters which it is alleged in our bill there is danger might be suppressed by the directors unless they were delivered up to them. I wish to make these letters public at the present time.

The Master—Once you get the letters, that question can be settled by their contents. They will speak for themselves.

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir.

The Master—What further are you trying to show by this?

Mr. Thompson—I am trying to show the signatures on these letters, that is all. The letters I now have are letters written by people presumably known to Mr. Watts as having been in his employ formerly. The first one is rather discouraging, because he does not remember the handwriting, but I hope to have better luck with some of the others.

The Master—Are you now offering to prove the genuineness of the signature?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir, that is all.

The Master—Can there be any question about that? The alternative of their not being genuine is that they were fabricated. If there is a letter there purporting to be signed by somebody, can we not assume that the signature is genuine until it is questioned?

Mr. Thompson—I should hope so, yes, sir. There is no question of fabrication. There is no doubt that this is a letter from Miss Richardson, and Mr. Watts has testified that she was at one time in his employ, and was dismissed. That is what I want to produce it for. Mr. Dittmore alleges among other things that there were many complaints brought to him by individuals which led him to investigate.

The Master—Can it be that we have got to investigate the genuineness of those signatures?

Mr. Thompson—I think that other counsel might answer that better than I.

Mr. Bates—We know nothing about the letters, Your Honor. The only letters that we asked them, prior to the bringing of this suit, to turn over to the directors, were letters which he had belonging to the directors. As to what these papers are we know nothing.

Mr. Thompson—You will probably claim that these letters belong to the Board of Directors because they were written—

Mr. Bates—I don't know what that letter is.

Mr. Thompson—I will tell you what it is.

The Master—I am talking now about the genuineness of the signature. Why can we not have it assumed that the signature is genuine until somebody questions it?

Mr. Thompson—I think that that is the safest way, because I am giving Your Honor my assurance based on Mr. Dittmore's statement that they were received by him, and they were produced by him and given to me, and they have been in my possession a long time. I think that they are genuine letters, written to him, and signed by the parties purporting to sign them. Many of them are written with the pen, some of them are in typewriting and signed by the person sending it, but they are all original letters; and I will ask Mr. Watts one or two questions about them.

Mr. Streeter—Pardon me, Your Honor. The answer to this question must depend on what Mr. Bates or Mr. Whipple says.

Mr. Bates—I think, if Your Honor please, that if he wants to introduce those papers, he should submit them to us, and then perhaps we can tell whether they are genuine or not.

Mr. Thompson—I do not think that Governor Bates understands the point to which I am offering these letters. I am not offering them in evidence, in the first place, against the trustees, because I am well aware that I have no right to do so. They are hearsay as against the trustees. I am offering them to sustain a substantive allegation in our bill against the directors, namely, we have in our possession important letters, having an important bearing upon the issues of fact between Eustace and Dickey, which the directors have been trying to get away from us, we claim, in order to suppress them, so that the case may not be tried properly against the trustees; and we say that we are not in a position to use them ourselves, but that it is the fairest thing to do to put them in now, and the directors, if they want to use them, can summon the writers of them as witnesses. If they do not, our allegation is proved.

The Master—Now, Mr. Thompson, you have told us that once before.

Mr. Thompson—I am sorry for that, sir.

The Master—Now I should like to come back to the question of the genuineness of these signatures. Have we got to spend time in having the witness say that he is familiar, and how familiar, with the handwriting? It seems to me to be a waste of time.

Mr. Thompson—Let me pass this first letter to Mr. Whipple, and then to Mr. Bates, and ask them, after having read it, whether they have any doubt that that is a genuine letter. I do not believe that anybody will want to contest that.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, these are not offered in our suit, and we are not parties to the other suit, so that we have nothing that we care to say.

The Master—Oh, I quite understand that.

Mr. Bates—I understood that we were accused of suppressing them for fear that they would bother you in your suit.

Mr. Whipple—We will deal with that when we get to it.

The Master—Not, I understand, with suppressing them, but of a design to suppress them.

Mr. Bates—Yes, if we could get them!

[The letter purporting to have been written by Miss Richardson is passed to Mr. Bates for inspection.]

Mr. Bates—All I have to say, if Your Honor please, is that this is a letter which is entirely inadmissible under the rules of evidence. It is a private letter to Mr. Dittmore from Miss Richardson, and it states that it is written at his request. On the other hand, there is absolutely nothing in it that we object to, and if Mr. Thompson wants to offer it I have no objection to it.

Mr. Thompson—That is all, then, that it is necessary to say. Will you mark this?

The Master—Do you make any question as to the genuineness of the signature?

Mr. Bates—No.

The Master—Then it is a letter produced from Mr. Dittmore's files, and it is one of the letters referred to in paragraph 25 of the bill?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir. I might just say that it is not a private letter in the sense that it is written to Mr. Dittmore personally. It is addressed to him, but it is written to him in his official capacity. Mark it, will you?

Mr. Whipple—Now, if Your Honor please, this letter not being offered in the case of Eustace V. Dickey, what shall be the course pursued with reference to its serial number as an exhibit? Should it go right ahead in sequence, or should there be some distinguishing mark between those exhibits which are offered in the case between Mr. Dittmore and the directors? Otherwise, there might be a little confusion. Possibly it is enough to have it appear on the record, as it now does distinctly, that this letter is not offered in any way upon the issues in the case of Eustace and Dickey, and possibly with that statement with regard to each one of them, with Your Honor's ruling in case there should be any dispute, the sequence of numbers can be preserved. I merely offer the suggestion. I am not pressing anything one way or the other.

Mr. Thompson—I am perfectly agreeable to have it done in any way.

The Master—How would it be to have the letters offered marked by the serial number, and then have also a mark showing that they were offered in Mr. Dittmore's case and not in the other case? That, I think, might be very briefly indicated by putting on the number of the case. Mr. Dittmore's case has one number on the docket, and the other case has a different number on the docket, so that if you marked that exhibit with the consecutive serial number, exhibit number, and then add in brackets the number of the particular case, that would seem to distinguish them sufficiently.

Mr. Whipple—This, then, will be Exhibit 98. Have you the number of that case on your copy of the pleadings, General?

Mr. Streeter—No, it is not on this copy.

Mr. Whipple—Then would it be better to have it marked "Dittmore v. Dickey"? Let us just call it "Dittmore v. Dickey."

[The letter described, from Miss Richardson to Mr. Dittmore, dated March 15, 1919, is marked Exhibit 98. Dittmore v. Dickey. R. H. J.]

Mr. Thompson—I will not read any of the letters until I get them all marked. The next one is a letter from Mrs. Florence Clextan Hall to Mr. Dittmore, as one of the Board of Directors, dated Feb. 19, 1919. Please mark that in the same way.

Mr. Bates—One moment. I have only assented, Your Honor, to one letter.

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Watts identifies that as the signature of Mrs. Hall.

Mr. Bates—I should like to see the letter. I have examined only one. I assume that there are differences in them?

The Master—Why don't you offer them all together and let Mr. Bates see them all together?

Mr. Thompson—I guess that I would a little rather do it this way.

The Master—When you get them in, I take it that they will not be evidence of much of anything. We shall have to judge from their general tenor whether they can be supposed to be such letters as the directors might wish to suppress. That would be the whole story.

Mr. Thompson—That story will not be told, however, if Your Honor please, until the case is all over, because the best evidence of what they intend to do will be what they do with the writers of those letters after they have learned of their contents.

Mr. Bates—Can I look at the next one?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, take the next one (passing a paper to Mr. Bates).

The Master—I think that some short way ought to be adopted of dealing with all of them.

Mr. Thompson—I will try to hasten it, sir, but I really think that some of these letters ought to be introduced now, and ought to be read, so that there will be notice given at this stage of the case of what the letters really are. I do not desire to waste time, and I think that Your Honor appreciates that. I should not press the matter at this stage of the case unless I thought that it was really important for various reasons.

The Master—I understand that you think it is important, but I do not think that we need have gone into it at present.

Mr. Thompson—I want to make a public disclosure of those things now.

The Master—This hearing is hardly for the purpose of making any other public disclosure than such as is strictly necessary for the purposes of the case.

Mr. Thompson—Certainly, and I haven't any desire to make any that is not necessary.

The Master—I think that you had better pick out one or two of what you think are the strongest evidence of the supposed or alleged purpose of the directors with regard to suppression, and read those only.

Mr. Thompson—If Your Honor please, I have already picked out of a large mass of letters five or six on that very basis, and I have already done the very act which Your Honor suggests, of selection. I am not loading the case with all the letters that we have, but only with the most striking ones, and I do not think that it will take a great amount of time.

[The letter described, from Mrs. Hall to Mr. Dittmore, dated Feb. 19, 1919, is marked Exhibit 99. Dittmore v Dickey. R. H. J.]

Mr. Bates—This, if Your Honor please, is a typewritten statement eight pages long, closely written. I haven't had time to look it over. It purports to be the statement of Myra B. Lord, and is dated March 5 of the current year, and was apparently taken on Sunday, March 2, 1919, at Newton. Of course we object to any statement of that kind. There is nothing in it, so far as I know, but at the same time we object to it. It is a cluttering of the record with something that is absolutely worthless as evidence and has no bearing on the case.

Mr. Thompson—Pardon me; I thought that would come by and by. Mr. Dittmore has alleged here that among the grounds of his opposition to the trustees was their method of dealing with their employees, to which he had called the directors' attention, and which had not received their proper attention, and he had procured evidence on that topic which he says the directors did not propose to use. That is, Mr. Dittmore felt that his information called for action on the ground that it indicated oppressive and tyrannous conduct by the trustees, or some of them, toward their minor employees. Now, here is the evidence; here is the evidence that he sought to have you act on, and that you would not act on, and that you expelled him for maintaining. I want to have the Court know what that is.

Mr. Bates—There is absolutely no evidence, Your Honor, that this ever came to the attention of the Board of Directors, or either of these letters, in any way, shape or manner.

Mr. Thompson—Governor, you cannot expect me to try my whole case at once. There will be evidence—

Mr. Bates—If they ever do it will be possible for you to produce the proper evidence through Mr. Dittmore at the proper time.

Mr. Thompson—I press my offer of the evidence; it is strictly logical and exactly bears out the allegation in my bill; I couple with it the offer of the necessary further links of proof through Mr. Dittmore.

Mr. Bates—I submit to Your Honor that certainly this has nothing to do with Mr. Watts' cross-examination or his examination in chief.

Mr. Thompson—I will get this identified.

Mr. Bates—In so far as these indicate anything they are sort of shadowy or watery complaints against the trustees, and if you want to introduce them for that purpose I assume you would have the witnesses here. The fact that you do not have the witnesses here indicates that you do not rely upon that yourself.

Mr. Thompson—That is the way you want to characterize them; if you could only suppress the originals, as watery complaints against the trustees. We will see whether they are watery when they are read.

Q. (Handing paper to witness.) Is that Mrs. Lord's signature? A. I think that is her signature.

Mr. Thompson—I will offer that letter.

[Statement by Myra B. Lord, dated March 5, 1919, is marked Exhibit 100, for identification.]

Mr. Bates—We wouldn't object to it if you had left it in the other case, but you have expressly taken it out of the case it applies to and are trying to put it in in the other case.

Mr. Thompson—I am not in charge of that case; you have done your best to get me out of it. I am furnishing you evidence, however, which, if you want to try that case sincerely, you will use. I will ask that that be marked.

The Master—I have not admitted as yet any of these; I am letting the witness identify them.

Mr. Thompson—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—These are all for identification.

The Master—At present all for identification.

Mr. Thompson—Now, I show you, Governor Bates, a letter from Mr. George H. Clark, dated Feb. 15, 1919.

Mr. Whipple—May I see it?

Q. What connection did Mr. George H. Clark have with the Publishing Society at any time? A. He was connected with the hotel and travel department of The Monitor.

Q. What were his duties in that capacity? A. In the advertising department.

Mr. Whipple—What is the need of showing them to Governor Bates now if you are only identifying them?

Mr. Thompson—To see if he identifies them. Do you want to take the trouble to read this, Governor, or don't you?

Q. Who was Mr. John J. Flinn? A. He was one of the assistants in the editorial department of The Christian Science Monitor.

Q. Is he connected with The Monitor now? A. No, sir.

Q. When was his connection terminated? A. A short time ago, I don't know, I don't recall the exact date.

Q. Approximately how long was he connected with The Monitor? A. For a great many years.

Q. And is that his signature? (Showing paper to witness.) A. I think it is.

Mr. Thompson—I will have that marked for identification.

[Statement by John J. Flinn is marked Exhibit 101, for identification.]

Q. Who was Mr. Paul S. Deland? A. Mr. Deland was one of the assistants in the news room of The Christian Science Monitor.

Q. Is he still connected with it? A. Yes.

Q. How long has he been connected with The Christian Science Monitor? A. A number of years.

Q. Is that his signature? (Showing paper to witness.) A. I believe it is.

Mr. Thompson—I would like to have that bunch of papers marked, marking it on the part containing Mr. Deland's signature.

[A statement, etc., by Paul S. Deland, is marked Exhibit 102, for identification.]

Q. Now, do you remember a Walter R. Zahler, who was once in the employment of the Publishing Society? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his connection with the Publishing Society? A. He was in the translation department of Der Herold, the German translation department.

Q. He was not a German himself, was he? He was a Dutchman, wasn't he? A. I don't know.

Q. When was his connection with the society terminated? A. A few months ago.

Q. He was dismissed, wasn't he? A. Yes.

Q. That is his signature? (Showing paper to witness.) A. I think it is.

Mr. Thompson—I will have that marked.

[Statement by Walter R. Zahler is marked Exhibit 103, for identification.]

Mr. Thompson—Meantime, Governor Bates, if you have finished examining Mr. Clark's document.

Q. Will you see if that is Mr. Clark's signature and handwriting? (Showing paper to witness.) A. I think it is.

Mr. Thompson—I would like to have you mark the Clark letter next, if you will, Mr. Stenographer.

[A statement by George H. Clark is marked Exhibit 104, for identification.]

Mr. Thompson—Is there any objection, Governor, to the Clark letter?

Mr. Bates—Only in the interest of the court, that is all. We do not object.

Mr. Thompson—You do not object? Mr. Bates—No.

Mr. Thompson—Then this may be marked not merely for identification but introduced as an exhibit?

Mr. Whipple—Well—

Mr. Thompson—I mean against the directors, not the trustees.

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment as to that.

The Master—At present I am only permitting Mr. Thompson to identify those letters and to ask the witness about the position of the writer. I have not gone any further than that yet in regard to any one of these letters.

Mr. Thompson—I did not know but Your Honor might, in regard to one or two of them, where the Governor makes no objection.

The Master—I think we had better, having begun in that way, follow it through.

Q. Now, Mr. John K. Allen, who was he, and what was his connection with the Publishing Society? A. He was in charge of the advertising department of The Christian Science Monitor.

Q. For about how long, approximately? A. A number of years.

Q. When was he dismissed? A. I don't know that he was dismissed.

Q. Or legislated out of office? A. I don't know that.

Q. Well, how long is it since he has not been connected with the society? A. It has been, I should think, three years.

Q. And he has recently been chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of New England, hasn't he? A. I don't know.

Q. That is his signature, isn't it? (Handing paper to witness.) A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is on the letterhead of the Liberty Loan Committee of New England? A. Yes.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection about his being chairman? A. Why, I assume he is.

Mr. Thompson—Yes; there is no doubt he is chairman.

[A statement by John K. Allen, is marked Exhibit 105, for identification.]

The Master—I understand these are being shown to you, Governor Bates?

Mr. Bates—Part of them. Three, I think, have been shown to me, or four.

Mr. Thompson—I think more than that, Governor. I will show you this one now.

The Master—I understand you will have an opportunity to see any of them that you want to, that have been offered.

Mr. Thompson—Oh, absolutely. I think you had better see this one. I strongly advise you to read it, if you will take my advice on it. (Handing paper to Mr. Bates.)

Q. Now, coming a little more definitely to the question of employees dismissed recently by you, I just want to get a list of them here. Miss or Mrs. Louise Richardson was dismissed, wasn't she? A. Yes.

The Master—Have you got through with the letters?

Mr. Thompson—I am through with the letters for the present, yes, sir, except in so far as this information now called for includes the writers of these letters, or some of them.

Q. Louis Lawrence was dismissed? A. Well, yes, in effect, although he agreed that it was better for him to get another position for himself.

Q. Now, so far as you can, please answer these questions categorically. Miss Gowdy? A. Yes.

Q. Miss Emily Henderson? A. Yes.

Q. Miss Beggs? A. Yes.

Q. Miss Belmont? A. Yes.

Q. Miss Baxter? A. I don't remember.

Q. Miss Lovell, a proofreader—both of them proofreaders? A. I don't remember.

Q. Franklin Blake, purchasing agent? A. Yes.

Q. Harry Van Gelder, head of department? A. No, he was not dismissed.

Q. He has left? A. He has gone, yes.

Q. Miss Palmer, clerk? A. Yes.

Q. Miss Higgins, editorial department? A. I don't know.

Q. Miss Dunnell had a variety of positions, stencils chiefly? A. Yes.

Q. Miss Hadck, who was on The Monitor? A. I don't know.

Q. Now, Mrs. Richardson, Miss Gowdy, and Miss Dunnell had served the publishing house a good many years, hadn't they? A. Yes.

Q. Miss Dunnell and Mrs. Richardson had been there since the time you were on Huntington Avenue, hadn't they? A. I don't know, but for many years, anyway.

Q. Now, you knew, didn't you, that there was a question recently, after these difficulties became acute—a question was being raised whether some of these dismissals were proper dismissals or improper dismissals in the sense that the motives which led to the dismissals were not creditable? You knew that question had been raised, didn't you? A. I had never heard it raised.

Q. Well, it has been recently, hasn't it? A. Only since the trial of this case, the first I have heard of it.

Q. Hadn't some of these people, when you dismissed them, when they were on their vacations, for instance—hadn't they complained to you that it was unjust to be treated in that way? A. I have never heard any criticism from any of them that it was unjust, and, so far as I know, they were not dismissed on their vacations.

Q. That is, in regard to all these people dismissed, they all acquiesced in the justice of their dismissal? A. To those to whom I talked in every instance where I was able to do it, and where it was in my department, I always called the employee in and reasoned it out with him.

Q. Well, the question is rather more particular than that. A. Oh, excuse me.

Q. Do you want it to be understood here that in regard to all these dismissals, the people dismissed, after you had explained to them the ground of the dismissal, acquiesced in the justice of your views and confessed that you were right and they were wrong? Yes or no. A. No, I don't want to convey that impression.

Mr. Thompson—Now, if Your Honor please, I should like to read these letters; they won't take long, and I have carefully selected them. I should like to read them.

Mr. Bates—I do not see, Your Honor, that this is material. I want to say that we shall not object to any of them, but we shall ask that they be considered in both cases, in so far as they were brought to our attention.

The Master—All we have got on this matter appears to me to stand in this way at present. With regard to these letters, the allegation is that the directors have a purpose to suppress them, which purpose the directors deny. If the letters are read we shall not be any further along on that issue, as far as I can see, and perhaps we might gather from the contents of the letters—

Mr. Thompson—I think what Your Honor will gather from the contents of the letters will advance the case a good deal in that direction.

The Master—what we might gather from the letters would be that the directors might conceivably desire to suppress them, notwithstanding they deny that they have any such purpose. Ought we not to have some evidence directly tending to show a purpose on the part of the directors to suppress the letters before we have their contents put into this case?

Mr. Thompson—It seems to me, if Your Honor please, that question can be answered in the affirmative, and also this can be said, that Your Honor has some such evidence. The allegations in the bill relating to these letters are, first, what Your Honor has mentioned, and what I have mentioned, Section 25, and then the further allegations in the bill to the effect that Mr. Dittmore was led by various complaints reaching him to believe that Mr. Watts had treated many of his employees in an arrogant and oppressive manner; that that was one of his grounds of complaint against the employers of Mr. Watts; that was a matter which legitimately ought to have been taken into account in determining the relations between the directors and the trustees and what should be done by the directors—what action should be taken. Now, you have the evidence that Mr. Neal, after the expulsion of Mr. Dittmore, after Mr. Dittmore had been put in a position where he could not make his views felt in the case of Eustace v. Dickey—Mr. Neal goes round and tries to settle this case with the trustees, and Mr. Dickey does the same thing, and that the efforts to settle were concealed from him. That raises a strong antecedent probability when you come to take it in connection with the contents of these letters, that the directors did not want to face a situation that would arise if they took these letters into account. Consequently, they knew they could not settle if these letters were made public. They thought that by expelling Mr. Dittmore and getting his papers they could make what he, perhaps erroneously but still firmly, thinks is a sacrifice of the cause of Christian Science. I do not see how Your Honor can pass on it until you hear them.

I will couple with that the offer from Mr. Dittmore himself, when he goes on the stand, to supply the missing links, and it seems to me that if these letters are ever going in they ought to be put in now, so that Your Honor may know, and everybody concerned may know, whether the directors, now having forced upon their attention this vital evidence, intend to use it in a legal way by summoning the writers or not. If they do not, the inference will be clear that the allegations in Mr. Dittmore's bill about the attempt to surrender their alleged rights are true allegations.

The Master—Why should I credit the directors with a purpose to suppress letters inconvenient to them or adverse to their contentions in the controversy, or adverse to their side of the controversy?

Mr. Thompson—I don't know, sir, why you should do it unless the evidence warrants it.

The Master—Well, the fact that the letters are inconvenient or adverse to their contentions does not seem to me to be sufficient.

Mr. Thompson—But does not Your Honor feel that the other evidence to which I have called attention, that has already gone in here, namely, that—putting two and two together—directly they expelled Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Dittmore, they continually run around trying to see how little they can get off with, by surrendering this, that, and the other right, the trustees making it obvious that they won't yield a hair's breadth—when you take that in connection with the evidence of three witnesses, or of two at least, that Mr. Dittmore never offered to surrender any of the essential positions he had taken in that memorandum of 1916, any more than the trustees did, it seems to me you have a set of circumstances which raises a strong presumption that the directors, when they demanded of Mr. Dittmore, as is alleged here, that he produce and surrender to them all letters in his possession obtained by him while holding the office of director, had these letters, among other letters, in mind; and when you read the contents of these letters and see how impossible they would make it for the directors if any credit at all were given to these letters—how impossible it would be for any men holding the position of these directors and desiring the respect of their fellowmen, Christian Scientists or not, to settle and surrender without a trial—and seeing whether these statements are true or not—then I think Your Honor will see that there is a good deal of antecedent probability and direct proof that these were letters they wanted to—I won't say suppress, because that is a hard word—

The Master—It is the word used in your bill, I think.

Mr. Thompson—I stand by it—to have them drop quietly out of sight so that they would not hamper the efforts to settle this case by giving up some of the rights which Mr. Dittmore thought vital.

The Master—Do I understand that these are all letters written by dismissed employees?

Mr. Thompson—Not all of them. Some of them are employees, Mr. Watts says, who severed their connection without actual dismissal. For instance, Mr. John K. Allen, a man of great prominence in this community.

The Master—Most of them, then, are letters of dismissed employees—letters complaining—

Mr. Thompson—Yes, of their treatment.

The Master—I could never presume or infer, without more evidence than you have indicated, a purpose on the part of the directors to suppress the letters.

Mr. Thompson—Well, Your Honor is not going to preclude me, I should suppose, naturally, from introducing that further evidence when I offer it; and, secondly—

The Master—Not at all; I am only dealing with what I have now before me.

Mr. Thompson—Secondly, Your Honor is not going to say that because I can't introduce it all at once I shall not introduce it step by step. I offer to show Your Honor later, by Mr. Dittmore, evidence which, if believed, will make it sure that they desired to suppress these letters.

The Master—More than desire; intent, you have got to show.

Mr. Thompson—Intent if they got them. Your Honor will observe that one of the grounds of our bill on which we sought an injunction was to prevent them from getting them. And we got the stipulation from the Supreme Court approved by Judge Bralley in lieu of an injunction. It is simply a question of the order of proof, I think. It is within Your Honor's discretion.

The Master—Have you anything more you want to say, Governor Bates?

Mr. Bates—I have nothing further to say, Your Honor, except to suggest that Brother Thompson is trying continually to read into this record his contentions in regard to this case. He continually states that there have been attempts—

The Master—Isn't that a very natural purpose and intent on the part of all the counsel?

Mr. Bates—Well, I should not like to speak for anybody but myself. I am not conscious of any such intention. I have endeavored to correct some statements that they have made.

The Master—It seems to me I have noticed some indications of it not on the part of Mr. Thompson alone.

Mr. Bates—I submit that we are all of us frail human beings and are very apt to see the errors of the others rather than ourselves, but most of mine have been in reply to misstatements that have been made by counsel, and that has been the only occasion for making them. So far as these letters are concerned, if Your Honor should hear them read I am confident Your Honor would say it was absurd that we should have any desire to suppress them—that they could be against our interests in any way, shape, or manner.

Mr. Thompson—Then why do you object to them?

Mr. Bates—I have not objected to them except in the interests of the court.

The Master—I must assume the responsibility for objecting to them. He does not now object. He did object at first.

Mr. Bates—I did until I had seen them. I did not know what they were. They are complaints entirely, so far as handed to me, of discharged employees of the Publishing Society, making charges against the Publishing Society. That is why I said that if they are read and admitted I should claim that we have the right to use them as part of the justification for the action we took in regard to the trustees—that is, in so far as it is shown that they came to our attention. I suspect that some of them never did.

Mr. Thompson—Just one word in reply. Mr. Allen's letter hasn't any of the characteristics that Governor Bates has pointed out. It is a very careful, able discussion of the business of the Publishing Society, of the difficulties with The Monitor and other publications, and suggestions as to the—

The Master—I don't think you ought to get the contents in in that way.

Mr. Thompson—It has been characterized as a letter of discharged employees complaining. It is not so. It is a very able—

The Master—Is it a letter of a discharged employee?

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Watts says he was not discharged.

The Master—That is one of those cases where the writer was not a discharged employee, but an employee who had resigned or withdrawn or something of that kind?

Mr. Thompson—His position was abolished.

The Master—It seems to me that, strictly speaking, I ought to have the evidence which you are going to claim will indicate a purpose to suppress on the part of the directors before I admit the letters, but there being now no objection to them you may read them.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, I should like to be heard upon the question of order of proof. They are not offered in our case and we can't object to their admissibility in the other case, but why should they now be read? Having been identified, why should they not be read at some later time when we are more busily engaged in the case of Dittmore v. Dickey and others?

Mr. Thompson—They won't take very long.

Mr. Whipple—The letters might have some prejudicial effect upon the case which we are trying, and it would be as if just at this time in some other case matters prejudicial to the trustees, which they could not reply to, were published in the newspapers and circulated broadcast throughout the community. Here are papers which are largely the complaints of discharged and dissatisfied employees, being spread not only before the Court but in all the newspapers, with perfect helplessness on the part of the trustees to reply to them because they are not offered in our case. Now why shouldn't we be permitted to finish out our case, they having been identified, without having this side issue, as it is with reference to our case, now raised? I can understand the position of Mr. Dittmore's counsel. What they say is this: We have dug out information which the directors might use, and we claim it was their duty to use, with regard to the trustees in this suit, and here it is. You, the directors, have not seen fit to use it heretofore. Non constat that you will, but we are going, so to speak, to pin it on to you, so that if you don't use it your behavior in declining to use information of this sort will be made known to the court and made known throughout the field. Now that can just as well be done a little later, because neither the directors nor Mr. Dittmore have yet had their show. When they do and when they get at it we shall not be interested because we are not parties to that suit. I mean, we shall not have that thrilling interest that we have in the controversy to which we are parties. Nothing that they could do or say in the controversy between themselves would not be of interest to us, but I mean we would not have that interest that parties to the litigation have. I, therefore, respectfully request that as a matter of order of proof, and as a matter of discretion on the part of Your Honor, the letters be not read until the parties get more actively into the trial of that case in which we are not engaged.

The Master—My former ruling was made on the understanding that you did not desire to say anything or be heard on this matter.

Mr. Whipple. Perhaps I made a mistake. I felt I had no right to say anything in regard to their admissibility. I haven't anything now to say in regard to their admissibility. I can't object to their being introduced in some other suit. But the extent of my objection is that I ask not to have them introduced while our case is going in. If they were proper evidence in our case I should quite agree that they might go in now. It is all a matter of discretion, all a matter of the order of proof, as Mr. Thompson has already indicated in what he has said to Your Honor. I appeal to the exercise of that discretion, not on the question of their admissibility but on the question of whether they should go in now or not—and that is all I have a right to ask.

Mr. Thompson—In regard to that may I suggest that the letters ought to go in and doubtless will be read at some stage of the case? As this is the last witness—

The Master—I don't feel so sure of that. Suppose after you tell me you have got all the proof that you have, independent of the letters themselves, of a purpose on the directors' part to suppress them, suppose I should be obliged to rule that the evidence was not enough to show any such intention; then I should exclude the letters entirely.

Mr. Thompson—Suppose then I should offer the letters on another ground, namely, that there was evidence independent of this allegation, written evidence, there was evidence in the case between the directors and the trustees which the directors had deliberately ignored, and I should offer that evidence on the issue of good faith in the discharge of Mr. Dittmore, who can be shown to have urged them—

The Master—We are not at that point at present.

Mr. Thompson—They might still be admissible. There are a good many grounds on which, the more I reflect, it seems to me that they are admissible. It is a complicated situation. As long as Mr. Bates has withdrawn his objection, in regard to Mr. Whipple's point I only suggest that if we would be assumed that they are going to be read, isn't it fairer to have them go in now, this being Mr. Whipple's last witness, as I understand it, so that there may be ample knowledge on the part of the people whom they affect, on the part of Governor Bates, as to what they are; also that Mr. Bates, when he opens his case, may know what these letters are and be advised as to whether he will or will not use this evidence. It is rather unfair to him, after he has opened his case, to spring it on him. General Streeter and I selected this particular occasion as the proper occasion from every standpoint to read these letters.

Mr. Whipple—I might reply to that that the information is now all given to Governor Bates, and his opening is now imminent, and we may say that he is fully advised, just as fully advised as if they were publicly read.

Mr. Thompson—I think the court ought to know before Governor Bates opens whether he is going to make any use of this material or not, bearing on the general issue of good faith in our case, which is being tried by agreement with this case. I don't believe the order of proof under that agreement ought to be very material.

The Master—It seems to me clear that the reading of those letters is not a proper part of the cross-examination of this witness. I think I shall have to adhere to that view of the matter and direct that the letters be not read at present,—without prejudice, however, to your right to offer them later.

Mr. Thompson—I assume that when I do ask Your Honor again, later, it will be remembered that Governor Bates has once withdrawn his objection. That position, I suppose, will be adhered to.

Mr. Bates—I withdrew my objection with the understanding that these letters, in so far as they were material, if they were admitted, could be used in the other case, and I still stand on that position.

Mr. Thompson—That is just the trouble, if Your Honor please. Governor Bates has taken a position which involves this: either they are read now or they are never read. Probably there is some logic in Mr. Whipple's position, but by taking it he has put Governor Bates in a position whereby he can indirectly get rid of this evidence.

The Master—If you make the letters material in my view you will certainly have an opportunity to read them.

Mr. Thompson—There are two or three more questions raised by the trustees' records. The record of September 11, 1918.

Q. It is stated that the directors notified you not to ship the article on "Purification," and that you did so in spite of their letter. Is that true? A. The article does not state that I did it in spite of their letter.

Mr. Thompson—May I have the trustees' records for Sept. 11. The first paragraph I will read in:

"The business manager came to the meeting and reported that after very earnest consideration he had decided it was his highest understanding of Principle to follow the original order of the trustees relative to the shipping out of the pamphlet 'Purification,' notwithstanding the letter he had yesterday received from the Board of Directors requesting him not to ship out any of the pamphlets till authorized by the Board of Directors to do so, and that he had consequently notified the shipping room first thing this morning to send out the pamphlets. The trustees expressed their approval of his decision, feeling that he had made it wholly without influence from them, being guided solely by his own understanding of what Principle demanded of him to do."

Q. So that you did ship out that article? A. That is correct.

Mr. Thompson—Sept. 20.

The Witness—Might I add to that other statement. Mr. Thompson, that contemporaneously and on the same morning the directors notified me that it was proper to ship those pamphlets out?

Q. But after you had decided to do it yourself? A. Yes.

Q. Sept. 20. The paragraph of the meeting of Sept. 20 is as follows:

"The business manager came to the meeting and was instructed from this time on to have all advertising features go to him after their preparation in type, and then through him to the Board of Trustees, after which they were to be sent by him to the printing department. This plan discontinues the sending of these features to the Board of Directors for their approval." And that plan was never taken up afterward, was it? A. No, sir.

Q. What was that feature advertising? A. Advertising on the cover pages, the inside cover pages of the Sentinel and Journal and other publications.

Q. Before that time that advertising had been submitted to the directors, had it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The next note I have is October 28th, the last paragraph—meeting of October 28th:

"In connection with the figures for the semi-annual accounting Miss Bartlett was asked to come to the meeting with Mr. Watts—" Who was Miss Bartlett? A. Our chief accountant.

Q. —and the whole question of depreciation and the carrying of accounts was gone into. The chief accountant submitted a preliminary figure indicating that it would be necessary to borrow $250,000 in order to make an immediate payment in full to The Mother Church treasurer. Definite steps were taken, and the business manager and the chief accountant were asked to prepare memoranda for approval at tomorrow's meeting. The business manager was also asked to prepare a resolution of the Board of Trustees to be shown the Shawmut National Bank, tomorrow, authorizing the loan. The business manager had postponed the appointment with the bank until tomorrow, Tuesday."

The amount actually borrowed was $200,000 or $250,000? A. $200,000.

Q. Under this resolution? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was borrowed, however, from the First National Bank? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But on the next day this vote was passed, was it not, being a record of the meeting of Oct. 29th:

"Resolved, that Herbert W. Eustace and David B. Ogden, trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, be and they are hereby authorized to arrange for a loan from the National Shawmut Bank of Boston to The Christian Science Publishing Society amounting to $250,000, and that they execute and deliver the promissory note of the Publishing Society for that sum, payable on or before 90 days after this date."

You knew of that? A. Yes, sir. I think the reason that was reduced to $200,000 was because the Church paid its account then, amounting to something like $47,000, which enabled us to reduce it.

Q. In the last paragraph of that meeting—or, rather, a subsequent paragraph of that meeting of Oct. 29th—I want to ask you about this:

"In connection with the question of the taking on of employees by the employment department, the business manager was asked to notify Miss Thomas that the trustees desired to be informed before any person was employed who had gone through class with anyone officially connected with the Christian Science movement." What does that expression "gone through class" mean? A. Gone through class with some teacher of Christian Science.

Q. That is, the parties wanted to be informed before any such person was employed? A. Yes, sir. We want to know who the teacher was.

Q. Who the teacher was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did that have any bearing upon your business policy, who the teacher was? A. Yes, in some instances.

Q. What was the bearing? A. It would have some bearing.

Q. Well, how would that affect the competency of the person to perform the various duties— A. Only to this extent, that some teachers have a desire to get a great many of the Christian Scientists, who have gone through class with them in the publishing house, and we try to be careful not to have too many there at any one time—

Q. So that that teacher having a lot of her former students, can have influence in the Publishing Society, isn't it? A. I don't know what the purpose is, but we try to be careful on things of that nature.

Q. I find this in the meeting of Nov. 4, 1918, which I would like to ask you about a moment:

"A letter was received from the Christian Science Board of Directors requesting that we allow their attorney, Mr. Norwood, to borrow correspondence from the publishing house files in connection with his work for the Board of Directors. The trustees asked Miss Wright to come to the meeting—" and who is she? A. She is the assistant in charge of the Journal Card Department.

Q. —"and told her of the directors' request, and asked her, in the event of giving correspondence to Mr. Norwood, to remove all memoranda and special notations from the correspondence, and to keep an accurate list of the letters given."

Now, what was the purpose of removing the memoranda and special notations? A. They were special memoranda from one trustee to the others. The three trustees looked over all those things at night, and at other convenient times, and they would make a memorandum for each other in handing their bundles of correspondence from one to the other.

Q. In the meeting of Jan. 23, 1919, the records of the meeting show this:

"Mr. Watts was called away from the meeting for a brief period, and on returning stated he had been called to Mr. Dickey's office for a few moments, and told of a conversation he had had with Mr. Dickey, in which he, as a lawyer, had emphatically expressed to Mr. Dickey the seriousness of the course he felt the directors were pursuing.

Q. What did Mr. Dickey say on that occasion?

Mr. Bates—What is the date?

Mr. Thompson—Jan. 23, 1919.

Q. What did Mr. Dickey say on that occasion when you, as a lawyer, advised him that he was taking a serious position? What did he say? A. I don't remember that particular conversation sufficiently well—

Q. Haven't you any recollection of that conversation, and of what reply he made when you as a lawyer told him that he was going to get himself into trouble, if he did not look out? A. I didn't say that.

Q. That in substance, or words to that effect? A. No; I didn't say that at all.

Q. It says here that you advised him as a lawyer, "emphatically expressed to Mr. Dickey the seriousness of the course he felt the directors were pursuing." I don't think that my paraphrase is very far out of the way. A. The seriousness was, as I understood it at the time, the seriousness in which the Christian Science movement would find itself involved in the trial of a lawsuit, as we are here between the two most important boards, the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees, and I was trying to show what a deplorable thing that would be, just as I have stated in the letter.

Mr. Streeter—You were trying to do what?

Mr. Whipple—To show what a deplorable thing that would be.

Q. And you didn't have in mind the seriousness from Mr. Dickey's standpoint at all? A. Oh, not at all.

Q. You were a student with Mr. Dickey? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And up to a time quite recently, when this controversy became acute, you were on such friendly terms as might be implied by having been a former student? A. I believe I am still on those terms of friendship with Mr. Dickey.

Q. Did you ever point out to him the seriousness of his dismissing Mr. Dittmore? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether any of the trustees ever suggested to the directors, or to any director, that it would be a good idea to dismiss Mr. Dittmore? A. No.

Q. You don't know one way or the other? A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Dickey or any of these directors ever mention to you the subject of the dismissal of Mr. Dittmore? Yes or no. A. Yes.

Q. Which one mentioned it? A. The directors in a meeting.

Q. Which director in particular? A. I think Mr. Dickey, as chairman, told me after he had been dismissed that he had been dismissed.

Q. And is that the only time that you recollect of any director ever mentioning the fact of his dismissal?

A. That is the only time that the directors have ever spoken personally to me on that subject.

Q. I said "any director." A. Yes, any director.

Q. Was that on March 17th, the day he was dismissed? A. No, sir; it was a day or so afterward, and I don't know how much.

Q. And didn't Mr. Dickey on that occasion suggest to you in substance that it would now be possible, he hoped, to make some compromise of this difficulty? Yes or no. A. No.

Q. Did he say that the position of the directors would be just as uncompromising as the position of Mr. Dittmore? A. No, sir; he didn't go into that subject at all with me.

Q. He just mentioned the fact of the dismissal? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew that from other sources, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now in the minutes of the meeting of June 3, 1919, I find this entry, which I would like to ask you about:

"Mr. Watts reported that this morning Mr. Seeley had brought to his attention the fact that Miss Anderson had recently given a copy of Mr. Dittmore's recent letter to Mrs. Carter in the editorial department and advised her to read it, whereupon Mr. Watts called Mrs. Carter and Miss Anderson to his office, with Mr. Seeley, and inasmuch as this action on Miss Anderson's part was a direct violation of the bulletin issued by the business manager at the time of the filing of the Bill in Equity, and as Miss Anderson did not appear to realize the seriousness of the mistake, he had put her under suspension pending opportunity to report the occurrence to the trustees. The trustees approved Mr. Watts' action, but inasmuch as they had other business on hand today, they told Mr. Watts to continue the suspension at least until tomorrow, when they might have opportunity to talk with him and Miss Anderson together."

Now, what Miss Anderson did was to take a copy of a letter written by Mr. Dittmore and show it to a Mrs. Carter? A. No, sir; that was not what she did.

Q. What did she do? A. She went over to—am I to state that situation? I would rather not.

Mr. Whipple—In view of the fact that this happened some time after the filing of both bills, perhaps it would be better—

Mr. Thompson—I will not press the inquiry.

Q. As a matter of fact, the trustees have not intended during all this controversy to have in their employ any person, in however subordinate a capacity, who showed any sympathy with the views of Mr. Dittmore or the views of the directors, have they? Yes or no. Please answer the question yes or no, Mr. Watts.

The Witness—Read the question, please.

[The question last put is read to the witness.]

Mr. Thompson—Isn't that the solid fact, Mr. Watts?

A. No, it is not the fact.

Q. You are willing to take the responsibility of swearing that that is not the fact? A. Absolutely willing to take the fullest responsibility of saying that that is not the fact.

Q. You understand the question? A. Yes.

Q. Do you say that it has been immaterial to the trustees whether their subordinates have or have not sympathized with the views of Mr. Dittmore or the views of the directors? A. I don't know how it has been with the trustees, but they have never indicated an opinion either way to the employees, so far as I know.

Q. Have you personally indicated to any of your subordinates how you felt? A. Yes.

Q. Wait a minute—about subordinates having or expressing sympathy with the position taken by Mr. Dittmore or the directors? A. No, sir, not Mr. Dittmore.

Q. Or with the directors? A. I would like to get that—

Q. I wish you would do a little thinking on that. Haven't you made it perfectly apparent to your subordinates that sympathy, at least openly expressed, on the part of any one of your several hundred employees, with the position taken by Mr. Dittmore in this controversy, while he was still a director—in this controversy with the trustees—would result in discipline? A. Not at all, sir. I have done this on the call—

Q. You have answered the question. A. May I offer an explanation now?

Q. I don't exactly see how it is necessary, when you say that you have not done it at all. I do not see how any explanation is required. However, if you think it is, go ahead.

A. I have called the heads of the departments in and read to them Mr. Dittmore's answer relative to our circulation and our advertising and other questions, and asked them, from their viewpoint, if those statements of Mr. Dittmore were true; and the department said No.

Q. I won't ask you to go further than to state what they said, because that is a little remote.

Mr. Whipple—We should not press that, then.

Q. Now, in the record of the meeting of Jan. 29, 1919, I find this, and see if it brings anything to your mind:

"Mr. Watts came to the meeting and reported a conversation he had had this morning with Mr. McKenzie, in which Mr. McKenzie made the statement that hereafter he was going to be editor, inasmuch as hitherto he had not been, because Mr. Eustace has really been the editor, through influencing him on the subject of the perodicals. To this statement Mr. Watts offered a protest, inasmuch as he knew from his own observation and experience that this could not be true."

Do you remember that episode? A. I do, sir.

Q. Mr. McKenzie had been one of the editors, hadn't he? A. He is one of the editors.

Q. He said to you in substance that he had been under the practical domination of Mr. Eustace, and that he was going to shake it off, didn't he—that was the gist of it? A. No, he didn't.

Q. He said "inasmuch as hitherto he had not been" editor, although holding the position, "because Mr. Eustace had really been the editor, through influencing him on the subject of the periodicals"—that was what he said, wasn't it? A. Yes; that is what he said.

Q. And you say that that is not true? A. No; you used the word "domination," and the word that appears there is "influencing."

Q. Do you draw any great distinction between those two words? A. Considerable, yes, sir.

Q. You thought that he had not been influenced, didn't you? A. No. He had been influenced to some extent by Mr. Eustace on things that were called to his attention, and he agreed that they should be corrected.

Q. Why did you protest and say that from your own observation and experience this could not be true? A. Because he made the statement that he had not been editor.

Q. Not what? A. That he had not been editor.

Q. You simply now take the technical position that he had not held the position of editor, is that it? You don't mean that, do you? A. No, not at all.

Q. You don't mean that you intended to deny, when he said, I have not been editor, that he had been editor, that he had been elected editor, and therefore he held the position—is that what you intended to deny? A. No, that I didn't intend to deny.

Q. Now, I find in the record of Oct. 21, 1918, and I am asked to call your attention to it, the following:

"Mr. McKenzie was asked to come to the meeting in connection with an article by Henry Deutsch, proposed for the Sentinel of Nov. 16. Mr. McKenzie was told of the situation in Minneapolis as it had been revealed through Mrs. Ritchie's recent visit to that field, and it was finally decided that it would be best not to have Mr. Deutsch's article appear at the present time."

Now, who was Mr. Deutsch, if that is the way you pronounce it? A. Why, he is a gentleman who is more or less prominent in Christian Science circles in Minneapolis.

Q. Do you know what the situation was that was revealed by Mrs. Ritchie's recent visit? A. No, I do not, sir.

Q. You don't know anything about it yourself? A. I do not.

Q. Did Mr. Deutsch's article ever get in? A. I don't know, sir.

Mr. Thompson—I think that that is all, Mr. Watts.

Mr. Whipple—At the close of the hearing on Friday I asked for a letter from Mr. Dickey to his associates, in which Mr. Dickey outlined the thought that they might go rather slowly on the question of removal of the trustees. Have you that letter? As I remember it, it was dated at Savannah, Georgia. Can you remember that date?

Mr. Withington—Jan. 13.

Mr. Strawn—The meeting was had on Jan. 13, at which time the letter was read.

Mr. Bates—There are two letters, one of Jan. 10, and one of Jan. 11 (passing papers to Mr. Whipple).

Mr. Whipple—Which one was read? Both of them?

Mr. Bates—I don't know.

Mr. Whipple—I also asked for the data or records of the Board of Directors for a meeting of Sept. 11 of last year, out of which it was suggested in the vote that Judge Smith should select what was proper to make a part of the record. Have you the record of the full meeting?

Mr. Bates—Your statement of it is not correct, but we have the minutes which you asked for.

Mr. Whipple—In what respect was my statement not correct?

Mr. Bates—Your statement that Judge Smith should select.

Mr. Whipple—Isn't that what the vote said? Let us see. I would like to be accurate about it. What was the date of the vote?

Mr. Withington—Oct. 1.

Mr. Whipple—Oct. 1. What page?

Mr. Withington—It is page 121.

Mr. Whipple—Yes. I will re-read, for the sake of accuracy, the record on page 121, under date of Oct. 1:

"The minutes of the directors' meeting of Sept. 11, relating to a conference with the trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society on that date were again taken up for consideration. To be referred to Judge Clifford P. Smith for an opinion as to what it would be best to include in the minutes."

I think that is substantially what I said.

Mr. Bates—No; you said what he had selected.

Mr. Whipple—Well, if you get any comfort as between what he selected to go in and what should be included you may take such comfort as you get from that distinction.

Mr. Bates—I am not looking for comfort and don't need any, but I want you to be accurate in your statement.

Mr. Whipple—Well, you may not be looking for it, but you are going to need it.

Mr. Bates—We shall not come to you for it if we need it.

Mr. Whipple—Perhaps not, but perhaps I will be the very one you will come to for comfort after brother

Thompson gets through with you, and General Streeter, you will be running to us.

Mr. Bates—No; there will be no collusion of that kind between us.

Mr. Whipple—Well, what kind of collusion will it be, if it is not that kind? Now, having acquired these papers, which I want to look over, I would suggest that we take five minutes, if Your Honor please.

The Master—We will stop here for a few minutes.

Mr. Whipple—Five minutes. We will try to limit it to that period of time.

[Short recess.]

Mr. Whipple—May it please Your Honor, I offer a letter of Jan. 11, 1919, from Mr. Dickey to the Board of Directors, a letter which was handed to me immediately before the intermission. It is on the heading of the Savannah River Lumber Company, manufacturer of short and long leaf yellow pine, cypress and hard wood, Savannah, Georgia. It is denoted on the letter that it was read on Jan. 13, 1919, in The Christian Science Board of Directors. It was acknowledged Jan. 15, 1919. (To Mr. Bates) I will ask you to be good enough to produce that acknowledgment, or a copy of it.

[Exhibit 106]

"Savannah, Georgia,

"Jan. 11, 19—

"Board of Directors, Boston.

"Dear Friends:

"It seems to me we would impair our own position and irreparably injure our case if we insist on all three of the trustees of the Publishing Society sending their resignations to the directors of The Mother Church. This supreme request made by us will have the immediate effect of arraigning them all against us. Wisdom should deter us from precipitating a lawsuit that will be 'heard round the world.'

"I think the situation demands that we go slowly and instead of demanding the resignation of all three trustees, we should act under the Manual and dismiss the last man appointed on the Board of Trustees. We should not ask for his resignation, thereby giving him a chance to refuse. We should dismiss him at once and ask the others to appoint a successor that will be acceptable to the directors. It will then be their next move and there will be much less likelihood of their refusing this than of refusing to all three resign.

"This is a history making epoch and I feel that God will hold us directly responsible for acting wisely.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "ADAM H. DICKEY."

Mr. Whipple—There is a copy attached for ease in the reading. Your letter of Jan. 10 does not seem to be pertinent to the subject and I return it.

Mr. Bates—Won't you just put in the copy as the exhibit, and not the original?

Mr. Whipple—I am perfectly willing.

[A letter, Adam H. Dickey to Board of Directors, dated Jan. 11, 1919, is marked Exhibit 106.]

Mr. Whipple—I have not yet had an opportunity fully to compare the record of the meeting with the changes in the record, the meeting of Sept. 11. I will not attempt to deal with it at the moment, but I should like to offer one or two other minutes from the record of the Board of Directors, and return that original letter, Exhibit 106.

Mr. Streeter—Do I understand, Mr. Whipple, you are going to put in the reply of the directors to Mr. Dickey?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, if they have it.

Mr. Bates—We haven't it here.

Mr. Whipple—We offer now the minutes of the Board of Directors as of Tuesday, Feb. 25, 1919. This is on page 280: "Letters were read from the following:

"Mr. Dittmore, dated Boston, Feb. 24, calling attention to his efforts to secure action in the situation between the directors and the trustees.

"Mr. Dittmore, dated Boston, Feb. 25, offering the following resolution: Whereas, The By-Laws of The Mother Church (Article XXV, Section 3) provide that 'the Christian Science Board of Directors shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship (of The Christian Science Publishing Society), for such reasons as to the board may seem expedient,' and

"Whereas, The trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society have for many months followed a course of action exceedingly detrimental to the cause of Christian Science,

"Now, therefore, Be it resolved that the directors shall and do hereby declare vacant the trusteeships held by Herbert W. Eustace, Lamont Rowlands, and David B. Ogden, and that this course be followed by such legal steps as we are advised are necessary to confirm the proper appointment of those persons who are named as successors to these officers.

"Mr. Rathvon seconded Mr. Dittmore's motion, and after discussing the question a roll call resulted in the following vote:

Mr. Dittmore .....Aye
Mr. Merritt .....No
Mr. Rathvon .....No
Mr. Dickey .....No

"Mr. Rathvon stated that his purpose in seconding the motion was to secure discussion. Mr. Dickey explained his negative vote by saying that if the action proposed in Mr. Dittmore's resolution was followed, it would necessitate our making an appeal to the courts to sustain our action and appoint new trustees, and that he felt this was not a wise thing to do at this time.

"The directors had an interview with Judge Clifford P. Smith with regard to the situation between the trustees and the Board of Directors, particularly with reference to the removal of one or all the trustees."

Mr. Bates—What page are you reading from?

Mr. Strawn—Page 282.

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Whipple, there should be in those records a statement of Mr. Dittmore's reasons for opposing the removal of Mr. Rowlands, and Mr. Dickey's reasons for favoring it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, we haven't got to that yet, because this was a vote on a motion to remove them all.

Mr. Thompson—I think right after that there is some talk; there should be.

Mr. Whipple—Not in these records. The next thing that we wish to offer is a vote in the record of Feb. 26, at a regular meeting of the directors, held at 9.30:

"On motion of Mr. Rathvon, seconded by Mr. Merritt, it was voted that each member of the board in compliance with the suggestion of our counsel prepare reasons why one of the trustees should be removed. These reasons to be submitted to our counsel tomorrow that they may advise the board how to proceed legally to remove one of the trustees at once."

Mr. Whipple—Do you understand that these reasons were submitted, Governor Bates?

Mr. Bates—I do not know, sir. I have had many conferences with the board, and I assume that we talked over many reasons for removing them. A great many were in existence.

Mr. Whipple—I don't find that you were counsel at this time.

Mr. Bates—I don't know about that record; I have not seen it. We had several conferences with our clients at which we talked over the reasons for dismissing them.

Mr. Whipple—We think it is rather important to find out what unanimity there was among them as to the reasons, because it does not seem to be a case where there were plainly reasons for removing anybody, but, having desired to remove them, somebody was desired to hunt up reasons.

Mr. Bates—You will probably discover before you get through.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I may discover something, but not from you.

Mr. Thompson—May I ask, Mr. Whipple, if there is not something in that record that Mr. Dittmore refused to sanction that action and stated his reasons?

Mr. Whipple—No; there is nothing as far as I have seen.

Mr. Thompson—Well, we have his diary.

Mr. Whipple—It says, "On motion of Mr. Rathvon, seconded by Mr. Merritt, it was voted." It does not say who voted.

Mr. Streeter—Very likely Judge Smith didn't want to put that in.

Mr. Whipple—On page 286, of Feb. 27, there is this vote:

"Proposed letter to the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society requesting detailed itemized statements of monthly outlay and expenses was approved."

Then at the same meeting, page 287, was this:

"The directors had a conference with Judge Clifford P. Smith, ex-Governor John L. Bates, and Mr. Leon M. Abbott, in connection with the next step to be taken by the directors toward the removal of one or all of the trustees of the Publishing Society. Governor Bates was of the opinion that the board ought not to do anything for the present in the way of dismissing the trustees, lest this action might throw the directors into court unprepared. He advised the board to prepare its case in such a way that if brought into court the board would be prepared to give its reasons for removing one or all of the trustees of the Publishing Society. The counsel encouraged the directors to continue to make requests of the trustees for the proper fulfillment of their duties."

Mr. Thompson—Isn't there something there about Dittmore? This doesn't correspond with the diary entries of the meeting taken at the time.

Mr. Whipple—I am sorry for that, Mr. Thompson, but you see I am not privileged to see your statement of what the true record is. But we were interested in the fact that the Governor was apparently anticipating litigation and wanted to be prepared for it.

Then on March 3 there is this record, page 288:

"The directors had an interview with Judge Clifford P. Smith, who read to the board two letters from himself to the board, both dated March 1, one recommending the Board of Trustees of the Publishing Society to be composed of three editors, and recommending that an early selection be made of a business manager for the Publishing Society; the other conveying an opinion expressed by ex-Governor Bates in a conversation with Judge Smith, that the board make frequent demands upon the trustees for information."

Page 294, March 6, 1919:

"On motion of Mr. Merritt, seconded by Mr. Dickey, it was voted that any copies of resolutions or minutes of this board which are given to the members thereof be returned to the corresponding secretary to be destroyed by him within one month of the date they were given out without their having been copied. A roll-call on the above motion resulted as follows:

Mr. Dittmore, No
Mr. Dickey, Aye
Mr. Merritt, Aye
Mr. Rathvon, Aye

"Mr. Dittmore said he would file a letter reviewing the situation and explaining why he voted against this motion. Mr. Merritt declared that he offered the resolution in loyalty to the Board of Directors that their proceedings should not go beyond the board."

Mr. Thompson—Isn't there a statement there about a formal opinion by General Streeter against refusing to give a member a copy of anything that he might want in the records of the board?

Mr. Whipple—No. Well, let us see—there is this vote on March 6, page 294:

"Mr. Dittmore asked the corresponding secretary for copies of the informal notes made by Mr. Merritt and Mr. Rathvon of the two conferences between the directors and the trustees of the Publishing Society when he was not present. The chairman entered an objection to Mr. Dittmore's taking copies of any of the memoranda on file in our church with reference to the transactions of this board. Mr. Dittmore requested that the board be asked to sustain or not sustain the chair, that a roll be called. Mr. Merritt left the room. The roll-call resulted as follows:

Mr. Dittmore, No
Mr. Rathvon, No
Mr. Dickey, Aye

whereupon the corresponding secretary had copies made and given to Mr. Dittmore of the informal memoranda prepared and filed by Mr. Merritt and Mr. Rathvon of the meetings of Feb. 24 and March 3 with the trustees."

I desire with Your Honor's permission to recall Mr. Eustace for questions as to a subject matter which was brought up in Mr. Rowlands' examination, regarding which I had no opportunity to examine Mr. Eustace.

Herbert W. Eustace—recalled

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Mr. Eustace, do you remember the circumstances of the selection of Mr. Rowlands to become a member of the Board of Trustees? A. I do.

Q. Do you remember from whom the suggestion came? A. Mr. Merritt was then a member of the Board of Trustees, and also a member of the Board of Directors. He and I had been in conference in the afternoon, and Mr. Rowlands' name had been carefully discussed and his qualifications. Mr. Merritt said to me in substance, "Now, you think it over, and if you feel like it you telegraph him to come to Boston for a conference."

Q. What next happened? A. That evening after thinking it carefully over I decided the thing to do would be to telegraph Mr. Rowlands and ask him if he would come to Boston for a conference. I called up Mr. Merritt to get Mr. Rowlands' address, for we knew he was not in Chicago—that he was down south somewhere. And Mr. Merritt—I spoke to him over the phone and said what I felt was the proper thing to do, and asked him if he knew the address of Mr. Rowlands. He said no, he did not, but that Mr. Dittmore was visiting him that evening and he felt sure that Mr. Dittmore would know it and he would ask him. And I said immediately, "No, leave it alone then; don't bother anything about it. We will take it up in the morning." I did that—

Q. I anticipate you are going to give your reasons, and those would not be admissible. What happened the next morning? A. The next morning—the next day I discovered they had sent—Mr. Dittmore and Mr. Merritt had sent a telegram through Mr. Jarvis to Mr. Rowlands.

Q. Mr. Jarvis is the employee— A. Corresponding secretary.

Q. Corresponding secretary of the directors? A. Yes. And when I saw Mr. Merritt I was not slow to express my disgust at what had been done.

Q. Well, will you state what you said to him. A. Well, I used Caesar's statement, "Et tu, Brute," and he knew I was very much disturbed at their having butted in on a thing that was none of their business except in so far as we are always glad to have them in accord with whatever we do.

Q. That is, the communication by Mr. Merritt to Mr. Rowlands asking him to come to Boston was not with your consent? A. Not through Mr. Jarvis at all. If Mr. Merritt had sent it as a trustee it would have been an entirely different thing.

Q. But not as a director? A. Not at all. And he had no right to do it.

Q. Now, what next happened in this matter? A. In a few days—in a day or two—Mr. Rowlands arrived in Boston and Mr. Merritt called me up in the trustees' room from the Board of Directors and said, "Is that you, Eustace?" And I said, "Yes." He said, "Have you seen Rowlands yet?" I said, "No. Is he in town?" He said, "Yes, I understand he is." And that was the substance of it.

Q. And you subsequently saw Mr. Rowlands? A. Subsequently saw him.

Q. Did you learn subsequently that Mr. Rowlands was right there in the room when Mr. Merritt asked if you knew he was in town? A. I did indeed, and I was disgusted.

Q. That is, you learned from Mr. Rowlands that he was right there when Mr. Merritt was calling you up to ask you? A. If he was in town.

Q. He didn't disclose to you that he was in the office of the directors at all? A. He did not—not one word.

Cross-Examination.

Q. (By Mr. Krauthoff.) Mr. Eustace, you had the telephone message from Mr. Merritt asking you if you had seen Mr. Rowlands? A. Yes.

Q. And your answer was that you had not? A. Yes.

Q. And you now state that at the time that that telephone message came to you Mr. Rowlands was in the room where Mr. Merritt was? A. I understand that that was so.

Q. That comes to you from Mr. Rowlands? A. Mr. Rowlands.

Q. When did you see Mr. Rowlands after that? A. I should say within half an hour or three-quarters of an hour.

Q. Where? A. In the trustees' room.

Q. And who was present? A. Why, I don't know. I think Mr. Merritt. I don't know whether Mr. McKenzie was there or not.

Q. Mr. Merritt and Mr. Eustace and Mr. Rowlands; and you think Mr. McKenzie? A. I am not sure whether Mr. McKenzie was. I would have to look up the records to see who was present.

Q. Well, of course, Mr. Rowlands succeeded Mr. Merritt? A. Well, not until August the first.

Q. I mean when the election took place Mr. Rowlands succeeded Mr. Merritt? A. Well, Mr. Merritt voted on that. Mr. Merritt's resignation was to take effect August the 1st. This was at the end of July.

Q. When did you discuss the matter with the Board of Directors, of Mr. Rowlands being a trustee? A. I don't remember discussing it with the Board of Directors.

Q. You had some conferences with the Board of Directors at that time? A. Yes, but I don't think there was any—I never remember any on Mr. Rowlands. Mr. Merritt was, of course, on the Board of Trustees, too.

Q. So that we may get the situation clearly, in July, 1917, the trustees were Mr. McKenzie, Mr. Merritt, and Mr. Eustace? A. That is correct.

Q. And Mr. McLellan was the editor-in-chief of the periodicals except The Monitor? A. He was editor of the periodicals except The Monitor.

Q. And also a member of the Board of Directors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. McLellan passed on about the 17th or 18th of July, 1917? A. He passed on in July. I don't know the date.

Q. And that resulted in a rearrangement whereby Mr. Merritt ceased to be a trustee and became a director? A. No. He was elected on the Board of Directors, I understand, but he did not resign from the Board of Trustees. He held the two offices, one on the Board of Trustees and one on the Board of Directors.

Q. For about 10 or 12 days? A. Something like that.

Q. And Mr. McKenzie, who had been a trustee, became the editor of the periodicals except The Monitor? A. That is right.

Q. And Mr. Ogden, who had been the business manager became a trustee? A. Not until August 1st.

Q. But I mean in this rearrangement? A. Oh, yes, later.

Q. And Mr. Watts, who had been assistant to Mr. Ogden, became the business manager? A. That is right.

Q. Now, weren't all of these things taken up between the trustees and the directors? A. No, not all at the same time at all.

Q. I called your attention, you remember, to the notice that was put in the Journal,—"By unanimous consent the following changes"—was all of it done by the unanimous consent of all of you? A. Why, we had nothing to do with the election of the directors.

Q. With the election of the directors? A. No.

Q. I know, but wasn't the whole subject discussed among you all? Didn't Mr. Merritt ask you about giving up his position as trustee and becoming a director? A. No, not in that sense. He informed us that he had been invited to become such and had accepted it.

Q. At any rate, the notice was by unanimous consent? A. Yes. That means, of course, that the trustees did everything except the directors.

Q. And after you discovered that this telegram had been sent to Mr. Rowlands, asking him to come to Boston, you did name him as a trustee? A. Oh, yes. We elected Mr. Rowlands on that same day, I think, he reached Boston, or the following day.

Q. After you knew the telegram had been sent? A. Yes. Of course it was after the telegram, because he came on that telegram.

Q. After you had quoted to Mr. Merritt this quotation from Cæsar on the telegram, you proceeded to elect Mr. Rowlands trustee? A. Yes. I let my annoyance get the better of my kindness, perhaps.

Q. Your judgment overcame your annoyance? A. Maybe it was good judgment.

Mr. Krauthoff—That is all, thank you.

Mr. Whipple—That is all, thank you.

If Your Honor please, the third trustee, Mr. David B. Ogden, is in court, and has been in court throughout the trial. He will continue to be in court as his duties as trustee permit. He knows nothing and can add nothing except confirmatory evidence to what has been stated by the other trustees and Mr. Watts, and therefore it has not seemed to us best to ask him to take the stand for merely cumulative evidence—for the purpose of putting in merely cumulative evidence. He is here ready for cross-examination if anyone desires to cross-examine him or to elicit any information from him, but I shall not offer him technically as a witness unless requested so to do. With that statement, if Your Honor please, the trustees rest their case.

Mr. Bates—I understand that you rest your case here?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Bates—Now, if Your Honor please, we would like directions as to the procedure. Of course, we realized at the start that there would be some inconvenience and some possible confusion by reason of the fact that there was the attempt to try the two cases together, but I understood it to be Your Honor's determination that the two had better be tried together, and I should therefore assume that General Streeter and Mr. Thompson would go ahead now and open their case, so that when we, as defendants, open our case we may reply as to both of them at the same time. I think it would lead to less confusion. We would be in a better position to know exactly what is claimed by Mr. Thompson and General Streeter and their associates, and we would be in a better position in the examination of our witnesses than we can be if they defer their opening until after we have made an opening in one case, and then attempt to put in evidence on it and find that they are trying the other case. So that I suggest that in the end it would probably save time and lead to less confusion if they should open now and put in their case, after which we would open and reply to both.

Mr. Whipple—Does Your Honor think it proper that I be heard on that at some time?

The Master—I think so. All counsel who desire to be heard, I think, ought to be heard on that question.

Mr. Whipple—I do not want to press myself forward except to make this suggestion which I have already made and perhaps need not repeat it.

We are not interested in the suit which Governor Bates now asks to have opened. We are interested only in the trustees' suit. We are not parties to the other suit at all, nor do we expect that any evidence there introduced is likely to be used in our own case. We should like it, therefore, if Your Honor thought we were entitled to have our own case heard, being the first brought in point of chronology, so that we—meaning the trustees and counsel for the trustees—might be dismissed from attendance while the suit is being tried as between the directors and Mr. Dittmore, or rather Mr. Dittmore and the directors. It seems to me that it would serve no useful purpose that we should be held here during a period which is likely to be prolonged, if at least the superficial appearance, superficial indications are correctly interpreted by us. We should, therefore, be very much pleased if you felt that we were entitled to have our case tried out. Whatever evidence is offered in our case that is applicable in the Dittmore suit I understand will be taken; but I do not understand that there is any evidence in that suit that will be taken in ours, or that there is any issue there involved which interests us; and if we could escape attendance upon what seems to be a long trial, if we are entitled to, we desire to insist upon it.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, my friend, the Governor, looks finely sincere.

Mr. Bates—It is a reflection!

Mr. Streeter—No, no. He knows perfectly well that the arrangement is other than he now suggests, and I do not know any real good reason why he should make this suggestion. This was all gone over at the hearings in some other room or where we were the first morning—all fully arranged and discussed, and it was decided that Eustace v. Dickey should go on first. We even discussed about the opening. The defendants were to put in their evidence in Eustace v. Dickey and then we should open in the Dittmore case and proceed to the end, and so far as any testimony in Eustace v. Dickey was put in either by the plaintiff or the defendant that was competent in the Dittmore case, it should be available.

The Master—So as to avoid taking it twice?

Mr. Streeter—Yes. I wanted to be sure about this and so I examined the record, and in my copy, which is at the club and not here, I had the record of that day so marked that I could refer Your Honor right to the pertinent things in the record immediately, showing that we are right. In this printed copy that I have here, after the discussion, the Master says:

"I understood you, Mr. Whipple, that your suggestion was that your case being the first one on the docket, Eustace et al. v. Dickey et al., you being the plaintiffs in that case, that you begin, according to the usual rule. Is there any objection to that?"

"Mr. Bates—No.

"The Master—Very good. The plaintiffs will then begin in that case and put in their evidence, and then the defendants, first those represented by Governor Bates and his associates, and then those represented by General Streeter and his associates. Is that right?"

"Mr. Whipple—Yes."

Then the Master, evidently looking towards Mr. Thompson, says:

"And then after we get through with that you probably can tell better what ought to be done in the other case than you can now.

"Mr. Thompson—Then after Governor Bates has put in such defense as he cares to put in, if there should seem to us to be anything left over which is material to Mr. Dittmore to put in, I suppose that would be the proper time for us to put it in."

That is, in Eustace v. Dickey. The whole discussion was to that effect, and in our preparation, if we had not understood that it was absolutely clearly settled by the Master, with the approbation of my honest looking friend over there, Governor Bates, that it should proceed in that way, we should have raised the question and been prepared to open; but we have gone on the theory that the record meant what it said and that the Master and Mr. Bates meant what they said. Now, we understand that Governor Bates will open his case and put in his evidence, and we shall cross-examine to such extent as may be necessary to bring out the facts in the Dittmore case. It may be that when he is through that a very large portion of our second case will be in. Then we will open and finish it up. That is the way the record shows it was left; that is the way we are prepared to go on.

Mr. Bates—I am entirely content either way, Your Honor. I merely want the way that will be the most expeditious and the simplest and leading to the clearest results. I understood that it was left open that we would sort of proceed step by step as the cases might develop; but that the two cases were to be tried together was distinctly understood from the first among the counsel, against my objection, and I finally acceded to their suggestion. They have been tried together so far as the plaintiffs' case is concerned in the Eustace case; that is, General Streeter and Mr. Thompson have gone on and cross-examined in regard to the Dittimore case as much as they pleased, and up to the present time it has been apparent that there has been an attempt to try the two cases together. If Mr. Thompson or General Streeter should now make their opening, then both cases would clearly be before Your Honor, and we, in examining our witnesses, would know just what to do, because it is apparent that when we put on the directors and the editors as witnesses, when we are through with them, if we examine them in regard to both cases, our evidence in both cases will be practically complete, so that my friend Whipple would have to stay here as long as though the opening was now made in the case of Mr. Dittimore. If Mr. Dittimore's counsel are willing to waive cross-examination of our witnesses on any matters except those which relate to the Eustace case, in which they are also defendants—if they will waive the cross-examination so that we shall not feel compelled to put in evidence in their case, then I am certainly content to have that understanding; but I think the understanding should either be that they open now so that we can put in evidence on both cases, or else that they do not cross-examine in regard to both cases until they have opened their case. It seems that that is a perfectly fair proposition, and either one is satisfactory to us.

Mr. Streeter—That is exactly contrary to the agreement that was made, and we shall not make any new agreement now to waive cross-examination of your witnesses with reference to the Dittimore case. In fact, the great thing in the mind of the Court in putting these cases together was that the evidence brought out in one of the cases should be used in the Dittimore case. My friend, Mr. Thompson, calls my attention to this in the record:

“The Master—As I understood it, we had already agreed that the evidence in one case was to be evidence in the other. I suppose, therefore, that when we have got the evidence all in in the case of Eustace v. Dickey we shall have already in a very considerable portion of the evidence that belongs to the second case. . . . And it will not be necessary to put it in all over again.

“Mr. Bates—I assume that in examining witnesses who are offered in one case that it will be proper at the time of their original examination to also examine them in regard to matters which they may know which may affect the second case.”

It has all been settled, fully settled, and we prefer to go on in accordance with the ruling of the Master and the agreement.

Mr. Bates—Let me make one more suggestion, if Your Honor please, and it comes with the other suggestion, that whatever we have decided on is immaterial to us so long as it is distinct and clear. If, of course, my brother is going to cross-examine witnesses whom we put on on matters relating to his case about which they have not testified—

Mr. Streeter—About what?

Mr. Bates—About which they have not testified in the direct examination, then it should be understood that in our direct examination we shall have the right to question those witnesses the same as though the opening had been made, which will mean, of course, that each of those witnesses, taking them on the average, will have to spend as much time on examination in chief in connection with the Dittimore case as they would on the other case; but we certainly ought not to be put in the position of having our witnesses cross-examined on a part of the case, or on a separate case, about which they have not been questioned in chief. I am willing to do either way, only I want it definitely understood, and if we examine them on that it is the same as though their opening had been made; and I assume that, under those circumstances, they have waived their opening.

Mr. Thompson—The trouble is that what you want understood now has been definitely understood the other way for two or three weeks. That is why we spent all that time going into the matter. Apparently the significance of trying these cases together did not, in all aspects, dawn on your mind until now. The significance of the agreement made is this, and it has been carried out thus far on Mr. Whipple's part just exactly as I expect it will be with your witnesses. Any witness who goes on is open to cross-examination on either one of the two cases. That necessarily carries with it, and it has in the case of Mr. Whipple's witnesses, a cross-examination, and all of his witnesses have been examined before any opening was made by General Streeter in the case of Dittimore v. Dickey: all of them have been examined on the issues in the case, and have been cross-examined by you. There has been no difficulty thus far in carrying that course. That is exactly the same way that we expect to deal with your witnesses that you are now putting in on your defense, as you agreed to do in Eustace and Dickey. The fact that we have cross-examined them gives no right to you to require us to make an opening, or give the master a ground to require us to do so. That is a direct violation of the agreement. Nor does it give you any right, while putting in your defense to Mr. Whipple's case, to anticipate your defense to our case which we have yet to put in through Mr. Dittimore and which we do not have to put in until you complete your defense in Eustace and Dickey. You are asking for an opportunity to anticipate a plaintiff's case that has not yet been put in, the reason given being that we, in effect, are anticipating our direct case by cross-examining your witnesses. That is perfectly proper for us to do, but it would be grossly unfair for you to go ahead and meet a case that has not been put in by an interested party, namely, Mr. Dittimore.

The Master—It does not seem to me, gentlemen, that we are likely to get into any serious difficulty. Nobody is going to be cut off or taken at a disadvantage merely on account of any order of procedure. My understanding up to this point has been in accordance, generally speaking, with what Mr. Whipple and Mr. Thompson now state: that at the conclusion of the plaintiffs' evidence in the first case, Eustace v. Dickey, we should then hear the evidence of the defense in that case. And the defense should open and put in their evidence. Now I find it a little difficult to believe that you will get into any serious problem by reason of cross-examination on matters which may be material in Mr. Dittimore's case. I think, at any rate, that we can deal with that when it comes up. If there should be an attempt to cross-examine your witnesses on matters which would have no possible bearing in Eustace v. Dickey but which would only have a bearing in the Dittimore case, and that you will be put to any disadvantage by reason of that fact, I think we can protect you from any serious consequences of that kind.

Mr. Bates—My suggestion is that we certainly should have the right to put our evidence on in that case, and to put it on complete and whole, and that we should not, or at least Mr. Dittimore's attorneys should not have the right to cross-examine witnesses in regard to it before the time comes. If they are limited in their cross-examination to matters which apply to the Eustace case, we haven't any objection.

Mr. Thompson—We have certainly not been limited thus far.

Mr. Bates—But these are the main witnesses in the case. I can see your purpose; of course every one can; but everybody knows that is not the way to try a case.

Mr. Thompson—Everybody knows that when counsel spend two hours deliberately making an agreement and have it recorded in writing, they ought to stand by it, and not try to change it later because they later have for the first time begun to realize the significance of what they did. I stand on the agreement; it is plain.

The Master—I think that we had better proceed in accordance with the plan as we have understood it so far, and when we get up against the real difficulty arising from these questions which have been suggested, we will see then what it is best to do. It is pretty hard to draw the line between what is admissible in one case and not at all in the other, and what is admissible for the purposes of both cases.

Shall we stop until 2 o'clock?

Afternoon Session

Opening statement on behalf of Defendants Dickey, Neal, Merritt, Rathvon, and Knott by Walter A. Dane, Esq.

May it please the Court, in opening these defendants' case in Eustace v. Dickey, I desire, by way of preliminary statements, to call attention to certain fundamental inaccuracies of the Bill of Complaint. The first is that the bill, in setting out the course of conduct of the parties under it, is based upon a false premise of fact. In paragraph 7, which is on page 29 of the volume which Your Honor has, where the bill and the answer are set forth on opposite pages, it is alleged that "In recent years, since the passing on of Mrs. Eddy, the directors have been gradually endeavoring to assume and exercise powers with regard to the Publishing Society which the directors never assumed or attempted to exercise during the lifetime of Mrs. Eddy."

Again, in paragraph 8, on page 31, it is alleged that "During the month of October last past, the defendants Dickey, Neal, Merritt and Rathvon, and Dittmore made formal demand upon the trustees that thereafter the trustees should in general no longer conduct the business of The Christian Science Publishing Society as they had theretofore conducted said business and performed their duties as declared and defined by the provisions of the trust instrument."

In other words, the Bill of Complaint alleges that up to the time of the dismissal of Mr. Rowlands the business had been conducted in the way which the plaintiffs in their bill say that it has been conducted, whereas as a matter of fact that is not true, but the very reverse of those allegations is true, namely, that ever since the execution of the Trust Deed, Sept. 25, 1898, down to the time of the adoption of the resolution of dismissal, by common consent and acquiescence of all parties interested in the Trust Deed, the directors exercised a supervisory control over the business of the trust. They consistently and without interruption, and without objection on the part of the trustees, before the present trustees came into office, elected editors, elected the publisher, during the period of time when the publisher had charge of the business affairs of the trust, and they elected the business manager when he succeeded to the functions of the publisher. They at all times had control and guidance of the editorial policy of the periodicals.

For a long period of time Mr. McLellan, who was the editor-in-chief of the periodicals, was also a director, and so a large measure of the control which the directors exercised over the periodicals was conveniently exercised through Mr. McLellan. For that reason there will be a period of time during which there is no record of communications being sent by the directors to the trustees relating to the editorial policy. During that time that power or that right was exercised directly through Mr. McLellan.

In all articles of a metaphysical nature which appeared in the periodicals the directors have during all this time exercised their right to control and guide, and, in general, they have had, and they have been acknowledged to have, supervisory and final control over the business done by the trustees under the Trust Deed and the Manual.

This course of conduct and acquiescence has never been questioned by any former Board of Trustees to the extent of definitely taking a stand refusing to be bound by the authority exercised by the Board of Directors. No former Board of Trustees has ever found itself unable to be guided by the by-laws in the Manual, as they are read into the Trust Deed; nor has any former Board of Trustees ever discovered any repugnancy between the terms of the Trust Deed and the terms of the By-Laws contained in the Manual.

So that the preliminary ad interim injunction issued in this case, issued upon the theory of preserving the status that was supposed to have existed at the time of the removal, was issued upon a false premise of fact and did not preserve a true status of things, but preserved a fictitious status, and every proceeding that has been had following the issuance of that ad interim injunction has been had upon this false premise of fact. The evidence of the directors in this case I think will conclusively show—and the most of it is in the form of record evidence—that our statements in this regard are well within the truth.

I want to say one word with reference to the parties to this bill. It was stated in the opening that this is a bill merely between two sets of trustees, one set holding under the Trust Deed of Jan. 25, 1898, and the other set holding under the Trust Deed of Sept. 1, 1892, which is Exhibit B in the Bill in Equity. The bill itself conclusively demonstrates the error of that position. The directors are indeed trustees under the deed of Sept. 1, 1892, but they are much more than that. They hold the property under the deed of Sept. 1, 1892, as trustees, and with respect to that property and the subject matter of that deed they are bound by its terms and provisions, but that Trust Deed is by no means the limitation of the measure of the authority and responsibility of the directors. The bill itself sets them out not only as trustees under this deed, but as the Christian Science Board of Directors, the directors of The Mother Church, the directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and as such they get their powers and their responsibilities from the By-Laws, the organic law of that Church. The director today, and at the time of the transactions in question, becomes a trustee under the deed of Sept. 1, 1892, by virtue of his being a director of The Mother Church, and he does not become a director by virtue of his being a trustee under this deed. Ample proof of that fact will develop.

The trustees under that deed are four in number. There were no provisions in it for an increase in their number. In 1908, or between 1903 and 1908, The Christian Science Board of Directors was increased to five members, as it was constituted on March 17, 1919, at the time of the transactions in question. So that it is by no means a controversy between two sets of trustees, the relative powers and responsibilities of which trustees are to be measured or limited by the provisions of the trust deed.

At this point I think it would be well to state very briefly something of the organization of the church, with particular reference to the governing body, the governing board of the church.

The present church began in the form of a reorganization of an older church, and that reorganization occurred on September 23, 1892, twenty-two days after the date of the trust deed, Exhibit B. That church had existed since 1879, in corporate form. On September 23, 1892, it was reorganized and the Board of Directors that had existed prior to the deed of September 1, 1892, were also reorganized on September 23, 1892, and continued in office as the Board of Directors of the reorganized church, which was not a corporation. It was a voluntary religious association.

That reorganization was accomplished by eleven persons, who met, and who were denominated "First Members," and that is the beginning of the body called First Members, who are mentioned in the Trust Deed, Exhibit A, in paragraph 10, relating to the right to declare vacancies. Those First Members met and organized themselves into this church, and subsequently they elected persons from time to time as First Members.

Now, from 1892 to 1901 the governing body of this church was the First

Members, the Christian Science Board of Directors, and Mrs. Eddy. Mrs. Eddy during her lifetime always retained a certain and important power of control over the organization of the church and of all the other activities connected with the movement. So that from 1892 to 1901, with the exception of those powers that were reserved by Mrs. Eddy, the church acted through its First Members and its Board of Directors.

In 1901 a by-law was adopted by which all of the business which had heretofore been transacted by the First Members was transferred to The Christian Science Board of Directors. So that from 1901 down to 1910, the date of the passing of Mrs. Eddy, the church acted through its Christian Science Board of Directors only, excepting the powers which Mrs. Eddy had reserved to herself. Since the passing of Mrs. Eddy in 1910 the sole administrative unit of the church organization has been its Christian Science Board of Directors.

In 1901, when the functions of the First Members were transferred to the Board of Directors, they were not dissolved, but they were continued on, but had no functions. As I recall it, it will appear that they met annually but that they exercised none of the business of the church, until 1908, when, by the adoption of a by-law, the body known as First Members whose name in the meantime had been changed to Executive Members, were abolished and disbanded. So that from 1908 down to the present time there has not been in existence a body known as First Members, but during that time The Christian Science Board of Directors has exercised all of the governing functions of The Mother Church, under the power given them by the Manual.

In the bill and the answer there are very few points of agreement, in the important allegations. Certain allegations of an historical nature are admitted, but the important issues which are raised by these pleadings divide themselves naturally into three. The first is:

What was the purpose, plan, and intention of Mrs. Eddy in the establishment of the trust of Jan. 25, 1898?

Second, on March 17, 1919, did The Christian Science Board of Directors have the power to declare a vacancy on the Board of Trustees under the trust instrument of Jan. 25, 1898?

Third, if they did have such power, did they exercise it, on March 17, 1919, in good faith?

The first issue is sharply defined by the bill and the answer. Paragraph 4 of the bill states the contention of the trustees, that:

"The conception and plan of Mrs. Eddy for the promotion and the extension of the religion of Christian Science, as taught by her, involved two general branches of activity. The first, the organization of churches for the study of the Bible and teaching the doctrinal truths of Christian Science as contained in Mrs. Eddy's textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

Then in the last sentence of that paragraph it is averred that this action on her part "was in pursuance of the distinct purpose on the part of Mrs. Eddy, the founder of The Mother Church and the Donor of both trusts, to keep the affairs of the Publishing Society under a separate control and management from that of her church."

On the other hand, the contention of the directors as to that point is contained in the fourth paragraph of the answer:

"That the intent and purpose of Mrs. Eddy in the execution of said trust instrument was to make and forever keep The Christian Science Publishing Society, as well as the various other branches of activity originated by her as herein stated, an integral part and activity of The Mother Church. . . . All of these various branches of activity she intended to have carried on under the general direction or supervision of The Mother Church, and to be devoted to one object, namely, the growth and development of the Christian Science religion throughout the world."

And the directors also aver in that connection that her purpose was to establish and maintain in The Mother Church a qualified form of control over all the agencies and departments engaged in the activities originated by her.

Now I direct Your Honor's attention for a moment, on this issue of the case, to the Trust Deed itself. It is our contention that the Trust Deed itself shows that it was Mrs. Eddy's intention and purpose, and a part of her plan, that the business done under this Trust Deed should be done under the supervisory and final control of The Mother Church. She provided in Section 10 of that instrument with respect to filling vacancies in the Board of Trustees, that "The First Members together with the directors of said Church shall have power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship for such reasons as to them may seem expedient."

At that time the First Members and the directors were the instrumentalities through which The Mother Church acted. The Mother Church could not act except by its First Members and its directors. So she gave the power of removal of the trustees under this deed to The Mother Church. And we shall maintain that the power of removal, coupled, as it is, in paragraph 13, with the power to fix the salaries, with no minimum limit, is the power to control; that necessarily the power to remove an officer includes in it all lesser powers and includes all powers in supervision of the business which that officer has in charge.

We shall maintain, in the next place, that Mrs. Eddy's purpose, plan and intention to keep the control of the publishing business in the Church is shown by the By-Laws, By-Laws which were promulgated by the Donor of this trust, and which come so near in point of time to the execution and delivery of this Trust Deed as to amount to a contemporaneous construction of the deed and its effect by the Donor herself.

The Master—What are the dates there?

Mr. Dane—The dates of the important By-Laws are Feb. 10, 1898. This Trust Deed was delivered Jan. 25, and on Feb. 10, 1898, at Mrs. Eddy's proposal, a by-law was adopted:

"That no vacancy shall be filled on the Board of Trustees of this deed except that the candidate be approved by the First Members"; that is, to be approved by the Church.

Mr. Streeter—Is that in the present—

Mr. Dane—That is not in the present by-law. That by-law will be followed and its development traced in evidence. But it is very important as showing Mrs. Eddy's own construction of the effect of the By-Laws with reference to the Trust Deed, almost contemporaneously with the execution of the deed itself, having in mind that at that time the First Members was one of the administrative units of The Mother Church and had such important functions, among others, as passing upon the admission of new members to the Church, and any matters relating to discipline of members and to the discipline of branch churches and societies.

Mr. Whipple—May I ask whether the directors were then in existence, Mr. Dane?

Mr. Dane—The directors were then in existence.

Mr. Whipple—That is, there was a Board of Directors?

Mr. Dane—There was a Board of Directors.

Another by-law which is very important upon this theory of the case was adopted on July 13, 1899. That by-law is set out in one paragraph of our answer, and it is to the effect that the Church shall see that the periodicals which are published by the trustees are ably edited. That by-law in its slightly altered form appears in the present Manual and was in force at the time of the removal of Mr. Rowlands. It now appears in the form that The Christian Science Board of Directors shall see that the periodicals are ably edited.

Mr. Streeter—What is the reference to the page, brother Dane, if you have got it handy?

Mr. Dane—That by-law in its present form is found in Article VIII, Section 14, of the present Manual:

"It shall be the privilege and duty of every member, who can afford it, to subscribe for the periodicals, which are the organs of this Church; and it shall be the duty of the Directors to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times."

On July 13, 1899, Mrs. Eddy proposed, and it was adopted, that her Church should see that the periodicals which were published by these trustees were ably edited, clearly establishing, as we contend, her intention and her purpose to keep the control of the editorial policy of the organs of The Mother Church in the administrative body, administering the affairs of The Mother Church. At that time it was the First Members and the Board of Directors. Since 1901 it has been the Board of Directors.

Another by-law, almost contemporaneous with the execution of the Trust Deed, adopted some time in 1898, was to the effect that no person not accepted by Mrs. Eddy and the directors as suitable should be connected with the Publishing Society.

The Master—Some time in 1898?

Mr. Dane—In 1898.

The Master—Before or after—

Mr. Dane—After the execution of the Trust Deed.

The Master—You haven't the date exactly?

Mr. Dane—I haven't the exact date. It will appear in the evidence exactly.

Also the entire chapter which appear now in the present Manual as Article XXV, nine sections, mainly relating to the business of the Publishing Society, was adopted between the date of the Trust Deed, Jan. 25, 1898, and March 10, 1899.

The Master—That, again, was subsequent to the Trust Deed?

Mr. Dane—Subsequent to the Trust Deed. That article in the present Manual, and, so far as we are advised, always, has been The Christian Science Publishing Society, and was adopted, as I say, within a year and a few months, all of it, different sections at different times, of the execution of the Trust Deed. And it all appears in the tenth edition of the Manual, which was adopted on March 10, 1899. In that article appears the by-law under which, in connection with the provisions in the Trust Deed, the directors acted. Section 3:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors shall have the power to declare vacancies in the said trusteeship for such reasons as to the board may seem expedient."

That by-law is directly traceable back to Feb. 10, 1898, when it appeared on the proposal of Mrs. Eddy herself in the form in which I have already stated it, that no vacancy should be filled on the Board of Trustees except the candidate be approved by the First Members. And shortly after that the First Members, together with the directors, were given the power to declare a vacancy on that board, as we contend clearly indicating that Mrs. Eddy—

The Master—I don't quite follow that. Will you state that again? Shortly after what?

Mr. Dane—Shortly after the adoption of the by-law of Feb. 10, 1898, which was the by-law providing that no vacancy should be filled in the trusteeship except the candidate be approved by the First Members, there was another by-law adopted which provided that the First Members, together with the Board of Directors, should have power to declare a vacancy in the Board of Trustees.

The Master—That is just what the Trust Deed had already said, was it not?

Mr. Dane—Yes. There are some of the By-Laws which were proposed and adopted which accord almost exactly with the provisions of the Trust Deed and were intended, we shall urge, to indicate clearly that the Founder of the trust and the Founder of the Church, the Leader in the Church, intended to have this Trust Deed executed in accordance both with the terms of that deed and such by-laws as manifestly related to the deed as might be adopted from time to time. I will discuss that a little more fully in another section a little later on.

Now, another thing which, we shall maintain, shows Mrs. Eddy's intention to keep the Publishing Society in the control of the Church, is her own expressions of her intention, which were made at the time the Trust Deed was executed, in connection with the drawing up and execution of the deed; and in her letters, which we shall show in evidence, written to the directors from time to time, which indicate clearly her idea and her intention that they should have the ultimate control of the periodicals, of the editorial policy, of the metaphysical matter which should go into them. Our evidence will go so far as to show that she herself expressed the intention and purpose, at the time of the execution of the Trust Deed, that she desired to have the fullest measure of control possible vested in the directors of the Church or in the Church itself, in order that there might be no danger of the literature being adulterated. And we shall also introduce evidence from which we will claim, and which will fairly indicate, that she understood that the adoption of the by-law, obviously relating to the duties of the trustees and to the execution of the trust, was a direction in the way of supervision of the business under the power which she herself had reserved by Sec. 3 of the Trust Deed, providing "that said trustees shall energetically and judiciously manage the business of the Publishing Society on a strictly Christian basis and upon their own responsibility and without consulting me about details, subject only to my supervision if I shall at any time elect to advise or direct them."

She understood, the first trustees under this deed understood, and so far as we can learn everybody in interest under this instrument has understood until this matter arose, that Mrs. Eddy's By-Laws, manifestly relating to the business of this deed, were her instructions, her directions, under the reserved clause in her Deed of Trust, and that also they were in effect amendments under clause 8 of the deed which relates to the direction and supervision of the publications, wherein she reserves the right to make such changes as she may think important. That, Your Honor will recall, was interlined by the one who prepared the Trust Deed at Mrs. Eddy's direction, indicating its importance in Mrs. Eddy's mind, and in a clause which relates to the entire business done by the Publishing Society.

As a further proof of what Mrs. Eddy's plan, intention, was, it is important to direct Your Honor's attention to the events immediately preceding the execution of the Trust Deed, and I may state very briefly what is probably not disputed as a matter of history, that the business of the Publishing Society as a publishing society began with the foundation of The Christian Science Journal in 1883. It was published in the early days by a committee, and I think under the auspices of The National Christian Science Association. Only 10 years later, 1893, at the World's Fair, Mrs. Eddy requested that it be reconveyed to her, and it was reconveyed to her, and then she placed it in the hands of the Publication Committee, I think at first consisting of three members, to which there were later two members added. It was published by this Publication Committee until April 3, 1897. On April 3, 1897, a corporation was organized under the laws of Massachusetts, called The Christian Science Publishing Society. That corporation had as its assets the Journal and the other publications which at that time were in existence—I think it was only The Quarterly Bible Lessons and a piece of real estate located at 95 Falmouth Street, Boston. The corporation continued in existence until the execution of this Trust Deed. During the life of the corporation it became evident to Mrs. Eddy that with this business of publishing these periodicals carried on by a separate legal entity, such as the corporation was, a possible drifting away from The Mother Church and a separation from the control and authority of the constituted authorities of The Mother Church, would be possible. In other words, she saw in the business carried on in this corporate legal form the seeds of separation, of a drifting toward an independence, which logically carried out might result in the destruction of the unity of control which she had uppermost in her mind for all of the activities which she founded. With that danger, which is the very danger which we say is now confronting The Mother Church by the action of these trustees—with that danger in her mind, she requested this corporation to reconvey to her the personal property and the real estate, and the corporation did reconvey to her all of its assets, and deeded to her the piece of land on Falmouth Street where it was located. Then, having in her possession the periodicals and the assets of this corporation and the real estate, she was confronted with a by-law which then existed, and which appears in the 1897 Manual, providing in substance that no trusteeship should ever be formed by or exist in The Mother Church.

With this property in her hands and facing that by-law, she instructed the directors of the Church to change that by-law so that she might make a gift to her church of the property which had been carried on under the auspices of the corporation, and acting under her instructions an amendment to that by-law was adopted, and the amendment appears in the following form:

"No board of trustees shall ever be formed by or between the members of this Church, or shall exist in The Mother Church, except the trusteeship be constituted by the Pastor Emeritus."

That amendment was adopted by the First Members of the Church on Jan. 18, 1898, seven days before the execution by her of the Trust Deed of Jan. 25, and three days after the date on which she made a gift to The Mother Church in her own handwriting, which has been brought heretofore in the plaintiffs' case.

Mr. Streeter—Won't you please read that again?

Mr. Dane—The amended by-law which she procured to be passed is that—

"No board of trustees shall ever be formed by or between the members of this Church, or shall exist in The Mother Church, except the trusteeship be constituted by the Pastor Emeritus."

In other words, having seen the dangers in the corporation's doing this business separate from the Church, she took the property from the corporation. Holding the property in her hands, she procured the amendment to the by-law which made it possible for her to give the property into the control of the Church; and then she deeded it to three trustees who were First Members of the Church; and she deeded the real estate direct to The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston.

Now, she deeded the personal property, including these periodicals, to the trustees who were First Members, because she was advised at the time, and undoubtedly understood from her advice that she got, that under the laws of Massachusetts a religious organization could not carry on a business, certainly one that would produce an income of over $2000 a year. Being face to face with that legal difficulty, and desiring to place the business under the control of the Church, she took such action as would most closely ally the business to The Mother Church, insuring the fullest measure of control possible, in view of the legal difficulties, to the directors of The Mother Church, and deeded the real estate direct to the Church, and, as I stated before, in the deed she gave to the Church the power to remove, and provided in the By-Laws that the Church must approve one selected as a trustee, must fix the salary, and in general have final supervision through the paramount power of removal.

From that date to this, or, more accurately speaking, from that date until Sept. 11, 1918, every trustee, every Board of Trustees, everybody interested under this Trust Deed, has recognized Mrs. Eddy's intention to place the control of the business of the Publishing Society in the Church.

On Sept. 11, 1918 (which date is very important, and I will come to it a little later) this Board of Trustees, this present board, for the first time in the history of the movement took a definite stand in denying Mrs. Eddy's intention as shown by the deed, as indicated in the By-Laws, and as is apparent in the other respects of which I have spoken.

This brings me to the second issue, which is largely an issue of law, and that is, whether or not on March 17, 1919, The Christian Science Board of Directors had the power to declare a vacancy in the Board of Trustees. Of course we will not at this time argue the proposition of law, but I should take this opportunity to express the position which the directors take in respect to this subject, and to divide it into two sub-heads—

First, whether they had the power to declare a vacancy under the deed itself; and,

*Second, whether they had power to declare a vacancy under the provision of the By-Laws which confers upon The Christian Science Board of Directors power to declare a vacancy in the Board of Trustees.

The Master—Your claim is that the power to declare vacancies resided in the whole board, or in a majority thereof?

Mr. Dane—Resided necessarily in the majority in the respect that the majority action of the board is the action of the board.

Section 10 of the Trust Deed confers upon the First Members, together with the directors of said Church, the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship for such reasons as to them may seem expedient.

The Master—That means that they would all get together, and a majority could declare a vacancy?

Mr. Dane—Yes; that is our position, because, as a general proposition—

Mr. Whipple—A majority of each, or a majority of the assembly?

Mr. Dane—A majority of each, certainly.

The Master—A majority of the joint board or separate boards?

Mr. Dane—A majority of each board. As a general proposition, where nothing else appears, it is always the majority action of a board which is the action of the board, and there can be no question but what the power vested by this provision in the First Members and the directors was a power not vested in the individual members of those two bodies, but was a power vested in those two offices. It was a power vested in the Church itself, because at that time the First Members as a body and the directors as a body existed side by side, and the Church could not act except through the instrumentality of those boards. Mrs. Eddy—

Mr. Whipple—Why did she not say "The Church," then?

Mr. Dane—If Your Honor please, I prefer not to be interrupted.

Mr. Whipple—Very well. I thought it might aid your explanations.

Mr. Dane—The First Members transferred to the Board of Directors in 1901 all the functions which they had. All the business which had been theretofore done by the First Members was in 1901 vested in the directors.

Now, that was not such a change as might appear from the statement of it. Having in mind that the provision of Section 10 essentially lodges the power to declare a vacancy in The Mother Church, acting through these two bodies, and having in mind that in 1901 the powers which those two bodies had theretofore exercised were merged in one of them, the power is still vested in The Mother Church, where it was originally vested by Section 10 of the Trust Deed, except that now The Mother Church acts through its one administrative unit instead of, as formerly, acting through these two bodies.

In 1908 the First Members as a body were disbanded. They had had no power since 1901, but in 1908 they were disbanded, had ceased to exist.

This power to declare a vacancy, having clearly been vested in these two bodies as official bodies rather than as individuals, and one of those bodies having gone out of existence, the right to exercise that power is clearly vested in and survives to the other body. The action taken by the directors on March 17, 1919, removing Mr. Rowlands, was taken under this provision of the Trust Deed, and also under the By-Laws of The Mother Church.

With respect to the action taken so far as it comes under the by-law of the Church which confers upon The Christian Science Board of Directors the power to declare a vacancy in the trusteeship for such reasons as to them seem expedient, we contend that was an exercise of a power given to them under a by-law which comes within Section 3 and Section 8, particularly within Section 8, of the Trust Deed. That is, the by-law is an exercise on the part of the Donor of the trust of a right which she reserved to herself by the terms of the trust to exercise. The trust is a trust of personal property, the reservation of the right in it is a general one, and there is no provision with respect to the specific manner in which that right is to be exercised; so that any act, any word, of Mrs. Eddy, which clearly appears to be an exercise of the right reserved under such conditions will be held to be effectual as an amendment, or an enlargement, more properly speaking, of the powers contained in the Trust Deed.

At this point it might be well to state the defendants' theory as to the relation of the By-Laws contained in the Manual to the Deed of Trust. We have been somewhat at a loss to understand clearly what the trustees' position in this respect is. At one time it is stated that the Trust Deed is incorporated into the Manual by reference, so that the Trust Deed, they say, is a part of the Manual. Again, it is stated that the By-Laws contained in the Manual are accepted as the guide to the trustees in their spiritual affairs, differentiating them from their temporal duties. Again, it is stated that the trustees recognize the Manual, and adopt it; and, having done so, they proceed to interpret the terms of the By-Laws contained in it so as to rob them of any force or effect upon them as trustees or upon the Trust Deed. Again, it is stated—by Mr. Rowlands, I think—that the Manual and the Trust Deed are necessarily in conflict in some provisions, and where such conflict exists it is his duty as a trustee to obey the deed and to disregard the Manual. Again, counsel for the trustees characterizes the By-Laws as the ephemeral expressions of Mrs. Eddy, as perhaps inferior to the perpetual and irrevocable Trust Deed.

Now, the Manual of The Mother Church occupies an important and a unique position in the religion of Christian Science. It is not only accepted as a spiritual guide, as the inspired revelation of Mrs. Eddy, but it is the fundamental law of the movement, it is the organic law of the Church, it is the constitution of the Church. And right here I desire to point out what I believe to be the fallacy in the plaintiffs' case in contending that this Board of Directors, or insinuating that this Board of Directors, is acting as a religious oligarchy.

It is impossible for them to act as an oligarchy. This Manual is the source and the measure, the limitation, of the responsibilities and the powers of the Board of Directors, and they are governed and controlled by its provisions; and in that respect they are the administrative unit of a highly developed form of constitutional church government.

The position of the directors with respect to the relation which the By-Laws and the Manual have to the Trust Deed is simply this. The Trust Deed cannot be read without reading into it the provisions of the Manual, which have been made by Mrs. Eddy, an inseparable and interwoven part of it. There is absolutely no conflict between the provisions of the Trust Deed and the provisions of the Manual. The Donor of the deed is the author of the By-Laws, the one is the complement of the other; and the instructions contained in the Manual, where they manifestly relate to the duties of the trustees, are the directions and instructions of Mrs. Eddy with respect to the execution of the Trust Deed, under the powers which she reserved to herself in the deed to so instruct and direct.

There is, Your Honor will see, in the defendants' claim or position, and there will be disclosed in the evidence introduced on behalf of the defendants, no claim whatever that this Manual must govern as against the provisions of the deed. There is no conflict whatever between the provisions of the deed and the Manual. The two must be read together, and the By-Laws must be read into the deed where they manifestly purport to control the trustees and to guide the execution of the trust powers.

This brings me to the third proposition. If the directors had power to declare this vacancy either under the provisions of the deed itself or under the provisions of the By-Laws, as related to the deed, then in exercising that power did they do so in good faith, with honest purpose and honest motives?

In approaching this question it is necessary to place ourselves in the position of the directors, and to see what the directors had in mind, what knowledge had come to them through their connection with the Christian Science movement, what facts they had which might have actuated them in taking this action. Without spending very much time upon it, they of course knew that from the very inception of the business under the Trust Deed everybody, trustees, directors, church members, everybody in interest, had acquiesced for 20 years in the course of conduct which they were only carrying out in discharge of a responsibility placed upon them both by the deed itself and by the By-Laws in connection with the deed. They had also in mind the fact that the periodicals, with the exception of the Journal and the Quarterly Bible Lessons, were not in existence at the time of the execution of the deed.

The Sentinel, which is the weekly paper, came into existence in September of 1898, and it came into existence in a very significant way, which I will take a moment to point out. On Aug. 22, 1898, Mrs. Eddy requested, through her secretary, Mr. Frye, that a weekly newspaper be started, having already provided for a by-law, which was adopted on Aug. 22, 1898, as follows:

"If a weekly newspaper shall at any time be published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, it shall be owned by The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston."

She provided for the establishment of this newspaper which subsequently came to be called the Sentinel, by the instrumentality of a by-law specifically providing that it should be the property of The Mother Church.

The German periodical was established in 1903. The Christian Science Monitor was established in 1908. Something has been put in evidence with respect to the beginning of The Monitor, some letter read as having been sent to the trustees in respect thereto. We expect to show in that connection that Mrs. Eddy in the first instance took up with The Christian Science Board of Directors the establishment of The Monitor, and that they referred the matter through Mrs. Eddy to the trustees. That is, when she came to the point of desiring to establish a daily newspaper, she took it up in the first instance with the Board of Directors of the Church, recognizing that they had ultimate charge and control over the periodicals.

The French Herald was the last in order of time to be established, and that was established in 1918.

Now, the directors, in taking the course which they did, had in mind also that the buildings were furnished by and belonged to The Mother Church; that all authority in respect to occupying the quarters occupied by the trustees must be derived from the Manual. For The Monitor, and also for other periodicals, they knew that large sums of money had been contributed by church members, at the request of The Mother Church, for the purpose of establishing these periodicals. Those contributions had been made by church members upon the assumption, which they had always had, and had a right to have, that those periodicals were governed by the Trust Deed and the By-Laws, and that the Board of Directors had the ultimate responsibility and control over them.

I have said that all the trustees prior to the beginning of the controversy had acted consistently, and without objection, as being guided and controlled by the deed and the Manual. That continued down to Sept. 11, 1918; and as indicating the exact period of time in which this transition took place, this reversal of policy and position on the part of the trustees, we shall show that in a letter written by the trustees on Feb. 15, 1916, sent to the Board of Directors—this letter has not yet been introduced in evidence—they took the position, in effect, that The Christian Science Board of Directors was the responsible authority in charge of the affairs of The Mother Church, and that the Publishing Society, being a gift to the Church, the Board of Trustees are working under the authority of the Church—precisely the position in that respect which the directors are now taking, and the exact reverse of the position which the trustees were taking on Sept. 11, 1918. So that between Feb. 15, 1916, and Sept. 11, 1918, these trustees reversed the position which they had always taken and which they had consistently followed since the execution of the Trust Deed.

The immediate occasion for the definite stand taken by the trustees on Sept. 11 was in connection with the pamphlet "Purification," and as that has all been gone over I will not take the time now to rehearse it. That was the occasion which brought to the surface in a definite form the refusal of the present Board of Trustees to be longer governed in any respect by the Board of Directors, and led step by step to the ultimate position which was taken on March 11, 1919, where they refused to sign the proposal of agreement between the two boards which provided, in substance, that The Christian Science Board of Directors was the responsible authority in charge of the affairs of The Mother Church, and the ultimate authority over the editorial policy of the periodicals which were the organs of The Mother Church.

Even as late as May 27, 1918, the trustees are on record as having conceded the directors' control in the respects which I have mentioned. That appears from a record of the trustees themselves, where they had before them a memorandum which had been prepared in 1916, the seven-point memorandum which has been referred to.

Mr. Thompson—Prepared by whom?

Mr. Dane—Prepared by the Board of Directors of the Church.

Mr. Thompson—By Mr. Dittmore, you mean.

Mr. Dane—That memorandum was before the Board of Trustees as late as May 27, 1918, and they are on record as saying that it contains nothing that is not already contained in the trust deed and in the By-Laws of The Mother Church.

On Sept. 11, however, and ever since that date, they have taken the reverse of that stand and have denied the control of the directors over them, or the control of the directors over the editorial policy of the organs of the Church.

On March 11, the trustees being openly opposed to the directors' position in this respect, the directors were face to face with an open refusal, an open defiance of their authority as the responsible governing board of the Church. The trustees denied the right to determine the suitability of persons who were to be connected with the Publishing Society. They denied the right of the Church to guide or control the editorial policy of its organs. They denied the right of the Church to elect editors and the business manager. They denied the right of the Church to declare vacancies in the Board of Trusteeship. They denied the right of the Church in general supervision of the larger affairs of the Publishing Society. The responsibility, then, in the face of this, was placed upon the directors by the organic law which governed the Church and by the Trust Deed itself, to exercise the power they had to preserve the unified control which Mrs. Eddy had provided and intended to be exercised in carrying forward the great movement which she founded.

Now, this has been referred to as an academic proposition. It was an extremely vital proposition. They were face to face with an imperative necessity. The trustees of the society had denied the right of control of The Mother Church over them, and they were under the compulsion, both by virtue of the Trust Deed and the By-Laws, to take the action which they were obliged to take, in order to prevent the result which was threatened by the attitude and the position taken by the trustees from being actually accomplished.

Now at this time Mr. Rowlands had become active, aggressive, in advancing the position of the trustees in the joint meetings between the trustees and the directors. He was absent a large part of the time from Boston and could not give the attention to the Publishing Society business which the directors of the Church thought he ought to give. Having in mind the dangers in the logical and natural growth and development of the position which had been definitely taken by the trustees they adopted the resolution which appears in the answer in this suit and which can be summarized under three headings. They recited the denial on the part of Mr. Rowlands of the application of the By-Laws to the business of the Publishing Society. They recited the fact that he had at times adopted interpretations of the various By-Laws intended as exercising a supervision over the business of the trust in such a way as to rob them of any force. They recited his inattention to the business of the Publishing Society. And they voted, under the Trust Deed and the By-Laws, to declare the trusteeship held by him vacant, and sent him a copy of the resolution notifying him of that action.

Now these directors hoped by this action, which they were obliged to take in preserving the integrity and the unity of the Christian Science movement and all its activities, to obtain the result of a reversal of the policy and attitude on the part of the older trustees, that they would see the position in which they were placing the movement, in which they were placing the interests of the Publishing Society; and that they would acknowledge what had always been acknowledged in the past, the control, in the last analysis, of The Mother Church over the affairs of the Publishing Society, particularly in respect to its publications and its editorial policy. And those are the reasons which actuated them in adopting the resolution declaring the trusteeship held by Mr. Rowlands vacant. They did it not only in the exercise of the utmost good faith but they did it out of an imperative and vital necessity which they faced, to preserve the integrity of the movement, and to see to it that every provision of the Trust Deed and every provision of the By-Laws should be observed and carried out in the way which Mrs. Eddy intended that they should be observed and carried out. And they knew that any Christian Scientist honestly endeavoring to give full effect and force to every provision in these two instruments could do so and in good conscience ought to do so.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, before my friend starts with his examination I want to call your attention, and the attention of Governor Bates and his associates, to the request which we have made on the Board of Directors for information, facts, figures. One request was for information relative to payments from the War Relief Fund to the Comforts Forwarding Committee. Your Honor and my friends will remember that in the bill we made some very strong statements with reference to their handling of that money and the representations that they made to the contributors. The other was with reference to the funds of the Christian Science Benevolent Association, which is an organization carried on by the directors. The clerk of the Board of Directors is clerk of that. And the handling of those funds has not been good, and we have the right, we believe, to information from those books. In response to the request here are two letters under date of July 3, addressed to Mr. Dittmore:

"Dear Mr. Dittmore:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors instruct me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 1 asking for further information relative to payments from the War Relief Fund to the Comforts Forwarding Committee. Your request will receive the attention of the directors as soon as it can be reached in its order."

The reply to the other request, also under date of July 3, was as follows: "Dear Mr. Dittmore:

"The Board of Trustees of the Christian Science Benevolent Association instruct me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 1, requesting further information as to the accounts of the Benevolent Association for the six months' period just passed. This will necessitate engaging public accountants for an additional audit and the writer will be glad to take the matter up with the trustees at their next regular meeting."

That is the kind of a reply we are receiving from the official writer for the Board of Directors.

Now we would like to ask, in the presence of the Court, what the counsel are going to say about it. Are we going to have that information or not?

Mr. Bates—I have simply this to say, Your Honor: That if my brother conducts himself according to the usual rules of professional etiquette, if he wishes any papers in the control of our clients that he is entitled to, he make his request through counsel, not direct upon the clients. It is the first we have heard of the requests.

Mr. Streeter—You will pardon me, brother Bates. I understand what those rules are. Of course, my client, Mr. Dittmore, did not; and in his behalf we very humbly apologize for not putting this through the proper channels. It has now come, and I now most courteously ask you—can we have that information and can we have it speedily?

Mr. Bates—I don't know what the information is that you have asked for. If you will make the request upon us we will probably be glad to furnish it to you if we have it.

Mr. Streeter—What we want is full information with reference to the financing of the War Relief Fund and also the Christian Science Benevolent Association. We have charged in our bill that there has been a gross misrepresentation to the contributors of one of those funds and it is the information about those two funds that we want. Now will you give it to us or not? Mr. Dittmore is president of the Christian Science Benevolent Association. Has he got to go to your office and get down on his knees and ask you, "Please, Mr. Counsel, won't you give me the information of this concern of which I am president?"

Mr. Bates—I should think it was his duty to furnish it if he is the president of it. He knows more about it than I do.

Mr. Streeter—But he has not got it. Your people have got it.

Mr. Bates—May it please Your Honor: This association is something entirely different. It is not the Board of Directors. It is a corporation distinct by itself, an association distinct by itself. If he wants any records or any information that they have that is material in this case it is his duty to summons the proper officers here.

The Master—I understand your position to be, Governor Bates, that this is the first you have heard of this request?

Mr. Bates—The very first I have heard of it.

The Master—Then it seems to me clear, General Streeter, that you cannot call upon Governor Bates for an immediate reply. Now I think you had better let this rest for the present.

Mr. Streeter—How long, Your Honor? We want this information.

The Master—At least until tomorrow morning.

Mr. Streeter—Then I give you preliminary notice now that I shall make, in the most courteous and professionally ethical way, a request upon you for this information. Pardon me, Your Honor.

The Master—It can hardly be part of the defendants' case which they are now about to put in. It can hardly constitute a part of the defendants' case which Mr. Bates and Mr. Abbott are now about to begin putting in.

Mr. Streeter—No, but it is part of our case. Mr. Dittmore is nominally a defendant in this Eustace bill. He has got some very confident views about their good faith in dismissing him, and also confident views about their good faith in dismissing Rowlands, and I am perfectly free to say, Your Honor, that as far as the dismissal of Mr. Rowlands is concerned, we believe it was just as much in bad faith as the dismissal of Mr. Dittmore, because we confidently believe and have said that instead of dismissing Rowlands they ought to have dismissed all three. Now that is a part of this case.

The Master—I see no way in which I can deal with this matter at present, and I think you will have to let this subside, for the time being, at any rate.

Mr. Streeter—You mean until tomorrow morning?

The Master—I won't say that I shall be prepared to deal with it tomorrow morning. It will depend on how the facts appear at that time. You have made your call upon them and they now all have notice of it. Now we will see what comes up.

Mr. Streeter—Yes, I have an anecdote about waiting until morning.

The Master—Well, I think I wouldn't tell it now, General.

Mr. Streeter—No, I am not going to. But we would like to take these records over night, Brother Bates. Have you any objection—if we will be responsible for them?

Mr. Bates—There is, yes.

Mr. Streeter—What?

Mr. Bates—These records are important records. They have much in them that has nothing to do with this case. You have had every opportunity to examine them and you may still continue to do so, at our office, but I understand that the secretary of the board does not care to have them go out of his possession, and I don't think they ought to.

Mr. Streeter—Does Your Honor think that that is right?

The Master—I really do not see how I can order them out of the custody of the directors.

Mr. Streeter—I suppose you can't. If you want us to go to your office and have somebody—

Mr. Bates—We would like to have you come very much, General.

Mr. Streeter—Thank you very much, sir.

The Master—You are now about to begin the examination of the witness?

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor. Have you been sworn, Mr. Jarvis?

Mr. Charles E. Jarvis—I think not, in this case.

Mr. Dane—The witness has not been sworn.

The Master—I think that the plaintiffs in the case began by swearing all their witnesses.

Mr. Dane—We were going to put in a good deal of documentary evidence. However, there is no objection to the other witnesses being sworn at this time.

The Master—I have no choice. I merely call it to your attention.

Mr. Dane—Mr. Dickey, Mr. Rathvon, Mr. Merritt, and Mrs. Knott, will you please stand up.

[The four persons named, together with Mr. Jarvis, are sworn by the Master.]

Charles E. Jarvis Sworn

Q. (By Mr. Dane) Will you state your full name, please, Mr. Jarvis?
A. Charles E. Jarvis.

Q. You are the corresponding secretary of The Christian Science Board of Directors? A. I am.

Q. How long have you held that office? A. Since June 1, 1916.

Q. Do you hold any other official position in connection with The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston? A. Yes; I am clerk of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston.

Q. How long have you held that office? A. Since Nov. 1, 1917, I believe.

Q. I show you a book purporting to be the Church Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, marked "Exhibit 57G for identification, R. H. J.," and I will ask you whether or not that is the Manual which was in force on March 17, 1919?

Mr. Whipple—We object, if Your Honor please. We think that so important a document as the Church By-Laws cannot be proved in that way. We think that it has to be shown by some proceeding which makes it a Church Manual, or makes the By-Laws effective, and you cannot merely call the clerk of the Church and show him a printed document and prove a Manual in that way. There must be some way in which by-laws are adopted. By-laws are adopted at different times.

The Master—Will you remind me, Mr. Whipple, how the evidence now stands about that book? It has been marked, I understand.

Mr. Whipple—Marked for identification merely.

The Master—Marked merely for identification?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—Has there been any testimony regarding it so far?

Mr. Whipple—Within my memory, none with reference to the adoption of any particular by-law, or any number of by-laws—

The Master—I think that there must be some statement about it.

Mr. Whipple— —but we have had reference to different parts of it; different parts of it have been referred to; there have been references to it—you will remember that.

The Master—I think that it has been stated in a general way that that was the Manual of the Church in force.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—Now, counsel desire to prove that it was in force on a certain date.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I understand that they have to prove, or desire to prove, that this document is the body of By-Laws of the Church as of a certain date. We objected to it, and the attempted proof was abandoned.

The Master—It was admitted subject to your objection; was it not?

Mr. Whipple—No, Your Honor. It was marked merely for identification. It was not admitted at all.

The Master—Very well.

Mr. Whipple—The matter of its admission was left in abeyance.

The Master—Won't you, then, Mr. Dane, have to begin by introducing the best evidence regarding the adoption of that Manual, and the date when it went into force?

Mr. Whipple—And may I suggest this merely as a suggestion? There are only a few provisions, or a few by-laws, that are in issue, or are of any consequence as bearing upon the issues in this case. Something has been said about when they were adopted, and the succession and development, etc. Those are general terms. If you have any proof in regard to them, we would like to have that proof. And this is not a technical objection, let me assure Your Honor.

The Master—No. I think that you had better prove the action by which and the date on which the successive By-Laws were adopted.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor. That is what we ask to have done.

Mr. Dane—If Your Honor please, if I may say a word in respect to the offer of the Manual, which contains the By-Laws that were in existence on March 17, 1919, it has already appeared from the testimony of the trustees themselves that all of these By-Laws in the Manual are of Mrs. Eddy's authorship and that as to some of them, at least, they were governed in the administration of their trust by these By-Laws. Now, it seems to me that in that situation we are entitled to offer the By-Laws which the trustees themselves claimed to be administering their trust under, in the form in which they are now offered.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, there has been no such statement, and I remember nothing that will justify such a statement on the part of the trustees. They have said that they were administering their trust under the provisions of the Trust Deed, and that they saw nothing in the Manual inconsistent therewith. That is what they said.

Mr. Dane—No; I think that my recollection of the matter would be substantiated by the record.

Mr. Whipple—I think not.

Mr. Dane—I have carefully examined it for that purpose, and, besides, I suggest to Your Honor that this Manual is published by the trustees, the plaintiffs in this case. In several instances they have testified, not in one alone, that they are administering this trust under this Manual in connection with the Trust Deed. Of course there are important provisions of the Manual in the form of By-Laws, some more important than others, that are raised by the issues in this case; and as to those, we have ample proof of their adoption and their development, and will show it.

The Master—What you want to ask him now, it seems to me, is, Is what I show you a copy of the official Manual of the Church?

Mr. Dane—Yes, as to which the trustees have testified.

The Master—That is the only addition to what has been heretofore testified to, that I see. Now, if you want to get that evidence, I think that you ought to refer to the official action which made that the Manual.

Mr. Thompson—Let me suggest, if Your Honor please, that the Public Statutes, Chapter 38, Section 5, use the word "by-law" and give it its sense in the Massachusetts law; and it is therefore of importance from Mr. Dittmore's standpoint that we may know whether these By-Laws are of the type recognized by the law of Massachusetts, and as such were adopted in the way that the laws of Massachusetts require that by-laws should be adopted, or whether they are called by-laws, but are, after all, of a different legal significance. Therefore I would like to ask about the dates, and in what manner they came into existence.

The Master—We shall have to have that, Mr. Dane.

Mr. Dane—There is no question but we shall have that proof with reference to the By-Laws which are particularly pertinent under the issues in this case. In view of the difference in recollection on the part of Mr. Whipple and myself as to the evidence of the trustees with reference to the Manual, I think that it will be best not to press the offer of the Manual at this time, so that we both can verify what the testimony has been with respect to it.

The Master—Well, why not proceed to get the evidence that I suggest with regard to it? That will cure all the difficulty.

Mr. Dane—That will cure it. I was attempting to gain time.

The Master—Put it right in.

Mr. Dane—I expected that there would be no objection whatever. I did not expect that the counsel for the trustees would question for a moment that these By-Laws in this book were the By-Laws that were in force on March 17, 1919.

Mr. Thompson—We would like that book in our case of Dittmore and Dickey. We would like to have it considered in as representing the By-Laws in force. But in the other case we think that further proof should be required, on the technical grounds that have been suggested; and I think that that is to your interest also.

The Master—I think that the short way to save all dispute about it is to produce the evidence that I suggest.

Mr. Dane—I might say, if Your Honor please, that probably Your Honor has it already in mind, but these manuals are more in the nature of compilations—for instance, in this Manual the By-Laws (I think thirty-five or more) were adopted all at different times, and if strict technical proof of their adoption is going to be required, it will take a long time.

The Master—Perhaps it will not be necessary to show it as to all of them, but only as to those which are involved in this case.

Q. Mr. Jarvis, as clerk of the Church, do you have the possession and custody of the books of the Church? A. Yes, in my dual or joint capacity as clerk of The Mother Church and as corresponding secretary of the Board of Directors, I have such custody.

Q. And do you have custody of the record books of the Board of Directors? A. I do.

Q. And have you since you became clerk had the custody of the records of the First Members? A. I have.

Q. I show you a book with a filing on it, "Vol. I. Minutes of Meetings of First or Executive Members Board of Directors and Annual Church Meetings. Sept. 23, 1893, to Dec. 28, 1894," and ask you whether that is one of the record books which came into your possession, and which you have the custody of as clerk of the Church. A. It is.

Mr. Dane—I offer from this book that part of it which I now read into the record (proffering to Mr. Whipple the book described).

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me, that is not the way to prove anything. The book does not prove itself, and the fact that it came into this gentleman's hands does not prove it in the way that he has described.

Mr. Dane—It is apparent, if Your Honor please, that we have got to take one step at a time.

Mr. Whipple—Well, take the right one first.

Mr. Dane—And the Board of Directors succeeded to the powers and the duties of the First Members.

Mr. Whipple—Well, you assert that. That has been asserted a good many times.

Mr. Dane—We offer to prove it.

Mr. Whipple—But that is a pretty debonaire way to deal with legal propositions, where you are attempting thereby to effect a change in a solemn Trust Deed. I do not think that this book was identified in any way. When it is identified I shall want to look at it. It is identified merely as a book that this gentleman, who has been in office two or three years, has had handed to him at some time, he does not say by whom. You do not trace the official authority of it at all. You speak of it as being a record of the Board of Directors. Do you claim that boards of directors make such by-laws?

Mr. Dane—Your Honor will have in mind that I cannot prove this all at once.

The Master—Oh, quite so. Now, what is the part in that book—what does it purport to be—the part of that book which you now offer?

Mr. Dane—It purports to be the first meeting of the First Members, on Sept. 23, 1892, at which time the present Church was organized. That is the starting point of the directors' case.

The Master—Hasn't the witness sufficiently identified that book as containing the record of the official doings of the First Members?

Mr. Whipple—I thought not, if Your Honor please. I thought that we should have to have some one who kept the record at that time, some explanation as to why that person is not here.

Mr. Dane—I submit that that is not required, if Your Honor please. Here is a book which comes into the custody of this officer of the Church, and comes from the archives of the Church—it comes into his custody in his capacity as clerk of the body which succeeded the body whose records are here recorded.

Mr. Whipple—What do you mean by "archives of the Church"? He has not said anything about any "archives," and I did not know that they had any archives.

The Master—By whom does the record now offered purport to be certified?

Mr. Dane—It purports to be signed by William B. Johnson, clerk.

Mr. Whipple—Well, isn't he living?

Mr. Dane—I think not.

Mr. Whipple—Do you know anything about it?

Mr. Dane—I think that he is not living.

Mr. Whipple—Well, then, have some evidence that he is not!

Mr. Dane—I do not think that that is required, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Whipple—All right. Then I will not try to help you. Just go ahead and prove it the best way you can.

Mr. Dane—William B. Johnson was, I am informed, the clerk of the Church, the same office that this witness now holds.

Mr. Whipple—How do you know that he was clerk of the Church?

Mr. Dane—Because it so states.

The Master—Well, we have no testimony to that effect yet, have we?

Mr. Whipple—The statute of the Commonwealth provides how a church may be organized, as I understand it, and how officers may be elected; but those things do not seem to disturb counsel at all. They think that if they get a book, that shows the whole thing. It may or may not.

Mr. Dane—Perhaps I can ask one or two questions of the witness.

Q. Mr. Jarvis, when did you become clerk of The Mother Church? A. I believe Nov. 1, 1917.

Q. And at that time this book came into your possession? A. Either at that time, or it was previous to that time, it was turned over to me as corresponding secretary for The Christian Science Board of Directors by the then clerk of The Mother Church.

Q. Do you know whether William B. Johnson is now living? A. I believe he has passed on, some years ago.

Q. And who was William B. Johnson? A. Formerly clerk of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I do not suppose that that adds anything to the sum of our knowledge, unless this gentleman knew of him and knew of his performing those functions, and I do not understand that he says that he knew any such thing as that.

Mr. Dane—This record, if Your Honor please, purports to have been written and signed by William B. Johnson, the clerk. It is the record of the First Members—a record of a meeting of Sept. 23, 1892. I submit that the book has been sufficiently identified as the record book coming into the custody of this gentleman, the witness, the successor of the gentleman who kept these records, and that that is sufficient identification for its use in evidence.

Mr. Whipple—Will you point out where in the statutes of the Commonwealth there is any reference to First Members organizing a church?

Mr. Dane—I do not conceive that it is necessary to point it out.

Mr. Whipple—Well, aren't you trying to show the proper organization of this church under the laws of this Commonwealth, or what are you trying to do?

Mr. Dane—I am offering to show the record which appears on page 5 of this book, which comes from the custody of the clerk of the Church as successor to the man who kept this record.

The Master—You have told us in your opening, if I understood you correctly, that the Church was organized by 11 persons known as First Members.

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Now you want to show the record of their doings during that organization.

Mr. Dane—Yes.

The Master—You produce a book. All we know about the book is that the witness now says that it came into his custody in 1917 as clerk of the Church and as corresponding secretary of the Board of Directors. Is that enough to make the entry of what appears in the book evidence?

Mr. Dane—I think it is, Your Honor, especially when accompanied by the testimony that the gentleman who kept the record is dead and cannot be produced.

The Master—I have not heard any testimony to that effect.

Mr. Dane—He so testified.

The Master—I have heard a statement by counsel. I do not know whether it is agreed to, or whether it is disputed.

Mr. Dane—The witness so testified. Mr. Whipple—Well, he has expressed a belief, but it does not appear that he ever knew the person at all.

The Master—I think that that is true, Mr. Dane, is it not?

Mr. Whipple—Or that he ever knew him when he was performing any functions purporting to be those of clerk of the Church.

The Master—Have you anybody who can testify about Mr. Johnson, what his official position was?

Mr. Dane—I expect that there are people who could testify about Mr. Johnson. This witness, as I understand, has testified that Mr. Johnson is not alive.

The Master—He said he believed he was not alive. That is hardly sufficient to prove that he is dead.

Mr. Dane—Well, if we are going to be held, Your Honor, to a strict degree of proof, we can probably meet it, and we shall endeavor to do it. It is now 4 o'clock, and I would suggest that we adjourn.

Mr. Whipple—I am glad to know that, because the important matters of these Church By-Laws I want you to understand that you will be held to prove by the strictest proof, the very strictest proof, especially in view of the disclosures which have been made here openly by a former director as to the manner in which your records have been kept and the alterations which have been made in them and the things that have been omitted. Now, let it be understood that I accept your statement that you can prove these things definitely, and do it!

Mr. Dane—I understand that you, as counsel for the trustees, are requiring from us the strictest kind of technical proof as to the fact that this Manual was the Manual in existence on March 17, 1919, and that this volume of the First Members which has been in the records of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, since 1892, is what it purports to be on its face; and we will endeavor to meet that degree of proof.

Mr. Whipple—You will please understand my statement, sir, as I have made it, and not as you have attempted to paraphrase it.

The Master—Well, I suppose that we had better stop here until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

[Adjourned to 10 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, July 8, 1919.]

July 8, 1919

TENTH DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room, Boston, Massachusetts, July 8, 1919

The Master—Are you all ready, gentlemen? You may continue, Mr. Dane. Oh, you haven't your witness here.

Mr. Dane—In view of the objections that were made yesterday to the records we have sent for Mr. William L.

Johnson, who was in New Hampshire, and he is here now. Mr. Johnson, if you will be sworn, please.

Mr. Whipple—Is this the gentleman who was reported yesterday as deceased?

Mr. Dane—This is the son of William B. Johnson.

Mr. Whipple—The son.

William L. Johnson, Sworn

Q. (By Mr. Dane.) Will you state your full name, please? A. William Lyman Johnson.

Q. And where do you reside? A. Dorchester.

Q. You are the son of William B. Johnson? A. I am.

Q. Is William B. Johnson now living? A. He is not.

Q. When did he pass away? A. In 1911.

Q. Was William B. Johnson at some time clerk of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts? A. He was the first clerk of that church.

Q. And for how many years did he act as clerk for that church? A. Until 1909.

Q. Did you yourself have any connection with his office? A. I was his assistant from October, 1898, until June, 1909.

Q. I assume that you know and are familiar with the signature of your father, William B. Johnson? A. I am.

Q. I show you a book with the name William B. Johnson on page 9, and ask you whether or not that is your father's signature? A. That is his signature.

Q. Will you kindly examine this book and tell me whether or not you can identify it? A. Yes; I have seen it many times.

Q. What is it? A. This is a record book of the church, with the names of the church members.

Q. Is there in that book a record of the first meeting of the church members? A. Yes; on Sept. 23, 1892.

Q. What page of the book? A. Page 5.

Q. Was your father at that time clerk? A. That was a meeting at which he was the clerk, his name is signed here.

Mr. Dane—Now, I offer from this book, which the witness has identified and testified about, a record of the meeting of Sept. 23, 1892, beginning on page 5, and continuing on pages 6, 7, 8, and 9. Do you wish to see it, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, thank you. (The book is examined by Mr. Whipple.) May I ask whether this record is offered by you to show the institution of the church, a body corporate, under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts?

Mr. Dane—No.

Mr. Whipple—Or whether you claim that it constituted any such organization?

Mr. Dane—No; I do not think it shows that, Mr. Whipple. I think it shows the formation of a voluntary association of a religious nature, such as is alleged in your bill, in paragraph 3.

Mr. Whipple—That is, a religious society?

Mr. Dane—Yes; and it shows the organization that you allege in paragraph 3 of your bill as having occurred in September, 1892.

Mr. Whipple—Yes. That is, you do not claim that it became a body corporate?

Mr. Dane—Not by virtue of that record.

Mr. Whipple—Not by virtue of this record. Then you offer the record merely as showing what Mr. Johnson could testify to if here in person, because it bears his signature?

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—As a record of certain happenings on this day?

Mr. Dane—I beg pardon?

Mr. Whipple—Of certain happenings on this day; that is, agreements entered into by the respective parties?

Mr. Dane—Yes, for what the record shows. We offer it for any purpose for which it is material in the case.

Mr. Whipple—I wanted to see if you claimed it showed anything more than that. We have no objection to the record for that limited purpose.

Mr. Dane—I do not offer it for any limited purpose. I offer it for what it shows and for any materiality that it has in this case.

Mr. Whipple—If any.

Mr. Dane—Yes, if any.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, all right. I will agree with you as to that. I should think that might either be put into the record or read into the record.

Mr. Dane—I think it would be better to read it.

Mr. Whipple—I think it might be read, then it should be copied into the record, because we do not happen to have a copy of it.

The Master—I hear no objection. Proceed.

Mr. Dane—This is a record from Volume 1 of the records of the Members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, dated Sept. 23, 1892.

The Master—It being the book produced by Mr. Jarvis yesterday.

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor, being the book produced by Mr. Jarvis yesterday and identified by the witness who is on the stand.

The record of Sept. 23, 1892, from Volume 1 of Records of the Members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, is Exhibit 107, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:

"Tenets

"of

"The First Church of Christ, Scientist
"by

"Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy,

"To be signed by those uniting with 'The First Church of Christ, Scientist.'

"1. As adherents of Truth, we take the Scriptures for our guide to eternal Life.

"2. We acknowledge and adore one Supreme God.

"We acknowledge His Son, the Holy Ghost, and man in His image and likeness. We acknowledge God's forgiveness of sin, in the destruction of sin, and His present and future punishment of 'whatsoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie.' And the atonement of Christ, as the efficacy of Truth and Love. And the way of Salvation as demonstrated by Jesus casting out evils, healing the sick, and raising the dead—resurrecting a dead faith to seize the great possibilities and living energies of the Divine Life.

"3. We solemnly promise to strive, watch, and pray for that Mind to be in us which was also in Christ Jesus. To love the brethren, and, up to our highest capacity to be meek, merciful, and just, and live peaceably with all men.

"The following 'Rules' for the government of this Church were adopted.

"Rules

"1. The Annual Meeting of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, shall be held on the first Tuesday evening in October in each year for the choice of officers for the ensuing year; listening to the reports of the treasurer, secretary, and committees, and for the transaction of any church business that may properly come before the meeting.

"3. Applications for membership, coming from the students' students, must include the names and recommendations of their teachers. All applications for membership must be addressed to the pastor or the clerk of the Church. "6. Members of this Church cannot be members of other churches except they are of the same denomination as this Church.

"The clerk was authorized to procure a suitable book in which to keep the records of this Church.

"The meeting then adjourned, subject to a call from the clerk of the Church, at 2:15 p. m.

"Respectfully submitted,

"WM. B. JOHNSON,
"Clerk."

Q. I show you, Mr. Johnson, a record in this book, on page 11, under date of Oct. 5, 1892, and ask whether or not that is signed William B. Johnson? A. It is.

Mr. Dane—I desire to offer from the record of this meeting only that part relating to the approval of the minutes of the preceding meeting, which is one paragraph.

[The record is examined by Mr. Whipple.]

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, it seems to us that the entire record may properly go in. It shows the form of the church government, the form of the agreement as it was amended. I do not think it is necessary to read all of the names, but it should appear in the record that they all purport to be signed as the original signatures of the adherents of the faith.

Mr. Dane—I have no objection.

Mr. Whipple—All right; we are agreed on that. Now, what will be the number of the exhibit that has already been read? I think that perhaps the records of these different meetings might be marked as exhibits. Does that meet with Your Honor's approval? Then we can distinguish them in our references to them by their numbers.

Mr. Dane—They will appear in full in the record.

Mr. Whipple—That is also true of a number of exhibits. What will be the number of this exhibit?

The Master—Is the entire volume now offered as an exhibit?

Mr. Whipple—I understand not. But I think that it will be convenient, and purely a matter of convenience, to refer to the different meetings by their different numbers. I think that we should find it so, because some of the meetings are inconsequential, while others are important.

The Master—Is that acceptable to the counsel generally?

Mr. Bates—I supposed that what were put in as exhibits were so identified by exhibit numbers, but this volume is not an exhibit, it is merely a part of the evidence. It is only a question whether it would not lead to confusion to mark these different meetings by exhibit numbers.

Mr. Whipple—I think that we should emancipate ourselves—

The Master—I suppose that there must be a good many more volumes?

Mr. Dane—There are two more at least, and there are more, of course, at a later period.

The Master—The course suggested by Mr. Whipple seems to me likely to be a convenient one, and I see no objection to it at present.

Mr. Bates—If I understand his suggestion, it is that each separate record as it is read shall be marked as a separate exhibit.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, and that copies should be prepared.

Mr. Bates—Of course there have already been put in a number of records of meetings that have received no mark, and before our case is finished there will be a great many more of them. If it is understood that every time that a record is read into this record it is to be given the exhibit number, well and good, but that has not been done so far in the case. We ought to have some consistent policy in regard to it. That method has not been pursued so far in the case.

The Master—That is obvious, and your suggestion applies only to the records of this religious body which we are now hearing about.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Bates—We have no objection.

Mr. Whipple—The one that you read, of Sept. 23, 1892, will be Exhibit 107.

Mr. Bates—I assume, Your Honor, that that does not mean that that volume is to be left here. Of course it is a volume that should be taken back and kept with the records there.

Mr. Whipple—That is purely a matter of convenience to the stenographer.

The Master—I had rather supposed that if we are going to mark these records as exhibits, it would dispense with the necessity of keeping the books here.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Streeter—If Your Honor please, I thoroughly agree with Governor Bates that there ought to be some distinguishing mark, either as an exhibit or otherwise, so that an index can be made of all these excerpts from the records that go in, and I do not care how it is done, but I want to join with the master and the counsel in agreeing that they shall be marked in some way so that they can be indexed—I mean the excerpts from the records.

Mr. Whipple—Well, the one that has already been read will be marked Exhibit 107, and the next one will be marked 108, and such others as are put in will be marked with successive numbers.

Mr. Streeter—Well, but brother Whipple, haven't a good many excerpts been put in that do not bear any exhibit mark?

Mr. Whipple—I think that that may be so, but I think that they are inconsequential, most of them.

Mr. Streeter—Well, we entirely agree that it would be well to have these marked so that they may be indexed, and so that we can find them in the record.

Mr. Dane—Do you desire to have this entire record go in?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, omitting the names, but with the statement that the names appear to be given in the original signatures.

[The record of the meeting of Sept. 23, 1892, which has been read, is marked Exhibit 107, R. H. J.]

Mr. Dane—This is the record of the meeting of Oct. 5, 1892, appearing upon page 11 of the Records of the First Members.

"The First Members of 'The First Church of Christ, Scientist,' in Boston, met this day at No. 133 Dartmouth Street, Boston, at 12 o'clock M.

"The president being absent, Ira O. Knapp was chosen chairman, and the meeting was opened with silent prayer and the Lord's Prayer. Twenty-seven members present.

"The records of the previous meeting were read and approved. The following proposition was adopted as Rule 7, of this Church.

"Rule 7. To become a member of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, the applicant must be a believer in the doctrines of Christian Science according to the platform and teaching contained in the book 'Science and Health,' by Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy. The Bible, and 'Science and Health' with other works by the same author, must be his only text-books for self-instruction in Christian Science, and for teaching and practicing metaphysical healing.

"Voted, That Rule 7 shall be printed and a copy of it shall be sent to each applicant for membership with this Church, after which all present subscribed to the Church Tenets.

"The meeting adjourned at 1:15 p. m.

"Respectfully submitted,

"WM. B. JOHNSON, Clerk.

"After the meeting adjourned, the First Members present subscribed to the Tenets as on the following page."

Do you care, Mr. Whipple, to have those read?

Mr. Whipple—It is enough to say that written, or at least pasted, into the book, is a printed copy of the Tenets that had been adopted at a former meeting.

Mr. Dane—That is true.

Mr. Whipple—And then they are subscribed by the various members.

Mr. Dane—Following the Tenets appear the signatures of the various members whose names have already been read into the record.

Mr. Thompson—How many of them?

Mr. Whipple—It might properly appear, perhaps, if it is a fact, that Mrs. Eddy is not one of the subscribers. Is that correct?

Mr. Dane—There seem to be 35 signatures.

Mr. Whipple—Mrs. Eddy is not a subscriber?

Mr. Dane—I think that Mrs. Eddy's signature does not appear.

Mr. Whipple—And, so far as appears in both records, she was not present at either meeting?

Mr. Dane—The records speak for themselves.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I did not notice.

Mr. Dane—You did not notice it.

Mr. Whipple—I want to be sure. We are omitting a part of the record. I want to be sure that it appears that she was not present at either meeting.

Mr. Dane—"On the suggestion of Rev. Mary B. G. Eddy, the First Members invited those present in the association meeting Oct. 5, 1892, to unite with the Church, and 59 persons, whose names follow, subscribed to the Tenets."

The Master—This is under what date?

Mr. Dane—This is under the same date, Oct. 5, 1892. Then follow the signatures of the 59 persons.

Mr. Whipple—Are those in addition to the others, or do they comprehend the same names?

Mr. Dane—I had not compared them, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Do you see any that are in addition?

Mr. Dane—I think that they are in addition. In running them over hastily, I think that they are in addition to the other names.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Master—First we have 35, and afterwards 59?

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor.

Q. Now, Mr. Johnson, I show you three books with the filing respectively, Volume 1, Volume 2, and Volume 3, and ask you if you can identify each one of those books? A. Do you mean from the outside?

Q. No, by examining them.

The Master—Didn't I understand that you had already shown him Volume 1?

Mr. Dane—He had identified that book, and had identified the signature on two meetings in the book.

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Dane—I desire now to cover the entire volume.

A. Yes, I am very familiar with them.

Q. What are the books? A. The record books of the Church.

Q. Of The First Church of Christ, Scientist? A. Of The First Church of Christ, Scientist.

Mr. Whipple—I take it that what he means is that there is therein inscribed a record or history of what was done at certain meetings of the assembly.

The Witness—Yes, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Whether this had become a church or not, or just what it was, has not appeared yet.

Q. During the time covered—

The Master—And would it be convenient to have it appear there what is the date covered by the last book?

Q. Will you state, Mr. Johnson, what is the period of time covered by the three record books, from the earliest date to the last date? A. June 20, 1914, is the last date.

Q. And what is the first date?

Mr. Whipple—Take Volume 1 first, and strike that out about June 20. Volume 1 begins Sept. 23, 1892?

The Witness—Yes, that is the date.

Mr. Dane—The first date is Sept. 23, 1892, and the last date—

Mr. Whipple—What was the last date in Volume 1?

The Witness—Do you want the last date of the first volume, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

The Witness—That was the first date that I gave you, Sept. 23, 1892.

Mr. Whipple—Well, what is the last date, the date of the last meeting?

Mr. Thompson—Recorded in that Volume 1.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, that is it.

The Witness—There is a record here of Dec. 28, 1894.

Mr. Whipple—Is that of any church, or purporting to be?

The Witness—There seems to be a definite record of Nov. 5, 1894, and after that there is a remark here, marked Dec. 28, 1894—simply a remark that the last Friday evening meeting held at Wesleyan Hall was on that day. I don't know whether that is a part of the records or not.

Mr. Dane—The last record of a meeting in this book is Nov. 5, 1894, is it not?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, but it carries it to the date of Dec. 28, 1894. What we want to get now is a record of the dates merely, I take it.

Q. Now, will you state the date of the first meeting in Volume 2? A. Dec. 29, 1894.

Q. And the date of the last meeting in Volume 2? A. June 17, 1902.

Q. And will you state the date of the first meeting in Volume 3? A. May 15, 1902.

Q. And the date of the last meeting in Volume 3? A. June 3, 1912.

Mr. Thompson—There is a little overlap there, apparently. Volume 2 ended June 17, 1902, and Volume 3 began May 15, 1902.

The Witness—The first meeting is May 15, 1902. I think a correction should be made there, Your Honor. The last recorded meeting, in writing here, is Friday, May 28, 1909.

Q. In which book is that? A. That is in Volume 3.

Mr. Whipple—May what?

The Witness—May 28, 1909.

The Master—Do I understand that is the first or the last date?

The Witness—That was the last.

Mr. Whipple—There must be something in there that gave you the date of June 3, 1912.

The Witness—There is a clipping from the Sentinel, giving the account of the annual meeting of The Mother Church of June 8, 1914, published in the Sentinel of June 20, 1914.

Mr. Whipple—Well, where did you get your June 3, 1912?

The Witness—There is also an account of the annual meeting of The Mother Church of June 3, 1912, pasted in here.

Mr. Whipple—Well, then, you ought to have a later date than that in giving reference to the annual meeting and the account of it in the Sentinel, because that, you say, is in June, 1914.

The Witness—That is 1912 and 1914.

Mr. Whipple—Well, then, I should say the last date would be June, 1914.

The Witness—Well, now, of course the last record I have here in my father's handwriting is May 28, 1909.

Mr. Dane—The other records, if Your Honor please, are simply extracts taken from the periodicals, giving an account of the annual meetings of the Church, and those extracts are pasted into the book under date of June 3.

The Master—Without seeing them, it occurs to me that those things pasted in here cannot appear to constitute a part of the official records in the volume.

Mr. Dane—I think they do not. I claim nothing for them.

Mr. Whipple—I should say that was so. But what we were trying now to get was the periods of time when the books were in use, and therefore the dates referred to will give us that. And apparently this book was in use as late as 1914. Of course, if there is another record book which gives records of meetings of the members, that can be produced, but it is one of the important points, as we understand it, that after having started with the meetings of members and the control of the Church in the control of its membership, the meetings gradually dwindled away, so that the Church was no longer the governing body. And it is as bearing on that that we think these records may be important.

The Master—I suppose with this witness we are concerned only with records made by the elder Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor.

Q. Now, will you state, Mr. Johnson, in the third volume what is the date of the last meeting of the First Members, which is attested by William B. Johnson as clerk?

Mr. Whipple—He has stated it: May 28, 1909.

Q. Is that the fact, Mr. Johnson? A. That is the last record I have here as William B. Johnson, clerk of the Church, yes.

Q. Now, during the entire period of time covered by these three volumes was William B. Johnson the clerk? A. He was.

Q. And are you familiar enough with these three volumes to be able to testify as to whether or not Mr. Johnson signed as clerk the records of the meetings as recorded in these three volumes?

Mr. Whipple—Has he looked at them all?

Mr. Dane—He is very familiar with them.

Mr. Whipple—Well, has he looked to see whether his father purported to sign them or whether he as assistant clerk signed them?

The Witness—I signed none as assistant clerk.

Q. Your father signed all these meetings? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—I would like, if Your Honor please, to request that the books in some way be identified and that we have access to them for the examination of their contents. Do you have any objection to that, Mr. Dane?

Mr. Dane—I see no objection.

Mr. Whipple—Very well. How would you suggest having them identified?

Mr. Dane—They possibly could be marked for identification.

Mr. Whipple—That is agreeable.

Mr. Dane—But the books, as all other books of the Church, must be kept in the custody of the clerk, subject, of course, to your reasonable requirements in examining them.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I take it that they are actually within the control of the Court, but I should imagine that the Court would grant every measure for precaution and safety of the books.

The Master—Oh, yes.

Mr. Whipple—And we are agreed to that. But we would like to have them accessible to us as exhibits so that we may make examination at convenient times.

Mr. Thompson—And we join in that request, naturally.

Mr. Whipple—Yes. They ought to be equally accessible to all counsel at convenient times. They might be identified by the stenographer.

Mr. Dane—Possibly they could be marked for identification.

[Three volumes of Minutes of Meetings of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors, and Annual Church Meetings, signed by William B. Johnson, clerk, are marked for identification as follows: Vol. 1, 109; Vol. 2, 110; Vol. 3, 111.]

Mr. Dane—I offer now, from Volume 2, marked 110 for identification, that part of the record of a meeting of May 4, 1895, appearing upon pages 23 and 24, which I will read into the record.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me a moment. [The record book is shown to Mr. Whipple.]

Mr. Whipple—May I ask, Mr. Dane, what you claim the organization was May 4, 1895? Was it a corporation organized under the laws of the Commonwealth, or was it simply a continuation of the voluntary organization which we have noted as having been organized in 1892?

Mr. Dane—I understand there was no change in the organization between those two dates.

Mr. Whipple—That is, it was still—and you offer this to show that the organization was still—merely a voluntary association of individuals who had laid down certain rules for the guidance of their own conduct.

Mr. Dane—No, I don't offer it at all for that purpose.

Mr. Whipple—I didn't say for that purpose, but that it was such an organization.

Mr. Dane—No, it is not offered for that purpose.

Mr. Whipple—Then I should want to know what the purpose is, and perhaps His Honor would, before I should assent to the admission of this or any other record. In other words, what is it a record of, a corporation or what? Was it a church organization under the laws of this Commonwealth or what was it? I think, if Your Honor please, that I perhaps may properly address my inquiry in that way, to get some explanation of what it is that this is a record of.

Mr. Dane—I don't understand, if Your Honor please, that we are required at this time to argue our various legal contentions in this case. Of course, there has been no effort to prove that this Church was incorporated on Sept. 23, 1892, as a corporation.

Mr. Whipple—I don't ask you to argue your case, but I ask you to make intelligible to His Honor and to the rest of us what you are offering.

The Master—We have had what purports to be the records of an organization in September, 1892.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Of some kind. Mr. Dane now tells us that in offering a subsequent record purporting to be of the same organization, there has been no change since September, 1892.

Mr. Dane—No change in the character of the organization.

The Master—No change in the character of the organization.

Mr. Whipple—And no change in the rules which they adopted, by which they should be governed?

Mr. Dane—Why, they may have adopted many rules between those two dates.

The Master—I think we had better have the record, Mr. Whipple, and all the records it appears now are open to your inspection so that if there has been any change indicated which Mr. Dane does not specifically refer to or read, it will be open to you to do so.

Mr. Whipple—That is agreeable to us. This will be Exhibit 112?

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—And will you be good enough to read the entire record?

Mr. Dane—I will read at this time the part of the record which I have indicated to you, that I feel is important at this particular stage of the case. I have no objection to your putting in the rest of the record. It is a pretty long record and there are a good many things—

The Master—Well, now, read what you think is important and then we will see what else better be read.

[Record of meeting of May 4, 1895, beginning on page 21 of Volume of Minutes of Meetings of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors, and Annual Church Meetings numbered 2 and marked 110 for identification, is Exhibit 112.]

Mr. Dane—On page 23 of Vol. 2, from the record of a meeting of May 4, 1895:

"A special meeting of The First Members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, was held this day in the vestry of the Church. The meeting was opened by reading selections from the Scriptures and from Science and Health, silent prayer, the Lord's prayer, and its spiritual interpretation at ten o'clock and six minutes a. m. The president and 23 members present.

"By a unanimous vote—the members rising—the following by-law was adopted:

"By-Law

"Voted unanimously—the members rising—that:

"The present Reader of the Scriptures, Judge S. J. Hanna, shall remain this Reader as long as he is acceptable and remains editor of The Christian Science Journal.

"Each president of this Church shall hold his or her office but one consecutive year, and once in three years.

"This Church shall have no leader but its pastor, the Bible, and Science and Health. One member of this Church shall not be guided by another.

"One good member is no more than another good member to this Church. Personal attachments or enmity shall not influence the action of the members of The Mother Church toward each other. God alone shall be their God.

"Voted: That in accordance with our Teacher's recommendation The Mother Church shall have a Church Manual.

"Voted: That this Church shall elect an executive committee whose special duty it shall be to see that the Rules and By-Laws of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, as contained in the Church Manual are carried out by each member that attends this Church, in their letter and spirit. And this committee which shall also prepare the Church Manual shall consist of those persons named by Mrs. Eddy.

"Mr. Edward P. Bates, Judge Septimus J. Hanna, Miss Julia S. Bartlett, William B. Johnson.

"The minutes of this meeting were read and approved. The meeting then adjourned at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.

"Respectfully submitted,
"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,
"Clerk."

Mr. Whipple—We should like to have the whole of that record transcribed. Parts of it have been admitted. Is that agreeable?

Mr. Dane—I have no objection, Mr. Whipple, to your putting in any part of this record, but I do not want to read that whole record, because it seems to me there is much of it that is not pertinent.

Mr. Whipple—We think that other parts of it have quite as much pertinence as the parts you are putting in. We will therefore ask to have the whole of the record of that meeting transcribed in the record.

The Master—Do you want it read now?

Mr. Whipple—No, I do not care to interrupt to have it read at this time. (Addressing stenographers.) When you get the book to copy the records, will you please put in the entire record of that meeting?

[The complete record of meeting of May 4, 1895, as appears on pages 21-24 of Vol. 2, marked 110 for identification, reads as follows]:

"Boston, Massachusetts, May 4, 1895.

"A special meeting of The First Members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, was held this day in the vestry of the Church. The meeting was opened by reading selections from the Scriptures and from Science and Health, silent prayer, the Lord's Prayer, and its spiritual interpretation at 10 o'clock and six minutes a. m. The president and twenty-three members present.

"The following letter and by-law were read:

"Pleasant View,

"Concord, New Hampshire,

"May 3, 1895.

"Beloved Brethren:

"I ask you to act on this By-Law for two reasons, viz., (1st) I cannot be your Leader unless I have the power to guide you when you need this guidance. (2d) Because I will pray earnestly and watch for God to guide me in knowing that I am right in my decision before entering a complaint against a member of this Church. And from long tests I know that He will show me the way that is just and then I will follow it.

"With love, your Mother in Israel,

"MARY BAKER EDDY.

"A. By-Law.

"A member of this Church who is a student of Rev. Mary Baker Eddy and refuses to leave a place in the field that she knows it is for his or her interest to leave and so advise him or her yet they do not comply with my request, this member shall be dropped from this Church membership and treated by this Church as a disloyal student.

"Also if a member of this Church is proven by me to be treating me mentally without my consent the name of this member shall be dropped from the roll of membership and he or she treated by this Church as a disloyal student.

"This by-law can only be amended or annulled by the unanimous vote of every member of this Church.

"The following letter from our Teacher—Rev. Mary Baker Eddy—was read.

"Beloved Students:

"When a student tells me that I am influenced in my conclusions or work in this field by anyone but God, or when he says I am mistaken in my knowledge of who is attacking me mentally and thus malpracticing—know then that this student is disloyal to the core and is not to be trusted. This I have proven true 30 years.

"With love,

"Mother.

"Upon the recommendation of our Teacher it was voted that the service for the children shall be held once in four months on the second Sunday in the month.

"A letter from our teacher, the Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, addressed to Dr. E. J. Foster Eddy was read by the secretary. In said letter Mrs. Eddy demands Dr. E. J. Foster Eddy to comply with the demands of the publishing committee and owners of the Christian Science publishing building.

"At the close of the meeting the members, 21 in number, went directly to the Union Station and took the cars for Concord, New Hampshire, and upon reaching Concord immediately took carriages to go to Pleasant View, where we arrived at 3:30 p. m. We were gathered in the back parlor and upon our Teacher entering the room all arose to greet her.

"She then told us why she had called us to her: to inform us of the awful error that is working in our midst, and warn us of our danger. She spoke of those who are constantly working against the success of the cause, and instructed us how to meet scientifically the error of this hour. Her instructions were of incalculable value to us, and if duly heeded will save us from falling into the evil that is plotted against us.

"Mrs. Eddy presented a by-law and some other business to be acted upon by the Church.

"Upon our return to Boston, we went directly to the Church, reopened the meeting of this morning and transacted the following business:

"By a unanimous vote—the members rising—the following by-law was adopted:

"BY-LAW

"Voted unanimously—the members rising—that:

"The present Reader of the Scriptures, Judge S. J. Hanna, shall remain this Reader as long as he is acceptable and remains editor of The Christian Science Journal.

"Each president of this Church shall hold his or her office but one consecutive year, and once in three years.

"This Church shall have no leader but its Pastor, the Bible, and Science and Health. One member of this Church shall not be guided by another.

"One good member is no more than another good member to this Church. Personal attachments or enmity shall not influence the action of the members of The Mother Church toward each other. God alone shall be their God.

"Voted: That in accordance with our Teacher's recommendation The Mother Church shall have a Church Manual.

"Voted: That this Church shall elect an executive committee whose special duty it shall be to see that the Rules and By-Laws of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, as contained in the Church Manual are carried out by each member that attends this Church, in their letter and spirit. And this committee, which shall also prepare the Church Manual, shall consist of those persons named by Mrs. Eddy:

"Mr. Edward P. Bates,
"Miss Julia S. Bartlett,
"Judge Septimus J. Hanna,
"William B. Johnson.

"Voted: That in accordance with our Mother's wish this Church shall see that the Christian Science textbook, 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures' and other books by its author, shall be handled by no one that is not known to the author and selected by her.

"Voted: That Edward P. Bates be and is hereby elected President of the Church for one year beginning May 4, 1895.

"The clerk was instructed to notify Dr. Eddy that according to the foregoing by-law his term of office as president of this Church has expired, and that Mr. Bates is elected to that position.

"The minutes of this meeting were read and approved. The meeting then adjourned at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.

"Respectfully submitted,
"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON, Clerk."

Mr. Dane—I now offer a certified copy of the Articles of Organization, and a certified copy of the certificate of The Christian Science Publishing Society, organized as a corporation under the laws of Massachusetts, April 2, 1897.

Mr. Whipple—The first, the Articles of Organization, will be Exhibit 113?

Mr. Dane—113, and the certificate No. 114.

The Master—I will ask you for that date in 1897.

Mr. Dane—The Articles of Incorporation are dated April 2, 1897; the certificate is issued April 3, 1897.

Mr. Whipple—Are the By-Laws given in it, or are you planning to put in a copy of the By-Laws?

Mr. Dane—I was not.

Mr. Strawn—Have you any certificate of the dissolution of that corporation?

Mr. Dane—I have not.

Mr. Whipple—We must get that—the certificate of dissolution.

Mr. Strawn—As a matter of fact, that corporation was dissolved on the 21st day of January, 1898, was it not?

Mr. Dane—I have no doubt, if you say so, Mr. Strawn, but I do not know.

Mr. Strawn—It was dissolved just after its assets were transferred to the trustees, as I understand it, or to Mrs. Eddy.

Mr. Dane—I presume so.

[Articles of Organization of Christian Science Publishing Society, dated

April 2, 1897, are marked Exhibit 113.] [Certificate of Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, as to incorporation of Christian Science Publishing Society, dated April 3, 1897, is marked Exhibit 114.]

The Master—You do not read those? Mr. Dane—I do not care to unless you want them.

The Master—You might let me look at them.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Dane, would you object to stating your view of the materiality of those papers?

Mr. Dane—Were you speaking to me, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Dane—I beg your pardon?

Mr. Whipple—What is your view of the materiality of the papers you have just put in—the copy?

Mr. Dane—Why, I understand you have no objection to their going in.

Mr. Whipple—Why this furtiveness about it? Have you any object that is not disclosed in trying to put them in?

Mr. Dane—Not the slightest.

Mr. Whipple—We see no materiality whatever. What is your idea?

Mr. Dane—They are important steps in the development of this case, to show, as stated in the opening, that this society was a corporation immediately preceding the date of the Trust Deed, and that Mrs. Eddy received from this corporation all of the personal property and real estate held by it, and then turned it over to her Church by the Trust Deed of Jan. 25, 1898, and the deed of real estate to the Church. It bears upon her plan, purpose, and intention, which is made an issue by you in your bill.

I now offer a certified copy of a deed from The Christian Science Publishing Society to Mary Baker G. Eddy, dated Jan. 21, 1898, and ask Your Honor to note the date—Jan. 21, 1898.

Mr. Whipple—A deed of what?

Mr. Dane—A deed of the real estate, owned by The Christian Science Publishing Society. This was four days before the execution of the Trust Deed under which the plaintiffs claim.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, we object to the evidence of the conveyance for any such purpose as was outlined in the opening, but I take it that Your Honor will feel that the evidence should be taken subject to our objection and exception.

The Master—I think so. I do not think you will either of you be satisfied unless you have the whole history.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor. With that understanding it may be marked.

Mr. Dane—Do you care to see it?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, I will glance at it. Is the amount of the Bates mortgage stated?

Mr. Dane—I think not.

[A certified copy of deed, Christian Science Publishing Society to Mary Baker G. Eddy, Jan. 21, 1898, is marked Exhibit 115.]

Mr. Dane—I desire to take the time to read the deed, if Your Honor please.

The deed above referred to is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:

Mr. Dane—If Your Honor please, while Mr. Johnson is here—we had to get him here from his vacation that he was spending up in New Hampshire—while he is here I would like to have him identify Mrs. Eddy's signature to certain original letters that we propose to put in. Possibly if we take a recess now until 11:30, we can have these arranged so that we will gain time, if there is no objection.

The Master—I hear no objection. We will stop until 11:30.

[Short recess.]

The Master—You may go on, Mr. Dane, when you are ready.

Q. I show you, Mr. Johnson, a book purporting to be the records of the meetings of The Christian Science Board of Directors, and ask you if you can identify that book (passing a book to the witness)? A. I do.

Q. And what is the book? A. It is the record book kept by William B. Johnson.

Q. The records in this book were kept by your father, Mr. Johnson? A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson—Let us have the dates.

Q. What period of time is covered in the book which I now hand you? A. The first meeting recorded here is Sept. 3, 1892.

Q. What is the date of the last meeting? A. The last is June 16, 1902. Now, that record there is a record in the back of the book, but here is one—

Q. What is the date of the last meeting of the directors that is recorded in that book? A. Dec. 30, 1903.

Mr. Whipple—I thought you said that it ran to June 16, 1902.

The Witness—Well, there is a record here, Mr. Whipple, on the last page, of something on June 16, 1902.

Mr. Whipple—You spoke of a record of 1903.

The Witness—Yes, but that 1902 record might have been one that was omitted from its place in the regular records of 1902, and was put at the end.

Mr. Thompson—What is the last date of which it really does contain a record?

Mr. Dane—The last date on which a meeting was held, as recorded in that book, is June 16, 1902.

Mr. Whipple—No; he said 1903.

The Witness—The last one recorded here is Dec. 30, 1903.

Mr. Thompson—December?

The Witness—Dec. 30, 1903.

Mr. Thompson—Then do I understand that after the Dec. 30 meeting is recorded there is a meeting recorded on June 16, 1902?

The Witness—Yes. It may have been left out of the regular records.

Mr. Whipple—Am I correct that the date of the first meeting recorded is Sept. 3, 1892? Was that the statement?

Mr. Dane—That is so.

Mr. Whipple—Well, now, according to your records, the Church was not organized until Sept. 23, 1892.

Mr. Bates—I think the date is Sept. 30. I understood him to say so.

Mr. Whipple—I understood so.

Mr. Dane—Sept. 3 is the first record in this book—Sept. 3, 1892.

Mr. Whipple—Then that was before the Church was organized, according to that, and we do not appear to have any record of any by-laws creating directors, or anything of the sort, and we have the anomaly of the election of directors of a Church before the Church itself was organized. There must be some explanation of that, isn't there?

Mr. Dane—There must be.

Mr. Whipple—This would seem to be the cart before the horse, if the directors got before the Church. It is what they have been doing latterly, but we did not suppose that it began that way.

Mr. Dane—I am only seeking at this time, Your Honor, now that we have this witness here, to identify records and certain signatures. The full significance of these records will be made perfectly plain when they are offered in evidence, but I want to identify these records at this time by this witness.

Mr. Whipple—Well, our trouble was that we were getting a curious identification, that is all; but perhaps, as you say, this can all be worked out.

Mr. Dane—I don't think you need to worry.

Mr. Whipple—I am not worrying, but it seems like an anomaly when you get your directors first.

Q. I show you another book, Mr. Johnson, and ask you what that is, and what period of time it covers? A. This is entitled "Directors' Record Book," and the first meeting is Jan. 1, 1904. The last meeting is of Saturday, March 2, 1907.

Q. Does that book contain the record of the meetings of The Christian Science Board of Directors?

Mr. Whipple—Are you presenting him another now?

Mr. Dane—No, the same book.

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Are those records signed by your father, William B. Johnson, secretary? A. They are.

Mr. Bates—What is the number of that for identification?

Mr. Dane—I have not marked any of them yet for identification.

Q. I show you another book, and ask you what that is? A. It is the directors' record book.

Q. And what period of time does that book cover? A. The first meeting is of March 4, 1907, and the last meeting May 28, 1909.

Q. And is that a book of records of the Christian Science Board of Directors? A. Yes.

Q. And are those records in that book signed by your father as secretary? A. They are.

Mr. Dane—Now I will ask to have marked for identification these three books. The one beginning Sept. 3, 1892, will be 116 for identification.

[The book described is marked Exhibit 116 for identification. R. H. J.]

And the one beginning Jan. 1, 1904, will be 117 for identification.

[The book described is marked Exhibit 117 for identification. R. H. J.]

And the one beginning March 4, 1907, will be 118 for identification.

[The book described is marked Exhibit 118 for identification. R. H. J.]

Q. I think I omitted to ask you, Mr. Johnson, with reference to the first book I showed you, "Exhibit 116, for identification. R. H. J.," whether or not that contained the records of The Christian Science Board of Directors as attested by your father, William B. Johnson, secretary? A. Yes, it does.

Q. Now I show you, Mr. Johnson, what purports to be an original letter under date of Oct. 12, 1903, mounted in silk, in a book entitled "Mary Baker Eddy. Letters and Miscellany. Vol. 4," on page 77, the letter itself being No. 361; and I ask you whether or not you can identify the signature on that letter? A. That is Mrs. Eddy's signature.

Q. You knew Mrs. Eddy in her lifetime, Mr. Johnson? A. I did.

Q. And you have seen many letters which she has written? A. Yes.

Q. Roughly how many? A. About 300.

Q. Have you received letters from her which she has written to you in her own handwriting? A. I have.

Q. And have you seen her write? A. I have.

Q. I show you a letter appearing on page 83 of the same book, the letter being dated Oct. 25, 1903, and the letter itself being numbered 364, and ask you whether or not that is Mrs. Eddy's signature to that letter? A. It is.

Mr. Thompson—What is the date of No. 361?

Mr. Dane—Oct. 12, 1903.

Q. I show you on page 213 of the same book a letter dated May 16, 1905, the letter being numbered 422, and ask you whether or not that is Mrs. Eddy's signature on that letter? A. It is.

Q. I show you a letter from Volume 3 of a book entitled "Mary Baker Eddy, Letters and Miscellany," on page 127, the letter being dated June 17, 1901, and the letter itself being numbered 279, and ask you whether or not Mrs. Eddy's signature is on that letter? A. Yes.

Q. From the same book, on page 193, I show you a letter dated June 20, 1902, numbered 310, and ask you if that is Mrs. Eddy's signature to that letter? A. It is.

Mr. Whipple—I take it we may have access to these volumes to look for other letters. Is that understood?

Mr. Dane—Yes, Mr. Whipple. You understand that the letters are mounted in the volumes in silk, and the directors do not want to let them go out of their possession, and they will not go out of their possession except as to your reasonable requirements for the purposes of testimony in the case.

Q. The records which I have shown you, Mr. Johnson—are they the records of The Mother Church, so-called?

Mr. Whipple—Which ones, may I ask?

Q. The records of the Board of Directors which I have just shown you—are they the records of the Board of Directors of The Mother Church? A. Yes.

Mr. Dane—I think that is all from Mr. Johnson. Do you care to cross-examine, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—We do not care to cross-examine.

Cross-Examination

Q. (By Mr. Thompson.) Mr. Dittmore succeeded your father, didn't he, in 1909, as clerk? A. Yes.

Q. He was clerk, do you know how long? A. How long was my father clerk, did you say?

Q. No. Mr. Dittmore succeeded your father right after this last record of your father on May 28, 1909? A. Yes.

Q. As clerk, secretary and director? A. He did.

Q. Do you know how long Mr. Dittmore remained clerk? A. I do not.

Q. So that the records after that date would be kept by Mr. Dittmore? A. Entirely so.

Q. (By Mr. Whipple.) Mr. Johnson, do you know where in the records there is anything with regard to the creation of a Board of Directors or a similar office? A. I think at the first meeting of Sept. 23, 1892.

Q. You mean of the Church? A. Of the Church, yes.

Mr. Whipple—Well, we didn't find anything of that sort. I don't remember it, at least.

The Witness—Why, I tell you: I think in the Trust Deed that Mrs. Eddy made, that is published in the Journal, she names certain members—Mr. Chase and others—as The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Mr. Whipple—I don't remember seeing anything in volume one.

The Witness—No, not in volume one. That was October, 1893, I am quite sure, in the Trust Deed of the land, given to the directors, who are to build the new building.

Q. Then you don't find anything in the records of the Church anywhere constituting a Board of Directors? A. I don't—

Q. I mean you can't turn and direct us to anything? A. I can't, no.

Mr. Whipple—Can you, Mr. Dane, point out anything in what have been called the Church Records, constituting a Board of Directors?

Mr. Dane—Are you asking me a question?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Dane—I am not testifying.

The Master—Well, as a matter of convenience—

Mr. Whipple—I supposed you would answer a civil question, as a gentleman.

The Master—As a matter of convenience couldn't it be pointed out at this stage, if there is anything of that kind?

Mr. Whipple—Or if you claim that there is anything in the meetings of the Church with regard to constituting a Board of Directors?

Mr. Dane—The Board of Directors, as I understand it—

The Master—No—only whether in the records which you have introduced there is anything showing a constitution of a Board of Directors by the Church?

Mr. Dane—I am not prepared at this moment, if Your Honor please, to state whether there is anything with reference to the constitution of the Board of Directors in the records that have been identified.

Mr. Whipple—We have been identifying some records of the Board of Directors, and I can't accept a statement that they were the Board of Directors of The Mother Church unless it appears that The Mother Church organization ever constituted them the Board of Directors.

The Master—I suppose we shall have to know at some stage just how and by whom the Board of Directors was constituted. Now the only inquiry at present is—Can you show us anything in the records bearing on that point as a matter of convenience at present? You are not bound to unless you want to.

Mr. Dane—I would gladly do so. I am not prepared at the present moment to point out in the records that have been identified anything bearing on that matter.

Mr. Whipple—If there is anything in the records which have not been identified which bears on it I would like to see those.

Q. Mr. Johnson, can you help us on that? Do you know of any records whereby the Church constituted a Board of Directors as a part of its organization, and if so will you show it to us? A. I can't remember now, Mr. Whipple. The first time that I heard the name of the Board of Directors mentioned was in the Trust Deed of the land that Mrs. Eddy turned over to the Church, in which she constitutes a Board of Directors to be called The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Q. For the Church? A. For the Church, yes.

Mr. Whipple—That is right. We have seen that. And I think that deed has gone in evidence. Your Honor will remember that the church edifice was transferred to a body of trustees, nominated or denominated in that paper as Christian Science Board of Directors.

Q. That is the deed that is annexed to the pleadings, isn't it?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—Exhibit 3: "Said grantees shall be known as The Christian Science Board of Directors and shall constitute a perpetual body or corporation," etc.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor. And Your Honor may remember that we alleged in our bill that one trust was created by her conveyance in the Trust Deed to certain trustees of the Church property, and that another trust was created by a deed creating the trustees of the publication society. Now I wondered whether these defendant directors claim that they were constituted as directors of The Mother Church by any vote of the members of that Church. That is important to know, the sources of their alleged or claimed authority, whether they have anything beyond the Trust Deed.

The Master—Well, we have got now all that they are prepared to tell us at present.

Mr. Whipple—But not all that Mr. Johnson could tell us if he had those records accessible, because Mr. Johnson is probably more familiar with them than anyone else. But I am sorry to say that that first volume is in the hands of the stenographer, and I would therefore like to suspend further questions to Mr. Johnson on that until we get that record back, with Your Honor's permission.

Mr. Dane—Meantime I have one or two other records which can be identified.

Re-Direct Examination

Q. (By Mr. Dane.) I show you a book, Mr. Johnson, purporting to be Church By-Laws, Volume 1, and ask you if you can identify that and what it is.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I object to Mr. Johnson's being called upon to identify that as Church By-Laws, because you can't prove them in that way. He can't tell what he knows about the volumes, the way he has others.

A. These are leaves or pages cut from the Manual of the By-Laws of The Mother Church.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I take it that that imports nothing as evidence with regard to any by-laws, and the point is not technical. So far as we can find out this Church has never had by-laws. If it is constituted under the laws of the Commonwealth it may have by-laws, but you have not stated yet whether you claim that it is so constituted, and if it is not constituted it may have rules of action, but it has no by-laws as such.

Mr. Dane—If you will wait a minute, Mr. Whipple.

The Master—I should like to inquire what this particular witness knows about these By-Laws. Does his father purport to have been connected with them in any way?

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor. I was just getting to that point when Mr. Whipple rose.

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Johnson, now, to page 1 of this volume, "Church By-Laws, Volume 1," and ask you if your father's signature appears on that page as clerk of a meeting of the directors? A. It does.

Q. And what date was the meeting held, the record of which appears on page 1 of that book? A. Oct. 15, 1906.

Mr. Whipple—That accents the very point I was making, if Your Honor please. Directors cannot make by-laws. By-laws are made, as I understand it, by the principal for the guidance of the subordinates, by stockholders, or by members of a church, for the guidance of their directors, and you do not find real by-laws made by the directors for their own guidance, or their rule, or attempted rule, of somebody else. Apparently here it is a directors' record in which they are trying to constitute so-called by-laws, but of course they cannot be by-laws. They are not church by-laws in any sense known to the law.

The Master—So far I understand all we have got from this witness is that this is a book which is in some way under his father's signature.

Mr. Whipple—That is clear; I think that is the purport or the legal significance of the testimony.

The Master—I do not know exactly how, yet.

Mr. Dane—He has testified, if Your Honor please, that on page 1 there appears a record of a meeting of the directors signed by his father, William B. Johnson, as clerk, and that is all he has testified to.

Mr. Whipple—And the date is Oct. 15, 1906.

Mr. Dane—1906.

Q. Now, I show you, in the same book, Mr. Johnson, pages from 37 to 67, inclusive, covering a period of time from Oct. 19, 1906, to July 16, 1908, and ask you whether or not on those pages there are recorded meetings of the directors, which your father signed as clerk? A. There are.

The Master—This seems to be, if I understand it rightly, a sort of a supplementary volume of the directors' records?

Mr. Dane—Exactly.

The Master—Kept by Mr. Johnson, the elder Mr. Johnson, as the directors' clerk?

Mr. Dane—Clerk, yes, sir. Now I desire to have this book about which the witness has just testified marked for identification.

[Church By-Laws, Volume 1, is marked for identification, Exhibit 119.]

Q. I show you now, Mr. Johnson, a book, Church By-Laws, Volume 2, and call your attention to the first page, to the page before the page numbered 1 in the book, and ask you if that is a record of a meeting of the Board of Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, under date of July 31, 1908, signed by your father, William B. Johnson, as clerk? A. It is.

Q. I call your attention in the same book to pages 37 to 47, both inclusive, and ask you whether or not those pages contain records of the meetings of the Board of Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, signed by your father as clerk? A. They do.

Mr. Dane—This book will be marked for identification, Exhibit 120.

Mr. Thompson—Do you want to give the dates of those last meetings?

Mr. Dane—The dates of what, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson—The dates of the directors' meetings on pages 37 to 47.

Mr. Dane—I will. The meetings recorded on pages 37 to 47 include the period of time from July 31, 1908, to May 22, 1909, both dates inclusive. This book is marked for identification, Exhibit 120.

[Church By-Laws, Volume 2, marked for identification, Exhibit 120.]

Mr. Dane—So far as we now know, that is all we want from Mr. Johnson in the way of identification of records. We have not had a chance to talk with Mr. Johnson. He may know something material to the case, and I would like to reserve the right to put him on later if I desire to do so.

The Master—Is there anything further from this witness at this stage?

Mr. Whipple—Nothing further so far as we are concerned, except to ask Mr. Johnson with regard to any record whereby the directors are constituted as such by the members of the Church, or any authority that they get by reason of any vote of The Mother Church, or any constitution of the Church as a religious body under the laws of the Commonwealth.

The Master—Anything further, Mr. Thompson, from this witness?

Mr. Thompson—Just a moment, if Your Honor please. (Consulting with Mr. Dittmore) I think there is nothing further, if Your Honor please, but we also hope that he will be back here again in case we should need to examine him. It is too soon for us to make up our minds whether we have anything further to ask him.

Mr. Dane—That is all at the present, Mr. Johnson. I offer now, from the Church Manual of 1897, Article 5, Section 4, which I show to counsel.

Mr. Whipple—I do not think you need to show it to me until in some way you have shown any adoption of some by-law, or some authority in connection with what you offer to show. That is where we left off last night. You were going to prove the By-Laws of the Church. You opened very broadly about the By-Laws of the Church and the power it gave to the directors, and you were going to prove it. You cannot prove them by handing them to me.

Mr. Dane—Well, we will prove the By-Laws of the Church before we are through with the defense of this case, I think, to the satisfaction of the Court. This particular section of the by-law we do not rely upon in any way, but we simply desire to show that it appeared in a Church Manual in 1897, in the form in which it appeared, and that it was amended at the suggestion of Mrs. Eddy by adding to it a very important sentence. The by-law relates, as it appears in this Manual, to the existence of a Board of Trustees of The Mother Church, and provides that no Board of Trustees shall ever exist by or between the members of The Mother Church or in The Mother Church. The adoption of it is not a matter which we need to go into at this time, as we claim nothing under it; simply that it appears in this Church Manual in the form in which it there appears, and that the amendment of it was made, as we shall proceed to show, at Mrs. Eddy's request.

The Master—Must you not, if it is insisted upon, begin by showing the adoption? Without showing the adoption have you any foundation upon which to show the amendment?

Mr. Dane—I think so, if Your Honor please. We are not claiming anything under the amendment. It simply appears here in this book entitled "Church Manual," in the form that it there appears. Now, we claim nothing whatever under this particular by-law, but we must have this by-law as a foundation for what we are claiming under and what we propose to prove in the proper way.

The Master—Before you can call it a by-law must you not show its adoption?

Mr. Dane—Well, I will waive the denomination of it as a by-law and simply call it a section of Art. V appearing in a book entitled "Church Manual."

Mr. Whipple—That doesn't get you anywhere, calling it something else. According to your statement, it is entirely immaterial. You say you do not claim anything under it.

Mr. Dane—Well, I propose to make it material by following it up with proof of matter that is material.

Mr. Whipple—I do not understand you make things material by following them up. You have, when you offer them, to make it clear to the Court that they are admissible.

Mr. Dane—I will take my instructions and rulings from the Court.

Mr. Whipple—You are getting them.

Mr. Dane—If the Court thinks it is necessary.

The Master—It rather seems to me that you must prove the adoption, or at least something more about what you read from the Church Manual, than the mere fact that it appears in a book entitled "Church Manual."

Mr. Dane—I shall need to recall Mr. Johnson. Mr. Johnson, will you kindly take the stand again?

William L. Johnson, Recalled

Q. (by Mr. Dane) I show you, Mr. Johnson, page 85 of a book entitled "Mary Baker Eddy, Letters and Miscellany, Volume 7," and page 87 in the same book, and ask you whether or not the word "Mother" appearing on the paper numbered 710 is in the handwriting of Mrs. Eddy? A. It is.

Mr. Whipple—Do you care to give the date?

Mr. Dane—The date which appears on this is "Adopted, Feb. 3, 1898."

Q. Are you familiar, Mr. Johnson, with the records in this book numbered 708, 709, and 710? A. Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Those are the pages?

Mr. Dane—Those are the numbers of the writings appearing on pages 85 and 87.

Q. And whether or not those writings that I have called your attention to came from Mrs. Eddy?

Mr. Whipple—Well, what do you mean? You are asking whether they are in her handwriting?

Mr. Dane—No, they are not in her handwriting, except the word—

Mr. Whipple—Then how can Mr. Johnson say whom they came from?

Mr. Dane—Pardon me—except the word "Mother," which he has already testified to is in her handwriting.

Mr. Whipple—Isn't that the limit of what Mr. Johnson can testify to?

Q. Do you think so? A. Yes; they are.

Mr. Whipple—Well, then, the question and answer will have to be suspended, I take it, until Your Honor rules.

The Master—I do not quite grasp the situation, I am afraid.

Mr. Dane—The witness has testified that the writings appearing on pages 85 and 87 of this book, numbered 708, 709, and 710, came from Mrs. Eddy; that the writing on page 87, numbered 710—the word "Mother" appears in Mrs. Eddy's handwriting. And I offer—

Mr. Whipple—And I objected to the question as to whether they came from Mrs. Eddy, because it did not appear that Mr. Johnson knew about that. They are not in her handwriting, and where they came from—

The Master—Should you not get the witness' knowledge, Mr. Dane, before you ask that question?

Mr. Whipple—May the answer which was made after my objection be stricken out for the moment?

The Master—Will that be necessary? If it appears that he has no personal knowledge we will strike that out.

Q. Have you any personal knowledge, Mr. Johnson, as to whether or not the writings appearing on pages 85 and 87 came from Mrs. Eddy? A. I have in the one that is signed. The first one—the typewriting—that, I should say and firmly believe, was done at Pleasant View by the machine that they had at that time.

Q. That is 708? A. 708.

Q. That was done on the same typewriter as 710? A. As 710, yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—But it is not claimed that Mrs. Eddy used the typewriter?

The Witness—No, I do not claim that at all.

Q. And 710 bears the signature of "Mother" in Mrs. Eddy's handwriting? A. It does.

Mr. Dane—I offer 708 and 710. Do you care to see them, brother Whipple (passing to Mr. Whipple the volume containing the letters referred to)?

Mr. Whipple—You offer what—708? What do you offer?

Mr. Dane—I offer 708 and 710. 710 is offered for the purpose of comparison in connection with the witness' testimony and his testimony as to the signature of "Mother" upon it as being Mrs. Eddy's.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, well, I certainly shall have to object to that. I do not think there is any identification as showing that it was by Mrs. Eddy's authority, in the first place.

Mr. Dane—I will show it to the Court (passing to the Master the volume referred to).

Mr. Whipple—Now, then, there will arise another question after that. As I understand the testimony, they put in one typewritten piece which bears the penciled signature "Mother," in order to show that another one which bears no signature whatever came from the same typewriter, or Mr. Johnson judges that it did, to wit, a typewriter at Pleasant View. That does not go very far toward proof.

Mr. Dane—What you have suggested goes to the weight of it.

Mr. Whipple—It is not signed by Mrs. Eddy.

The Master—I did not get what the witness said in regard to his personal knowledge concerning the source of what you offer.

Mr. Dane—I will refer to that. I asked him whether or not he had personal knowledge as to whether those writings came from Mrs. Eddy, and he testified, I think, that he knew that 710 came from Mrs. Eddy, and 708, being written on the same typewriter, the typewriter at Pleasant View, he would say that it came from Mrs. Eddy.

Mr. Whipple—He did not so state.

The Master—Is that all the personal knowledge that you have regarding the source of these papers?

The Witness—That is all, Your Honor.

The Master—It seems to me that that will be sufficient for 710: I do not think that it is as to the other.

Q. Do you know what the custom of Mrs. Eddy was as to signifying her approval of by-laws, acts of the directors? Whether or not she was accustomed to write her name "Mother" as signifying her approval?

Mr. Whipple—Well, if Your Honor please, Your Honor has ruled on that one.

The Master—I have admitted 710.

Mr. Whipple—That one is admitted. It is only the one as to which, apparently, there was no such custom followed—

Mr. Dane—I understand Your Honor excludes 708?

The Master—Well, for the present. I do not think that you have shown by this witness that that came from Mrs. Eddy. It may be very likely that you can do it by other testimony, but at present there is no evidence sufficient for that purpose.

Mr. Dane—I think that perhaps I can make that connection in a more satisfactory way, Your Honor.

Q. I show you, Mr. Johnson, a letter appearing on page 91 of a volume entitled "Mary Baker Eddy. Letters and Miscellany," a letter numbered 712, and ask you if you recognize the handwriting in the signature of that letter? A. I do.

Mr. Whipple—Which volume is that, page 91?

Mr. Dane—Page 91 of Vol. 7.

Mr. Whipple—And No. 712?

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Q. Who signed the letter, and who wrote the letter? A. Mr. Frye.

Q. C. A. Frye? A. Calvin A. Frye.

Q. And who was Mr. Calvin A. Frye? A. Mrs. Eddy's private secretary.

Q. And was he her private secretary while she resided at Pleasant View, Concord, New Hampshire? A. He was.

Mr. Dane—I offer the letter numbered 712, and the inclosure also numbered 712, appearing on page 91.

Mr. Whipple—Do you want me to look at it?

Mr. Dane—If you care to.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I don't care to.

Mr. Dane—You needn't.

Mr. Whipple—Then I will object to it without looking at it.

[Mr. Whipple takes the book and peruses the letter and inclosure referred to.]

We object to that, if Your Honor please. In the first place, it does not go to show the real adoption of the by-law at all in any legal sense, or in any real sense. At most, you might ask to have attached to it the significance that every Christian Scientist attaches to the words of Mrs. Eddy herself over her own signature, but that sanctity does not extend to every one who purported to write something in her behalf, whether they be directors or private secretaries.

The Master—Not to every one, but might it not apply to every one who habitually wrote communications in her behalf?

Mr. Whipple—That has not appeared.

The Master—And is that not implied by the testimony that Mr. Frye was her private secretary?

Mr. Whipple—I thought not, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Dane—I can ask the question.

Q. Mr. Johnson, whether or not Mr. Frye habitually wrote letters on behalf of Mrs. Eddy? A. He did.

Q. During the time that she resided at Pleasant View, Concord, New Hampshire? A. He did.

Mr. Dane—Would Your Honor care to see that?

The Master—Signed by Mr. Frye, I think that I shall have to admit it.

Mr. Whipple—Will Your Honor note our objection to it as entirely immaterial?

The Master—Quite so. I do not pass on the materiality of it at all.

Mr. Whipple—Your Honor does not pass on its materiality?

The Master—Not at present. That will be open to argument hereafter.

Mr. Whipple—Then we will leave it open for the present, but we cannot see that it bears upon any issue in the case.

Mr. Dane—This is a letter on the letterhead—

The Master—Pardon me, Mr. Dane. I do not think that you have read yet 710, is it, or 708?

Mr. Dane—710 I do not wish to read into the record, because I offered it only for the purpose of comparison with 708, which was the important one.

The Master—In itself it has no particular materiality?

Mr. Dane—In itself, it has no particular materiality.

The Master—Very good. Now you may read 712, then.

Mr. Dane—

"This church by-law can neither be amended nor annulled except by the consent of Mrs. Eddy, the Pastor Emeritus of this Church, over her own handwriting."

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 121, R. H. J.]

Mr. Whipple—Now, we will submit, if Your Honor please, that that has no bearing upon any issue in this case.

Mr. Dane—I call Your Honor's attention to the date of this communication as February 10, 1898, shortly after the execution of the Trust Deed; and this communication of Mrs. Eddy falls directly within the reservation of power made by her in the Trust Deed as to the execution of the Trust Deed.

The Master—I am not prepared to exclude it as wholly immaterial on any issue. It may stand for the present. Will you now show, or will it be convenient for you to show now the action taken upon that request?

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor. I am proceeding to do that.

The Master—This will be a convenient place to have it, I think, if there was any action.

Mr. Dane—I find that the volume in which that action is shown is now in the possession of the stenographer.

I will show Your Honor the adoption of the by-law which I have just read in evidence, as soon as the volume is brought back in which that action appears. In the meantime I will ask Mr. Johnson if that letter appearing on page 201 of a volume entitled "Mary Baker Eddy. Letters and Miscellany," Vol. 10, and numbered 1204, has the signature of C. A. Frye?

The Witness—It has.

The Master—What is the date?

Mr. Dane—Dated July 13, 1899.

And I offer that letter (passing the same to Mr. Whipple).

Mr. Whipple—We cannot see, if Your Honor please, that that is material in any way, but I think that it comes under the ruling that Your Honor has made, and I understand that Your Honor will not now rule upon the materiality of it, but will deal with that later.

Mr. Dane—This is a letter upon the letterhead:

"Mrs. Eddy also thinks it would be well for you to frame a by-law that all Christian Scientists who are able shall subscribe for the periodicals that our Church sustains and that these periodicals shall be ably edited and kept abreast with the times.

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 122, R. H. J.]

The action of the First Members with respect to the subject matter of that letter also appears in Volume 2 of the First Members.

Q. I show you, Mr. Johnson, a paper on page 141 of Letters and Miscellany, Volume 7, numbered 738, and ask you if you know in whose handwriting that paper is, the handwriting that appears in black? A. No, I don't know that handwriting.

Mr. Dane—In connection with the letter from Mrs. Eddy with relation to the adoption of the By-Law as to the filling of vacancies, which has been put in, vacancies upon the Board of Directors and upon the Board of Trustees, I offer from Volume 2 of the Minutes of First Members of The Mother Church, the record appearing on page 183, which I will show to counsel. (Handing record book to Mr. Whipple.)

Mr. Whipple—With the reservation that has already been mentioned, as to the general application or materiality of these By-Laws, we have no objection to that being read.

[The record of a meeting of Feb. 10, 1898, appearing on page 183 of Volume 2, Minutes of Meetings of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors and Annual Church Meetings, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 123.]

Mr. Dane (reading)—

"Feb. 10, 1898.

"At a special meeting of the First Members of The Mother Church held in the vestry of the church and opened by the president in the usual form at 2:40 p. m., at which meeting 20 members were present, the following Church By-Law was adopted by a unanimous vote—all rising:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors of this Church shall not fill a vacancy occurring on that board except by a unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. The Board of Trustees of this Church shall not fill a vacancy occurring on their board except by a unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. The readers of this Church shall not be elected except by a unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. And no person shall be a member of this Church or be eligible to the said offices who has made attempts to greatly injure Mrs. Eddy, and her testimony or the testimony of a member of the Christian Science Board of Directors shall be found sufficient evidence in the case.

"This Church By-Law can neither be amended nor annulled except by the consent of Mrs. Eddy, the Pastor Emeritus of this Church, over her own handwriting. Signed, Mary Baker Eddy. The minutes were approved. The meeting adjourned at 2:45 p. m.

"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,

"Clerk."

Mr. Whipple—Don't you understand that to mean "over her own handwriting—Mary Baker Eddy," showing the signature which must be attached to consent to any change?

Mr. Dane—I don't understand that is her signature.

Mr. Whipple—No, but don't you understand that it prescribes a form in which her signature must appear in order to effect a change?

Mr. Dane—I understand that related to the entire by-law which was proposed by her for adoption at this time.

Mr. Whipple—Now what do you understand by the Board of Trustees of the Church as mentioned there?

Mr. Dane—I don't think, if Your Honor please, that we ought to argue the points of the case as we go along, unless the Court desires to hear from us.

Mr. Whipple—Very well. I thought perhaps you thought it meant Board of Trustees of the Publishing Society. If you don't care to state I won't press it.

Mr. Dane—Then I offer from page 200 of the same book the record of a meeting of Aug. 25, 1898, relating to an amendment in the by-law which has just been referred to (showing the volume to Mr. Whipple).

Mr. Whipple—Well, is that one of the things you have identified before?

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Subject to our general objection as to its materiality we assent that it be taken provisionally.

[The record of a meeting of Aug. 25, 1898, appearing on page 200 of Volume 2 of Minutes of Meetings of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors and Annual Church Meetings, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 124.]

Mr. Dane (reading)—

"Aug. 25, 1898."

Mr. Whipple—Is this the meeting of First Members?

Mr. Dane—First Members—appearing on page 200 of Vol. 2.

"A special meeting of the First Members was held this day in the vestry. It was opened by the president without form at 9:15 o'clock, nine members present.

"Voted: That the second paragraph of Sect. 1 of Article XI, page 28 of the Church Manual, Eighth Edition be amended by striking out the words following 'the remaining trustees shall fill the vacancy.' The words to be stricken out are: and the candidates proposed for this office shall be elected by a unanimous vote of all the First Members of said Church.

"Minutes approved, and the meeting adjourned at 10:50 a. m.

"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON, Clerk."

Mr. Dane—In connection with a letter from Mrs. Eddy, relating to the by-law as to the periodicals, which has been offered, I offer record of a meeting of the First Members, of July 17, 1899, that part which I will read into the record (showing volume to Mr. Whipple).

Mr. Whipple—The same reservation.

[The record of a meeting of July 17, 1899, appearing on page 258 of Vol. 2 of Minutes of Meetings of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors and Annual Church Meetings, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 125.]

Mr. Dane (reading)—

"July 17, 1899.

"A special meeting was held this day, the president present. The meeting was opened at 2 o'clock p. m. 48 members answered to the call of their names.

"On motion the following amendments and by-law were unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

"By-Law

"It shall be the privilege and duty of every member of this Church who can afford it to subscribe for the periodicals that are the organs of this Church; and it shall be the duty of this Church to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times."

I offer from Vol. 3 of the directors' records the record of a meeting of July 30, 1903, appearing on page 122, and show it to counsel. (Showing Volume 3 to Mr. Whipple.)

Mr. Whipple—That I can't see how in any aspect can possibly be admissible. We are asked here to admit a vote of a Board of Directors adopting by-laws. What authority have the directors to adopt any by-laws for the government of the Church? Where is any such authority given to them by the First Members or by the members of the Church?

The Master—Heretofore we have had the records of the First Members. You now offer the records of the directors. Is that right?

Mr. Dane—Yes.

The Master—And I understand from Mr. Whipple that they purport to enact a by-law. Am I right?

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor. They purport to adopt a Manual of by-laws. And I will say in that connection—

The Master—Must you not, then, show some authority in them to take such action?

Mr. Dane—Yes. In 1901 the functions of the First Members who had before that time acted upon the By-Laws were transferred to the Board of Directors.

The Master—Have we had the evidence of that? I don't know but that we have. It has been stated several times. But has there been any evidence in regard to it?

Mr. Dane—I offer from Volume 2 of the Records of First Members, dated Jan. 10, 1901, page 313.

Mr. Whipple—I don't mind provisionally its being read, Your Honor, because we say that it does not sustain the claim that has been made and reiterated by counsel. It is no transfer of authority to make by-laws. It is an extraordinary situation for people—

The Master—Let us hear what it says and then I can understand better what you have to say about it.

Mr. Dane (reading)—

“Jan. 10, 1901.

“A special meeting of the First Members was held this day, 31 members present.

“On a motion which was seconded, and by a unanimous vote, the following By-Law was adopted:

“The business of The Mother Church hitherto transacted by the First Members shall be done by its Christian Science Board of Directors. The salary of each member of this board shall at present be raised to $700 per annum.

“The First Members of this Church shall continue to convene annually at the Communion season, but they shall not be present at the business meetings. This By-Law can neither be amended nor annulled without the unanimous consent of the whole Church or the written consent of Mrs. Eddy, pastor emeritus.

“WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,
“Clerk.”

The Master—And if I recollect right, you have not yet shown any action by the First Members constituting a Board of Directors?

Mr. Dane—I think not.

The Master—So that we are left in some doubt as to what that vote means when it refers to its Board of Directors.

Mr. Dane—That is, of course, involved in a recognition of the Manual.

The Master—Where does the Manual come in? I don't quite see that yet. By its Board of Directors—that is, the Church's Board of Directors?

Mr. Dane—Yes, Your Honor.

The Master—How did the church get a Board of Directors? We haven't yet any action of the First Members constituting one.

Mr. Dane—No. I think that may be correct. It will develop, however, and I would prefer to develop it gradually, rather than state my position at this time.

The Master—By no means do I intend to trouble you particularly regarding the order of proof, but would not the natural way be to show, in the first place, how the Church got its Board of Directors?

Mr. Dane—The deed of 1892, of Sept. 1.

The Master—Is that the only way?

Mr. Dane—Creating a Board of Directors which the Church accepted when it came into existence on Sept. 23, 1892, subsequent to the execution of the Trust Deed.

The Master—How is the acceptance of the Church shown?

Mr. Dane—It is shown by the conduct only, the continuation—

The Master—Not by a vote?

Mr. Dane—Not by a vote so far as I am aware at the present time.

The Master—And this deed of Sept. 1, 1892, goes no further than to authorize the directors to make regulations for the purpose of maintaining public worship.

Mr. Dane—Yes. Now, subsequent to that this voluntary association was organized and they simply accepted those persons as the Board of Directors and recognized them as such, and always have.

The Master—Without any formal action.

Mr. Whipple—Your Honor will notice that it does not transfer any authority to make by-laws or anything of that sort. There is a by-law whereby they transfer the business of The Mother Church, business administration, to these directors, assuming they were directors of The Mother Church. They were really trustees under another deed of trust with a definition contained in that trust of their duties, as we claim.

Mr. Dane—We do not concede—

The Master—We will let Mr. Dane put in all the facts and then we will see what follows from it. It seems all rather shadowy at present.

Mr. Dane—There are a great many records that will have to be put in to develop the situation, and necessarily it will perhaps go slowly at this time. I think it will be made perfectly clear, as the case goes in, exactly what the situation is.

Mr. Whipple—In the record which is now offered the directors purport to have gone forward to amend a so-called by-law on an alleged telephone request of Mrs. Eddy, although the existing by-law required her consent in writing to any change.

Mr. Dane—That has not been put in, has it?

Mr. Whipple—No. I am commenting on what you are trying to put in.

Mr. Dane—We haven't offered it. We will get to it in time.

Mr. Whipple—No, I am talking about what you are trying to do.

[The record of a meeting, dated Jan. 10, 1901, appearing on page 313 of Vol. 2 of Minutes of Meetings of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors and Annual Church Meetings, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 126.]

The Master—Shall we stop here?

[Recess until 2:05 o'clock p. m.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The Master—You may go on, Mr. Dane, when you are ready.

Mr. Dane—Have you Volume 3, Mr. Strawn? (Volume produced.) For the present I will withdraw the offer of the record of the meeting of July 30, 1903.

The Master—That record was what? Just remind me.

Mr. Dane—That was the record which I offered by which the directors adopted the twenty-ninth edition of the Church Manual. That has not gone in evidence and for the present I withdraw it. I had just before the adjournment put in the record of the transfer of the powers of the First Members to The Christian Science Board of Directors, in January, 1901. I desire now to go back to the record of Dec. 28, 1895, appearing on page 50 of Volume 2 of the First Members, and I offer the record of that meeting.

Mr. Whipple—This is a meeting of directors?

Mr. Dane—First Members.

Mr. Whipple—First Members.

Mr. Streeter—Let me ask, the Master and all the gentlemen concerned—are these records of specific By-Laws and specific abstracts being marked in the record so that they can be indexed, as we talked about this morning?

Mr. Dane—I understand these records which have been read into the record are being marked as exhibits in the record.

Mr. Whipple—Now may I ask what you offer?

Mr. Dane—I offer the record of the meeting of the First Members of Dec. 28, 1895.

Mr. Whipple—Do you understand that the following pages, page 51 and following, are a part of it?

Mr. Dane—Yes. I understand that is what was at that meeting adopted by the First Members.

Mr. Whipple—It says here, “Motion is hereby made by Ira O. Knapp that the foregoing rules and By-Laws read by the clerk to constitute a Church Manual be accepted.”

Mr. Dane—Yes, I know. That is quite obviously a typographical error. It refers to the “following,” because following that are the rules and regulations.

Mr. Whipple—In other words, it is just the opposite of what it says.

Mr. Dane—Yes, in intentment.

Mr. Whipple—How far do you understand the record goes of that meeting of Dec. 28, 1895?

Mr. Dane—To the bottom of page 80.

Mr. Whipple—Well, now, you see the Aug. 22 meeting refers to the “foregoing rules and By-Laws.”

Mr. Dane—Yes. I offer that also.

Mr. Whipple—While the one of Dec. 28 does not.

The Master—I thought that was September. December, is it?

Mr. Whipple—Dec. 28, 1895.

Mr. Dane—I offer the following meeting also, of Aug. 22, 1896.

Mr. Whipple—With the note of Mr. Johnson at the end, page 87? I fail to see, if Your Honor please, how any of the provisions of the By-Laws which appear to have been adopted on this date, in 1895, can have any bearing upon the Trust Deed or any of the issues that we have here.

The Master—It seems to me that we shall have to let Mr. Dane go on and develop his case, and bring out the facts. I hardly think it would be advisable to stop at every point to discuss their bearing or their admissibility. Why cannot we have it understood that it is all subject to objection? He has told us that he intends to show and to rely upon acquiescence in a course of conduct extending through a considerable period of time. Wouldn't it be the best way to hear what he has got to offer tending to show that, on the understanding that it is all open to objection—you do not admit its materiality or anything else?

Mr. Whipple—We should like very much to do that instead of making the objections, interspersing them with the different offers; and with that understanding we are content that this should be put in for what it is worth.

Mr. Dane—All right. The record of a meeting of First Members, dated Dec. 28, 1895, from Volume 2, page 50, of the First Members' records.

[The record from First Members' records above referred to, dated Dec. 28, 1895, is Exhibit 127.]

The record is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:

"A special meeting of the First Members was held this day in the church vestry. The president being absent, Ira O. Knapp was chosen chairman, after which the meeting was opened in the usual manner, at one o'clock and ten minutes. 21 members present."

Omitting two paragraphs, and proceeding:

"Motion is hereby made by Ira O. Knapp that the foregoing rules and By-Laws read by the clerk constitute a Church Manual be accepted and adopted, and that all Rules and By-Laws inconsistent with these Rules and By-Laws be repealed and that the clerk be authorized to expunge and obliterate such Rules and By-Laws from the books of the Church. The above By-Law was offered by Mr. Knapp—"

Obviously, that means "resolution."

"—in a previous meeting when he was not the chairman, but other Rules were adopted since that meeting, and as the records of that meeting had not been entered the above motion was adopted as above.

"These minutes were approved, and the meeting adjourned at 2:50 p. m.

"William B. Johnson,
"Clerk."

Then follow pages 51 to 80, inclusive, and I desire only to read pages 51, 52 and 53.

The Master—Those are what are called in the minutes of the meeting "the foregoing"?

Mr. Dane—Those are what are called in the minutes of the meeting "the foregoing." Actually, they are following.

The Master—Apparently they were so called because they had been read to the meeting.

Mr. Dane—Undoubtedly that is the explanation.

The Master—Do you propose to put them all in?

Mr. Dane—Yes, sir. I want to put them all in; I don't want to read them all.

The Master—And to read only two pages?

Mr. Dane—Only a part of it. Page 51—

Mr. Dane—Page of—

Mr. Whipple—You do not care to have that all copied into the record?

Mr. Dane—Oh, no.

The Master—Let me ask this question at this point: Were they then printed, published and used just as they stand there?

Mr. Dane—Yes, I think they were, Your Honor.

The Master—Possibly it might be well to put in the printed edition.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Dane—I should be very glad to do so.

The Master—As it was then adopted and agreed upon.

Mr. Whipple—If that fact can be verified it would be better to use one of the printed forms.

The Master—Yes. Have it verified, and then we can all have it in the most convenient form to refer to. You can pick that out later, Mr. Dane. You had better read what you propose to read now. We do not want to lose any more time.

Mr. Dane—We will locate that printed volume of this Manual, but I will read now from page 51:

"Church Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

"Christian Science Publishing Society, 95 Falmouth Street, Boston.

"Copyrighted, by James A. Neal, Thomas W. Hatten.

"Contents: Church Officers, Formation of the Church, Church Tenets, Church Rules, By-Laws, Instructions to Teachers, Forms of Application for Membership, Deed of Trust, Preamble, List of Members, Explanatory Note."

The Master—Now, out of all that, are we concerned with anything else except the By-Laws included?

Mr. Dane—Possibly the Church Rules—the Church Rules and the By-Laws.

The Master—The Church Rules and the By-Laws.

Mr. Whipple—The list of officers, may I suggest, Your Honor?

Mr. Dane—The list of officers, and I was going to read the list of officers.

The Master—The vote does not refer to any list of officers, does it?

Mr. Dane—The vote adopts this Manual, which includes the list of officers, and in effect adopts that list of officers.

The Master—That is rather an unusual way of adopting a list of officers, is it not?

Mr. Dane—Yes, I think it is rather unusual.

The Master—I supposed that I had my attention fixed on the By-Laws and rules referred to in the vote. That was what we were after more immediately. However, you can go on.

Mr. Dane—At page 52:

"Church Officers

"Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, Pastor Emeritus.

"Ira O. Knapp, Joseph Armstrong, Stephen A. Chase, William B. Johnson, Christian Science Board of Directors.

"President, Edward P. Bates.

"First Reader, Septimus J. Hanna: reads from Scriptures and conducts services.

"Second Reader, Mrs. Eldora O. Gragg: reads from the Christian Science Textbook, 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' by Mary Baker G. Eddy.

"Clerk of Church, William B. Johnson.

"Treasurer, Mrs. Mary F. Eastaman."

The Master—Now, if I may ask a question there, had not some at least of those officers already been elected by the First Members to those positions?

Mr. Dane—I understand not.

The Master—Not any of them?

Mr. Dane—Not in the ordinary acceptance of the word "elected," in its legal acceptance.

The Master—Well, Mr. Johnson as clerk, how about him—hadn't he been elected?

Mr. Dane—I think, if Your Honor please, that the First Members simply adopted those men who were named in the Church, and the First Members elected Mr. Johnson as clerk of the Church.

The Master—They did that in September, 1892, did they not?

Mr. Dane—1892.

The Master—And he had served as clerk ever since, so that it did not take that vote to make him clerk.

Mr. Dane—No.

The Master—I am a little in doubt about the scope of that vote as to the officers named.

Mr. Dane—The vote reads that "the foregoing (meaning the following) rules and by-laws read by the clerk to constitute a Church Manual be accepted and adopted, and that all rules and by-laws inconsistent with these rules and by-laws be repealed."

The Master—That is all right so far as the rules and by-laws are concerned; but how about the officers?

Mr. Dane—Pursuant to that vote this Manual was prepared, and we shall show from time to time the adoption of other manuals by the Board of Directors after the powers of the First Members were transferred and the—

The Master—What does it say in the vote about a Manual, or preparing and publishing a Manual?

Mr. Dane—It says:

“Motion is hereby made by Ira O. Knapp that the foregoing Rules and by-laws read by the clerk to constitute a Church Manual be accepted and adopted.”

The Master—That does not constitute the list of officers a part of the Church Manual.

Mr. Dane—They appear as The Christian Science Board of Directors in the Church Manual, which is authorized by that vote, and thereby—

The Master—That is just where I find my difficulty. The vote appears to authorize nothing more than Rules and By-Laws constituting the Church Manual.

Mr. Dane—In terms, yes, that is correct, but I think by necessary implication—

The Master—Now, they got up something, a list of officers, some of whom at least had already been elected officers by the First Members. Can it be that the adoption of the Rules and By-Laws by that vote amounts to anything as an election or appointment of the officers named?

Mr. Dane—I think that it bears upon the adoption and acceptance by implication, by necessary inference, by acquiescence of the First Members—

The Master—Very well.

Mr. Dane—of the directors named in the Manual, which they published under the authority of this by-law.

The Master—Very well. Now I think I understand it. You have stated your position.

Mr. Dane—It is at least a recognition of the existence of those gentlemen as directors.

Mr. Thompson—Now, will you read—

Mr. Whipple—Now, may I offer this suggestion, that long before these gentlemen had been appointed under that name as directors, although under the Deed of Trust they were thus constituted, and the recognition of them as trustees under that Deed of Trust does not make them Church officers. I am merely stating our contention.

The Master—Certainly, certainly.

Mr. Whipple—And Your Honor will observe that no evidence whatever is offered that the First Members or anybody else ever created an office in the Church of directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, or elected anybody to that office. These gentlemen were appointed under a Deed of Trust, and when we refer to The Christian Science Board of Directors we refer to those under the trust until there has been some other creation of those people.

The Master—All that is a difficulty which no doubt Mr. Dane will have to struggle with as best he can.

Mr. Dane—Now we offer from Volume 2—

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me, were you not going to read any more of your Manual of 1895?

Mr. Dane—I did not intend to at this time.

Mr. Whipple—Why, all you have read is a list of officers.

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Or so-called officers.

Mr. Dane—Yes.

The Master—Then follow the Rules and Orders.

Mr. Dane—Then follow the By-Laws and Church Rules.

The Master—Are you not going to read any of them? Well, not unless you want to.

Mr. Dane—I was looking for the printed copy, and I thought that I could then read from that.

The Master—Yes; that would be more convenient, undoubtedly.

Mr. Dane—I will read from page 62 of the same record book, Volume 2 of the First Members:

“BY-LAWS.

“Article I.

“Church Officers.—”

The Master—Does this follow right after the list of officers?

Mr. Dane—It does not follow that.

The Master—Oh, yes. All right.

Mr. Dane—There are some pages intervening.

“Section 1. The officers of the Church shall be elected by the Board of Directors at their annual meeting.”

Now, Article III:

“Section 1. The Christian Science Board of Directors shall appoint a male and female reader, one to read the Bible, and one to read ‘Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures.’”

Mr. Whipple—Doesn't it state there what officers there shall be of the Church?

Mr. Dane—Yes; Section 2 of Article I relates to officers of the Church.

Mr. Whipple—That is right. Read that, won't you?

Mr. Dane—“Sect. 2. The Officers shall consist of a President, Clerk, Treasurer, and two Readers.”

Mr. Whipple—That is what I wanted to call attention to, that the officers of the Church are defined, and The Christian Science Board of Directors are not among them.

Mr. Dane—“Sect. 3. The President of this Church shall hold his office one year only, and is eligible to this office once in three years.

“Sect. 4. The President's, Clerk's, Treasurer's, Reader's terms of office expire on the first Tuesday of October.”

Page 63, from Article III:

“The directors shall select intelligible readers and exemplary Christians to read in Church.”

Mr. Thompson—What section is that?

Mr. Dane—That is Sect. 1 of Art. III.

“Sect. 2. This Board shall inform the Pastor Emeritus of the names of their candidates for readers before they are elected, and if she objects to the election, said candidates shall not be chosen.”

Page 67, in Art. XI:

“Sect. 2. Applicants for membership who have not studied Christian Science with her, can unite with this Church, only by the invitation and recommendation of a Director, or a First Member of the Church, or her loyal students, unless it be an exception that the circumstances warrant.”

It should appear that on pages 73 to 77, inclusive, in this proposed Manual, appears the Deed of Trust of Sept. 1, 1892, which is Exhibit B in the Bill of Complaint.

Mr. Whipple—Well, how does that appear as a part of the Manual? Isn't it merely inserted in the midst of the Manual? It is not an article in the Manual, is it?

The Master—Does it purport to be made a part of the contents of the forthcoming Manual?

Mr. Dane—It does so purport, as I understand it. It is not given an article number or a section number.

Mr. Whipple—There is no correlation to the rest of what is written there at all, or reference thereto, is there?

Mr. Dane—It is the same as what appears in the present Manual.

Mr. Whipple—Of course it is. It might appear anywhere. But it is not related in any way to what goes before or what goes after.

Mr. Dane—That is a matter of argument.

Mr. Whipple—Will you show it to His Honor?

The Master—Well, all that we have at present is that, included within the pages that he specified, there is a copy of the Deed of Trust.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Dane—Do you care to see it, Your Honor?

The Master—No, I do not care to at present. What comes after that?

Mr. Dane—I call attention to page 78:

“By-Law

“It shall be the duty—”

The Master—Have you got another by-law on page 78?

Mr. Dane—On page 78, under the heading of “Committee on Finance.”

“It shall be the duty of the Christian Science Board of Directors to report annually the amount of Church Funds on hand, the amount of its indebtedness, and expenditures for the last year. Any gift made of the Church Funds shall require a majority vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors, and a majority vote of the First Members of this Church.

“The books of the Christian Science Board of Directors and of the Church Treasurer shall be audited annually at the written request of the Church, through a Committee on Finance.”

Mr. Thompson—While you are on that, would you mind telling us whether under the provisions with respect to the committee on finance there occur any further provisions such as now occur in the present edition of the Manual?

Mr. Dane—Yes, there are several provisions under the heading "Committee on Finance" in this Manual.

Mr. Thompson—Are there any provisions such as there are in the present edition, making it a right and a duty to visit the Board of Directors and correct variations from duty, departures from duty?

Mr. Dane—Yes, in substance.

Mr. Thompson—Then I would be very glad, and it would save time, if you would put that in now.

The Master—I understood Mr. Dane to say that all this was printed at the time and distributed as the Church Manual, and that he is going at some time to give us a copy.

Mr. Thompson—We have not received a copy so far, and it would be a very great convenience if it could be put in now. It would save time.

Mr. Dane—I do not know that it has been verified. As soon as it has been verified I will be very glad to put in a printed copy of this Manual, which is authorized at this time.

The Master—Presumably it would be verified at the time, would it not, before it was published?

Mr. Dane—Presumably it would, but the difficulty that I find is that there is more than one edition in a given year.

The Master—Oh, yes. And you want the edition that was published in pursuance of this vote, of course.

Mr. Dane—Yes. That is what I want, and that is why I want to be careful.

Mr. Thompson—Would you have any objection to reading into the record at this time the provision about the Committee on Finance, saying that the Board of Directors shall fulfill its duties?

Mr. Dane—Oh, I do not care to put that in at this time, as a part of my case. I have given you the reference.

Mr. Thompson—If you had a witness on the stand, I was thinking that I could cross-examine him on it.

The Master—I understood that you have put the whole thing in as part of your case.

Mr. Dane—Yes, of course, and Mr. Thompson can call attention to any part of it.

Mr. Thompson—Then I would also like to make this suggestion, that you find and call attention to the vote where the number of the directors is raised from four to five.

Mr. Dane—Yes. I am coming to that, Mr. Thompson.

The Master—Later, I take it.

Mr. Streeter—Your Honor, may I make a suggestion with reference to this question that is now before you—and it will perhaps be of some service to the defendants, Mr. Dane's clients.

Mr. Whipple has required Mr. Dane to make proof that there are some directors of this Church. Will Your Honor be good enough to turn to the copy of the Bill and Answer and let me refer you to various places, various statements in that bill?

The Master—Your answer or the other answer?

Mr. Streeter—The Eustace bill,—the one that is being tried. If you will look at the first page, where the title is, the defendants are set up "as they are trustees under a Deed of Trust dated Sept. 1, 1892, wherein Mary Baker G. Eddy is donor, and a declaration of trust supplementary thereto and in amendment thereof, dated March 19, 1903, and as they are also Directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts."

Then, if Your Honor will turn to page 9, the second paragraph, the beginning of the paragraph:

"Said defendants are, also, as the plaintiffs are informed and accordingly aver, for the time being directors of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, a religious organization founded by said Mary Baker G. Eddy."

Then will you turn to the plaintiffs' allegations on page 25, beginning at the bottom of page 24, the allegation that "never in their business association had any friction or disagreement paying over, semi-annually, substantial sums of money to the defendants, both in their capacity as directors for the support of The Mother Church and in their capacity as trustees . . . under the terms of . . . Mrs. Eddy's will."

Then on page 27, Brother Whipple's allegation:

"The 'Christian Science Board of Directors,' hereinafter referred to as the directors or directors of The Mother Church, are directors of only one of these Christian Science Churches; to wit, The Mother Church situated in Boston."

Then, if Your Honor please, will you turn to page 52, on which is the copy of the Deed of Trust, the last four lines of paragraph 4, with reference to turning over the net profits:

"Said treasurer shall hold the money so paid over to him subject to the order of 'The First Members' of said Church, who are authorized to order its disposition only in accordance with the rules and By-Laws contained in the Manual of said Church."

Then on the next page, in the Trust Deed of my friend Whipple's clients, paragraph 10, the last part:

"The First Members together with the directors of said Church shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship for such reasons as to them may seem expedient."

Now, I do not want unduly to interfere or butt into the time which Mr. Whipple is having here, but it seems as though it had gone far enough, and my friend Whipple is simply buried up with his own declarations in his own pleadings, which would relieve these directors at least from proving that they are directors of this Church.

Mr. Dane—That, Your Honor, is precisely what we had in mind yesterday when we offered the Manual that was in existence on March 17, 1919, which they have admitted on page 27 of their bill, and under which they have testified in this case that they were acting, but it was excluded at that time.

Mr. Thompson—It is most unfortunate that you did not call attention to the pages in the bill where the whole thing was staring you right in the face so plainly that you could hardly miss it.

The Master—I think we shall have to know just how these people became directors and just what their powers are. I don't see how there is any—

Mr. Streeter—Even after it has been admitted over and over again in the pleadings?

The Master—I think so.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, I should like to correct a misconception of the learned counsel who has just addressed Your Honor and the assent that has been given to it by Mr. Dane. We have never said that these gentlemen were not directors of The Mother Church, being created so under the Deed of Trust. What we say is that all the powers they have or ever have had are under the Deed of Trust creating them; that they are not and never have been officials of the Church as such. They are directors of The Mother Church because The Mother Church was created by that deed, but they are not officers of the Church under the Manual, and they haven't any such powers under the Manual, and we have made no averment as to that at all. We specifically point out in our averment that they are trustees or directors created under this Deed of Trust. Your Honor has covered the whole situation by saying that the powers of the directors and their creation must be gone into, but there is nothing in the bill inconsistent with doing that.

Mr. Streeter—Well, may I ask my friend how he disposes of the last four lines of section 4 of his own Trust Deed which provides that they shall pay over the net profits to be used only in accordance with the rules and By-Laws contained in the Manual of said Church?

Mr. Whipple—We don't dispose of it at all, if Your Honor please. We are proposing—

The Master—Now we are trying to find out what those rules and by-laws were.

Mr. Whipple—That is, its reference to the Manual is to the Manual that was in existence at that time, and, as His Honor says, we are trying to find out what it was.

Mr. Streeter—Well, I don't know as I can help any of you, Mr. Whipple or Mr. Dane. I will withdraw. Now, go it!

Mr. Whipple—Well, General, nobody can say you haven't done your best.

The Master—I am afraid there is no escape from following this line that Mr. Dane is now following. I think he better proceed with it as rapidly as possible.

Mr. Dane—I now offer from Volume 2 of the records of the First Members the record of a meeting of March 10, 1899.

The Master—Pardon me, Mr. Dane. Haven't you yet been able to get us that printed copy?

Mr. Dane—This is the printed Manual of 1895, and subject to further verification, undoubtedly is the one adopted at that time.

The Master—Adopted in pursuance of the vote which you read?

Mr. Dane—Of the vote of the meeting which has been read.

The Master—Now let me ask you one more thing. You read the minutes of the First Members' meeting, Dec. 28, 1895. You followed that through. And you now produce this as the Manual issued in pursuance of the action of that meeting. Didn't you also in connection with that meeting refer to a subsequent meeting of Aug. 22, 1896?

Mr. Dane—Yes, I did.

The Master—Do you skip over that now or do you offer that now?

Mr. Dane—I will offer the record of that meeting at this time. It relates to additional by-laws which were put into a subsequent edition of the Manual.

Mr. Thompson—Is there any edition number of that, Your Honor?

The Master—The fourth edition, I find in pencil on the title page. The date is 1895, and the copyright mark 1895.

Mr. Thompson—It must have been printed pretty soon after the vote, and the vote was in December, wasn't it?

Mr. Whipple—Dec. 28.

Mr. Thompson—There weren't more than two days left in the year.

Mr. Whipple—It seems inconceivable that they could have printed it after that vote.

The Master—I ought to have shown this to counsel before I looked at it myself, perhaps.

Mr. Whipple—Haven't you another copy of that which you can furnish us?

Mr. Dane—That is the only copy we have.

Mr. Whipple—Well, now, if this was copyrighted, as it says here on the title page, in 1895, it can't be the copy of what you adopted Dec. 28, 1895, because it would be impossible, wouldn't it, to get it copyrighted as soon afterward as that?

The Master—It would require pretty quick work, but I don't know as it would be impossible.

Mr. Dane—I think the copyright law was different then than now.

Mr. Bates—Editions of the papers are copyrighted every day.

Mr. Dane—It would have to be copyrighted immediately.

Mr. Whipple—Perhaps they copyrighted it before they adopted it, in anticipation.

Mr. Dane—There is nothing in the meeting of Aug. 22, 1896, that I care to call to Your Honor's attention.

The Master—Then we may drop it.

Mr. Dane—We will pass it. I will offer next—

Mr. Whipple—Will you pardon me a moment. I think you said something there in one you had already read about the officers of the Church. I don't find any provision here about that.

Mr. Dane—Will you look on the fly-leaf?

Mr. Whipple—I am sorry. Under the By-Laws it does say:

"The officers of the Church shall be elected by the Board of Directors and they shall be the President, Clerk, Treasurer and two Readers."

May we have this marked, if Your Honor please, for identification? Do you see any objection to it?

Mr. Dane—I don't see any objection to that.

Mr. Bates—Mark it as an exhibit.

Mr. Whipple—It is not an exhibit yet, is it?

Mr. Dane—I offer it as an exhibit in connection with a record of a meeting which has been put into the record.

Mr. Whipple—If it be found to be what you say it is, I have no objection to its being admitted, but at present the remarkable celerity of the copyrighting, after being adopted on Dec. 28, 1895, leads us to suspect that it may not be just what you thought it was.

Mr. Dane—I have stated that a careful verification had not been made, and I offer it now as an exhibit subject to verification. If there is any discrepancy it will be called to the attention of the Court.

Mr. Whipple—I still think we better have it marked not as an exhibit but for identification.

The Master—Very well. Mark it for identification.

[Printed copy of Manual of 1895 is marked 128 for identification.]

Mr. Thompson—Before you go ahead I would like to examine it. It may have an important bearing on the other case.

Mr. Bates—Before it is identified even?

Mr. Thompson—No. It has now been identified.

Mr. Dane—It has not been accepted as an exhibit.

Mr. Thompson—I just want to see what it says about expelling directors. You are offering it, I suppose, in every case.

The Master—You do not desire to have Mr. Dane suspend while you look at it?

Mr. Thompson—No, sir.

Mr. Dane—Then I offer from Volume 2 of the meetings of the First Members, page 223, the record of a meeting of March 10, 1899, which I will read into the record.

Mr. Whipple—May I look at it, please?

[The record book is shown to Mr. Whipple.]

Mr. Whipple—Well, let it be taken for what it is worth. It is not, I must say, very satisfactory.

[Record of special meeting of First Members, March 10, 1899, is Exhibit 129, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

"At a special meeting of the First Members held this day, which was opened by the president without form at 11 o'clock, 17 members present, the following business was transacted ...

"Voted: That the tenth edition of the Church Manual be accepted subject to future by-laws and amendments.

"Minutes approved, and the meeting adjourned at 12 o'clock.

"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,
"Clerk."

The Master—I suppose that there are similar votes respecting the intervening editions of the Manual between the fourth and the tenth?

Mr. Dane—There are none that I have found.

The Master—Not that you have found?

Mr. Dane—No. The editions of the Manual which were adopted by votes of this character were the first, the tenth, the twentieth, the twenty-ninth, thirtieth, thirty-third, fifty-seventh, and seventy-third. The seventy-third, with the amendments made to the seventy-third, constitute the eighty-ninth, which is the present Manual. I offer at this time the tenth edition of the Manual, referred to in the vote, and it may be marked for identification.

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment. How do you know that is the tenth edition?

Mr. Dane—That so states.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that is all right, but it doesn't prove itself in that way.

Mr. Dane—It purports to be the tenth edition and is published by the plaintiffs, The Christian Science Publishing Society, as the tenth edition.

Mr. Whipple—And do you think that we are bound by that admission of our predecessors in trust?

Mr. Dane—I think—

Mr. Thompson—I think it may be of some help if I should state, subject to correction, that I have carefully examined this fourth edition and there is nothing in it in regard to the expulsion either of a director or of a trustee.

The Master—May I see it again?

Mr. Thompson—Yes, sir.

The Master—You do not dispute that it is in accordance with the vote of Dec. 28?

Mr. Thompson—I have no knowledge on the subject, sir. This is of very little materiality to our case because all of the allegations in our bill in regard to the By-Laws are admitted.

The Master—Very well. As to the rest of it, we will consider later.

Mr. Whipple—I have no objection to this being marked for identification. This what purports to be the Church Manual of 1899, copyrighted by James A. Neal and Thomas W. Hatten. May I be permitted to call attention on the record to the fact that Article 1, section 1, provides: "The Church officers shall consist of a president, a clerk, a treasurer and two readers."

Mr. Dane—Now, Your Honor, I offer the Manual—

Mr. Whipple—Just a moment, let us have this marked.

Mr. Dane—which he has read from, as an exhibit.

The Master—We may assume until the contrary appears that that is the 10th edition referred to in the vote which Mr. Dane read last.

Mr. Whipple—We will receive it subject to correction.

[A copy of the Church Manual, tenth edition, is marked Exhibit 130, for identification.]

Mr. Dane—I offer, from Volume 3 of the directors' records, a record on page 22, under date of Feb. 20, 1901. I call Your Honor's attention to the fact that the date of this meeting was subsequent to the date of the resolution transferring the functions of the First Members to the Board of Directors.

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me, there are no such words used as "transferring the function." It says "the business of The Mother Church."

Mr. Dane—The date of this meeting is Feb. 20, 1901.

The Master—A meeting of the—

Mr. Dane—Of the directors.

The Master—The directors. Thank you.

Mr. Dane—And appears on page 22. I offer that part which I will read into the record, and which I show to counsel.

Mr. Whipple—We object to this, if Your Honor please. We cannot see any authority of the Board of Directors to alter the Church Manual or create By-Laws or make these amendments.

The Master—I think we shall have to take it subject to objection. Go on, Mr. Dane.

[A portion of directors' records, volume 3, page 22, under date of Feb. 20, 1901, is Exhibit 130-A, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

"A meeting of the full board was held this day at 3:30 p. m. . . .

"It was unanimously voted: That the By-Laws of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, contained in the twentieth edition of the Church Manual and also the amendments and changes marked therein, which were authorized by Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, be and are hereby adopted."

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, may we in that very connection call attention to the vote of Jan. 10, 1901, a special meeting of the First Members, at which 31 members were present? This appears on page 313, of Volume 2, of the records of the First Members. It has been read in part. This part has been read:

"The business of The Mother Church hitherto transacted by the First Members shall be done by its Christian Science Board of Directors. The salary of each member of this board shall at present be raised to $700.00 per annum."

This part was not read:

"The First Members of this Church shall continue to convene annually at the communion season but they shall not be present at the business meetings."

Mr. Dane—Oh, I beg your pardon.

Mr. Whipple—Pardon me, that was read. I think this was not. Follow me and see if it was:

"This by-law can neither be amended nor annulled without the unanimous consent of the whole Church or the written consent of Mrs. Eddy, Pastor Emeritus."

Mr. Dane—I think that was read.

Mr. Whipple—Was that read?

Mr. Streeter—That was read.

The Master—I think so.

Mr. Whipple—Then I was mistaken about it, but I would like to call attention to it just the same.

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Dane, it would save a great deal of time if you would allow me to refer at this time, in lieu of cross-examination on this vote, to three places in the tenth edition, which you have put in. Is there any objection to that?

Mr. Bates—Why not put them in in connection with your case?

Mr. Thompson—Because I have a right to cross-examine, and it would save a great deal of time in going over it again.

Mr. Bates—We do not want to have it in as a part of our case.

Mr. Thompson—No part of the cross-examination is part of your case.

The Master—If Governor Bates objects, I think you better wait, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—Very well, sir. It is only three passages that I wanted to call attention to, and it will be a great convenience to put it in now and save looking it up again.

Mr. Bates—We would like a little of our case as we put it, without interjection.

Mr. Dane—Then I offer, if Your Honor please, the twentieth edition of the Manual, referred to in the vote of the directors.

[Copy of the Church Manual, twentieth edition, is marked Exhibit 131, for identification.]

The Master—The fourth edition of the Manual is marked Exhibit 128 for identification. The stenographers tell me that they do not quite clearly understand whether they are to mark in the same way the tenth and the twentieth editions. If there is no objection I will have them marked in the same way, for identification.

Mr. Dane—That is satisfactory. There was one, as I recall it, that was offered as an exhibit and accepted as an exhibit—the one that Mr. Whipple read from. I think it was the tenth edition.

The Master—Why should that stand on any different ground? Wouldn't it make confusion?

Mr. Dane—Then let them all be marked for the present, and we go along, for identification, and then if occasion arises for offering them as exhibits, as I expect there will, we will then offer them as exhibits and take Your Honor's ruling upon them.

The Master—Is that satisfactory?

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor. I hold a copy purporting to be the twentieth edition, which is the last one to be offered, in 1901. Your Honor will remember that that is the first one where the vote was by the Board of Directors.

The Master—That is clear, I think, on the record.

Mr. Whipple—And Art. XXX, Sec. 3, is the first appearance of a provision that The Christian Science Board of Directors shall have the power to declare vacancies in said trusteeship for such reasons as to them may seem expedient. I merely, in passing, wanted to call attention to the fact that that by-law was never passed upon by the First Members.

The Master—I rather think it would be better not to call attention to anything in these Manuals as we go along. I say that because Mr. Thompson endeavored to call attention to something and I declined to let him do so at this time, and I will have to treat everybody alike, I suppose, in that respect.

Mr. Whipple—I certainly do not want any better treatment than Brother Thompson, but it seems to me it would be a great advantage to the record if the appearance, the first appearance, of these provisions which we are discussing, might appear in the record when the editions go in; but in view of Your Honor's suggestion I will withdraw that statement and we will not comment on them until they are all offered.

The Master—I think there will be ample opportunity hereafter to point all that out, and also to point out anything that Mr. Thompson wants to point out.

Mr. Thompson—Undoubtedly there will be ample opportunity, but it might save two or three hours' cross-examination if I should call attention in this twentieth edition to two or three passages that are important. I entirely agree with Mr. Whipple that the first appearance of a provision ought to be noted as the document goes into the record.

Mr. Dane—The record which I last read was a vote of Feb. 20, 1901, from the directors' records. It is an adoption of the twentieth edition of the Church Manual, and also of the amendment and changes marked therein, which were authorized by Rev. Mary Baker Eddy. Now I offer, in that connection, page 23 and page 24 and page 25, down as far as the words "February 27" which are the amendments referred to in the vote, but I will not take the time to read them at this time.

If Your Honor will pardon me one moment, I am trying to make out this handwriting.

I offer at this time a letter from Mrs. Eddy, in connection with the record just read, dated Concord, New Hampshire, Feb. 18, 1901, from the book entitled "Mary Baker Eddy. Letters and Miscellany. Vol. 3," page 113, which I show counsel (passing to Mr. Whipple the volume referred to).

Mr. Whipple—Do you think that it is her handwriting? I wish you would put that in, because it shows—

Mr. Dane—This is a letter on page 113 of the book that I have indicated, on letterhead with the monogram "M. B. E."

"Pleasant View,
"Concord, New Hampshire,
"Feb. 18, 1901.

"Beloved Student:

"Call immediately a meeting of the Church directors and adopt the amendments of By-Laws as arranged by me in our Manual. These amendments only qualify. They do not essentially change most of the wordings. They are, however, very important under existing circumstances.

"With love,
"M. B. EDDY.

"N. B. Also at this meeting make the members whose names are inclosed First Members of this Church.

"M. B. E."

The inclosure is:

"For First Members
"Mr. & Mrs. Landy
"Miss Mary E. Eaton
"Calvin C. Hill
"Mr. & Mrs. H. H. Bangs."

[The letter from Mrs. Eddy, dated Feb. 18, 1901, with the inclosure, of which the foregoing are copies, is Exhibit 131. R. H. J.]

I now offer from Volume 3 of the directors' minutes a record of this meeting of the directors under date of July 30, 1903, appearing on page 122 (passing to Mr. Whipple the record referred to).

Mr. Whipple—This, we take it, goes in under the same arrangement—the materiality to be discussed later.

Mr. Dane—
"July 30, 1903.

"A meeting of the directors was held this a. m. Messrs. Knapp, Johnson, and Armstrong present. In compliance with a request by Mrs. Eddy over the telephone to have all the By-Laws that were to constitute the twenty-ninth edition of the Church Manual adopted, the directors present on separate motions and by unanimous votes adopted each and all the By-Laws for the twenty-ninth edition of the Church Manual.

"Minutes approved
"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON, Clerk."

[The minutes of the meeting of July 30, 1903, of which the foregoing is a copy, are Exhibit 132. R. H. J.]

And I offer in connection with that record the twenty-ninth edition of the Manual.

Mr. Whipple—I take it that that may be marked for identification in the same way, and when you get to it you will tell us what part of it you want to offer in evidence.

[The twenty-ninth edition of the Church Manual of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, 1903, is marked Exhibit 133 for identification. R. H. J.]

Mr. Dane—I offer from the same book a record of the meeting of the directors under date of Sept. 21, 1903, at page 125:

"Monday, Sept. 21, 1903.

"A meeting of the directors was held this a. m., Messrs. Knapp, Johnson, Armstrong, and McLellan present. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

"Each and all articles of the thirtieth edition of the Manual of The Mother Church, having been read in the presence of the above named directors, on motion it was unanimously voted: That the thirtieth edition of the Manual aforementioned be adopted in its entirety as the By-Laws of The Mother Church.

"William B. Johnson, Clerk."

[The minutes of the meeting of directors of Sept. 21, 1903, of which the foregoing is a copy, is Exhibit 134. R. H. J.]

And I offer the thirtieth edition of the Manual referred to in the vote.

The Master—What became of the twenty-ninth? Did you offer that?

Mr. Dane—Yes, sir.

Mr. Whipple—For identification.

[The thirtieth edition of the Church Manual is marked Exhibit 135 for identification. R. H. J.]

Mr. Strawn—Why do you skip from the twenty-first to the twenty-ninth?

Mr. Dane—You mean from the twentieth to the twenty-ninth? There were no manuals adopted as a whole between those dates.

Mr. Thompson—What is the significance of the numbering, then, twentieth and twenty-ninth? I have been trying to find that out myself. What happened in between twenty and twenty-nine—anything?

Mr. Whipple—Apparently several editions of the Manual were put out without any authority even of the directors.

Mr. Dane—Oh, I think not.

Mr. Thompson—It would be very convenient if we could know what the real answer to that is.

Mr. Dane—I offer from Volume 3 of the minutes of the directors' meetings, page 127—No; I withdraw that for the present.

Page 284 of Volume 3 of the directors' records, I offer part of the record of the meeting of September 5, 1906—

Mr. Thompson—If Your Honor please, I having examined for a moment this twenty-ninth edition that has been put in (Exhibit 133 for identification. R. H. J.), desire again to return to the question just started by both counsel here about intervening editions, and to call definitely for the production of the twenty-eighth edition. The reason for it is this, that in Section 5 of Article I, which for the first time contains a provision for the expulsion of a director, it says in the margin—this comes from Mr. Dane, so that it is apparently official, and prepared officially for the Church—it says in the margin, opposite this very provision, "Amendment adopted Mar. 12, 1903. Changes evidently made in proof."

And it says on the margin, opposite Section 4 of Article I, "Was Sects. 1 & 3, Art. III—28th."

Now, over on the other page, after Section 3, I find in typewriting this:

"Sect. 8. 'Duties of Church Officers.' Evidently new By-Law. No record of adoption. The last sentence of this By-Law appears in Sect. 1, Art. VI in 28th."

Now, the twenty-eighth edition is an edition which may be of extreme importance in assisting in the construction of Sect. 5, on which the action taken in the Dittemore case was placed. I do not know anything about the effect it may have in the other case, but, speaking for ourselves alone, we desire that the twenty-eighth edition of the Manual be now produced.

Mr. Dane—I see no objection to—
Mr. Thompson—Or any other intervening edition.

Mr. Dane—To the twenty-eighth edition being produced, and I now hand it to you, Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson—And I would like every other edition that has been left out.

[The twenty-eighth edition of the Manual is passed by Mr. Dane to Mr. Thompson.]

The Master—It is now produced.

Mr. Dane—And you may have access to every edition of the Manual that we have.

Mr. Thompson—It contains very important annotations made by somebody.

The Master—I understand from you, Mr. Dane, that the last edition is what number?

Mr. Dane—The last edition is No. 89.

The Master—Now, we hardly want 89 editions produced if we can help it. I think that counsel should select those that either of them consider important, and perhaps it will not be necessary to have the whole 89 brought in.

Mr. Dane—I am informed, if Your Honor please, that these editions of the Manual which are here in court are the only editions which the Church has, and there are original annotations and notes on them, so that they ought not to go out of the custody of the proper Church officers, but counsel will have every reasonable opportunity to examine them.

Mr. Dane—Now I offer from Volume 1 of the Church By-Laws a record of a meeting appearing on the first page.

“A meeting of the directors”—

Mr. Whipple—What is the date of it?

Mr. Dane—Oct. 15, 1906.

“Monday, Oct. 15, 1906.

“A meeting of the directors was held this p. m. Present: Messrs. Knapp, Armstrong, McLellan, and Johnson.

“On motion, it was unanimously voted: That all the by-laws contained in the fifty-seventh edition of the Manual be and are hereby adopted as the By-Laws of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

“WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,
“Clerk.”

[The record of the meeting of Oct. 15, 1906, of which the foregoing is a copy, is Exhibit 136. R. H. J.]

And in that connection I offer the fifty-seventh edition of the Manual, which will be marked for identification.

[The fifty-seventh edition of the Manual is marked Exhibit 137 for identification. R. H. J.]

Mr. Dane—I also offer from the book just referred to the records of the meetings appearing on page 37 to 67, both inclusive, relating to the adoption of amendments to the By-Laws contained in the edition just produced. I won't now take time to read it.

[Records of meetings appearing on pages 37 to 67 inclusive of the fifty-seventh edition of the Manual, previously marked for identification 137, are offered in evidence as Exhibit 138.]

Mr. Dane—And I offer from the Church By-Law book, Volume 2, the record of a meeting shown on page 1 under date of Friday, July 31, 1908:

“A meeting of the directors was held this a. m. Present: Messrs. Chase, Knapp, McLellan, Stewart and Johnson.

“The following resolution was introduced:

“Be it resolved by the Board of Directors of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., that each and all of the By-Laws contained in the seventy-third edition of the Manual of said church as printed and published by Allison V. Stewart be now adopted as the By-Laws of said Church. The adoption of this resolution being moved and seconded and the question of its adoption being duly put, it was adopted by the unanimous vote of all the directors.

“WILLIAM B. JOHNSON, Clerk.”

[The record of a meeting of July 31, 1908, appearing on page 1 of Volume 2 of the Church By-Laws is offered in evidence as Exhibit 139.]

Mr. Dane—I offer in this connection the seventy-third edition of the Church Manual.

[A copy of the seventy-third edition of the Church Manual is marked 140 for identification.]

Mr. Dane—I also offer from Volume 2, Church By-Laws, the records of meetings appearing on pages 37 to 59, inclusive, being the records of meetings of the Board of Directors relating to the adoption of amendments to the By-Laws contained in the Manual which has been produced, the seventy-third edition.

[Records of meetings of the Board of Directors appearing on pages 37 to 59, inclusive, of Volume 2 of the Church By-Laws, are offered in evidence as Exhibit 141.]

Mr. Dane—I offer now, if Your Honor please, the eighty-ninth edition of the Manual, which is the seventy-third edition including the amendments made by the Board of Directors as shown in Volume 2 of the Church By-Law book.

The Master—Well, that speaks only of the seventy-third edition.

Mr. Dane—The seventy-third.

The Master—Is there any vote anywhere adopting the eighty-ninth?

Mr. Dane—I think not, Your Honor, but the eighty-ninth is the seventy-third, together with the amendments to the seventy-third adopted by the directors, as appears in Volume 2 of the Church By-Law books.

The Master—I understand that vote adopted the seventy-third plus amendments.

Mr. Dane—Yes.

The Master—The eighty-ninth contains the amendments then adopted?

Mr. Dane—It contains the seventy-third as changed or modified by the amendments then adopted.

Mr. Whipple—You nowhere offer the amendments that were adopted even by the directors.

Mr. Dane—Yes, the amendments that were adopted appear in Volume 2 of the Church By-Law books and the pages that I have already indicated on the record.

Mr. Strawn—Could you indicate the date of the adoption of the seventy-third edition and also the date of the adoption of the eighty-ninth edition?

Mr. Dane—The seventy-third edition, July 31, 1908, and the eighty-ninth edition is a compilation of the seventy-third edition as changed or modified by the By-Laws adopted by the directors as shown on pages 37 to 59 of the Church By-Law book, Volume 2.

Mr. Strawn—And when was that distributed, the eighty-ninth edition?

The Master—The eighty-ninth edition?

Mr. Dane—1910.

The Master—It is dated 1913.

Mr. Strawn—I have one that is dated 1917.

Mr. Dane—I am advised that it has been printed at intervals from 1910 to date but that no changes have been made in it since 1910. Changes of course appear in the list of officers, but none in the By-Laws, the Church rules.

Mr. Thompson—Can you produce at some convenient time, please, the vote under which—

Mr. Dane—Just a moment, Mr. Thompson. In this connection I desire to call Your Honor's attention to the fact that Mrs. Eddy passed away in 1910, so that there has been no by-law adopted, no change made, since her passing.

Mr. Thompson—As long as I have the book before me here, the twenty-eighth edition, I should like to put a call in at some time convenient to you to produce the vote of the directors or any other competent authority under which Article VI, Section 1, as it appeared in the twenty-eighth edition, reading: “A majority vote and the consent of Mrs. Eddy shall dismiss a member of this board,” was changed so as to read as it now appears—namely, “A majority vote or the request of Mrs. Eddy shall dismiss a member.” I haven't heard you refer to any vote in which that particular change was made.

Mr. Dane—I haven't the information right at hand.

Mr. Thompson—I dare say not.

Mr. Dane—But you will have access to the Manuals and the records.

Mr. Thompson—I don't care to look it up myself. I think I am justified in calling on you, if there is any such vote, to produce it.

Mr. Dane—Now I offer at this time, if the Court please, the eighty-ninth edition of the Manual, which was identified by Mr. Eustace in his cross-examination, and referred to by him as the Manual which was his guide and which was in existence at the time the resolution of dismissal was adopted. It is marked 57-G for identification. I offer it now as an exhibit.

Mr. Whipple—We still maintain our objection, if Your Honor please.

The Master—I don't think we need to change its status at present. What is the date of that?

Mr. Dane—That is the eighty-ninth edition.

The Master—I understand that, but the eighty-ninth edition apparently bears a good many different dates. What is the date of this one?

Mr. Dane—This is dated 1919—published by The Christian Science Publishing Society for the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy, and is entitled, “Manual of The Mother Church, First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, by Mary Baker Eddy, Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science and Author of the Christian Science Text Book, ‘Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Eighty-ninth Edition.

Mr. Strawn—Would you be kind enough to indicate the dates of the amendments which you referred to a moment ago and which you did not read?

Mr. Dane—The dates?

Mr. Strawn—Yes—some time between 1908 and 1910. The dates of the amendments to the By-Laws which took place after the printing of the seventy-third and before the eighty-ninth edition.

Mr. Dane—The amendments appearing in Volume 2 of the Church By-Law Book are July 31, 1908, August 28, 1908. I assume you don't care for the date of each one?

Mr. Strawn—They were all in 1908, were they?

Mr. Dane—1908, 1909 and 1910. August 29th, 1910, seems to be the date of the last.

In one of the records which I read from, on page 106 of Volume 2 of the First Members, setting out the By-Laws adopted in 1896, I desire to call attention to the following and to read it into the record:

"No Board of Trustees shall ever be formed by, or between the members of this Church, or shall exist in The Mother Church."

[A portion of the record appearing on page 106 of Volume 2 of the First Members, as read by Mr. Dane, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 142.]

Mr. Whipple—What was that—something that was adopted?

Mr. Dane—That was a by-law which appeared in the 1897 Manual, to which you made objection this morning.

Mr. Whipple—When was it adopted?

Mr. Dane—It appears as adopted by the First Members—adopted in a special meeting of the First Members held on March 16, 1896.

Mr. Whipple—It had not been adopted before that as an individual by-law, I take it?

Mr. Dane—Apparently not; I don't know as to that, however. I think that is the first mention of it in the records.

I call Your Honor's attention to an amendment to the by-law which has just been read, which was adopted in a meeting of Jan. 18, 1898, appearing on page 178 of Volume 2 of the records of the First Members. And I offer this, which I will read into the record:

"A special meeting of the First Members of The Mother Church was held this day in the Church vestry. The president being absent, Mr. Ira O. Knapp was chosen chairman and the meeting was opened without form at 11 o'clock a. m., eight members present.

"The following amendment to Article V, Section 4, of the Church By-Laws was read and by rising vote was unanimously adopted:

"No Board of Trustees shall ever be formed by, or between the members of this Church, or shall exist in The Mother Church, except the trusteeship be constituted by the Pastor Emeritus.

"The above minutes were read and approved, and the meeting adjourned at 11 o'clock and 10 minutes.

"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON."

[Record of meeting dated Jan. 18, 1898, appearing on page 178 of Volume 2 of minutes of meetings of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors, and Annual Church Meetings, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 143.]

Mr. Dane—The amendment consists in the addition of the words "except the trusteeship be constituted by the Pastor Emeritus."

It is 4 o'clock and this is a convenient place to suspend.

[Adjourned to 10 a. m. Wednesday, July 9, 1919.]

July 9, 1919

ELEVENTH DAY

Supreme Judicial Court Room, Boston, Massachusetts, July 9, 1919.

The Master—Are you ready, Mr. Dane, or will you wait for Governor Bates?

Mr. Dane—No; I will proceed. I think that he will be here in a few moments.

The Master—Very well; you may proceed. Mr. Dane does not think that it is necessary to wait for Governor Bates. He will be here in a few minutes.

William L. Johnson, Resumed

Q. (By Mr. Dane.) I show you, Mr. Johnson, a letter appearing on page 91 of the volume entitled "Mary Baker Eddy. Letters and Miscellany. Vol. 7." The document number of the paper is 712. I ask you in whose handwriting the letter is, and who signed it? A. Mr. Frye.

Q. I show you also a document appearing on page 93 of the same book, bearing the document number 713, and ask you whose signature that is? A. Mrs. Eddy's.

Q. I call your attention to the reverse side of document 713, shown on page 94 of the same book, and ask you whose handwriting appears there, and whose signature appears there? A. Mrs. Eddy's.

Mr. Dane—I offer the documents 712 and 713, which I desire to read into the record, and which I now show the counsel (passing to Mr. Whipple the volume containing the letters described).

Mr. Whipple—Haven't these been offered before?

Mr. Dane—The one on page 91 has been offered. I will not read that. The one on page 93 has not.

Mr. Whipple—You say the one on page—

Mr. Dane—The one on page 91 has been offered.

Mr. Whipple—You say it has been?

Mr. Dane—It has been.

Mr. Whipple—And has been read?

Mr. Dane—I think it has.

Mr. Whipple—And now the only thing that you offer in addition is that on page 93?

Mr. Dane—Yes, for the present.

Mr. Whipple—And what appears on page 94?

Mr. Dane—Yes, the reverse side.

Mr. Whipple—I thought that that had been offered. Except for our general objection, we have no specific objection to this.

Mr. Dane—On page 93 of this volume:

"CHURCH BY-LAW.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors of this church shall not fill a vacancy occurring on that board except by a unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. The Board of Trustees of this Church shall not fill a vacancy occurring on their board except by unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. The Readers of this Church shall not be elected except by a unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. And no person shall be a member of this Church or be eligible to the said offices who has made attempts to greatly injure Mrs. Eddy and hers or any member thereof and their testimony thereto shall be received as sufficient evidence in the case. This Church Bylaw can neither be amended nor annulled except by the consent of Mrs. Eddy the Pastor Emeritus of this Church over her own handwriting.

"MARY BAKER EDDY."

(The words in italics are interlined.)

On the reverse side—

The Master—Is there any date for that?

Mr. Dane—There is no date on the document itself. There appears on it the notation, "See by-law adopted Feb. 10, 1898."

On the reverse side—

Mr. Whipple—But that is no part of the paper.

The Master—That is no part of the exhibit?

Mr. Dane—No part of the exhibit itself.

On the reverse side are the following words in pencil:

"Pass this by-law instead of the other one sent by this same mail—

"M B EDDY."

[The document of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 144. R. H. J.]

Mr. Whipple—Will you be good enough to show it to His Honor so that the interlineation will appear?

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—And I should like, in having a copy made, to have an exact copy of the document, with its interlineations indicated.

Mr. Dane—Appearing on page 91 is a letter from Mr. Frye, with the inclosed church by-law on the same subject. The letter is dated Feb. 10, 1898. That was put in evidence yesterday.

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Dane, was that the one that you just referred to that you passed?

Mr. Dane—That I have just read?

Mr. Whipple—The one that you have just referred to.

Mr. Dane—On page 91?

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Dane—The one passed is as follows—

Mr. Whipple—Then there was not one passed at all?

Mr. Dane—I will show Your Honor the one that has just been read, on page 93.

In the same connection I offer on page 151 of Volume 10, Mary Baker Eddy, Letters and Miscellany, a telegram addressed to William B. Johnson, 95 Milk Street, Boston, dated Feb. 10:

“Correct by-law just sent to Read, and her testimony or the testimony of a member of the Christian Science board of directors shall be found sufficient evidence in the case.

“MARY BAKER EDDY.”

That is on page 151 of Volume 10, and is a correction of the interlineations—

The Master—Yes.

Mr. Dane—Which appear on document No. 713, on page 93 of Volume 7.

[Document No. 151, in Volume 10, Mary Baker Eddy, Letters and Miscellany, of which the foregoing is a copy, is Exhibit 145. R. H. J.]

I offer in the same connection, from Volume 2 of the records of First Members, page 183, that which I read into the record:

“Feb. 10, 1893.

“At a special meeting of the First Members of The Mother Church, held in the vestry of the church and opened by the President in the usual form at 2:40 p. m., at which meeting 20 members were present, the following church by-law was adopted by a unanimous vote—all rising.

“The Christian Science Board of Directors of this Church shall not fill a vacancy occurring on that board except by a unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. The Board of Trustees of this Church shall not fill a vacancy occurring on their board except by unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. The Readers of this Church shall not be elected except by a unanimous vote of all the First Members of this Church. And no person shall be a member of this Church or be eligible to the said offices who has made attempts to greatly injure Mrs. Eddy and her testimony, or the testimony of a member of the Christian Science Board of Directors shall be found sufficient evidence in the case.

“This church by-law can neither be amended nor annulled except by the consent of Mrs. Eddy, the Pastor-Emeritus of this Church, over her own handwriting. Signed Mary Baker Eddy. The minutes were approved. Meeting adjourned 2:45 p. m. William B. Johnson, Clerk.”

[The record of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 146. R. H. J.]

From Volume 2 of the record of the First Members, page 258, I offer the following from the record of a meeting of July 17, 1899:

“A special meeting was held this day, the President present. The meeting was opened at 2 o'clock p. m.; 48 members answered to the call of their names.

“On motion, the following amendments and by-law were unanimously adopted by a rising vote. . . .

“By-Law

“It shall be the privilege and duty of every member of this Church who can afford it to subscribe for the periodicals that are the organs of this Church; and it shall be the duty of this Church to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times.”

Mr. Whipple—Hasn't that already been offered?

Mr. Dane—Possibly it has.

The Master—I thought so.

Mr. Whipple—It sounds very familiar.

Mr. Dane—I desire only to call attention to it now in connection with what I offer from Volume 7 of Mary Baker Eddy, Letters and Miscellany, page 171.

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Johnson, if you can tell whose handwriting appears on the document on page 171 of this book, the document No. 751, the words “can afford it,” and the words “the organs of”? A. Mrs. Eddy's.

Mr. Dane—I offer that document No. 751:

“By-Law

“It shall be the privilege and duty of every member of this Church who [this is followed by a caret in ink, and interlined in ink are the words ‘can afford it,’] is able [an ink line is drawn through the words ‘is able’], to subscribe for the periodicals that are sustained [an ink line is drawn through the word ‘sustained,’ and written above it in ink are the words ‘the organs of’] by [an ink line is drawn through the word ‘by’] this Church; and it shall be the duty of this Church to see that these periodicals are ably edited and kept abreast of the times.”

I offer this document with the interlineations that are Mrs. Eddy's handwriting—document 751. The date appearing on this document, although not a part of it, is July 17, 1899. That is offered in connection with the adoption of the by-law which has just been read from Volume 2 of the record of the First Members.

Your Honor will note that the adoption of the by-law from Volume 2 of the First Members relating to this subject was before 1901, when the business of the First Members was transferred to the Board of Directors.

[The document No. 751, on page 171 of Volume 7 of “Mary Baker Eddy, Letters and Miscellany” is Exhibit 147. R. H. J.]

I now offer from Volume 3 of the directors' minutes, page 122, the record of a meeting of July 30, 1903:

“A meeting of the directors was held this a. m., Messrs. Knapp, Johnson, and Armstrong present. In compliance with a request by Mrs. Eddy over the telephone to have all the by-laws that were to constitute the twenty-ninth edition of the Church Manual adopted, the directors present on separate motions and by unanimous votes adopted each and all the by-laws for the twenty-ninth edition of the Church Manual.”

The Master—Will you give me the date of that again?

Mr. Dane—July 30, 1903.

[The record of the meeting of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 148. R. H. J.]

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Dane, these were all read yesterday. Why are we reviewing them?

The Master—You have read that once.

Mr. Dane—There may have been one or two read, but I do not intend to duplicate it.

Mr. Whipple—Practically everything that you have read this morning was read yesterday.

Mr. Dane—Oh, I think not.

Mr. Whipple—I did not say everything, but practically everything.

The Master—I have a minute of the one of July 30, 1903, relating to the twenty-ninth edition of the Manual.

Mr. Dane—It is quite possible that that was read. In connection with the letters of Mrs. Eddy I desired to call attention to it. I had an impression that it had not been read.

Mr. Dane—In the twenty-ninth Manual, which was marked for identification yesterday, there appears a by-law upon this subject which I call attention to.

Mr. Whipple—Which subject?

Mr. Dane—The subject of the letter of Mrs. Eddy and of the by-law adopted by the First Members, and of the by-law in the twenty-ninth edition of the Manual, adopted by the directors, relating to the Church seeing to it that the periodicals were ably edited and kept abreast of the times. And I desire only, in following this by-law down, to call attention to the fact that it appears in the twenty-ninth Manual in the same form in which it appears in the eighty-ninth Manual.

The Master—Under what number?

Mr. Dane—Article VIII, Section 14, in the eighty-ninth Manual.

The Master—No, the twenty-ninth.

Mr. Dane—The twenty-ninth Manual, I am very sorry to say, is not here. I have sent for it, and as soon as it is here I will call attention to the place where this by-law appears. And it appears in the same form in the eighty-ninth.

Mr. Whipple—Are you sure of that,

Mr. Dane? Aren't you wrong in that statement?

Mr. Dane—I think not. As soon as the Manual is returned here—

Mr. Whipple—Will you read the twenty-ninth if you have that here? We have the eighty-ninth.

Mr. Dane—I have the eighty-ninth. I have not the twenty-ninth for the moment.

The Master—It is in your possession, I think.

Mr. Dane—Mr. Thompson had it.

Mr. Thompson—Yes, and I handed it back to you last night. I expected there would be some suggestion of that kind. I handed it right back, put it on your desk there. And I also desire to call your attention to the fact that there were various official annotations on the margin indicating doubt as to the origin of some of the provisions, particularly the one altering Article I of Section 5. And I asked you to furnish me the authority of Mrs. Eddy for the change made in that article. You haven't done it.

Mr. Dane—I am informed that the stenographer had the manuals until about 6 o'clock last evening, and sent them to the church.

The Master—Can't we find out just where we are?

Mr. Whipple—If he would read again what was adopted at the meeting of July 17, 1899, which was the same, I think, as Mrs. Eddy wrote, and then compare it with the eighty-ninth, I think it will appear that instead of being the same they are different.

Mr. Bates—No. This is what was adopted July 30, 1903, not in 1899.

Mr. Whipple—That July 30, 1903, is the directors' vote.

Mr. Bates—Why not wait until the Manual comes and then we can compare it and see?

Mr. Whipple—Well, the trouble is, having gone all over this yesterday and put them out tentatively, we now find ourselves going over the same ground this morning, and when something else comes we will be going over the same thing again. It would help us if you can finish up at least one thing while you are at it.

Mr. Dane—If Your Honor will pardon me, the Manual is at the church, and we have sent for it, and as soon as it comes in I will call attention in the twenty-ninth Manual to the thing now under discussion in the precise form in which the by-law appears.

The Master—Is there only one copy of the twenty-ninth edition in existence?

Mr. Dane—I understand there is only one copy in the possession of the directors. These are their official records.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, but we would like to point out, then, that as appearing in the eighty-ninth the by-law is quite different from what Mrs. Eddy directed should be passed, and which was passed by the First Members on July 17, 1899.

Mr. Dane—I would like also to point out that the by-law which was originally suggested by Mrs. Eddy was amended and was adopted in its amended form by the directors at the request of Mrs. Eddy on July 30, 1903, and in that amended form it appears in the twenty-ninth Manual and also in the present one.

Mr. Whipple—But unfortunately the directors had no right under the law, or in any other way, to attempt an amendment.

Mr. Bates—Isn't that a matter for Your Honor?

Mr. Dane—That is a proposition of law.

Mr. Whipple—Which Mrs. Eddy had directed the First Members to do.

The Master—That is a matter about which, as we understood yesterday, there is a conflict, but we are now getting the history of what was done.

Mr. Dane—I offer now from Volume 3 of the Directors' Records, the record of a meeting held on July 15, 1903, appearing on page 120, as follows (reading):

"A meeting of the directors was held this day (Mr. Chase absent).

"By unanimous vote of all present the following by-law was adopted:

"Publishing Buildings, Sect. 6. It shall be the duty of the Christian Science Board of Directors to provide a suitable building for the publication of The Christian Science Journal, Christian Science Sentinel, Der Christian Science Herald, and all other Christian Science literature published by The Christian Science Publishing Society. It shall also be the duty of the Christian Science Board of Directors to provide suitable rooms conveniently and pleasantly located in the same building for the publication and sale of the books of which Mary Baker G. Eddy, is or may be the author, and other literature connected therewith.

"Minutes approved.

"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,
"Clerk."

[The records of a meeting of the directors, dated July 15, 1903, and appearing on page 120 of Volume 3 of Records of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors and Annual Meetings, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 149.]

Mr. Dane—I offer from the same volume, page 88, under date of March 17, 1903, the record of a meeting of the directors (reading):

"At a meeting of the full board held this p. m. On a motion and by a unanimous vote the following by-law was adopted.

"The members known as the First Members prior to March 17, 1903, from and after this date shall bear the title and be known as Executive Members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

"Minutes approved.

"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON, Clerk."

[The record of a meeting of the directors, dated March 17, 1903, appearing on page 88 of Volume 3 of First or Executive Members, Board of Directors and annual meetings, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 150.]

Mr. Dane—I offer from Volume 3 of the records of the Board of Directors that part of a meeting held Wednesday, July 8, 1908, which I will read into the record—page 102.

The Master—Directors' records?

Mr. Dane—Directors' records (reading):

"Wednesday, July 8, 1908.

"A meeting of the directors was held this a. m.

"Present: Messrs. Knapp, McLellan, Stewart, and Johnson.

"On separate motions, and by unanimous votes, the following-named amendments were adopted."

I do not care to read the amendments.

"... All of the seventy-second edition of the Manual.

"Also it was voted to repeal the following sections: . . .

"Sections 1, 2, 3, 4 of Article V, page 33."

The minutes were signed, "William B. Johnson, Secretary."

[That portion of a record of a meeting of the Board of Directors held Wednesday, July 8, 1908, and appearing on page 102 of Volume 3 of the records of the Board of Directors, which was read by Mr. Dane, as above set forth, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 151.]

Mr. Dane—I call your attention to the fact that Sections 1, 2, 3, and 4 of Article V, seventy-second edition of the Manual, are sections relating to Executive Members.

Mr. Whipple—Well, now, if Your Honor please, some time ago Your Honor called upon counsel to show evidence that these directors were church officials. Here we find these directors assuming to legislate with regard to the membership of the Church, and so far not the slightest evidence has been produced that they were church officials. It has been shown in the various Manuals that they are not, that no such office existed as director of The Mother Church in the Manual or was referred to until a year or two ago, when these directors, apparently finding they were not church officials, bethought themselves of putting themselves in the Manual as such. Now, ought we not, before we take in this entire record, have some proof that has been promised us that the directors were church officials? They were named directors under the Deed of Trust, but what right have they as trustees under the Deed of Trust to be legislating, abolishing First Members, changing them to Executive Members, and then abolishing Executive Members, when they are not even church officials.

The Master—Is that anything more, Mr. Whipple, than another statement of the difficulty which was brought out yesterday? It is just the same thing, isn't it? We realized it yesterday. But my view was that we better deal with it after we had got the whole history, all that was done. You don't admit that anything that was done by the directors under these circumstances was proper. All that will be open later. Is it worth while to renew the objection at every stage?

Mr. Whipple—I thought it was, for this reason: I understand Your Honor asked them to indicate some proof that the directors were church officials, and to direct their attention to that. And if they haven't any proof of that I thought Your Honor would perhaps feel that the Board of Directors, so-called, or these gentlemen who were acting as directors, had no authority whatever to interfere in these matters. But I am perfectly content, if Your Honor thinks we better take all these things which upon the record as it now stands are utterly futile. It is a mere matter of convenience—the easiest dispatch.

The Master—You will recollect that part of the answer made to my inquiry on that subject was that the directors intended to rely, at least in part, on a course of conduct and an acquiescence on the part of all the parties interested, and, to some extent, upon approval of Mrs. Eddy herself. Now, that is what I understand they are now in the process of doing.

Mr. Dane—And one more thing, if Your Honor please. We are not attempting, and we never have been attempting, to show that this Church is organized as a corporation. We are simply showing what the organization of this Church is. The directors were recognized and accepted by Mrs. Eddy, as the By-Laws were promulgated and proposed by her, and the Church members accepted that form of government and have continued to accept it.

Mr. Whipple—The difficulty is—

Mr. Dane—And are bound by it.

Mr. Whipple—The difficulty is with this idea of acquiescence, that they have now put in successive Manuals which do not even refer to directors as church officers, and it is difficult to see how acquiescence could make anybody officers, who ordinarily would depend upon the suffrage of the people, or the votes of the people, who would elect them officers, or at least would create the offices.

The Master—I quite appreciate all that.

Mr. Whipple—I am quite content if Your Honor thinks that is the best way to go on; and, as Your Honor says, let the gentlemen struggle with their difficulties.

Mr. Dane—There is only one statement, or misstatement, which I should care to correct, and that is that no Manual has ever referred to the Board of Directors as officers of the Church until the present Manual. That is not true. In 1895 they were referred to as officers of the Church.

Mr. Whipple—In the Manual itself? In 1895 you will find that where they describe the officers of the Church, directors are not mentioned as officers. On the title page they are put in as directors.

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Of course they were put in as that.

The Master—Have you the edition of 1895 right here?

Mr. Whipple—Yes. Take the one in 1895, and see if in describing or providing for the church officers—have you it—

Mr. Dane—I am not sure that the Manual of 1895 provides for the directors of church officers.

Mr. Whipple—Well, very well.

Mr. Dane—A vote of the First Members of Dec. 23 described the Board of Directors as officers of the Church, and in the Manual of 1895 they appear as church officers: Ira O. Knapp, Joseph Armstrong, Stephen A. Chase, Edward P. Bates, Christian Science Board of Directors.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that does not describe them as church officers; that describes them as they are in the deed. May I take this edition of 1895 a minute to call to your attention what they do provide? By-Laws, Article 1, Section 2: "The officers shall consist of a president, a clerk, and a treasurer." That is in 1895, and that is the description of what the officers of the Church are.

Mr. Dane—Now may I proceed?

The Master—I think when we have got the whole material before us we can take up these points to better advantage.

Mr. Whipple—And it was not until September, of 1908, that they were included, and then by the directors themselves, as officers.

The Master—The situation is undoubtedly in certain respects exceptional.

Mr. Dane—I now offer, from Volume 6 of Letters and Miscellany, page 123, a letter from Mrs. Eddy.

Q. I will show you, Mr. Johnson, this letter, and ask you whether that bears the signature of Mrs. Eddy? A. It does.

Q. And on the reverse side of the letter, appearing on page 124, is that Mrs. Eddy's handwriting and her signature? A. It is.

Mr. Whipple—What date, please?

Mr. Dane—July 1, 1908. This is page 123, document No. 592.

[A letter, Mrs. Eddy to Christian Science Board of Directors, July 1, 1908, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 152, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

"July 1, 1908.

"Christian Science Board of Directors, "Beloved: I have read your copy of the revised Manual and find it must be corrected throughout.

"My orders to Mr. Dickey were to go over the Manual and erase the name of Executive Members from the Manual. I told him this because said members no longer exist and the Manual should be corrected thus. I cannot do all this work myself and I beg that you, The Christian Science Board, do it, and have it done correctly.

"Lovingly yours,
"MARY B. G. EDDY."

The Master—The date of that was what?

Mr. Dane—July 1, 1908. On the reverse side of the letter—

The Master—That is, Executive Members are what is referred to there?

Mr. Dane—Executive Members. They are the members who were referred to in the article which was repealed by the action of the Board of Directors, which I have put in. On the reverse side of this letter, appearing on page 124, in Mrs. Eddy's handwriting, is the following:

"I have thought it best to have no executive members. Will you at once vote on this question, and have it valid and made known?"

"EDDY."

Mr. Dane—I offer now, from page 107 of Volume 9, of Letters and Miscellany, document No. 981. I will ask you, Mr. Johnson, if that is Mrs. Eddy's signature appearing on that document? A. It is.

[A letter, Mrs. Eddy to The Christian Science Board of Directors, July 1, 1908, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 153, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

"384 Beacon Street,
"Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts,
"July 1, 1908.

"Christian Science Board of Directors: "Beloved Brethren: Please vote to repeal the following paragraph of Article VI, Section 1, of the Church By-Laws.

"MARY BAKER G. EDDY.

"Article VI, Section 1, paragraph 2.

"The executive members of this Church shall continue to convene annually at the Communion Season, but they shall not be present at the business meetings of the Board of Directors."

Mr. Dane—I also offer, from the same volume, page 115, document No. 985.

Q. I ask you, Mr. Johnson, if Mrs. Eddy's signature appears on the letter, document 985? A. It does.

Mr. Whipple—Will you let me see that, please? (Examining letter.) All right.

Mr. Dane—This is on the letter head, "Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, Office of Secretary, 384 Beacon Street,"

[Letter, Mrs. Eddy to Christian Science Board of Directors, July 3, 1908, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 154, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

"Chestnut Hill, Mass.,
"July 3, 1908.

"Christian Science Board of Directors, Boston, Mass.

"Beloved Brethren: Please vote on the adoption of the following church

By-law, and if adopted publish in our periodicals and the Church Manual.
"MARY B. G. EDDY."

"Article

"No Executive Members. Sect. — Article V of the Church By-Laws creating executive members is hereby repealed. There being no further necessity for this organization, the Executive Members shall be and are hereby disbanded."

The Master—What did that leave them then—just plain members?

Mr. Dane—Yes; the office of executive members passed out of existence.

The Master—If you call it an office to be an executive member.

Mr. Dane—Yes, sir, as the First Members had been, because the Executive Members were the First Members. The name of First Members, Your Honor will remember, was changed to Executive Members.

The Master—I quite remember that, yes.

Mr. Dane—Yes, in 1903.

Mr. Whipple—We do not assent to the statement of counsel. We should suggest that the First Members were thereby revived, although it is not a matter, perhaps, of very much consequence. They were still probably members of the Church organization, and of course the vote was not by any church official. The injunction of Mrs. Eddy to make it valid was not carried out.

Mr. Dane—I offer now, from Volume 7 of Letters and Miscellany, page 257, the document appearing on page 257, No. 796.

Q. I ask you, Mr. Johnson, whose handwriting appears at the bottom of document 796—whose signature? A. Mrs. Eddy's.

Mr. Whipple—This is Volume 7, page 257?

Mr. Dane—Page 257, Volume 7. "Church by-law"—

Mr. Whipple—What is the date?

Mr. Dane—Oct. 4, 1901. It has the notation on it, "Adopted Oct. 4, 1901,"—not a part of the document.

[Document appearing on page 257, Volume 7, No. 796, a Church by-law with letter from Mrs. Eddy, Oct. 4, 1901, offered in evidence as Exhibit 155, and read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

Church By-Law

From October, 1901, the term of office for the readers in The Mother Church, the editors and the publisher of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the clerk and the treasurer of this Church, and the manager of the general Publication Committees, in Boston, is three years each, dating from the time of election to the office. Incumbents who have served three years or more can be reelected, or new officers elected, at the annual meeting of this Church, by a unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting.

Mr. Dane—There are interlineations and words that were stricken out in the document, which can be copied into the record exactly as it appears on page 257. On the bottom of the document are the words:

"Beloved Clerk: Please call a meeting and vote on the above by-law. I think you will find this by-law very useful to our church.

"With love,

"M. B. Eddy."

Mr. Dane—I now offer, from Volume 3 of the minutes of the directors, on page 48, that part of the record of the meeting which I now read into the record.

Mr. Thompson—The date, please?

Mr. Dane—Nov. 14, 1901.

[Record, directors' minutes, page 48, Nov. 14, 1901, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 156, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

"A meeting of the directors was held this day and the following business was transacted. . . .

"Voted: That the following by-law which was adopted Oct. 4, 1901, shall be made Section 3 of Article 1.

"Officers and Term of Service.

"From October, 1901, the term of office for the readers in The Mother Church, the editors, and the publisher of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the clerk and the treasurer of this Church, and the manager of the general Publication Committees, in Boston, is three years each, dating from the time of election to office. Incumbents who have served three years or more can be reelected, or new officers elected at the annual meeting of this Church, by a unanimous vote of The Christian Science Board of Directors, and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting."

The Master—Have you in mind, Mr. Dane, what those terms had been before the adoption of those By-Laws?

Mr. Dane—Do you mean the length of them?

The Master—Yes. It is now made three years. What was it before? If you do not remember, never mind.

Mr. Dane—I do not remember that. They were subsequently changed to one year, by an amendment.

The record of Oct. 4, 1901, referred to in the vote which I have just read into the record, appears on page 45 of Volume 3 of the directors' records. Without reading the vote which is the same as the one which I have just read into the record, I will read the following from that meeting:

"Oct. 4, 1901.

"A meeting of the directors was held this day.

"On a motion and by a unanimous vote the following by-law was adopted."

Then follows the by-law which has already been read.

"Minutes approved.

"William B. Johnson, Clerk."

[The record of the meeting of Oct.

4, 1901, from which the foregoing extract is read, is Exhibit 156. R. H. J.]
I offer from the records of the directors, Volume 3, page 57, that part of the record of a meeting of May 15, 1902, which I will read into the record:

"At a meeting of the Board of Directors held this day the following amendments were adopted by separate unanimous votes . . .

"Article I, Sec. 3. From October, 1901, the term of office for the editors and the publisher of The Christian Science Publishing Society, the clerk and the treasurer of this Church, and the manager of the general Publication Committees in Boston, is one year each dating from the time of election to office. Incumbents who have served one year or more can be reelected, or new officers elected, at the annual meeting held for this purpose, by a unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors and the consent of the Pastor Emeritus given in her own handwriting.

"Minutes approved.

"William B. Johnson, Clerk."

[The record of the meeting of the Board of Directors, from which the foregoing extract is read, is Exhibit 157. R. H. J.]

Mr. Thompson—Are you going to read the letter of Mrs. Eddy authorizing that amendment?

Mr. Dane—Authorizing it?

Mr. Thompson—Yes. You have read the change by the amendment. Now will you read the authority of Mrs. Eddy for making it?

Mr. Dane—Vol. 7 of Letters and Miscellany, page 111, document No. 725—

Mr. Whipple—The date.

Q. I show you, Mr. Johnson, a letter dated Aug. 22, 1898, appearing on page 111 of this book, and ask you in whose handwriting it is, and whose signature is on that. A. Mr. Frye's.

Mr. Whipple—May I ask Mr. Dane, or repeat Mr. Thompson's question, as to the authority of Mrs. Eddy for the change which appears in the directors' records, May 15, 1902, which was just read? Have you any?

Mr. Dane—I haven't it here, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—Well, of course you have all Mrs. Eddy's letters here, haven't you?

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—You have Mrs. Eddy's letters here?

Mr. Dane—Yes, in these volumes. I was not intending to offer that in the order in which I intend to proceed.

Mr. Whipple—Well, are you intending to offer it at all?

Mr. Dane—I do not know that there is one and I do not know that there is not one, positively.

Mr. Whipple—That is a good frank statement.

Mr. Thompson—I think that it is only proper and legitimate at this stage to make this very brief statement, which will be only about three lines long: We wish it distinctly understood that our client, Mr. Dittemore, stands today, as always in the past, unequivocally on the By-Laws of The Mother Church as the governing authority for both its members and officers. He also now, as in the past, demands that these By-Laws shall be adhered to both in their letter and in their spirit as the law of the entire Christian Science organization in all of its departments. But where a change appears to have been made, as in Article I, Section 5, and a marginal note, apparently of official origin, which shows doubt as to its origin, and as to any authority from Mrs. Eddy for making it, Mr. Dittemore demands proof that such change was made by any authority from Mrs. Eddy herself; and he feels that there are changes made here which have come to his knowledge during these hearings which have been made by unauthorized persons in these By-Laws; and this is an instance. You show no authority from Mrs. Eddy.

Mr. Whipple—That is, when you speak of unauthorized persons, you mean unauthorized by Mrs. Eddy?

Mr. Thompson—No; I mean persons acting without the authority of Mrs. Eddy. We understand that these By-Laws get their sanctity and authority because they come from Mrs. Eddy; and if anybody else, without her authority, undertakes to make alterations, changes in them, changing their sense, as apparently has been done here, we at least should like to know by what authority that person acted in making those changes, and how they did it.

Mr. Bates—Can't you wait until that develops?

The Master—You will have an opportunity to inquire about all that later.

Mr. Dane—There is no question but what Mrs. Eddy sanctioned and approved every one of them.

The Master—We ought not to take up time with statements about them. We are now in process of getting the evidence.

Mr. Dane—I offer from Vol. 7, on page 111, document No. 725—

Mr. Thompson—Of the Letters?

Mr. Dane—This is on the letterhead of "Science and Health with Key to The Scriptures,"

"(The Christian Science Text-Book)

"Church By-Law.

"If a weekly newspaper shall at any time be published by The Christian Science Publishing Society it shall be owned by The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and shall be copyrighted and conducted according to the by-law relating to The Christian Science Journal."

[The document of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 158, R. H. J.]

I offer from Vol. 2 of First Members, page 199, the following, from the meeting of Aug. 22, 1898:

"A special meeting of the First Members was held this day in the vestry. The president being absent, Mr. Ira O. Knapp was called to the chair and the meeting was opened with the usual form at 5 o'clock p. m. 16 members present.

"The following By-Laws, and amendment were read and were adopted by unanimous votes.

"By-Laws.

"II. If a weekly newspaper shall at any time be published by The Christian Science Publishing Society it shall be owned by The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and shall be copyrighted and conducted according to the by-law relating to The Christian Science Journal."

[The record from which the foregoing extracts are read is Exhibit 159, R. H. J.]

I offer now a letter from Mrs. Eddy to Mr. William P. McKenzie, dated Aug. 22, 1898. The letter is mounted in an unbound volume, but it is numbered document No. 4872.

The Master—Aug. 22, 1898, was the date of the last letter from Mrs. Eddy which you put in, was it not? Have you got another one of the same date?

Mr. Dane—Another of the same date.

The Master—All right.

Q. I show you a letter in this unbound volume, bearing the document No. 4872, and ask you in whose handwriting that is, and whose signature appears upon it? A. Mrs. Eddy's.

Mr. Dane—

"Pleasant View,

"Concord, N. H.

"Aug. 22, 1898

"My dear Student

"I hear you all were elated at the order, have a weekly newspaper. Now I trust you will not abate your joy by reading as follows The C. S. Messenger must be owned by The First Church of Christ Scientist and copyrighted in my name Call on the Treasurer of this Church for the funds to start with Let the editors of the C. S. Jour. be the editors of the C. S. Messenger and employ such help as is required

"With love mother

"M. B. Eddy."

[The document of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 160. R. H. J.]

Mr. Dane—The Christian Science Messenger is the publication that subsequently became the Christian Science Sentinel. I think there is no dispute about that, is there, Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Whipple—No dispute about it? Well, I think that better be shown, as to when it was. Do you claim that the Messenger as such was ever published?

Q. Mr. Johnson, do you know whether or not the Christian Science Messenger was ever published as a periodical? A. I don't remember of its being published under that name.

Mr. Whipple—Isn't there some correspondence showing how The Journal became the property of The Christian Science Publishing Society? If so, why not put it in?

Mr. Dane—I will inquire of the witness and see if we can find out.

Q. Was there a publication, Mr. Johnson, prior to the Christian Science Sentinel, that was published by The Christian Science Publishing Society?

Mr. Whipple—You mean weekly?

Mr. Dane—Weekly paper.

A. No.

Q. Was there a paper called the Christian Science Weekly? A. I never heard of it.

Mr. Dane—I thought possibly the witness might establish that fact. I think there is no question about it. We will show that later. Mr. McKenzie, to whom the letter was written, Your Honor will note was a trustee under the Trust Deed, one of the three original trustees. Mr. McKenzie we expect will be a witness, and the situation will be fully explained by him. Meantime I have here a publication of The Christian Science Publishing Society under date of Sept. 1, 1898, entitled the Christian Science Weekly.

Mr. Whipple—Wasn't it with reference to this that Mrs. Eddy, discovering that this came under the Trust Deed, wrote that letter in which she said, "Follow the trust"?

Mr. Dane—Not at all, Mr. Whipple.

Mr. Whipple—It would apply.

Mr. Dane—You are entirely in error about that. We shall establish that beyond any question.

Mr. Whipple—I should say it would apply, nevertheless.

Mr. Dane—I have also a publication of The Christian Science Publishing Society under date of Jan. 26, 1899, called the Christian Science Sentinel, and I offer—

Mr. Whipple—You don't claim that any of those were published or owned or copyrighted by the Church, do you?

Mr. Dane—Owned by the Church.

Mr. Whipple—Beg pardon.

Mr. Dane—We claim they were certainly owned by the Church.

Mr. Whipple—Really? We shall ask to have proof of that.

Mr. Dane—I offer now, from Volume 3 of Letters and Miscellany, page 193, a letter from Mrs. Eddy to the Christian Science Board under date of June 25, 1902.

[The volume is shown to the witness.]

Q. I ask you, Mr. Johnson, whether or not that is Mrs. Eddy's handwriting and whether that is her signature? A. It is.

The Witness—I would like to make an explanation about that weekly.

Mr. Dane—You may make the explanation if you care to.

The Witness—When you spoke about “weekly” I didn’t understand it as the title, but as a publication published weekly previous to the Sentinel.

Q. There was a publication published previous to the Sentinel? A. Called the Weekly.

Q. Called the Weekly. That publication that was published and called the Weekly—its name was changed subsequently and it was called the Sentinel. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Mr. Dane—Now, I offer from page 193 of this volume the following letter, under date of June 25, 1902, dated Pleasant View, Concord, New Hampshire:

“C. S. Board,
“Beloved Students:

“In the absence of Mr. McLellan retain Willis and Miss Speakman at the head of our periodicals (p. 194). Unless Mr. McLellan has made some other arrangement, put Mr. Willis in the place of chief editor till Mr. McLellan returns. Do not allow another Sentinel to appear without an explanation as to the absence of the editor-in-chief. If McLellan is gone long have an editorial by Mr. Willis, and retain Mr. Willis on the editorial list. Dear Mr. and Mrs. Gross are ready to act as the chief editors-elect—but I charge you to have Willis somewhere, and I think (p. 193) he should be second editor. He is literary in style and learned.

“Now, do not neglect to have this attended to as I request. Get the Trustees to carry it out for you if need be.

“With love,
“M. B. Eddy.”

[The letter read, being a letter from Mrs. Eddy, addressed “C. S. Board,” and dated June 25, 1902, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 161.]

Mr. Whipple—To whom is that addressed?

Mr. Dane—To the Board of Directors.

I now offer from Volume 5 of Letters and Miscellany, page 27, a letter from Mrs. Eddy to the Board of Directors, under date of June 27, 1905.

Q. I ask you if that is Mrs. Eddy’s letter and her signature? A. It is.

“Pleasant View,
“Concord, N. H., June 27, 1905.
“Board of Directors,

“Beloved: Be sure to have this article appear in a conspicuous place in this week’s Sentinel. I have special cause for this.

“Lovingly,
“M. B. G. Eddy.”

[The letter read, being a letter from Mrs. Eddy to the Board of Directors, dated June 27, 1905, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 162.]

Mr. Dane—I offer, to be marked only for identification, the article bearing on the Christian Science Sentinel.

Mr. Streeter—What is the title of the article, Mr. Dane?

Mr. Dane—The title of that article is “Hear, O Israel: the Lord Our God is One Lord.” And this appears in Volume 7 of Christian Science Sentinel, page 708.

[Article entitled, “Hear, O Israel: the Lord Our God is One Lord,” appearing on page 708 of Volume 7 of Christian Science Sentinel, is marked 163 for identification.]

Mr. Dane—I now offer from Volume 6 of Letters and Miscellany, page 131, a letter, being document No. 596.

Q. I ask you, Mr. Johnson, whose handwriting that is? A. Mrs. Eddy’s.

Q. I call your attention to the reverse side and ask you in whose handwriting that is? A. Mrs. Eddy’s.

Mr. Whipple—What is the date, please?

Mr. Dane—This has an annotation that it was sent by messenger, received July 28, 1908, “William B. Johnson.”

“Beloved C. S. Board of Directors six pages of letters for our Sentinel are too many four pages are better than so many otherwise it makes the Sentinel as a news paper insipid.

“Lovingly Eddy
“Notice So soon as the Pub. House debt is paid I request the C. S. Board Directors to start a daily newspaper called Christian Science Monitor. This must be done without fail

“M. B. G. Eddy”

[The letter read, being a letter from Mrs. Eddy to the Board of Directors, and bearing annotation indicating that it was received on July 28, 1908, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 164.]

Mr. Dane—Would it be convenient to take a recess at this time?

[Recess]

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Dane, may I ask whether you have any letter or copy of a letter sent by the Board of Directors in response to the last letter that was put in, that is, the letter of July 28?

Mr. Dane—The last letter was the one relating to The Christian Science Monitor.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Dane—That letter indicates on its face that it was sent by a messenger.

Mr. Whipple—I was asking about a copy of your reply.

Mr. Dane—I think that the reply was not made by letter. That entire incident will be explained later by a witness whom we intend to call, in connection with the letter that has been introduced on that subject.

Mr. Whipple—Because Your Honor will remember that the letter to the Christian Science Board of Trustees by Mrs. Eddy—

Mr. Dane—Yes; that was some time later.

Mr. Whipple—That was Aug. 8, 1908, which was only a few days later.

Mr. Dane—A few days later, yes. That whole incident will be explained.

Mr. Whipple—Well, you mean that you haven’t any copy of any reply or any letter that was sent to Mrs. Eddy in the meantime?

Mr. Dane—I think there is no letter.

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Johnson, to the last exhibit, which is on page 131, Volume 6, of Letters and Miscellany, and to the notation on the bottom of the document as it appears on page 132, the words, “Received by messenger, July 28, 1908. William B. Johnson,” and I ask in whose handwriting and whose signature that is? A. That is my father’s.

Q. He was clerk of the board at that time? A. Yes.

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Johnson, to the document No. 713, on page 93 of Volume 7 of Letters and Miscellany, which has already been introduced as an exhibit. I call particularly your attention to the words appearing on the top of the document, “Adopted, Feb. 10, 1898,” and ask you in whose handwriting that is? A. That is my father’s.

Q. And on page 171 of the same volume, I direct your attention to document No. 751, which has already been introduced, and call your attention to the words and figures on the top of that document: “Received, July 17, 1899; adopted, July 17, 1899,” indicated by ditto marks under “July 17” and “1899,” and ask you in whose handwriting that is? A. My father’s.

Q. I also call your attention to the document on page 257 of the same book, document No. 796, which has been introduced, and call your attention to the words and figures on that document, “Adopted, Oct. 4, 1901,” and ask you in whose handwriting that is? A. My father’s.

Mr. Dane—I now ask that it be noted on the record that the notations on these various documents which have been proved by the witness be regarded as a part of the exhibit. As we went along I was not sure in whose handwriting the notations were, and therefore that may not have been introduced as an exhibit at the time the document itself was introduced.

Mr. Whipple—I do not think they can be noted as a part of the exhibit because they are not, but they may be taken as a memorandum made by a man who is deceased, as to the truth of which Your Honor, I assume, must be convinced.

Mr. Dane—I now offer, from Volume 9, “Mary Baker Eddy, Letters and Miscellany,” a letter on page 139, document No. 995, a letter dated Aug. 15, 1908.

Q. I ask you whose signature appears on the letter? A. Mrs. Eddy’s.

Q. And whose signature appears to the by-law set forth on that document? A. Mrs. Eddy’s.

[A letter, Mrs. Eddy to Christian

Science Board of Directors, Aug. 15, 1908, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 165, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows.]

"Chestnut Hill, Mass.,
"Aug. 15, 1908.

"The Christian Science Board of Directors.

"Beloved Brethren: Please vote on the adoption of the following amendment to by-law, Article XXXVI, Section 2, of the Church Manual.

"M. B. G. EDDY.

"Seventy-Third Edition the Authority.

"Sec. 2. The Board of Directors, the Committee on Bible Lessons, and the Board of Trustees shall each keep a copy of the Seventy-Third Edition and of subsequent editions of the Church Manual; and if a discrepancy appears in any revised edition, these editions shall be cited as authority.

"MARY B. G. EDDY."

The Master—Will you give me the date of that again?

Mr. Dane—Aug. 15, 1908. In that same connection I offer from the directors' Church By-Law Book, Volume 2, the record of a meeting of Friday, Aug. 28, 1908.

Mr. Whipple—Will you give me that date again?

Mr. Dane—Aug. 28, 1908, appearing on page 37.

The Master—We had one entry from that book yesterday about the seventy-third edition.

Mr. Dane—This is the adoption of the by-law which Mrs. Eddy proposed in the letter that has just been introduced. I do not believe I have introduced this.

[Directors' records, Church By-Laws, Volume 2, Aug. 28, 1908, offered in evidence as Exhibit 165, and read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

"At a meeting of the directors held this a. m. the following amendment to Church By-Law, Article XXXVI, Sect. 2, page 105 of the seventy-third edition of the Manual be adopted.

"Article XXXVI

"Seventy-third Edition the Authority.

"Sect. 2. The Board of Directors, the Committee on Bible Lessons, and the Board of Trustees shall each keep a copy of the seventy-third edition and of subsequent editions of the Church Manual; and if a discrepancy appears in any revised edition, these editions shall be cited as authority.

"William B. Johnson,
"Clerk."

Mr. Dane—I direct the Court's attention to the fact that the seventy-third edition was the edition which, with its amendment, was introduced yesterday as adopted by the Board of Directors.

I offer from Vol. 3, Letters and Miscellany, page 127, June 17, 1901, addressed to The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Q. I ask you, Mr. Johnson, if that is Mrs. Eddy's handwriting, and if her signature is attached to that? A. It is.

Mr. Dane—

"Pleasant View,

"Concord, N. H., June 17, 1901.

"C. S. Board of Directors,
"Beloved Students:

"Be sure this goes into this week's issue of the Sentinel, that circumstances have made it requisite to have our communion services held on the 23d of June, 1901. You will see this is carried out. I have written a notice of it and telephoned it to Judge Hanna to have it appear in this week's Sentinel.

"With love, Mother.
"M. B. EDDY.

"N. B. Also adjourn the annual business meeting of our Church to the day following the date of the semi-annual meeting next October.

"Again, Mother."

[The document of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 167, R. H. J.]

I offer from Vol. 4, Letters and Miscellany, page 77, a letter addressed to C. S. Board of Directors, under date of Oct. 12, 1903.

Q. I ask you whose handwriting that is, and who signed the letter? A. Mrs. Eddy.

Mr. Dane—

"Pleasant View,

"Concord, N. H. Oct. 12, 03.

"C. S. Bd. Directors

"Beloved Students:

"It is unnecessary to add another By-Law to our Manual merely to guide the Editors of our weekly and monthly Sen. and Jour. Hence I write the rule to be observed namely. When the Press breaks the observance of justice and courtesy and what it is supposed to be accountable for as honest pressmen see that you review it. Have our Editors repeat the facts and duly and wisely comment on such unjust proceedings. Of course they must avoid all that is libellous and be wise as serpents. Have the shameful transaction of the press"—

I will omit two words, with the consent of Brother Whipple, from this letter, involving certain newspapers. I do not think that it is necessary to put them into the case (showing to Mr. Whipple the portion referred to).

Mr. Whipple—Very well.

Mr. Dane—I will begin the sentence once more.

"Have the shameful transaction of the press . . . connected with Farrow's last attempt to contradict the falsehood that appeared in that paper as to himself—published in our next issue. Then our Exchanges can hear the truth of it. Leave the mention of my name out as much as possible. It is beneath us to continually contradict that stale falsehood. But when it is done let it be a quotation from C. S. History by Judge Hanna.

"Lovingly Yours,
"M. B. EDDY."

[The document of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 168, R. H. J.]

I offer now a letter on page 83 of Vol. 4 of Letters and Miscellany, adressed to The Christian Science Board of Directors, dated Oct. 25, 1903.

Q. I ask you, Mr. Johnson, whose handwriting appears at the end of the letter as shown on page 84, and whose signature is there attached? A. Mrs. Eddy's.

Mr. Dane— "Pleasant View,
"Concord, N. H.
"Oct. 25, 1903.

"Christian Science Board of Directors,
"Beloved Students: To know one half of what your teacher and leader is meeting, would show you the cruelty of adding blows.

"Had my letter in the last Sentinel, had my name on its cover, it would have drawn much attention to it."

With your consent I will use a blank for the name of the individual appearing in here (showing to Mr. Thompson the portion referred to).

With the consent of counsel, in reading this letter, I will use blanks where the names appear, and I will begin the sentence:

"Had my letter in the last Sentinel, had my name on its cover, it would have drawn much attention to it. — attack upon me was never met, and even my letter in the Sentinel refuting one of his blasphemies was well-nigh hidden! In your next Sentinel republish my letter, and the letter from Elizabeth Earl Jones and the article copied from the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer.

"I write to you because our editor seems to be unmindful of such mistakes. . . . When reading the proof of my article I had no thought of such a thing as omitting my name in the 'Contents of This Number.' You must see that my requests in this letter are strictly obeyed in our next issue of the Sentinel and C. S. Journal.

"With love

"M. B. G. EDDY."

[The document of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 170, R. H. J.]

I now offer from the same volume, page 213, a letter from Mrs. Eddy to the C. S. Board of Directors, May 16, 1905, document No. 422.

Q. I ask you, Mr. Johnson, whether or not that is in Mrs. Eddy's handwriting, and whether or not it bears her signature? A. It does.

Mr. Dane—

"Pleasant View,

"Concord, N. H., May 16, 1905.

"C. S. Board Directors.

"Beloved:

"See that a notice proper of the sudden departure from our sight of one of the noblest, most needed and best of mankind—dear Mr. Whitcomb. —Have it appear in our next Sentinel and Journal if it is too late for this week's issue of our weekly.

"Lovingly yours,
"Mary Baker Eddy."

[The document of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 171, R. H. J.]

Mr. Whipple—What was the name, please?

Mr. Dane—Whitcomb.

Mr. Whipple—Whitcomb. Thank you.

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Johnson, to a letter, on pages 19 and 20, Vol. 3 of Letters and Miscellany, and ask you whose is the signature on that letter of page 20? A. Mrs. Eddy's.

[The volume is shown to Mr. Streeter and Mr. Thompson.]

Mr. Dane—From the letter which the witness has just identified, appearing on page 19 of Volume 3 of Letters and Miscellany, with the consent of counsel I read but one paragraph. It is on the letterhead of "Works on Christian Science by Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy—Address all inquiries to Joseph Armstrong, C. S. D., 95 Fal-mouth Street, Boston, Massachusetts" (reading):

"Pleasant View,
Concord, New Hampshire,
July 17, 1899.

"The First Church of Christ, Scientist,
Boston.

"Beloved Brethren:

"... So long as the News-Letter keeps free from matter injurious to the Cause and stands as nobly out as it now does in defense of Truth, publish nothing in the Sentinel or Journal that shall stop the patronage of that paper. But if matter gets into it that is injurious to the Cause, then first rebuke the editor; tell him his fault and call his attention to this fact, and say if it is not discontinued you must publish your dissent to its patronage."

The letter is signed, "With love, Mother."

[That portion of a letter from Mrs. Eddy to The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, dated July 17, 1899, and appearing on page 19 of Volume 3 of Letters and Miscellany, read by Mr. Dane as set forth above, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 172.]

Mr. Dane—I offer now from Volume 3 of the Directors' Records the minutes of the meeting of June 16, 1902 (reading):

"In compliance with the by-law adopted May 24, 1902, the directors elected the president and the first and second readers of this Church. The other officers of the Church and the Sunday School were also elected and also the boards and the committees.

"Officers

President, John R. Reeder.
Clerk, William B. Johnson.
Treasurer, Stephen A. Chase.
First Reader, Prof. Hermann S. Hering.

Second Reader, Mrs. Ella E. Williams.

"In accordance with the by-law adopted Nov. 14, 1901, and amended May 15, 1902, the editors and the publisher of The Christian Science Journal and the Christian Science Sentinel were elected as follows:

Editor in chief, Archibald McLellan.
Second Editor, John B. Willis.
Assistant Editor, Miss Mary E. Speakman.
Publisher, Joseph Armstrong.

Manager of the general publication committee, Alfred Farlow."

I will omit the election of the other officers.

"Minutes approved.

"WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,
Clerk."

[Records of a meeting of the Board of Directors, dated June 16, 1902, appearing in Volume 3 of First of Executive Members, Board of Directors, and Annual Meetings, are offered in evidence as Exhibit 173.]

Mr. Dane—From the same book I offer the minutes of a meeting of June 29, 1903 (reading):

"A meeting of the Christian Science Board of Directors, which was the annual meeting for the election of officers, was held at the above named place at 10 o'clock a. m. (Stephen A. Chase was absent.)

"On separate motions and unanimous votes of all present, the following named persons were elected to the separate offices set against their names as follows:

"Board of Directors

"President, Archibald McLellan; secretary, William B. Johnson."

Omitting all but the election of the editors and manager of the Publishing Society, it follows:

"Editors

"Editor in Chief, Archibald McLellan; second editor, John B. Willis; assistant editor, Mrs. Annie M. Knott; assistant editor of Der Christian Science Herald, Miss Louise F. Kollmorgen.

"Manager

"Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, Joseph Armstrong.

"William B. Johnson, Clerk."

[Records of a meeting of the Board of Directors, dated June 29, 1903, appearing in Volume 3 of the Records of the First or Executive Members, Board of Directors and Annual Meetings, are offered in evidence as Exhibit 174.]

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Dane, do you think while you are reading these, it would be a good idea to put in the notices, if any, of any such action which was sent to the Board of Trustees?

Mr. Dane—It would not be convenient to do it as I read each meeting. I will put in what notices are of record as having been sent. For a good many years no notices were sent. Mr. McLellan was the editor in chief, and was also a member of the Board of Directors for a long time. So that there seemed to be no occasion while that situation prevailed of sending notices.

Mr. Whipple—There might be occasion to send word to the trustees.

Mr. Dane—Such notices as there are I will be glad to put in.

Mr. Whipple—Why not do it as we go along, otherwise you will have to go all over this again, referring to something which has passed. We have a memorandum, and perhaps we can agree on it.

Mr. Dane—Well, let us see—

Mr. Whipple—You have put in 1902.

Mr. Dane—It will slow the procedure up very much.

Mr. Whipple—It can't slow it up beyond what it is. You will get it all in at once, and you won't have to go back over it again.

Mr. Dane—I desire with Your Honor's permission to proceed.

Mr. Whipple—I take Your Honor's direction, but if there is anything which can facilitate and speed up this it seems as though it ought to be adopted.

The Master—I should certainly favor anything which would tend to speed the proceedings up, but I am informed by Mr. Dane that he does not think the action suggested would accelerate matters.

Mr. Dane—I do not think it would, Your Honor.

Mr. Whipple—If Your Honor please, how can these things be of any consequence unless the trustees were notified of them and it was brought to their attention? We say it is not of any consequence anyway. But what does this futile action of so-called election amount to if nobody is notified of it? Therefore, I raise the point that unless it is called to the attention of the trustees it can't have any effect.

The Master—It is stated that for a number of years no notices were sent, there being a member common to both boards.

Mr. Dane—Yes.

Mr. Whipple—Oh, no, not that.

Mr. Dane—Not that. A member of the Board of Directors was also editor in chief of the periodicals.

The Master—Oh, yes, the editor being himself a director.

Mr. Dane—Himself a director.

The Master—I see.

Mr. Whipple—But no notice was given—

The Master—Now, if no notice was given during those years, that fact can be understood now, can't it, as undisputed?

Mr. Whipple—Yes. We can put in the years now.

Mr. Dane—I would prefer not, Your Honor.

Mr. Whipple—Very well.

Mr. Dane—I would prefer to proceed and show the fact that for this series of years the Board of Directors have elected the editors and the publisher and business manager of the Publishing Society.

Mr. Whipple—I think I will raise the question by objecting to it on the ground that it is of no consequence whatever unless the trustees were notified, and that the order of proof should be that the notice, if any, that was sent to the Board of Trustees should be put in. It is perfectly easy to do it.

The Master—It seems to me that if it is understood that for a number of years there was no notice other than that implied from the fact that the editor was himself a director, you might agree what those years were.

Mr. Whipple—We have it right here.

The Master—Why can't you agree right now?

Mr. Dane—We will put that all in, Your Honor.

The Master—Why not put it in now, if there is no dispute about it?

Mr. Dane—There may be a dispute about it.

The Master—I took your statement—I thought I did.

Mr. Dane—I did not mean to imply that there was no dispute about the number of notices that was sent, because I do not know what my Brother Whipple claims as to the number of notices that were actually sent. There may have been notifications by telephone or by other means than in writing.

Mr. Whipple—Let us deal with the letters now, anything in correspondence.

Mr. Dane—My objection was that to interrupt the course of proof now and to search out in our records the number of notices that were actually sent would involve a waste of time.

Mr. Whipple—Haven't you, in the preparation of your case, got those notices where you can lay your hands on them, with this corps of assistants that you have?

Mr. Dane—We have the notices, and we intend to put them in.

Mr. Whipple—Well, why not when you are putting in the elections, or so-called elections?

The Master—There does not appear to be sufficient agreement about the matter of notices to warrant the belief that we can materially shorten the proceedings by interrupting Mr. Dane, I think.

Mr. Whipple—Very well.

The Master—I thought from what he said that the contrary might be the case. Go on, Mr. Dane.

Mr. Dane—I offer from Volume 3 of the directors' records the record of a meeting of Monday, June 13, 1904 (reading):

"The annual meeting of the directors was held this day for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. Present: Messrs. Chase, Knapp, Armstrong, and McLellan.

Mr. Dane—Records of minutes of regular and special meetings of The Christian Science Board of Directors, May 31, 1909, appear to have been kept by or under the supervision of Mr. Dittmore. Perhaps we can agree on that.

Mr. Thompson—What is the date you have got there?

Mr. Dane—May 31, 1909.

Mr. Thompson—Mr. Dittmore, it has already been shown, after Mr. Johnson ceased—

The Master—Mr. Dittmore succeeded him as clerk?

Mr. Thompson—He succeeded Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Dane—Do you make any question as to that, Mr. Whipple? Do you make any question, Mr. Thompson, requiring identification further than has already been made?

Mr. Thompson—Well, you better take it and look at it. Just a minute, Mr. Dane, we would like to have a little conference here.

[Conference between counsel.]

Mr. Dane—I understand it is conceded that the record of the meeting of May 31, 1909, appearing on page 1 of the book entitled, "Minutes of Regular and Special Meetings of The Christian Science Board of Directors," May 31, 1909, through Dec. 31, 1909, are the minutes of that meeting.

Mr. Streeter—Yes, Your Honor, but it must be understood that this concession or agreement only goes to the extent of the meeting agreed to.

Mr. Dane—Yes.

The Master—Only goes to the extent—I didn't quite get that.

Mr. Streeter—I mean exactly this. Mr. Dittmore agrees that that meeting is correctly recorded. There are a vast number of meetings where the records are not correctly recorded, where there have been changes in them, we think.

The Master—If I understand it right, Mr. Dittmore kept those records himself.

Mr. Streeter—Well, he kept the records of this meeting, yes.

The Master—That is what I referred to.

Mr. Streeter—Well, that is all.

The Master—The records you are now talking about.

Mr. Streeter—Yes, that is right.

The Master—I suppose, Mr. Dane, that so far your examination, what has gone in, has been a part of Mr. Johnson's testimony.

Mr. Dane—I suppose technically that is true.

The Master—You have now reached a point where you continue putting in the records but his testimony does not assist you.

Mr. Dane—So far as I know at the present time, I have finished with Mr. Johnson. It may be possible that we shall want him to identify some further records. At present I have none in mind, but I would not like to excuse him definitely.

The Master—No.

Mr. Dane—Simply with that reservation.

The Master—Now do you propose to keep on at this point with introducing records about which Mr. Johnson has no knowledge?

Mr. Dane—Yes. I propose to simply bring down to date the election of editors and of the business manager of the Publishing Society by The Christian Science Board of Directors.

The Master—And have those records identified by Mr. Dittmore, or whoever may have been the clerk at the time being?

Mr. Dane—Yes, sir. I have a list of references to the volume and page where these elections have occurred, but it is possible that the counsel could agree.

Mr. Whipple—I offered to some time ago, if we could also agree on what notices were sent to us, and I could have saved you a lot of trouble and you would me.

The Master—Have you got through with Mr. Johnson as a witness? Are you sure that you have got through with Mr. Johnson as a witness—I will put it that way? Won't you need him for the purpose of showing what you have told us you propose to show about the notice to the trustees of these successive elections down to 1909?

Mr. Dane—It may be that he has not yet identified those particular meetings, although I think that he has by a general identification of the meetings of the directors yesterday; but it is barely possible that there are meetings in that connection which I desire to have him identify, and that is why I would like to reserve the right to recall him.

The Master—Before you finish with him wouldn't it be better to get what he knows about the notice to the trustees as Mr. Whipple suggests?

Mr. Dane—I will take Your Honor's suggestion as to that.

The Master—Wouldn't it be easier to find, if you had it all under his testimony?

Mr. Whipple—I suggest, if Your Honor please, to facilitate matters, that the original of these notices would be naturally in the hands of the Board of Trustees, and we have such notices as were sent and upon request we will produce them, or copies, for the use of counsel, to save the waste of time that will otherwise be likely in looking through all their papers.

The Master—Why don't you put those in, Mr. Dane? That won't cut you off from putting in anything else, if you have got it. That certainly would tend to save time, it seems to me.

Mr. Dane—Mr. Whipple, have you a notice of June 21, 1902?

Mr. Whipple—Not the original, but I have a copy of it, which I understand is from your records.

Mr. Dane—I understood you to say that the trustees had these notices.

Mr. Whipple—I said either that or copies, and I have copies. I hand you a copy that I have for June 21, 1902.

Mr. Dane—Have you the original—you have not the original?

Mr. Whipple—Not the original at this moment, and I do not mean to say that I actually have the original. I mean to say that I haven't it here. If you are not going to use my copy, let me have it.

Mr. Dane—Do I understand, Mr. Whipple, you will later produce the original?

Mr. Whipple—I cannot undertake to. You have a letter press copy, haven't you?

Mr. Dane—Yes, I have a letter press copy. I would like to have the original.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I am conceding a good deal when I tell you that I will let you put in your copy, because otherwise you would have to prove that it was delivered to the trustees, wouldn't you? I am waiving that, hoping that we will speed up things a little.

Q. Mr. Johnson, will you look at this—

Mr. Bates—If we get the notice we are sure it was delivered.

Mr. Whipple—You need not trouble to ask Mr. Johnson, unless you want to, about the signature to the letter press copy of June 21, 1902.

Mr. Streeter—Why don't we take the copies, and if they don't compare with your copies you can correct it? Wouldn't that save a lot of time?

Mr. Dane—If Your Honor please, ordinarily it would be perfectly satisfactory to put in the copy, all being agreed to that course, but I think it may be important to have the originals produced to show what disposition the originals of those letters indicated was made of them upon their receipt by the Board of Trustees. In other words, the receipt of that letter, with whatever notations may be on it, may be important on this issue. That of course would not appear from the typewritten copy, which is now produced by Mr. Whipple, and if it is possible to produce the originals I desire to have them produced or to have the failure to produce them some way accounted for.

Mr. Whipple—The failure to produce them would be accounted for by the fact that we did not have them.

Mr. Dane—Well, that is your statement about it.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I am not going to give you any other statement. You are asking me as counsel to produce them, and you must take my word in regard to it.

The Master—I understand, Mr. Whipple, you agree to produce them if you have got them.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, Your Honor; otherwise not.

Mr. Dane—I understand also he now says he has not got the originals; I want to be sure that the originals are not now in the possession of the trustees.

Mr. Whipple—That I cannot tell you about; I can only tell you that we do not find the originals here, of the June 21, 1902.

Mr. Dane—Then I think I will proceed with the witness.

Mr. Whipple—All right; go ahead.

Mr. Strawn—That will take longer. Anything that takes time, why do it.

The Master—It seems to be 1 o'clock.

Mr. Whipple—Can't we get this letter in first?

The Master—Certainly. I didn't know but if we stopped here we might contrive some way of shortening this before 2 o'clock.

Mr. Whipple—I beg of Your Honor, let us get one letter in.

The Master—Go on; put that one in.

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Johnson, to a letter appearing on page 294, in the volume of The Christian Science Board of Directors, a letter press copy book, and ask you whose signature appears on the letter dated June 21, 1902? A. William B. Johnson's.

Mr. Dane—I call Your Honor's attention to the fact that it was in 1902 that the by-law became effective giving The Christian Science Board of Directors the authority to elect editors.

The Master—Well, we have had the by-law to which you refer. Now, go on. Are you going to put in that letter? Suppose you read it and then we will stop.

Mr. Whipple—Page 294, it is.

Mr. Dane—Page 294, June 21, 1902.

[Letter, directors to trustees, June 21, 1902, from directors' letter press copy book, page 294, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 180, and is read by Mr. Dane, as follows:]

"To the Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"95 Falmouth Street, Boston, Mass.

"Brethren: You are hereby notified that: Mr. Archibald McLellan has been elected editor-in-chief of The Christian Science Journal and the Christian Science Sentinel. Mr. John B. Willis, second editor, and Miss Mary E. Speakman, assistant editor.

"Fraternally yours,

"Christian Science Board of Directors,
"William B. Johnson, Secretary."

[Recess to 2:30 p. m.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The Master—Shall we wait for Mr. Whipple?

Mr. Strawn—No; go right ahead.

The Master—Go on, Mr. Dane.

Q. Mr. Johnson, I show you a letter on page 147 of the letter-press copying book of the Board of Directors No. 10, and ask you if that bears the signature of your father, William B. Johnson? A. It does.

Q. I show you a letter-press copy of a letter dated Jan. 8, 1908, and ask you if that is William B. Johnson's signature? A. It is.

Mr. Thompson—What was the date of the first one?

Mr. Dane—The first one was dated July 5, 1903, and it is as follows:

"To the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society:—

"Mr. Thomas W. Hatten, secretary:
"Dear Brethren,

"I beg to notify you that Mrs. Annie M. Knott, C. S. D., has been elected assistant editor of The Christian Science Journal, and Sentinel, by the approval of the Pastor Emeritus and the unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors.

"Yours in the bonds of Christ,
"The Christian Science Board of Directors,

(Signed) "WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,
"Secretary."

[The letter-press copy of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 181. R. H. J.]

I offer the one dated Jan. 8, 1908:
"The Christian Science Publishing Soc'y,
"250 Huntington Avenue
"Boston, Mass.

"Dear Brethren:

"I hereby inform you that upon the approval of your beloved Leader, the Rev. Mary Baker Eddy, and by the unanimous vote of the Christian Science Board of Directors, Mr. David B. Ogden, C. S. B. of Portland, Oregon, has been elected Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society.

"Fraternally yours,
(Signed) "WILLIAM B. JOHNSON,
"Secretary."

[The copy of letter of which the foregoing is a copy is Exhibit 182. R. H. J.]

The Master—What year was that?

Mr. Dane—Jan. 8, 1908.

I offer in this connection a letter dated Dec. 29, 1907, addressed to The Christian Science Board of Directors, signed by the Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society, per T. W. Hatten, Secy., which I show counsel (passing a paper to Mr. Strawn).

Mr. Strawn—That is all subject to our general objection as to its materiality.

Mr. Dane—

"Dec. 29th, 1907.

"To The Christian Science Board of Directors,

"Brethren,

"We find that on the first of January we shall be deprived of the active services of Mr. Stewart, who has been one of the two superintendents taking charge of the business of the publishing society. The former business manager was so preoccupied with other duties that this arrangement of appointing superintendents was made necessary. The situation therefore presented to the trustees, who are responsible for the conducting of the business, is one of immediate need, which under the By-Laws can only be supplied by the Board of Directors who elect the business manager. If there is any way in which the Board of Trustees may indicate to you the needs of the business, or confer with you as to supplying the need, the members are ready to give any service desired.

"With fraternal regard,

"Yours respectfully,
"The Board of Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society,
"Per T. W. Hatten, Secy."

[The letter of which the foregoing is a copy is marked Exhibit 183. R. H. J.] I offer a letter dated June 8, 1914, the identification of which has been conceded by counsel.

Mr. Thompson—Well, the identification was by Mr. Dittmore.

Mr. Strawn—By Mr. Dittmore and acceded to by Mr. Whipple.

The Master—Isn't that going rather out of order? Were we not going to put these notices in so far as they related to the elections up to 1909?

Mr. Dane—I had originally planned to put in the elections from 1902 to 1913, but it is suggested that I—

The Master—True, but you need this witness only for those up to 1909.

Mr. Dane—That is all.

The Master—Now, my understanding was that you were going to prove what notice of those elections up to 1909 was given to the board.

Mr. Dane—That has been done.

The Master—You have got every one of them, have you, now?

Mr. Dane—Up to 1909.

Mr. Whipple—That is, in point of fact, there are only two of them?

Mr. Dane—Up to 1909, yes, two of these written communications.

The Master—I thought that you had put in one for 1902—

Mr. Dane—1903.

The Master—One for 1903, and one for 1907, and one for 1908?

Mr. Dane—That is correct.

Mr. Whipple—But 1903 was only the notice as to Mrs. Knott's election, not as to all the officers.

Mr. Dane—The notice for 1902 was as to the election of all of the editors.

Mr. Whipple—But not of any business manager.

Mr. Dane—No.

Mr. Whipple—Yes.

Mr. Dane—The notice for 1903 was a notification of the election of Mrs. Knott as an assistant editor.

Mr. Whipple—Yes, and not as to any other election, nor as to a business manager.

The Master—Not as to any other.

Mr. Dane—No. And a notice of 1908 was as to the election of a business manager.

Mr. Whipple—And not as to any editors?

Mr. Dane—Not as to any editors. Now, those notices occurred whenever there was any change in the personnel elected.

The Master—Now you have got one more, 1907?

Mr. Whipple—No; that is not a notice, if Your Honor please.

The Master—Not a notice?

Mr. Whipple—No.

The Master—Nor is there any notice for 1904, 1905, or 1906?

Mr. Dane—No written notification.

Mr. Whipple—Nor 1907.

Mr. Dane—Nor 1907. That is correct. The notices evidently were sent when there was a change made in the personnel.

The Master—I see.

Mr. Whipple—I do not think that we can agree to that. I think that there may be some other guide—

The Master—Very well. We will not understand that you do agree to it.

Mr. Whipple—I would like it understood that we entirely disagree with that.

The Master—Now, do I understand that the examination of this witness is complete so far as the papers that you wish to identify by him go?

Mr. Dane—I think it is, Your Honor, reserving the privilege, if I may, if I discover something, of putting him on subsequently.

The Master—Very well. Now, then, the next thing in the natural course of events would be for the other side to cross-examine him.

Mr. Dane—That is satisfactory, if they desire to do so.

The Master—I only suggest that if any other course is preferred, I am perfectly willing to adopt it.

Mr. Thompson—I want to ask him one or two questions.

Cross-Examination

Q. [By Mr. Thompson] You have mentioned the name of a Mr. Armstrong several times in your testimony. What is his full name? A. Joseph Armstrong.

Q. And he was connected with the Church in various capacities for a long time, was he not? A. Yes, he was.

Q. Is he living now? A. He is not.

Q. When did he pass on? A. In about 1907, I think.

Q. You were connected with the Church for how many years as assistant clerk, or in any other official capacity? A. Very nearly 11 years.

Q. During that time did you ever know of any vacancy having been declared in the Board of Trustees by the Board of Directors, or anybody else, or Mrs. Eddy, or the removal of a trustee by Mrs. Eddy, or by any other official body? I don't ask you the name. Simply Yes or No. Did you ever know of such a case? A. I don't recollect any, Mr. Thompson.

Q. Did you ever know during that period of the removal of a director by the board itself, or by Mrs. Eddy? A. I knew of a resignation asked by Mrs. Eddy.

Q. You knew of a resignation asked by Mrs. Eddy? A. Yes.

Q. How many such cases? A. Three.

Q. I asked you rather of a removal. Did you ever know of a vote removing a director? A. Removing a director? Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. And you never knew of anybody's being asked to resign from the Board of Trustees of the Publishing Society? I wish you would think a minute. A. My memory doesn't serve me on that.

Q. I beg your pardon? A. My memory does not serve me on that.

Q. You have no recollection at all about it? A. I haven't any recollection at present.

Q. You speak as if you might have had one in the past. A. I might have. I would be glad to give it to you if I could.

Q. Can you recall that past recollection? A. Well, I could, perhaps, if I went over the names of the trustees.

Q. You think that there has been an occasion in the past of one of the trustees being asked to resign, or being removed? A. I think there has been, but I—

Q. Now your memory is improving as we go on, isn't it? A. I don't know.

Q. Won't you give it a little jog further, and see if it won't help you more? Can't you recall the name of somebody who was asked to resign from the Board of Trustees in the past? Remember that this is an occasion of some importance, and that you are under oath. A. I realize it fully.

Q. That you are under oath and that personal matters have no weight here. A. Not a particle.

Q. Now, I ask you, with that suggestion, if you will not try to refresh your memory by looking into it carefully and searching for the name of the person that probably will come to you now who was asked to resign from the Board of Trustees? A. I think Mr. Bates.

Q. Anybody else? Not the Governor? He has not been asked to resign yet. The Governor would like Mr. Bates' full name so as to disassociate him. A. Edward P. Bates is the name, I think.

Q. That is not the name that I had in mind. I will ask you to search your memory still further, and perhaps you might assist your memory by associating it with the name of Mr. Armstrong—not that he was asked to resign, but that his name might assist your mnemonic process.

Mr. Whipple—What process?

Mr. Streeter—Mnemonic.

Mr. Whipple—I don't know what that means!

A. I can't do it.

Q. You can't do it. I won't press you. A. I think that I could do it if I could remember all the names of the trustees during that period, but I don't remember the names of all of the trustees.

Mr. Thompson—I am urged not to press you further, and I won't.

The Master—Anything further in the way of cross-examination? That appears to be all, then.

Mr. Dane—Mr. Dittmore, having identified the letter of June 8, 1914, addressed by The Christian Science Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees, I will now offer and read it.

“June 8, 1914.

“Board of Trustees,

“The Christian Science Publishing Society,

“Boston, Massachusetts.

“Dear Friends:

“At the regular business meeting of the Christian Science Board of Directors held this morning, the following officers were elected: Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, David B. Ogden; Editor Christian Science Journal, Sentinel and Der Herold, Archibald McLellan; Associate Editor, Journal and Sentinel, John B. Willis; Associate Editor, Journal and Sentinel, Mrs. Annie M. Knott; Assistant Editor, Der Herold, Theodore Stanger; Editor, The Monitor, Frederick Dixon.

“Very sincerely,

“The Christian Science Board of Directors.

“By JOHN V. DITTEMORE,
JVD-T “Secretary.”

Mr. Whipple—Mr. Dane, some of those at least had been serving before, hadn't they?

Mr. Dane—I expect so.

Mr. Whipple—But you said the rule was only to notify them of the election of some new person.

Mr. Dane—I think you will find there was a change in at least one of the officers. That was 1914.

Mr. Whipple—So there was a change of only one officer in one of the years before. And they notified them of only one officer—as you have said, but they didn't notify them where there hadn't been a change.

Mr. Dane—No, they didn't adopt any uniform rule.

Mr. Whipple—Well, I should judge not. That is what we claim, that they didn't.

[The letter dated June 8, 1914, from The Christian Science Board of Directors to the Board of Trustees, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 184.]

Mr. Dane—I now offer from minutes of the regular meetings of The Christian Science Board of Directors of 1910, in continuation of the evidence showing the election of editors and business manager by the Board of Directors—

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me: are there any more notices of elections?

Mr. Dane—None up to this period; none up to 1910. And I offer from the record of the meeting of May 30, 1910, that part which I read into the record, on page 38 of the directors' records:

“Regular annual meeting of the Board of Directors, eight a. m., May 30, 1910. All members present.

“The following officers having been approved by the Pastor Emeritus were unanimously elected for the ensuing year.

“Manager The Christian Science Publishing Society, David B. Ogden; editor-in-chief, Archibald McLellan; assistant editor, John B. Willis; as-assistant editor, Mrs. Annie M. Knott; assistant editor 'Der Herold,' Theodore Stanger; managing editor The Monitor, Alexander Dodds."

Mr. Whipple—Isn't that a new one, Alexander Dodds?

Mr. Dane—I don't remember. I don't recall that name.

Mr. Whipple—I think you will find that it is a new one.

[That portion of the meeting of the Board of Directors, dated May 30, 1910, appearing on page 38 of the directors' records, which was read by Mr. Dane, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 185.]

Mr. Dane—I offer from the minutes of the directors for 1911, page 31, that part of the meeting which I read into the record (reading):

"May 29, 1911. Meeting of the Christian Science Board of Directors—all members present—being 'The Annual Meeting of the Christian Science Board of Directors, for electing officers and other business,' as provided for in Section 2, Article XIII of the By-Laws of The Mother Church.

"It was voted to proceed to the election of officers.

"The following officers were elected by individual vote to serve during the coming year, viz.: Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, David B. Ogden; editor-in-chief, Archibald McLellan; assistant editor, John B. Willis; assistant editor, Mrs. Annie M. Knott; assistant editor 'Der Herold,' Theodore Stanger; managing editor 'The Monitor,' Alexander Dodds."

[That portion of the records of the meeting of the Board of Directors, dated May 29, 1911, appearing on page 31 of the directors' records for 1911, which was read by Mr. Dane is offered in evidence as Exhibit 186.]

Mr. Dane—I offer from the records of the meetings of the Board of Directors for 1912, that part of the record of the meeting of June 3, 1912, appearing on page 26 which I read into the record.

"Meeting of the Christian Science Board of Directors—all members present—being 'The Annual Meeting of the Christian Science Board of Directors, for electing officers and other business,' as provided for in Section 2, Article XIII, of the By-Laws of The Mother Church.

"Voted to proceed with the election of officers.

"The following officers were elected by individual vote to serve during the coming year, viz.: Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, David B. Ogden; Editor-in-Chief, Archibald McLellan; Associate Editor, John B. Willis; Associate Editor, Mrs. Annie M. Knott; Associate Editor Der Herold, Theodore Stanger; Managing Editor The Monitor, Alexander Dodds."

[That portion of the records of the meeting of the Board of Directors dated June 3, 1912, appearing on page 26 of the directors' records for 1912, which was read by Mr. Dane, is offered in evidence as Exhibit 187.]

Mr. Whipple—If you will pardon me—was there any election of the editor of The Monitor?

Mr. Streeter—Dodds is editor of The Monitor.

Mr. Whipple—No. He was managing editor.

Mr. Dane—The managing editor of The Monitor is Mr. Alexander Dodds.

Mr. Whipple—But Mr. Dixon is not mentioned that year or the year before.

Mr. Dane—No. Mr. McLellan is elected editor in chief of the periodicals.

Mr. Whipple—Well, that is of the periodicals, not The Monitor.

Mr. Dane—I am advised that Mr. Dixon was not here at that time.

From the minutes of the meetings of the Board of Directors of 1913, page 35, I offer that part of the record of the meeting of June 2, 1913, which I read:

"Meeting of the Christian Science Board of Directors, being 'The Annual Meeting of The Christian Science Board of Directors, for electing officers and other business,' as provided for in Section 2, Article XIII of the By-Laws of The Mother Church. All members present.

"Minutes of the regular meetings of May 28 and 30, and the special meeting of May 29, read and approved.

"The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Manager of The Christian Science Publishing Society, David B. Ogden.

Editor in chief, Archibald McLellan.

Associate editor, John B. Willis.

Associate editor, Mrs. Annie M. Knott.

Associate editor Der Herold, Theodore Stanger.

Managing editor of The Monitor, Alexander Dodds."
